The Powers and China.

There is a belief among diplomats that the final outcome will be some arrangement under which the Powers will get definite territorial rights in China. The hope is to arrange this in such a way as to keep all the Powers looking pleasant.

As I have hitherto stated, Britain wants the Yangtse Valley, France wants to extend her border further into China, northward and eastward; Germany, of course, will have something to keep the Kaiser good natured. The questions are: "What will Italy and Austria do about it?" "What new alliance can Germany form?"

There is great relief in France over the composure of the Manchurin trouble. France has a far less warlike disposition today than in any previous epoch of her history.

There are those who are yet unable to understand why the movements of Russian troops in Manchuria were out of Newchwang, and then into Newchwang, and then out of Newchwang again. Some think that the pronounced position of the United States had some effect on Russia.

Others think that Russia, having experimented and found the experiment of occupation and re-occupation dangerous, retired, in view of her own domestic conditions. There are many insubordination movements in the interior of Russia, and a great deal of friction between the governmental aristocracy and the peasantry. The persecutions in Finland are but a part of the outrageous forms of injustice in Russia.

The Czar is between two fires, trying to please the peasants and yet displeasing the aristocracy. For this reason it is remarked that although Russia has an enormous army, she is not very anxious to use it.

There are those who think that a Russian campaign in Turkey and Asia could be carried on and be a more popular campaign in Russia than the Chinese campaign. Hence they are looking to see the next outbreak along the lines of Turkey in Europe, if anywhere.—Boston Journal.

Secrets of the Prophetic "Times" as relating to the things which are coming on the Earth, is the title of a 64 page pamphlet, written by Thomas Clarke, an Englishman, and published by The Faith Association, at Sm- Linx, England. To any who a- terested in Prophetic "Times" the work is of great value. We have received an invoice of these little books, and can supply them at 20c. each.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Announcement.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Indiana will meet at the Church of God at Roll, Blackford Co., Ind., commencing at 7:30 p m, Thursday, Sept. 10, 1903, and continue over the following Sunday.

As this is the Annual Conference, let all the churches be represented by delegates. Roll is a country town, situated eight miles north of Hartford City, and seven miles west of Montpelier. Hartford City is on the Pennsylvania Lines, and Montpelier on the Lake Erie & Western R. R. Let those who wish to go, write to Bro. Arthur M. Kelley, R. F. D. 5, Hartford City, Ind., stating on what day and at what time and place to meet them, and they will be conveyed to the place of meeting.

The brethren at Roll desire to have as large a number present as possible. They are able, and will be glad to entertain you. Brethren and sisters in Indiana, let us, one and all, make it a point to attend this meeting of believers. We have had good meetings at other places, and can have a good one at Roll. Let us have a personal interest in this matter. Begin at once to make plans to attend this Conference. A programme will be published later.

A. H. ZILMER, Pres.
MRS. LYDIA RAILSBACK, Sec.

The Sixteenth Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus, in Iowa, will convene at Waterloo, Iowa, August 22nd to 30th, inclusive. Its sessions will be held at the beautiful camp-ground at Cedar River Park. A reduced rate of one and one-third fare for the round trip has been granted on all railroads on the Certificate Plan. Be sure to get a certificate for each fare paid on each road. Board the street car at Waterloo for Cedar River Park and it will take you direct to the camp-ground. A drayman has been provided with a badge reading "Conference Baggageman," and will endeavor to meet all trains. If he is not on hand bring your checks to the camp-ground and your baggage will be attended to promptly. Bring some bedding and a straw-tick. Tents and straw will be furnished free. Bed springs will be rented for a nominal sum for the entire session. Meals will be served at the Dining Hall at ten cents per meal or three meals for twenty-five cents.

Brotherly love is the earnest desire of our hearts, to have you at this meeting, to clasp glad hands with you again, and feel the Spirit flow from heart to heart. This may be our last of meeting together in Conference. Let us lay aside our cares for a brief five or six days and give our service to God's work. We assure you, you will say at the end of the year, I am further ahead than if I had not attended the Conference, and have given the Lord a few days of my time.

Upon your attendance depends the success of the cause. Remember there are brethren who have devoted many years of their lives to the cause, all for the sake of the truth. Will you not come and help to show your appreciation of their labor.

Of our preaching brethren, Brothers Lindsay and Wilson of Illinois; Adams of Nebraska; Myers and Crowe of Kansas; Garton, Lucas, Moyer, Eychaner, Stouffer, of Iowa; and others, it is expected, will be in attendance.

The Corporation Board of the Camp ground will meet August 25.

Thursday, August 27th will be Berean Day.

And now we commend you to his care, and hope to meet you all at the Conference. Come early and enjoy a "feast of fat things."

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.
FLORENCE ALLARD, Sec'y.

On account of the recent high water at Kansas City, it is thought best to change our Conference, to Severance Kan., commencing Aug. 28, and continue ten days. Severance is 25 miles west of St. Joseph, Mo. on the Grand Island Railroad. Those coming from points in Missouri will change cars at St. Joseph Union depot, and come direct to Severance. The tent ground is five blocks from the station. Let all who expect to attend notify me at Ransom, Kan. at once. Board and lodging has been arranged for at a price not to exceed 60 cents a day. Board and lodging is arranged for with parties near the grounds, thus avoiding the disagreeableness of looking after bedding and sleeping in tents in case of wet weather.

The mornings will be taken up with praise and song services and Bible readings, and the brethren present will arrange for the afternoon service. The evening and Sunday services will consist of the following discourses:

Friday evening, General talk.
Saturday, Why I believe the Bible.
Sunday morning, The Atonement.
Afternoon, The Promises.
Evening, Relation to Promises.
Monday, Salvation—for what?
Tuesday, How saved.
Wednesday, Thelf on the Cross.
Thursday, Judgment.
Friday, Immortality.
Saturday, Resurrection.
Sunday morning, Coming of Christ.
Afternoon, Coming of Christ.
Evening, Glories of the world to come.

Let all the brethren that have subscribed to the fund send in the balance at once so that we may be able to square up everything at the close of Conference. We have been falling behind, and it will take all that is due to come out even. The business meetings will be held the last Friday and Saturday of the conference.

Brethren, there has been many good meetings at Severance; let us make this the best one. Come with love for the Master, with love for one another.

A. W. DARBY,
Sec. & Evangelist.

The second Annual Conference of the Church of God, in S. E. Kansas, will be held at our proposed colony site at Rollin, Kansas, from Sept. 16th, to the 21st. Excursions on the 3rd Tuesday in September for one fare plus two dollars.

Bring some bedding, an empty tick, hammer, old carpet for tent floor, eatables, dishes, knives, forks and spoons, and mosquito netting.

Brothers Dewey, Jones, and myself are all that are left in the colony. We are not rich, so will charge 50 cts per day for board and a bed on the floor for all we can thus accomodate. Others who wish to have a tent and to board themselves can have one by paying freight charges from Iowa and back on the tents. They can buy groceries from Bro. Jones, who has a small store here. Come and see our resources and town-site, and advise us as to what should be done to build up a colony of believers here, and also to attend the meetings in the big tent. We expect good speakers here.

Write for any particulars to W. L. Crowe, R. F. D. No. 3, Chanute, Kan.

The Eighteenth Annual Conference of the Church of God of the State of Nebraska, will be held (D. V.) at St. Paul, Neb., beginning Aug. 29th and convening till Sept. 5th, inclusive.

The brethren thought it best to hold meeting in the Court House instead of in the large tent.

The Court House is a large, roomy, well seated, lighted, heated and ventilated building, being capable of holding all who will attend.

The brethren of St. Paul have again kindly volunteered to care for all visiting sisters and brothers who will attend. The kind hospitality shown by each and every one of the brethren of St. Paul last year is an ensample of what will be done this year.

Now sisters and brothers, we need your assistance and presence to carry on the work of the Lord. Last year's conference at St. Paul was one of the best ever held in Nebraska. I hope each and every one will endeavor to make this one exceed the last one.

Each and every one make an effort to be present and do your share of the good work. The time is short to work and night cometh when no man can work. The day of the Lord draweth nigh.

MISS EMMA ELTON, Sec'y.

The Second Annual Conference of the Church of God in Christ Jesus, will be held in the Restitution Church, at Moriah, Ill., commencing Oct. 3rd, and closing Oct. 11th, 1903. We expect Brother S. J. Lindsay, Evangelist of Ill., Bro. W. H. Wilson of Chicago, Ill., Bro. A. H. Zilmer, Evangelist of Indiana, Bro. John Claypool of Marshall, Ill., and perhaps others to be here to tell the glad tidings of the soon coming King.

Dear Brothers and sisters, one and all, we want you to come to our Conference, and have a good time. We will take care of you. The program will be arranged after we gather and it is understood that we remain at the church as much as possible. We heartily invite the Bereans to attend and we aim that you shall have a good part of the time.

Dear brothers and sisters, these brethren have promised to be here to preach to us, now, how many will write to me to meet them at Casey, on the 3rd of Oct., so that we may know how many teams to send for you. Lay aside the cares of this world and come and have a love feast that will long be remembered, and may each one be able to say that it good is to be here. Remember that Bro. Lindsay said, What a nice trip for the northern brothers and sisters it would be to come to this meeting. May all have good meetings wherever they assemble themselves together for Conference, and may the glad tidings of the gospel be preached, that men and women can see the grand and precious promises and obey them while it is called today, and if we should never meet again in this world may we all meet in the kingdom of God.

Yours, in hope of eternal life.

Z. E. BRANT.

Have You Heard of the Lion's Mouth?

Collier's Weekly is conducting a very novel and interesting competition for its readers each month. To enter the contest all one has to do is to review the issues of Collier's for the current month and answer the two or three questions which are printed in each issue, giving such opinion and such suggestions as will aid in improving the paper. Collier's aims in this way to secure the assistance of every one of its readers in making the paper more to their liking. Every reader, in fact, becomes one of the editors and has his voice in building the greatest Illustrated journal of the age.

The first prize each month, awarded for the most helpful suggestion, is $50 in cash, with a second prize of $25 in cash, and eighteen other prizes of sets of books, ranging in value from $32 down to $5, making in all $329 of value given in prizes each month. There are in addition, cumulative cash prizes, for those who win prizes in successive months, and a big cash prize of $1,000 for the most valuable suggestions during 1903.

For the convenience of intending contestants who can not be promptly supplied by newsdealers, all the copies of Collier's for the current month will be sent post paid, together with a handsome proof of a drawing by Charles Dana Gibson, upon receipt of 40 cents in stamps addressed to The Lion's Mouth, Collier's Weekly, 438 West 13th Street, New York.

Address, THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think not, verily will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes, or who believe themselves, or who believe themselves spiritual by nature, or who think they are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who damns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, AUG. 26, 1903. NUMBER 32.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

WORK OF SISTERS' MEETING IN CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

Our purpose in assembling at this time is to strengthen and encourage each other, and to devise ways and means whereby the Sisters may be more active fellow laborers with God. Especially do we desire to offer suggestions to those who have families and are much encumbered with household cares. We believe there is a work for each one to do, be it ever so small.

In Philippians the apostle Paul especially commends those women who labored with him in the gospel. We may not all be able to preach, but we have gifts differing, according to the grace that is given us, and for which we will all have to render an account.

All here have undoubtedly heard the saying "In union there is strength," and much has been the experience of the Sisters' Meeting in Cleveland. By combining our energies, much has been done. We think all here will be interested in hearing of the united effort we have put forth to do good, and some of the work accomplished.

Our Sisters' Meeting was organized in April, 1895, with an enrollment of eighteen members. Since that time membership has fluctuated considerably, there being at one time thirty-one names on the roll. At present there are twenty-six on our list. Some, not with us now, continued with the organization until forced to succumb to the great enemy of all mankind;—but we hope to meet them again.

One object of our meeting has been to get nearer to each other, so we can really be one family. We know there is but one body, and we should be united. There is one Spirit which should pervade all of the one body; one hope which should animate us all, and one Lord whom we should strive to imitate and follow. By keeping all these things in mind, unity is sure to ensue, and we are able to continue on our way rejoicing.

Another object of our meeting is to build one another up in our most holy faith. To that end two or three are appointed at each meeting to select their own subjects and prepare lessons for the edification of each other, that we may minister grace unto our hearers. This helps us to have confidence in ourselves and strengthens us, for while we are trying to teach others we too learn much.

Others are appointed to call upon and encourage the lukewarm and weak ones; to visit the sick among us, and to look after the poor and needy and relieve them. It is surprising how much good can be done with the sum of even five cents contributed weekly by each member—alone it would not amount to anything, but "it is the little drops of water, and the little grains of sand, that make the mighty ocean and the pleasant land."

We have not had to confine ourselves entirely to our own community either, but several times have sent help to the needy, both in England and Canada. We have also been able to buy and distribute a good deal of literature, and frequently have sent contributions to the helping hand of THE RESTITUTION.

It is a significant fact that we have never had a call for help that we were not able to take care of. The means has always been provided from some source. This proves to us, dear sisters, that they that trust in the Lord shall not want for any good thing.

Our meetings continue all day, and are held every second Thursday at the homes of the members. The morning is devoted to sewing. The articles made are sold among us, and the proceeds used solely for church and evangelistic purposes. We have made more aprons than anything else, as there always seems to be a demand for them, but we take orders for any other plain sewing.

In the afternoon we have a business meeting, opened by reading a chapter selected, and all repeating the Lord's Prayer, following by the reading of lessons, suggestions and talks for the good of all. Many of the sisters have expressed themselves as being especially helped by our meetings and the counsel given.

We would like to urge upon all sisters who live near enough together, so they can meet occasionally, to do so without fail. Resolve to glorify your Heavenly Father in all that you do, and you will surely succeed.

Invite your friends in—let them see your [illegible] you may [illegible] to the truth. But even if you do not succeed in interesting the alien, the injunction to us is, to exhort one another daily, and so much the more as we see the day approaching, and dear brothers and sisters, the coming of the Lord draweth nigh, and there is work to do. Our Heavenly Father has promised to reward every one according as his work shall be.

Again, faith without works is dead. We see then, that there is no time for idle dreaming, but knowing the hour, it is high time to awake out of sleep, for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. The night is far spent, the day is at hand. Oh, let us be willing to sacrifice anything for the cause of truth, and put forth every effort to make ourselves ready to be presented spotless before the throne.

After these few preliminary remarks I hope the sisters will occupy the time with suggestions and exhortations.

MRS. B. H. LAND.

WILLING SERVICE.

Our subject implies that we are servants. All who have believed the covenants of promise, and have been adopted into Christ, are indeed servants of the Most High. Bought with the precious blood of Jesus, and should say earnestly with the Psalmist, "I am thy servant, give me understanding that I may know thy testimonies." Psa. cxix. "O, Lord, truly I am thy servant.....I will offer to thee the sacrifice of thanksgiving and will call upon the name of the Lord. I will pay my vows unto the Lord now in the presence of all thy people in the courts of the Lord." Psa. cxvi. 16.

That service is expected from the servant will not be doubted. What we wish to call attention to is the kind of service.

As we approach the end of Gentile times the evangelist's work is more and more laborious. Multitudes say, "Where is the promise of his coming?" Pleasure is the absorbing theme, and if ears are reached strenuous efforts must be made. "Occupy 'till I come" should be rivited on the mind of every servant. We are making our calling and election sure by living a godly life and holding up the lamp of life to others.

There is a burning desire in the heart of every true servant to make known to the sons of men his mighty acts, and the glorious majesty of his kingdom.

We are here to consider ways and means to spread the message of life only in Christ. Individually, we all wish to be of the most possible use. Alone our efforts in the way of supporting an evangelist would amount to but little, but when united effort is brought about, and each gives annually as the Lord has prospered them, the work that would otherwise be impossible, becomes comparatively easy. "In union there is strength."

"We have turned from idols to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven." Shall this meeting be an actual service, or shall we say, "I pray thee have me excused."

When David assembled the children of Israel, and laid upon his son who was young and tender in years the great charge of building the temple of Solomon, he said, "Be strong and of good courage, and do it, for the Lord God, even my God will be with thee. He will not fail thee nor forsake thee. And thou Solomon, my son, know and serve him with a perfect heart, and with a willing mind."

What was the basis for this great work? Answer. Consecrated service.

David said to the congregation, "Who then is willing to consecrate his service this day unto the Lord?" Then the chief of the fathers and princes of the tribes of Israel, and the captains of thousands and of hundreds, with the rulers of the king's work, offered willingly, mark this word "willingly." The Lord loves a cheerful giver. And they gave cheerfully and willingly. We want to find the result of this service. The effect on [illegible] of old was good. The people rejoiced, they offered willingly. They gave of their gold and silver, their iron and precious stones.

When our hearts are filled to overflowing self will be forgotten. There will be a response from every heart, and as one voice we will say, as did Israel of old, "Blessed be thou Lord God of Israel. Thine O Lord is greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty, for all that is in the heavens, and in the earth is thine. Both riches and honor come from thee, and thou reignest over all, and in thine hand is power and might, and in thine hand it is to make great, and to give strength unto all. Now, therefore, our Lord, we thank thee and praise thy glorious name. But who am I, and what is my people, that we should offer so willingly after this sort, for all things come of thee, and of thine own have we given thee."

Yes, truly, "The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof." Keep this in mind, that what we seem to give, already belongs to God. Ye are not your own, ye are bought with a price, and brought into the glorious liberty of the gospel. Can we, dare we make it a secondary matter, and men and women perishing, while we profess to love the cause which alone can bring life? The work is great, not a single evangelist in the state of Ohio. There should be many and there will be, if we [illegible] to the Master.

Who is willing to be strong and make the cause first of everything?

Who is willing this day to consecrate his service to the Lord?

MRS. NANCY BARBER.

ONE IN CHRIST.

Dear Sisters:

What is it to be one in Christ? In John xvii. 11-22 we have the words, "And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are. That they all may be one, as thou, Father, art in me and I in thee. That they also may be one in us, that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them, that they may be one, even as we are one."

These words of Jesus, just before his betrayal by the false Judas, and his sufferings and death, form one of the most impressive lessons in all the Scriptures. Oneness with Christ, as shown by Jesus' wonderful prayer on this night of his betrayal, was for those who were no longer of the world though still in it. To be like that is to be patterned after the unity which existed between the Father and the Son.

The words "they all" show that the whole company of believers were in Jesus' mind at the time. This we see by his words in verse 20, "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word." Union, or oneness, implies the same mind or ambition, purposes, responsibilities, and faith in the same promises.

This oneness with Jesus is symbolized under various figures, as that of the head and the body, bridegroom and bride, but these relate to the company as a whole. Other figures more fitly represent the individual members, such as "I am the vine, ye are the branches." It is to the individual phase of this lesson that I wish to direct your attention for a few moments. The union of each member of the body with Christ must be not only apparent but as real as his or her relations with the body. But the lesson of Jesus' words shows that the union or oneness between the different members of the body must be true and sincere, as a proven the world that he whom since low is the Son of God.

[illegible] Peter i. 22, we read, "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently." [illegible] our sisters, that without [illegible] we cannot be one in Christ.

How sweet, how heavenly is the sight,
When they that love the Lord
In one another's peace delight,
And thus fulfil his Word.

When each can feel a sister's sigh,
And with her bear a part;
When sorrow flows from eye to eye,
And joy from heart to heart.

When, free from envy, scorn and pride,
Our wishes all above,
Each one his sister's failings hide,
And wins a sister's love.

What is there that we can do that will enable us to get nearer to each other? To do little acts of kindness, not allowing ourselves to show partiality. How easy it is for a few to become absorbed in each other, and in this social relationship with a few who are of congenial spirits, to the neglect, and even to the exclusion of many other worthy and useful members of the body. Here is where we have against to watch ourselves, to guard where consistent the offense of partiality every it is our duty to show them the consequences of becoming thus, but with love, and if they have any of the same love in them, they will receive us kindly, knowing it is for their good that we speak.

It is the lack of this oneness in Christ that makes so many forget their duties to the Church, and to each other, keeps some from realizing the importance of [illegible] ourselves together [illegible] there is strength. Let us strive together to win the prize to which we are called, doing all in our power to bring others to an understanding of the truth.

We often hear it said that we should always be ready to present the truth; as it is in Jesus, when ever an opportunity comes; but I always think, as a brother said a few days ago, we must not wait for that, but make the opportunity when ever possible. I feel as though we could not do too much toward spreading the good word of the kingdom while there is time. Let us work to win others, and in the mean time work out our own salvation with fear and trembling.

May we all be worthy to meet the Lord when he comes.

HATTIE GOSS.

ALWAYS ABOUND IN THE WORK OF THE LORD.

Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord. Therefore, refers to something that has gone before and on reading the chapter, we find that some of the Corinthian brethren disbelieved in the resurrection, but Paul in irrefutable language declared that there is a resurrection of the dead, for Christ had already risen and been seen of the twelve apostles and of more than five hundred brethren at once, and Paul had also seen him. He declared Christ to be the first fruits of the resurrection, afterward they that are his at his coming. The chapter closes with the exhortation to be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. This exhortation is just as applicable to us as it was to the Corinthians. We believe that Christ's resurrection was a certainty and ours will be just as sure if we hold fast the beginning of our confidence firm unto the end. Therefore we must work; work out our own salvation with fear and trembling, always abounding in the work of the Lord.

What are the works of the Lord? I will enumerate some. We are to cultivate the fruits of the Spirit as given in Gal. v. 22, 23. The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness and temperance. If we do this we will shine as lights in the world, diffusing the light of the glorious gospel to all around. If we show forth the works of the Lord we will avoid the very appearance of evil, as ungodly people about us are always alert to the mistakes of believers, but utterly oblivious to any of their Christian virtues. We will order our conversation aright, for Jesus says out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. We must be an example in conversation to the babes in Christ and to the alien. We cannot indulge in the foolish talk and jesting, we hear on every side, our conversation must be pure and upright, and as Solomon says, our words few. We will also exhort one another daily and so much the more as we see the day approaching. The signs of the times indicate that Jesus is about to come. We must have our lamps trimmed and burning ready to enter into the marriage supper of the Lamb, and to exhort those with whom we come in contact to cast not away their confidence, which hath great recompense of reward. Heb. x. 36. But to be sober and hope unto the end for the grace that is to be brought unto us at the revelation of Jesus Christ.

We will also be zealous of good works and let our light shine, that men may see our good works and glorify our Father which is in heaven. How can we do this? Paul gives the answer in Phil. ii. 16. By holding forth the Word of light. But some may say we cannot hold forth the Word of light, we are not all preachers. We should all be preachers, at least to the extent that we should speak the truth every one to his neighbor, but though we may not all be capable of publicly proclaiming the truth we can of our abundance give to the support of those who can.

This is the first Conference held in [illegible] to devise ways [illegible] truth can be held forth throughout the state. We know in whom we have believed, and how we should rejoice that the light of the glorious gospel ever reached our ears and found acceptance, but shall we be satisfied in our own belief of it and content to sit down, while thousands around us are perishing for lack of a knowledge of the truth? With Paul I ask, how shall they hear without a preacher, and how shall they preach except they be sent? I thank God that this Conference has been called, and though we cannot all preach, we can with united effort send some one who can. Brethren, let us unitedly open our hearts and purses to send out an evangelist to proclaim the truth throughout the state. The Lord certainly has blessed us all, but he too, will call us to account, as to the use we have made of our talent. Let us not be as the unprofitable servant and hide it away in a napkin, but let us give it cheerfully, that the work of the Lord may be successfully carried on. The widow's mite was the most acceptable offering cast into the treasury, because it was a sacrifice for her even to give any; so let us willingly make sacrifice for him who sacrificed his life for us and he will surely bless us, for he takes notice of all our good works, even to the giving of a cup of cold water in his name. Let us labor not for the meat that perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life.

MRS. MATTIE TOMLINSON.

OCCUPY TILL I COME.

Dear brothers and sisters:

How clearly the life of Jesus is depicted in the parable of the nobleman journeying into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and return. But after Jesus ascended, the belief that he would come again gradually declined as the years passed away, until at the present day those who are looking for him are as a grain of mustard seed compared to the world. He has gone to heaven to receive his kingdom and has left us in charge of his interests here. When he returns he will require from each of us an account of the manner in which we have used that which he has left in our charge. He has left us the Word which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. It is our duty to study the Word and, thus be able to set it forth to others. We cannot plead ignorance of God's will, for we have his Word ever before us and happy are we if we do it. Not every man that saith in that day, Lord, Lord shall enter into the kingdom, but he that doeth the will of God. We all have work to do. The seed of the kingdom must be sown and the [illegible] has made us responsible for the talents [illegible] be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting. And let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap if we faint not. The parable suggests that to some more is given, and more will be required of such. God knows our natures and he has given us talents accordingly. Let us find the work for which we are best adapted in the Lord's service and then devote ourselves to it with heart and soul. It may be that our talent is very small to begin with, but we must cultivate it and by constant use make it increase. Those who made no use of their talent are not allowed to retain it. So with us spiritually; we must either advance or fall away, for we cannot stand still in the service of God. We can do nothing without faith in God, so let us pray to him constantly and ever keep in close touch with him, for if we allow him to become a stranger to us, how can we approach him? Christ likens us unto men who double their capital by judicious trading. He that received five talents went and traded and made other five talents. After we rise from the watery grave to walk with Christ we must not continue as babes, but grow in knowledge and strength and [illegible] our talents by [illegible]. The time is short and Jesus says, Behold I come quickly and my reward is with me to give to every man as his work shall be. Blessed is that man, whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching." If we would be perfect even as our Father in heaven is perfect, all our work should be done as unto him and in his sight. Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might, for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge in the grave whither thou goest. But labor not for the meat that perisheth, but for that meat which the Son of Man shall give unto you. How thankful we should be that it is by grace we are saved through faith. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." Jno. vi. 4. The grace of God that brought salvation has appeared unto us; teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us, that he might purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works. Christ will surround himself with only those who have manifested the will that was in him, and who have made the doing of his commands the supreme purpose of their lives. Before any man is exalted to so great authority and honor, he must at least be able to rule his own spirit, and cultivate lowliness of mind. Christ will put the reins only into hands that can be trusted to hold them. Power over nations and authority over cities will be given to those, who like Christ, have learned humility and obedience in the school of suffering. The day is coming when our Lord's promise will be fulfilled, "Verily I say unto you he that believeth in me, the works that I do, he shall do also, and greater works, for I go to my Father." Great works are yet to be done in the earth. All who shall possess the power to do these works must have sympathy with their purpose in the present time, and show by their actions and spirit that they are now in unison with the divine will. If any man have not the Spirit, he is none of his. Let us study to show ourselves approved unto God, and hold forth the Word of life. And let our every action be influenced by the thought of his soon appearing. It is a high state to attain unto, but we must attain unto it if we ever enter the kingdom to rule with Christ. And now, dear brethren, my prayer is that God may bless your efforts to spread the truth in Ohio, and although we cannot meet with you at this time, I pray that we may all meet together soon in the kingdom of our dear Lord.

Your Sister in Christ.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, AUG. 26, 1903.

We will give papers that were presented at the Berean meeting and some others as well that were read at the Salem Conference, in next issue.

LORD SALISBURY, former Premier of Great Britian, died Aug. 22. On account of advanced age and infirmities he resigned his office over a year ago. He was prominent in English politics for many years, and had guided the nation through some trying times.

"WHY cannot we, slipping our hand into God's each day, walking trustingly over the day's appointed path, thorny or [illegible] or strait, knowing that evening will bring us sleep, peace, home?"

ON Sunday some insurgents began an attack on the Turkish outposts at Adrianople, when the guns of the fort were fired on them. The people were aroused, and the Turks slaughtered nearly every Christian in the city.

THE appointment of Admiral Alexieff as viceroy of Amur and other provinces has caused alarm in China, as it indicates to them that Russia intends to absorb Manchuria. All intelligent Chinese predict that the loss of Manchuria means the end of the Manchurian dynasty with the death of the present Emperor.

THE Balkan war cloud is getting darker. The insurgents are active, and the Turkish troops are unable to come up with them, and so devote their attention to slaughter and pillage. The Sultan promises to end the trouble speedily, and the powers are waiting for the fulfillment of the promise. It is not likely he can do so, and it is a question of how long before some one interferes.

"THIALS are moral ballast that often prevent our capsizing, says some one; when we have too much to carry, heaven rarely fails to fit the back to the burden. Where we have nothing to bear, we can seldom bear ourselves. The burdened vessel may be slow in reaching the destined port, but the [illegible] danger of not reaching it at all.

The Zionist Congress.

As we write the sixth international Zionist congress is being held at Basle. From a mere chaos of opinion that marked the birth of this organization six years ago, they now have a body of staunch business men with a purpose as definite as any ever outlined. When we consider that it was a new condition that must be developed—that nothing like it had ever been—that no pattern existed—we get some idea of the work that has been accomplished in these six years. A people denationalized for 2000 years, yet kept separate from others all that time, down-trodden and persecuted, hunted to death in many lands; a people with a vague and indefinite yearning for a home. This was what confronted the promoters of "Zionism."

The first necessity was money. Not a charity fund, but a strong financial system to develop commercial enterprises that give outlet to the brain and muscle of this people, and make them not a multitude of beggars, but a well sustained and organized community. A bank plan was mooted, organized, and now has a working capital of $2,000,000 for operations. The Jewish Colonial Trust is the largest joint stock concern in the world, its certificates being held from the Caucasus to the Klondike, and from Western Australia to Scotland, 400,000 shares being held by 180,000 of stockholders. It aims not directly at the purchase of Palestine so much as it does at obtaining and financing of concessions, which shall, aside from their commercial advantages, give the right of legal settlement in Palestine of those Jews who are in need of a home.

For the purchase of land in Palestine another scheme is presented called the Jewish National Fund, which has raised over $500,000 already. The Anglo-Palestine Company has also been organized, which has a capital of $250,000, with the object in view of developing Palestine industries, and assisting Jewish colonists in finding a market for their products.

With the fresh persecutions in Russia, the clamor for a home, a resting-place, is naturally heightened, and this will undoubtedly occupy much of the attention of this congress.

Whatever view may be taken of this Zionist movement, we must acknowledge and respect the enterprise and push of the men who have conceived the plan, and brought it to such a prominent place in our history. Wait and watch. God will some day favor Zion.

Later information from Basle states that the failure to obtain a charter from the Sultan for the resettlement of Palestine, has caused England to offer a large tract of country in East Africa to the Jews for the establishment of a Hebrew nation, pledging to grant an autonomous government, subject only to British suzerainty.

The Salem Conference.

The Ohio State Conference was called to meet at Salem on Aug 13 to 16. It was the good fortune of the Editor and wife to be able to attend this meeting. We left home at 3:05 a. m. Aug 13, on the Pennsylvania R. R., arriving at Salem in the afternoon, after a ride of 315 miles.

The meeting commenced the same evening with a discourse by Bro. Wagoner on the subject of Redemption. It would be useless to attempt to give a synopsis of this, or any of the discourses delivered at these meetings. The ability of Bros. Wagoner, Zilmer, and Joblin as proclaimers of the Word of Truth is so well known that to say the subjects announced were handled by them in clear and concise terms is sufficient, and must suffice. To say more would be merely piling up words to no effect.

On Friday morning a social meeting was conducted by Bro. Farley of Sistersville, W. Va. We had the pleasure of meeting this Brother and his wife for the first time at this gathering, and their earnest devotion is indicative of true and honest hearts. We esteem them highly in the Lord.

The sermon following was delivered by Bro. D. C. Robison, on the subject of The Kingdom and the name of Jesus Christ. This was our first meeting with Bro. Robison, though we had corresponded considerably. He is a teacher by profession, and able to present his subject clearly and logically, so that the listener who follows his theme cannot fail to be convinced. Bro. Robison should do more preaching in the future, as he has rare ability in that line as well as with the pen.

In the afternoon Sister B. Lang had charge of the Sister's meeting [illegible] at these meetings by the Sisters of the Cleveland Church, and judging from the business like promptness with which it was carried through, they must have learned their lessons well. The several papers published in this issue will give a good idea of the work of the Sisters in this direction, and the example set could be copied with large benefit in any church. With a meeting conducted as outlined by Sister Lang the mind is led to higher things, and trained to usefulness in the cause of the Master. We advise the Sisters everywhere to divert their meetings into something similar to this one. At first you will think it impossible to say anything that will edify, but trying persistently will overcome much temerity and backwardness. Hide self and work for Christ, then it will be easier.

The evening social meeting was conducted by our young Brother Tomlinson of Cleveland, and was indicative of his deep devotion and earnest endeavor in the cause he has espoused. After this came Brother Zilmer's sermon on "Occupy till I come," which was listened to by a house full of people who gave close attention to what was said.

The Saturday morning social meeting was to have been in charge of Bro. Moore, but as he was detained by business, the writer was invited to take the place. The subject of Privilege and Responsibility was introduced, and the hour passed in profitable comment by those present. The Praise meeting following was enjoyable. The manner of conducting this meeting is for some one to suggest a hymn which is sung, after which the one proposing it gives a reason why it is peculiarly precious to them, after which another is given, and so the hour is passed pleasantly and profitably.

Brother Wagoner's sermon on God's Eternal Purpose, closed the forenoon session, and truly it was a delight to listen as he unfolded the plan the Father has given for our direction.

The afternoon was devoted to the business meetings, and we will let the Secretary give that in detail, only remarking that no contrary-wise feeling was indulged in, each seeking the good of the cause of Christ, and none of self.

Brother Ilona not being [illegible] tend and conduct the social [illegible] in the evening, Brother Nellting paper written by Brother Jod [illegible] the subject. Will Sincerity [illegible] on This paper will be published. They have begun the [illegible]tion of a little magazine called [illegible]he Berean," which is circulated largely with the view of advertising the meetings of the Church of the Blessed Hope in Cleveland, and while getting readers in also to get hearers to the meetings. We shall have the pleasure of giving place to a number of the papers read at this meeting, and from them you can get an idea of the work accomplished by these young brothers and sisters.

This service was followed by a discourse from Bro. Wagoner, on the atonement, showing most clearly the relation of the human family to God.

In the evening a number of children gathered to listen to talks by Bros. Neill and Robison, after which the closing sermon on How to [illegible]t to sin, was given by Bro. Zilmer to a house full of attentive listeners.

So ended a most enjoyable conference meeting. There are but a few families of believers at Salem, but the entertainment of visitors was all arranged most admirably, the meals being served to all in a place prepared near the church building at the residence of Bro. Neill and Sister Barber. This made it possible for [illegible]s to become better acquainted, and enjoy each other's company all day long. Too much cannot be said of the enterprise and earnestness of the members of the Salem Church, and we shall long cherish [illegible]

There was one addition to the Father's family. Sister Bertha Mackey, of Meadville, Pa., was immersed by Bro. Neill on Thursday afternoon. Our prayer is that she will be strengthened to fight the battles of life and at the end be crowned at the coming of the Master with all those with whom we associated while at this gathering of brethren.

As Brother Neill takes up his added work as State Evangelist, may the same earnest devotion to the Father's will characterize his labors, and may his faithful wife have strength to aid him as she is so eminently fitted to do.

May the Father's blessing be with each one of the Household of Faith. Guide, guard, keep them in the narrow way, and finally save them in the kingdom of his dear Son, through his Name.

Passing Events in the Light of Prophecy.

"Reuter's correspondent at Vienna states that two hundred Jews lately passed through that city on their way to America. They asserted that the condition of the Jews in Roumania is daily becoming worse. The Anti-Semitic press is openly inciting the people to follow the example of the Russians at Kishineff."

The unrest in the Balkans continues, but according to the Times correspondent at Sofia, what is happening in remote districts is still unknown to foreign governments. Reuter's correspondent at Salonica states that orders have been received there to prepare provisions for 50,000 Turkish troops, and similar instructions have been sent to Adrianople.

The Grand Duke Alexander Mikhailovitch has been empowered to conclude a contract with the Steam Navigation and Trading Company for the establishment of regular communication with ports in the Persian Gulf. The Russian government has been for several years endeavoring to establish direct trade relations with the harbors of the Persian Gulf. The company is to be granted an annual subsidy of two hundred thousand roubles for twelve years. Reuter's Agency, St. Petersburg.

According to Reuter's correspondent at Shanghai, among foreigners there, the conviction is gaining ground that it is altogether useless to attempt to help the Chinese against Russia's designs, the present Chinese government, doubtless, owing to methods employed by Russian diplomacy, being a willing victim to Russia's aggression.

It is estimated that over three million Socialists went to the poll in the recent German elections. Public Opinion says the German Socialism is a growth more remarkable even than the developments in German commerce and the German navy. It seems only the other day that Socialism could assert itself even in units in Germany. Today the Social-Democratic Party is the second in strength in the Reichstag."

The Pall Mall Gazette says the political atmosphere is so highly charged with electricity just now, that amid a universal distrust of appearances [illegible]ort at every new thing to endanger the peace of the world. The seemingly hopeless complications in the Near East accentuated by the concentration of European interests in Western Asia, suggests all sorts of anxious queries. Is the Sultan in earnest, or is he playing a dark game? Is Russia sincere in the professed desire for a peaceful solution of the Balkan problem? What part is Germany playing at the Sultan's ear in Constantinople? And how are the interests of Great Britain likely to be affected by any disturbance of the status quo?

With regard to Russia it goes on to say, it has been recognized that what she considers her national destiny lies in the persistent push southward of her immense border line from the Caspian to the China Sea. We do not need even the strangely frank avowals of Russian political writers to assure us that the ambitions of Russia are concentrated in overwhelming force upon that part of her Southern frontier which overhangs the plains of Mesopotamia and the land of Palestine.....The latest and most effective move on the political chessboard of the Near East was that devised by Lord Salisbury when he accorded Germany a free hand in Asia Minor, and threw her across the line of Russia's advance from the North. The creation of a state of warlike anarchy in Turkey, however, serves Russia in two ways,—the exhaustion of the Ottoman [illegible] the [illegible] prospects of the Bagdad Railway."

A Short Trial.

There are persons who can remember wicked men, dishonest men, willful men, men who were great in ability, in iniquity, in cruelty, in craft, and in crime; men who defied law and denied responsibility, and said, "What are you going to do about it?" But these men are gone; they flourished like a green bay tree, but they have passed away as in a moment; their wealth and honors have departed; their strength and influence are gone, and they are so low that none will do them reverence; so weak that no one fears them or trusts in them.

The lesson taught by God's providences and judgments, and by the events which meet us on every hand is, that "the triumphing of the wicked is short;" and that it takes but a little while to bring the proudest low, and to lay the mightiest in the dust. But the "righteous shall flourish like a palm tree: he shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon." And if we will trust ourselves in the hands of God, walk in his ways, and cast our burdens upon him, he will make us strong and hold us fast, and will cause us to abide the changes and chances of this world, and will establish us forever, when the wicked shall wither like grass, and be burned up with unquenchable fire, like the chaff of the summer's threshing floor.—H. L. H.

Our Just Debt.

Some one has aptly said that the gospel puts the whole question of missionary work on the ground of a just debt. The cause of missions appeals to our honor in paying what we owe. Paul said that he was debtor both to the Greeks and the barbarians. We, then, who are richly blessed by spiritual influences, are indebted to those who sit in darkness and the shadow of death, to send to them the blessed life-giving light. There is now no limit to the possibilities of the work. The providence which has opened the way, and the results already accomplished, beckon us forward as at no other period in the world's history. With our prayers and our labor and our gifts let us go forward with a more determined effort to help win the world for Christ.—Presbyterian Messenger.

Ohio Conference Report.

The business meeting was called to order by Bro. Neill at 2:00 p m, Aug. 15, 1903. Bro. Wm. Pate was elected chairman, and Bro. J. C. Thompson Secretary of the meeting. Bro. Zilmer, President of the Indiana State Conference, was called on to give his ideas in regard to Conference work. He stated that the Indiana Conference had an Evangelist Committee, consisting of three members, also a committee on Literature. He advised the Ohio Conference to find out how many members in the Church of God in the State of Ohio, and to appoint a collector in each congregation.

Bro. Pate stated that the members should form themselves into a Conference body. Thereupon it was moved by Bro. D. C. Robison, and seconded, that the chairman and secretary of the meeting be the President and Secretary of the Ohio State Conference for the coming year. Motion carried, and both declared elected. Bro. D. C. [illegible] President, and Bro. John Lehman Treasurer, for one year.

The following were appointed corresponding secretaries: Sister Nancy Barber, Salem, Ohio, Sister John Lehman, Troy, O. Bro. D. C. Robison, Mt. Vernon, O. and Bro. W. M. Farley of Sistersville, W. Va.

It was then decided to have a Conference Committee of five—three to reside in the same community. Those elected were Sister B. H. Lang, Bro. Walter Tomlinson, Bro. Stanley Sanford, Cleveland, O. Bro. A. R. Curtis, Fidelity, O. and Sister Mary Knowles, Salem, O.

A Finance Committee was also selected consisting of Sister Tomlinson, Sister Goss, Bro. Pate, Cleveland, O. Sister Pearson, Fidelity, Ohio. Sister Lehman, Troy, O. Bro. Robison, Mt. Vernon, O. Bro. R. L. Holman, Springfield, O. Bro. Samuel Elton, Delta, O. and Sister Barber, Salem, O.

Bro. P. Neill was elected Evangelist of the Conference for one year. In a short speech Bro. Neill accepted the position. Two excellent papers were read by Sisters Tomlinson and Barber, exhorting the brethren and sisters to work. Bro. Zilmer suggested that the Secretary send the names of the members of the Church to the Evangelist.

The President declared THE RESTITUTION the official organ for the Ohio State Conference.

[illegible] was donated and subscribed, of which $105 has been paid in.

Where is the Stream We Have to Cross?

The churches have been talking and singing so long about Jordan as the stream whose cold waters we all must brave before we can reach Canaan or home of the soul way up yonder, that many a sincere soul believes there is a cold river that divides, runs between, our sky house and our present earthly home. My brother writes me that its cold waves are already laving his feet. Does he mean his ghost feet? He must for the body including the feet is not supposed to cross this boundary stream, only the spirit or ghost is supposed to make the crossing just now. For nearly twelve months I have been nearing the end of the present life, and yet not once have I thought of crossing a cold river in getting rid of my old earth house. My promised inheritance is all on this side of the river. Right here at home in Baltimore, Maryland, where I lay this mortal down is where I expect to be clothed with the immortal life. My Bible informs me that my spirit will be in the interval with God, but my God is here on this side Jordan. I have no cold river to ford to reach him. The Book says, He is a God that is near and not far off. O how could I ever have passed through the dreary nights for the last ten months had he not been a God that is near. Why I had but to whisper, when in an instant he was at my side, and I could say with Jacob at Bethel, "Lo, God is here and I knew it not." No, to me there is no dark and chilling flood that separates my Father in heaven and my Father on the earth from me long enough to cross Jordan at its narrowest ford. God and my inheritance are here, not on "the other side of Jordan."

The Hurrying Hours.

How often the thoughts come home to me,
As the moments hurry away,
Of the many things I intend to do
Somehow, sometime, some day.
There are promises that here not been kept,
Though I always meant to be true,
But time is too short for all the things
That a body intends to do.

I will write a letter or read a book,
I will write a bit of rhyme;
I will do the things that I ought to do—
Some day when I have time.
So I look beyond, as I hope and plan,
For the days that are just ahead,
While the day that is here goes into the grave,
With its opportunities dead.

To-day is the only day we have,
Of to-morrow we can't be sure;
To seize the chance as it comes along
Is the way to make it secure.
For every year is a shorter year,
And this is a truth sublime—
A moment misspent is a jewel lost
From the treasury of time.

The Apostasy. No. 2.

The doctrine of the immortality of the soul, as one of the legitimate fruits of the apostasy, neutralizes the doctrine of the resurrection as taught in the Scriptures, by sending good men to heaven, and bad ones to hell when they die. If a good person goes to heaven when he dies, it is because he is good. If a bad man goes to a hell of eternal torture when he dies, it is because he is a bad man. Each one, according to the popular doctrine, goes to his own place. If a good man goes to heaven at death, he goes there to receive his reward. And when a bad man goes into everlasting torment as soon as he dies, he receives his just deserts. The good man enjoys heaven, and the bad man suffers in hell. If the good man remains forever in heaven, he enjoys himself forever; and if the bad man remains for a similar period in hell, his sufferings will be co-eval with his existence in hell. If a good man who is enjoying heaven, has a resurrection, a reunion of the immortal soul with the dead body, according to the popular conception, he will either have to leave heaven in order that such a re-union may take place, in which event his enjoyment of heaven will be suspended; or a dead body will have to be taken to heaven to be united with a soul which was, perhaps for ages, happy without the dead body. If a bad man is resurrected, he will have to come back from hell to be re-united with the dead body, which would stop his sufferings; or a dead body will have to be taken to a hell of literal fire. Either the good man is not perfectly happy in heaven, and needs a dead body to heighten his enjoyment; and a bad man is not perfectly miserable in hell without a dead body; or else a resurrection in either case is useless. No wonder that men who hold to the immortality of the soul do not mention the resurrection with any apparent relish, and at most very seldom. It does not fit that theory.

The doctrine of the immortality of the soul nullifies the doctrine of the second coming of Christ, by making death the coming of Christ. I well remember the first "funeral sermon" I delivered in 1891 when I spoke on the words, "Be ye also ready, for at such an hour as ye know not, the Son of Man cometh." That discourse was but a reproduction of the religious teaching of the day. Either Christ comes when any one dies, or he does not. If he does, there is no need of a further coming. If he does not, the teaching which holds forth this view is not true. The angels told the anxious men of Galilee, "This same Jesus shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts i. 11. And an inspired apostle wrote, "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven." 1 Thes. iv. 16. These Scriptures show:

1. Who is coming: "The Lord himself." "This same Jesus."

2. Where he is coming from: "From heaven."

3. The manner of his coming: "In like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

It would not do to substitute the coming of death for the coming of the Lord, and to say, "For death himself shall descend from heaven with a shout," etc. And, "This same death ....shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." All the teaching of the Bible on the coming of Christ is either thrown hopelessly out of joint, or rendered entirely useless by this theory.

The doctrine of the immortality of the soul crowds out the Bible doctrine of the kingdom, by making the supposed flight of the righteous immortal soul to heaven the entrance into God's kingdom. If we enter the kingdom when we die, why look for any further entrance into the kingdom? To suit this theory, the Scriptures ought to be revised so as to read, "The kingdom in (instead of under) the whole heaven shall be given to the holy people of the Most High." Dan. vii. 27. And also, "We shall reign (not "on the earth," but) in heaven." Rev. v. 10. It is one or the other: Either the Bible doctrine of the kingdom under the heaven, on the earth; or the notion of an immaterial, invisible, intangible soul at death going "beyond the bounds of time and space." To the person who understands and appreciates God's truth, the choice between truth and error will not be difficult.

The doctrine of the immortality of the soul lies at the root of Spiritualism, bear the utterances of Spiritualists, and be convinced. "The first, the greatest, the grandest, truth [illegible] through modern Spiritualism is the immortality of the soul." Banner of Light. "Spiritualism is the generation of a new, a broader and more living conviction of the truth of the immortality of the soul."—Spiritual Telegraph. "Resolved, That Spiritualism, according to the modern acceptation of that term, embraces all those who believe in the immortality of the soul." So resolved in a Spiritualist Convention held at Rockford, Ill., a few years ago. If it is true that man has an immortal soul which continues in a state of consciousness after the dissolution of the body, it may return and communicate with the living; and believers in this theory are left without a single weapon against Spiritualism. One cannot be a Spiritualist without believing in the immortality of the soul, and such belief is the first principle of Spiritualism. Doctor Talmage said, in a sermon delivered Dec. 6, 1896, "Those glorious souls are coming down (from heaven), not in lazy doctor's gig, but with lightning locomotion. You cannot understand why that patient got well after all the doctors had said he must die. Perhaps Abercrombie touched him. I should not wonder if he had been back again to see some of his old patients. Those who had their joy in healing the sickness and woe of earth, gone up to heaven, are come forth again for benignant medicament.....All those who did good on earth, busier since death than before. The tomb to one is not the terminus, but the starting post." This sermon was preached "to make you homesick for heaven." Reader, does this extract awaken such emotions in you? To me it is but an evidence that when one believes in the immortality of the soul, he is not able, even with all his learning and his good intentions, to get away from the vagaries of Spiritualism. The doctor would no doubt have spurned the idea of being called a Spiritualist, but these believe no more than he did, and than do thousands today who are not called Spiritualists.

The doctrine of the immortality of the soul is the basis of the Romish doctrine of purgatory. If a soul can live in consciousness after death, it may be subject to a post mortem process of purification for sins not purged in the ante-mortem state.

The doctrine of the immortality of the soul is the fundamental principle of Mormonism. If this doctrine is true, it may also be true that Joseph Smith and others were ordained to the priesthood of Aaron and Melchizedek by John the Baptist and the Evangelist, Peter, James and John. It rests on the assumption that the soul is immortal. Accept the Bible doctrine that "the dead know not any thing," and you at once take away the very foundation of Mormonism. They can not agree, and therefore can not go together.

The doctrine of the immortality of the soul is responsible for the theory of Universalism, by its abhorrent doctrine of eternal torture. Men are loth to accept the logic of the position which they take in holding to the immortality of the soul. If the most wicked person, as well as the most pious, lives forever, and if good is rewarded and evil punished, then either the punishment and consequent suffering of the wicked will be endless, or the wicked will finally be saved. Men being governed in this matter more by sentiment than by reason, drew the conclusion that the immortal soul of even the vilest sinner will finally be purged by some process or other. Origen, the father of Universalism and other mischievous errors, wrote, "The very fact that God is long-suffering conduces to the advantage of those very persons, since the soul over which he exercises his providential care is immortal; and, as being immortal and everlasting, it is not, although not immediately cared for, excluded from salvation, which is postponed to a more convenient season. For perhaps it is expedient for those who have been more deeply imbued with the poison of wickedness to obtain this salvation at a later period." Allow that soul to be mortal, as the Bible very clearly teaches, and there is not any ground for the inference that the salvation of that soul will be "postponed to a more convenient season." The wages of sin is death. Rom. vi. 23.

Thus it is seen that there is hardly a present-day error that is not traceable to the doctrine of the immortality of the soul. How deeply it had entrenched itself in the minds of the people, and how difficult it is to eradicate erroneous impressions from the mind. All this is due to the great apostasy from the true faith, which took place many centuries ago.

The Bible throughout treatment of [illegible] a mortal being. Human speculation has come to place an estimate upon him which causes him to swell with pride, and to forget his lowly origin and his present frail condition. The Bible calls on him time after time to seek everlasting life through Jesus Christ. The doctrine against which we are contending flatters him with the pleasing fancy that, whether he does God's will or not, he is destined to live as God lives. It dishonors God by disbelieving his Word and dishonors Christ as the Life-Giver by imagining that man is possessed of life without Christ.

These lines have not been written with any spirit of vindictiveness, but with a view to the good of those under whose eyes they may come. I have spoken thus plainly because I believe the minds of men and women should be disabused of error, however sincerely held. We can not speak the truth too plainly.

Yours in the love of the truth,
A. H. ZINSER.

SOWING THE SEED.

Brothers and sisters and friends:

As we are permitted by the providence of our heavenly Father to meet together to proclaim the gospel of the kingdom, that others may be enlightened as to the purpose of the Lord, and the things necessary to be done in order to secure the great prize of eternal life. We must be workers together with God in order to secure the desired results, for we read in 1 Cor. iii. 9, Ye are God's husbandry, God's building. We have heard a call for reapers, shall it be in vain? Oh no, we have the promise that our labor is not in vain in the Lord. Therefore, let us not sleep as do others, but let us gird up the loins of our mind and as obedient children, strive to make use of our one talent. In Gal. iii. 27, we read that each and every one that has put on Christ has as much as one talent and we must put it to good use and not hide it in the earth, or else we shall have that one taken from us, and be cast out as unprofitable servants. and this little verse comes to mind, "Our Master has taken a journey to a country that's far away and has left the care of his vineyard to us, to work for him day by day." Jesus in his sermon on the Mount says, Ye are the light of the world, and let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and so glorify our Father who is in heaven, and we have met together to let our light shine, for we will be held responsible if we withhold the light of this gospel that Jesus said should be preached in all the world for a witness. Matt. xxiv. 14. In the morning sow thy seed and in the evening withhold not thy hand, for thou knowest not whether shall prosper this or that, or whether they be alike good. Eccl. xi. 6. We are also told to sow beside all waters, and whatsoever our hand findeth to do, do it heartily as to the Lord in singleness of heart, fearing God, leaving the results with our heavenly Father, for he giveth the increase. Our talents and the opportunities which come to us are not ours to keep, but to improve and make of service. If we neglect them they go back to the giver. And Jesus says, Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you. Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit, so shall ye be my disciples. Jno. xv. 8, 14, 16. Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you and ordained you, that ye should grow and bring forth fruit. The Master is coming. Let us proclaim it to perishing men, and show our faith by our works, for faith without works is dead, without a live [illegible] sown of life. I be[illegible] soon come to gather [illegible] I feel if I am in the vine[illegible] work to do, be it ever so [illegible] may it be to God's; honor [illegible] Then the message that we [illegible] Then let us stand ready to [illegible] Lord's bidding. Let the flesh [illegible] died, the will subdued; let us [illegible] the unsearchable riches of Christ [illegible] ve to teach others to build upon [illegible] Living Rock. For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ, then let us have our loins girded about and our lamps burning. The day of the Lord is near, it hasteth greatly. Let us labor on unharmed by doubts or fears, keep at our posts until the morning breaks. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the Sun in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear. Blessed is that servant whom his Lord when he cometh will find watching, and may we [illegible] Well done good and [illegible] faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over few things, I will make thee ruler over many. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord. May this be our happy lot is my prayer.

EMILY GROVES.

Their perishing souls on every side, die it is our duty to render our service in proclaiming the truth throughout the State, that others may receive the same blessings that God has bestowed upon us.

This conference has been called for a purpose, and it depends upon us as a united body, whether it becomes a success or not. Having begun this good work we should persevere in it, and if we are devoted to the truth it will be a pleasure to make sacrifices for it.

God will prosper us, knowing the heart, that it is done to his honor and glory; for he says, "My Word shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." We may not see much fruit as the result of our labors or sacrifices, but we need not be discouraged. It may be doing good, although invisible to our eyes, yet visible to the Lord's. We are nothing but what the dear Lord has made us, the good there may be in any of us must be ascribed to divine grace, and it is our privilege to say, I am what I am. This conviction will make and keep us humble.

Some of us cannot do as much as others, but we can still do our best and that is all that is required. If we seek to consecrate our lives to his service, by obeying the command of a loving Father, and we shall be the joyful recipients of eternal life in his everlasting kingdom. Yes, while life is spared there is work to be done if we attain unto the grand end.

May we all praise God for the great favors bestowed upon us in accepting us into his fold, and may we be led to the High Rock by diligence and patience, showing that we are conquerers over the sin that doth so easily beset us, always remembering our triumphs are not through our own strength, but through the loving favor of our heavenly Father. I pray that each one of us may be among the happy throng who will hear our Savior say, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of your Lord."

Oh may I live with Jesus' sigh,
And sleep in Jesus when I die;
Then joyful when from death I wake,
I shall eternal life partake.

MRS. ALICE MEERMANS.

Obituary.

Henry Mercer Babb, known far and wide as "Father Babb" was born at Winchester, Virginia, June 2, 1818. Came to Indiana from Ohio in Nov. 1838; moved to Rensselaer in Nov. 1851, where he continued to reside most of the time since. He was married to Eleanor Ann Lane, who died Jan. 7, 1897 at the age of 82 years. Their married life was most congenial continuing for a period of 64 years, lacking eight days. There were born to them 12 children—8 girls and 4 boys. Of whom four daughters—Mrs. Priscilla Hopkins of Rensselaer—Mrs. Mary Karsner of Chicago—Mrs. Susan Lockwood of LaFayette—Mrs. Ida Thompson of Reedsburg, Wis., and three sons—Samuel of Monticello—William and Edward of Rensselaer survive him.

After a long and severely painful illness from cancer, borne with almost matchless fortitude and resignation, he died at the home of his daughter Ida, on the 5th day of Aug., 1903 at the age of 90 years, 2 months and 3 days, having retained his mental faculties almost unimpaired to the last.

He united with the Church of God at Rensselaer in 1861 at or near the time of its organization, continuing ever to live a faithful and devoted Christian life, and fell asleep with fullness of hope of being awakened to the life immortal, in the morning of the coming day of Christ. During all his later years it was his meat and drink to meditate and converse upon the Holy Scriptures, of which he was a remarkably earnest and close student. He was buried at Rensselaer on Aug. 8th, 1903. Paul's last words to Timothy at the close of his warfare, (2 Tim. iv. 7, 8) were used as predicate in showing the Christian warfare and glorious victory. "Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

D. T. HALSTEAD.

Dear Restitution:

No doubt the sad news of father's death has reached you long ere this, but will send you a short obituary notice. Died at his home in Waterville, Thursday July 16, 1903, at 11:30 P. M., Elder Richard Corbaley, aged 82 years, 11 months and 9 days. He was born in Marion County, Indiana, Aug. 7, 1820, being the first white child born where the city of Indianapolis now stands, his parents being pioneers in the midst of that then almost unexplored heavily timbered section of country. Here he assisted his father to carve out a farm, cutting down the trees, sawing them up into logs, rolling the logs up into great heaps, then piling on the brush, then the mass was set on fire and consumed; in this way the early pioneers literally carved their farms out of the wilderness. In early manhood he taught school in connection with his farm work. In 1845 he left his home in Marion County and settled on what was known as the Boyce place, three miles south east of Argos. Here he cleared up a farm and on the 5th of May, 1847, he was united in marriage to Jane Croco. He afterward removed to Plymouth, where he engaged in the practice of law. In 1852 he was appointed clerk of Marshall Co., serving two terms. Afterward removing to his farm five miles south of Plymouth. On account of ill health in March, 1871, he moved to Healdsburg, Cal., here he recovered his health, his old enemy, the asthma, leaving him. In the spring of '80 he paid a visit to his old home in Indiana, was absent six months. During the greater part of this time he was once more afflicted with the asthma, and on his return to California it did not leave him as before, but he suffered so severely from it, that in '84 he left his home, and with the writer came to Douglas Co., Washington, where his son Platt was residing. He purchased a farm here, to which he afterward obtained a government title. Mother and daughter came form California and joined him here. In October 1892, he rented his farm and moved to Waterville, one and one-half miles distant. Here he resided until his death. Late in January last he contracted a severe cold, from the effects of which he never recovered. He suffered much distress in his lungs, particularly after eating. For two months before his death the asthma returned, and at times distressed him very much. Then the pneumonia set in, and in two weeks its fatal work was accomplished. The end came without a struggle, simply ceased breathing, and it was some moments before we knew the end had come. His features were composed and peaceful, not the least sign of any struggle. He had truly fallen asleep in Jesus.

We laid him to rest in the cemetery in Waterville, to wait the resurrection morning, when the dead in Christ will arise in immortal glory. For more than 48 years he earnestly contended for the faith once delivered to the saints, organizing churches in Indiana, California and Washington. He has held about 40 public discussions, not in strife or vain glory, but that the truth might prevail. He preached the first gospel discourse in this section of the country, also married the first couple, and preached the first funeral discourse. He would never miss an appointment when it was possible to be present, often traveling for miles at his own expense—rather than disappoint an audience.

Brother and Sister Woodward and others who have been here will understand how we will miss him—his wise counsels, fervent prayers, able word-painting of future glory to be revealed when Jesus comes.

Brother N. Titchenal preached the funeral discourse to a large audience, also presenting our hope of the resurrection of the sleeping saints of God, when Jesus comes. Brother and Sister Patterson, Hugh and Bannie Barnhill and others came from Wenatchee to attend the funeral. His son Platt, returning from an extended trip east, by way of California, where brother Will, himself prostrated by almost three years of sickness, forgetting his own suffering, made the painful journey of over 1000 miles to be at the bedside of his dying father, who was able to recognize and converse with them.

Brethren pray for us that we may not falter in the work to which his life was devoted.

Your brother in hope of eternal life.
ALVARO L. CORBALEY.

Mrs. Elizabeth Norton died at Rossville, Ill. July 25, 1903, aged eighty-seven years.

She was married to Ichabod Norton in Warren Co. Ind. Feb. 28, 1836, and was the mother of fifteen children, nine of whom are living.

Sister Norton united with the Church of God over 85 years ago, and her life was above reproach both as a citizen and Christian.

Children cannot honor enough the memory of such parents as were both father and mother Norton. May the memory of her virtues stimulate her loved ones to follow Christ. The enemy death, has conquered her in spite of her struggles, but the Lord is soon coming [illegible] will come forth from the grave to die no more.

There being no one of the faith near the funeral was conducted by R. Perry McPherson, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Lizzie Chester.

TO THE MEMORY OF MOTHER.

Who will chide us while we're weeping?
For our mother's gone to sleep.
She is resting, sweetly resting,
And the Lord her dust will keep.
All the trials and the sorrows
Of her four score years and more,
She has laid aside her burdens;
All her troubles now are o'er,

Who will chide us while we're weeping?
For we miss her everywhere—
At our home and at our meeting,
And we see her vacant chair.
But she's sleeping, sweetly sleeping,
Free from every toil and pain,
With the seal of God upon her.
By and by she'll live again.

Who will chide us while we're weeping?
For we all feel sad and lone.
Yes, we miss our aged mother,
Miss her more now she is gone.
Miss the gentle voice so cheering,
Miss her form when we go home,
Miss her counsel and her warnings—
All is missing, all is gone.

Who will chide us while we're weeping
For the mother that is gone?
She is sleeping, sweetly sleeping,
Waiting for the Lord to come.
In the resurrection morning
She will hear the angel call,
Then is when we hope to meet her,
In the kingdom one and all.

Announcement.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Indiana will meet at the Church of God at Roll, Blackford Co., Ind., commencing at 7:30 p m, Thursday, Sept. 10, 1903, and continue over the following Sunday.

As this is the Annual Conference, let all the churches be represented by delegates. Roll is a country town, situated eight miles north of Hartford City, and seven miles west of Montpelier. Hartford City is on the Pennsylvania Lines, and Montpelier on the Lake Erie & Western R. R. Let those who wish to go, write to Bro. Arthur M. Kelley, R. F. D. 5, Hartford City, Ind., stating on what day and at what time and place to meet them, and they will be conveyed to the place of meeting.

The brethren at Roll desire to have as large a number present as possible. They are able, and will be glad to entertain you. Brethren and sisters in Indiana, let us, one and all, make it a point to attend this meeting of believers. We have had good meetings at other places, and can have a good one at Roll. Let us have a personal interest in this matter. Begin at once to make plans to attend this Conference. A programme will be published later.

A. H. ZILMER, Pres.
MRS. LYDIA RAILSBACK, Sec.

On account of the recent high water at Kansas City, it is thought best to change our Conference, to Severance Kan., commencing Aug. 28, and continue ten days. Severance is 25 miles west of St. Joseph, Mo. on the Grand Island Railroad. Those coming from points in Missouri will change cars at St. Joseph Union depot, and come direct to Severance. The tent ground is five blocks from the station. Let all who expect to attend notify me at Ransom, Kan. at once. Board and lodging has been arranged for at a price not to exceed 60 cents a day. Board and lodging is arranged for with parties near the grounds, thus avoiding the disagreeableness of looking after bedding and sleeping in tents in case of wet weather.

The mornings will be taken up with praise and song services and Bible readings, and the brethren present will arrange for the afternoon service. The evening and Sunday services will consist of the following discourses:

Friday evening, General talk.
Saturday, Why I believe the Bible.
Sunday morning, Conference.
Afternoon, The Promises.
Evening, Relation to Promises.
Monday, Salvation—for what?
Tuesday, How saved.
Wednesday, Thief on the Cross.
Thursday, Judgment.
Friday, Immortality.
Saturday, Resurrection.
Sunday morning, Coming of Christ.
Afternoon, Coming of Christ.
Evening, Glories of the world to come.

Let all the brethren that have subscribed to the fund send in the balance at once so that we may be able to square up everything at the close of Conference. We have been falling behind, and it will take all that is due to come out even. The business meetings will be held the last Friday and Saturday of the conference.

Brethren, there has been many good meetings at Severance; let us make this the best one. Come with love for the Master, with love for one another.

A. W. DARBY,
Sec. & Evangelist.

The second Annual Conference of the Church of God, in S. E. Kansas, will be held at our proposed colony site at Rollin, Kansas, from Sept. 16th, to the 21st. Excursions on the 3rd Tuesday in September for one fare plus two dollars.

Bring some bedding, an empty tick, hammer, old carpet for tent floor, eatables, dishes, knives, forks and spoons, and mosquito netting.

Brothers Dewey, Jones, and myself are all that are left in the colony. We are not rich, so will charge 50 cts per day for board and a bed on the floor for all we can thus accomodate. Others who wish to have a tent and to board themselves can have one by paying freight charges from Iowa and back on the tents. They can buy groceries from Bro. Jones, who has a small store here. Come and see our resources and town-site, and advise us as to what should be done to build up a colony of believers here, and also to attend the meetings in the big tent. We expect good speakers here.

Write for any particulars to W. L. Crowe, R. F. D. No. 3, Chanute, Kan.

The Eighteenth Annual Conference of the Church of God of the State of Nebraska, will be held (D. V.) at St. Paul, Neb., beginning Aug. 29th and convening till Sept. 5th, inclusive.

The brethren thought it best to hold meeting in the Court House instead of in the large tent.

The Court House is a large, roomy, well seated, lighted, heated and ventilated building, being capable of holding all who will attend.

The brethren of St. Paul have again kindly volunteered to care for all visiting sisters and brothers who will attend. The kind hospitality shown by each and every one of the brethren of St. Paul last year is an ensample of what will be done this year.

Now sisters and brothers, we need your assistance and presence to carry on the work of the Lord. Last year's conference at St. Paul was one of the best ever held in Nebraska. I hope each and every one will endeavor to make this one exceed the last one.

Each and every one make an effort to be present and do your share of the good work. The time is short to work and night cometh when no man can work. The day of the Lord draweth nigh.

MISS EMMA ELTON, Sec'y.

The Second Annual Conference of the Church of God in Christ Jesus, will be held in the Restitution Church, at Moriah, Ill., commencing Oct. 3rd, and closing Oct. 11th, 1903. We expect Brother S. J. Lindsay, Evangelist of Ill., Bro. W. H. Wilson of Chicago, Ill., Bro. A. H. Zilmer, Evangelist of Indiana, Bro. John Claypool of Marshall, Ill., and perhaps others to be here to tell the glad tidings of the soon coming King.

Dear Brothers and sisters, one and all, we want you to come to our Conference, and have a good time. We will take care of you. The program will be arranged after we gather and it is understood that we remain at the church as much as possible. We heartily invite the Bereans to attend and we aim that you shall have a good part of the time.

Dear brothers and sisters, these brethren have promised to be here to preach to us, now, how many will write to me to meet them at Casey, on the 3rd of Oct., so that we may know how many teams to send for you. Lay aside the cares of this world and come and have a love feast that will long be remembered, and may each one be able to say that it good is to be here. Remember that Bro. Lindsay said, What a nice trip for the northern brothers and sisters it would be to come to this meeting. May all have good meetings wherever they assemble themselves together for Conference, and may the glad tidings of the gospel be preached, that men and women can see the grand and precious promises and obey them while it is called today, and if we should never meet again in this world may we all meet in the kingdom of God.

Yours, in hope of eternal life.

Z. E. BRANT.

Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, as they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

The Coming of Christ.

Lord! Come away!
Why dost thou stay?
The road is ready, and thy paths, made straight
With longing expectation, wait
The consecration of thy beauteous feet.
Ride on triumphantly! Behold, we lay
Our hearts and palms with thy way—
Hosanna! And thy glorious footsteps greet.

Welcome, oh, welcome to our hearts, Lord! Here
There must a temple too, and all in fear
As that in Sion, and as full of sin.
How long shall thieves and robbers dwell therein?
Enter, and chase them forth, and cleanse the floor!
Destroy their strength, that they may never more
Profane that holy place
Which thou hast chosen them to set thy name:
And then, if our stiff tongues shall be
Mute in the praises of thy Deity,
The stones from out the temple wall
Shall cry aloud, and call—
Hosanna! And thy glorious footsteps greet!

"Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? By taking heed thereto according to thy Word." Psa. cxix. 9.

This rule will apply to all whose way is in need of cleansing, but the Psalmist seemed to have in mind the way of the young whose habits generally are not in accordance with the Word of God.

It is somewhat difficult to determine the precise limits of young manhood. Under the Mosaic law a man was considered young and incompetent for public office until he had reached the age of thirty. Jesus when he began to teach was about thirty years of age. (R. V.) John the Baptist was about thirty when he appeared in the wilderness of Judea. Therefore, any matter addressed to young men will include a large number of the male sex of this audience. Indeed there are none of us too old but that we can quite often profit by the advice given to young men.

It is sad but true that the majority of young men have habits of a baneful tendency. We meet them in our daily walks of life, in the offices, in the workshops and on the streets, without ambition and with wasted energies. In nearly every case bad habits are at the bottom of it.

The alcoholic or nicotine habit, or late hours, will sooner or later cause them to be physical wrecks. They are sowing to the wind and must eventually reap the whirlwind. Oh that all such would take the advice of David, cleanse their ways by taking heed to God's word before it be too late.

In connection with this advice to young men, I would like to call your attention to Titus ii. 6. It reads, "Young men likewise exhort to be sober minded." To be sober is the reverse of excess or intoxication, and when applied to the mind must mean a right balance of the mental powers. I will not dwell on the different phases of mental intoxication, but will refer to one of the most dangerous, that of thinking of ourselves more highly than we ought to think. We all possess ideas of self importance to a greater or less degree, and this is a department of the mind which must be kept in subjection. Paul in Rom. xii. 3, says, "For I say through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith."

This advice well received and acted upon should give the young man that wisdom which will enable him to be of a sober mind.

The words of the apostle Peter found in his first epistle, v. 5, will help the young man in this direction. "Ye younger submit yourselves unto the elder," and then adds: "Yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility; for God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble." So we learn by this that it is the duty of the young man, no matter how well gifted he may be, to submit himself to the elder. By doing so he will be clothing himself with that humility which is so well pleasing in God's sight. Yes, let us consider these things and attend to the words of divine wisdom which are never wrong. "Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby."

The young man has been told to rejoice in his youth, however he should at all times take heed to God's Word that his ways may be perfect before the Lord. By doing so he will not only gain the present life but also the life to come. "He that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting."

May God bless the young men of the household of faith by keeping them in the narrow way that leadeth unto life.

J. C. THOMPSON.

DIVINE APPROBATION.

Dear brothers and sisters:

"Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth." For the foundation of a few remarks I have chosen the above verse found in 2 Tim. ii. 15. Study, give all diligence, make it your sole ambition to show thyself approved unto God. In order that we may serve God satisfactorily, we must first know what kind of service he exacts from us. "For God is a Spirit, and they that worship him, must worship him in spirit and in truth." Jesus said, "If ye continue in my Word then are ye my disciples indeed." David says, "Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way, by taking heed thereto according to thy Word." "Thy Word have I hid in my heart that I might not sin against thee." "The entrance of thy Word giveth light, it giveth understanding to the simple." Psa. cxix.

Paul in writing to Timothy says, "And from a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures which are able to make thee wise unto salvation. For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth, to the Jew first and also to the Greek." Rom. i. 16.

Thus we see that the secret of our success in God's service depends entirely upon our belief in the gospel—his saving power. Paul in writing to the Colossians (3rd chapter 16) exhorts them thus, "And let the Word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in Psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord." If the Word of Christ dwells in us richly, what will the result be? We have Jesus' answer for this. In his address to the Pharisees he says, "O generation of vipers, how can ye being evil, speak good things? for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. A good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things; and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things." Matt. xii. 24, 35. Thus we see that if the Word of Christ dwells in us richly in all wisdom, having taken hold of our affections, "For it is from the heart that man believeth unto righteousness and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation," it will make itself manifest in our daily walk and conversation. We will let our light so shine before men that they may see our good works and glorify our Father which is in heaven. Yes, beloved in the Lord, we will show them that we have been with Jesus and have learned of him. We must show our faith by our works. For without faith it is impossible to please God, and faith without works is dead being alone. Faith and works must go together, and if we do this there will be no doubt but that we are worthy of the divine approbation. Jesus says, "If any man will come after me let him deny himself and take up his cross daily and follow me."

Before our baptism we were all under the penalty of sin, we were subject to the flesh and all its desires, and as the carnal mind is at enmity with God, it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. It was necessary that we undergo a change that we might be reconciled to God, and when we were baptized we put off the old man of sin and put on the new man of righteousness. . . . became new creatures in Christ Jesus, but nevertheless we are still subject to the same weakness as we were in the old man, and it is in the struggle against these that our self-denial is made manifest—this is our cross. But as a consolation Jesus has promised to help and sustain us if we only let him. He invites us to lay our burdens at his feet, and assures us that whatever we ask of the Father in his name it shall be granted. And unless we do ask the Father's blessings we cannot expect to gain his approval, for without him we can do nothing.

Have you ever in your secular duties after having put forth your best efforts on any particular piece of work, look forward with expectation for the reward which you were sure to receive? Now these rewards are only temporal and are soon forgotten, yet they serve for the purpose they were intended. But the reward we have from God is eternal. It is an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, that fadeth not away. And when we think of our relative position, when we think of the manifold blessings God has showered upon us, and the little he exacts of us in return, do we not feel like David who said, "What is man that thou art mindful of him and the Son of Man that thou visitest him." Psa. viii. 4. Think of his amazing love toward man after that he had rebelled and had forfeited all claim upon his God—not God had a desire for the wor . . . hands. For the man whom he had created in his own image. And he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. Beloved herein is love, not that we love God, but that he loved us. When any one in this life does a kind deed do we not seize the first opportunity to repay them? How then, should we be with God, whom we owe our all? What we are we are by grace, and in view of all he has done for us, does it not seem but meet that we should consecrate our lives to his service? We may have trials and temptations, but let us remember through much tribulation we are made perfect. Think of the suffering of our dear Savior on our account, and of the rich blessings in store for the faithful. Does it not cause us to strive the more earnestly to show ourselves approved unto God? We each of us have our own particular talents to improve, and if we neglect them, think of what the Master will say when he comes to deliver his rewards, "Depart from me, I never knew you." Oh, what terrible words these will be, but think of the joy and happiness of the reward to be delivered to the righteous, and when this truth dawns upon us in all its import, does it not awaken within us a new sense of duty and a firmer determination to be among the overcomers? Jesus says, "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life, and he that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I grant to sit down with me on my throne, even as I have overcome and am set down on my Father's throne." Therefore, dear brothers and sisters, as we see God's purpose ripening fast, let us one and all strive the more earnestly to fight the good fight of faith and be ready to meet his approving smile and hear him say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, thou has been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things."

DILIGENCE.

"Wherefore, brethren, give diligence to make our calling and election sure." Peter in writing to those of like precious faith, though they have been baptized, and belong to the household of Christ, yet he says, give diligence to make your calling and election sure. Give earnest heed to those things which we have heard, for by his divine power hath he given us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us unto glory and virtue, give diligence unto the Word, search the Scriptures, for they testify of Jesus, in them we can gain a knowl . . . him who called us by the gos . . . diligently seek for the prize, the prize of the high calling—saints with Jesus. Eternal life, this will be the gift of God to those who give earnest heed to make their calling and election sure. Be not careless in things pertaining to eternal life, for we are given exceeding great and precious promises and by them we are made partakers of the divine nature. And by being diligent and keeping the faith we can gain an abundant entrance into the kingdom of God, for God hath called those that are rich in faith to be heirs of the kingdom. Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering and forsake not the assembling of ourselves together, but exhort one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching, yes, the day is fast approaching. As the church looked forward to the day of Christ and spoke of it near, we after two thousand years can look for the fulfillment of that hope. Yes, give earnest heed to those things, for to the watchers the signs foretell that our Savior is near. Be diligent, be mindful of the words spoken by the holy prophets and of the commandments of the apostles and of the Lord and Savior, for in the last days there shall come scoffers, saying, Where is the promise of his coming, for all things continue as they were from the be . . . ing of creation. But beloved, . . . norant, for the Lord is com- . . . believe that God sent his . . . gotten Son into the world, that we might live through him, and his words are, "I will come again and receive you unto myself." And the angel's words, "This same Jesus shall come again." We believe and we pray, Come Lord Jesus, come quickly. Beloved, let us be diligent that we be found in peace and blameless, be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of our Lord and Savior and gain an abundant entrance into that glorious home. Amen.

ELLA T. KNOWLES.

FAITH AND WORKS.

Even so faith, if it hath no works is dead, being alone. For as the body without the spirit (or breath) is dead, so faith without works is dead, being alone. So we see that faith without works will not save us, neither will works without faith. They must go together. I wonder if we fully comprehend what faith and works mean. Sometimes both faith and works require great sacrifice. I will mention some of the fruits of faith. By faith Moses forsook Egypt, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. By faith Abraham offered his son Isaac. By faith Noah prepared an ark for the saving of his house. I think this is one of the strongest proofs of faith. Just think Noah and his family the only people on the face of the earth that believed God would do what he said he would, and of course they reasoned that this one man did not know what he was talking about, he would not be right and all of the people wrong. But the floods came. And all of God's law will be carried out if there is only one man and his family on the face of the earth when Christ comes, that has this faith, numbers make no change in God's plans. If it makes no difference what our faith is, would God have sent men out to preach this gospel of the kingdom to the peril of their lives? Yes, all things will be as God has ordered them from the foundation of the world. And I don't see why every one is not willing to accept the promises as they are made, for surely it is a most beautiful plan, that can be made plain and simple so that every one can understand that will take the trouble to read. Of course it will not be revealed to those who are not enough interested to look into this plan of salvation. By faith Abraham when he was called to go into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance obeyed; and he went out not knowing whither he went. These all had faith that Christ could and would raise them from the dead. And died in this faith believing that at the resurrection they would receive all that . . . had promised them. I hope that every one of us may show the same diligence, and not be slothful, but through faith and patience inherit with them the same promises. Let us draw near with a true heart in assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water. Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, for he is faithful that hath promised.

Then let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works. There is much work for us to do. 2 Tim. iv. 5, says, Do the work of an evangelist. If we cannot preach we can all help to send some one out who can. We may have to make a little sacrifice or do a little extra work. But how can we expect so great a reward unless we do work for it. There is many ways in which we can work. But all of our work should be in view of promoting the gospel, doing good to others, and especially those of the household of faith. We should study to show ourselves approved unto God; workmen that needeth not to be ashamed. And let us press onward, looking for the prize of the high calling as it is in Christ Jesus, so as to be ready, and be accepted when Jesus comes as King over all the earth. Then will the prayer be answered, Thy kingdom come, thy will be done, as in heaven so in earth. Amen.

MARY KNOWLES.

Brothers and sisters:

We are met together in the one calling and in the one Lord. How thankful we all should be that our God has so blessed us that we were permitted to come here to meet with more of his children. To build each other up in our most holy faith, and if it is possible, set forth the gospel of the kingdom which is the power of God to salvation that others may see the beauty in his truth and obey it. I hope these few spiritual meetings may spur us on to greater diligence and a deeper realization of our responsibilities as chosen children of God. We are told to whom much is given much shall be required, so if we are blessed with the good things, the comforts of this life, it is our duty to see that our brother does not need. One of the blessings we most of us have is that of being able to meet often with those of like precious faith, whose aims and desires are to grow up into the perfect stature of our Lord, and to remember him until he comes. There is so much in associating ourselves with them, for their influence will often help us to overcome the trials and temptations, which so easily beset us in our every day life.

Our subject today is, "Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? by taking heed thereto according to thy Word." It is certain that if we expect to try and follow our Lord, to bear his name, we must forsake our former ways, which were enmity with God and be washed in the blood of the Lamb. When we begin the new life we are without spot and blameless as new born babes in Christ Jesus. How happy we are when we arise to walk in newness of life, and what a glorious bright hope we have, but soon we realize we are still in the flesh, for as Paul says, "I find then a law, that when I would do good evil is present with me, for I delight in the law of the Lord after the inward man. But I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members. O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death. I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord. So then, with my mind, I myself serve the law of God, but with the flesh the law of sin. We have the Spirit of God,

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEP. 2, 1903. NUMBER 33.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, the requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

his holy Book, with which to direct our new path. Through the Word we are chastened and made wise unto salvation. In Rom. xii. 2, Paul exhorts us saying, "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God. Our minds constantly have to be renewed, taken off from the things of this world to the future time when God shall be all in all. Whatever our minds dwell upon will be proved by our actions, and where our treasure is, there will our heart be also. And again we read, "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." In our study and our efforts to do the will of the Father we cannot help but exclaim, O the depth of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God. To realize that we have been picked out of so many thousands around us, and have been called to become kings and priests unto God if we will suffer affliction with the people of God rather than enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. We have enlisted to suffer and we will not turn back. All these thoughts should fill our hearts with love and gratitude to our heavenly Father, and if our hearts are abundantly filled with Christian love we will talk of him, praise him with our lips, and hence live nearer to him. You have probably often heard the saying, "It is not so much the art of cleansing as the art of keeping clean." It is the same in the spiritual as it is in the natural, for as dust and dirt accumulates in our homes and has each day to be taken away to make the home attractive and pleasing to the natural eye, so each day the mind must be purified and replenished by the Word, and we must often turn to the throne of grace for us to appear pleasing in the sight of our heavenly Father. "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." If we would think of this passage of Scripture when we are uncertain about this or that action, the proper way would be to go to the Word. It is a straight and narrow way, brothers and sisters, those who would enter must struggle for eternal life. If we could conform our lives to Titus ii. 12, Denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people zealous of good works. O if we would strive earnestly to follow this injunction, our ways would be directed aright, and when the dividing heavens shall reveal our Savior, we may be among those that have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb, etc. See if the gospel does not supply our every need. If we were full of the Lord's purpose and working hard for him, there will be no time for us to do those things which are questionable.

Be Short.

Long visits, long stories, long essays, long exhortations, and long prayers seldom profit those who have to do with them. Life is short. Time is short. Moments are precious. Learn to condense, abridge and intensify. We can bear things that are dull if they are only short. We can bear many an ache and ill if it is over soon; while even pleasure grows insipid, and pain intolerable, if they are protracted beyond the limits of reason and convenience. Learn to be short. Lop off the branches; stick to the main facts in your case. If you pray, ask for what you believe you will receive, and get through; if you speak, tell your message and hold your peace; if you write, boil down two sentences into one.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPT. 2, 1903.

WE recently sent letters to a number of our patrons explaining that we needed what was due us in order that we might meet our obligations. A number have responded, and we thank them heartily for so doing. There are still a large per cent of those whom we addressed, who have not yet given heed to our call. We dislike to tell of this, but are compelled to do so. It is useless to multiply words, brethren and sisters. We simply need the money that has been due us. Send it in order that obligations that really distress us may be met. We only want to impress on your minds that the demands on us are imperative—just MUST be met. We have no other means of satisfying them, and depend on you to supply us the needed money. Please get it in some way, and send at once. To get the little that you each owe will not distress you as carrying the whole burden does us. So attend to this today—not next week, or next month, but understand that we need THIS VERY DAY every cent that is due us. Then we can pay our obligations, and not be counted dishonest.

BROTHER B. F. Head died at his residence in this city last Saturday evening. An obituary will be given next week.

THE Macedonian and Bulgarian revolts are growing, and Turkey is putting more men into the field. Servia may be drawn into the fight. In some places the teachers in the mosques are urging the Turks to be ready to start a holy war, and kill all Christians that can be found.

THE attempt last week to murder the United States consul at Beirut, Syria, caused the President to order our European squadron to Turkish ports and enforce the demand that is made that the Sultan guarantee the safety of American citizens in that country. Turkey will promise everything and then do nothing until force is used to compel her.

The Glory of the God of Israel.

During all ages the tendancy of the flesh has been to glorify itself; such, however, was not the purpose for which it was created. It is clearly taught in the Scriptures that it was for the glory of the Creator, and not the created, that man was made in the image and likeness of the Elohim. And those who have come to a knowledge of the purpose of Jehovah know that in due time he will fulfil it, and glorify himself through his creature man.

God declared oath to his servant Moses "As truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." Num. xiv. 21. This statement shows a clear and definite purpose, which will not fail, however men may transgress the commands of their Creator. The children of Israel had again rebelled against God and spake of stoning Caleb and Joshua with stones, when they urged them not to rebel against the Lord their God, but to go up and possess the land which he had promised to give unto them; and it is recorded that when they were about to carry out their evil design that "the glory of the Lord appeared in the tabernacle of the congregation before all the children of Israel," and he threatened to destroy these rebellious men; but, at the intercession of Moses, he pardoned them, and then made the declaration that the whole earth should be filled with the glory of the Lord. Although our first parents transgressed the law given to them in Eden and brought death into the world, the purpose of God is sure in that he promised that should bruise the serpent's head, and ultimately fulfil the purpose of the God of Israel. This seed has been shown to be the same as that promised unto Abraham, who was to possess with him that land upon which the kingdom of God was established, and also the same seed as was promised unto David, who was to sit before his face upon the throne of that kingdom, ruling in righteousness and justice over the children of Israel and the Gentile nations of earth, blessing all mankind and filling the earth with the glory of God as the waters fill the sea. To understand how this is to take place, it is absolutely necessary to have a knowledge of

GOD'S POLITICAL PURPOSE

and this no one can ever have who does not comprehend the gospel of the kingdom of God. The kingdom of God, to most professing Christians, is a mere phrase, conveying no intelligible meaning, because it has been made mythical by the false teaching of men. It is marvellous, yet it is true, that in nearly all the teachings of professing Christians the things of men are made real and substantial, whilst the things of God are made shadowy and unreal, and this is the very opposite of what the Scriptures teach; the things of men and the glory of men pass away, whilst the things of God and are of an enduring character and will never pass away. In the Scriptures the teaching concerning the kingdom of God shows that it was as real as any kingdom ever established by man, and, although overturned for a time, when it shall be re-established it shall stand for ever. The teaching of Scripture upon this subject is so plain that there would be no difficulty of understanding it were it not for the false teaching that prevails. God has declared that "one generation passeth away, and another generation cometh; but the earth abideth for ever" (Eccl. i. 4) and it is written that he says unto his Son when he sets him on his

THE GLORY OF GOD

in the land of Canaan, "Ask of me and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." Psa. ii. 8. Yet, in face of such teaching as this, false teachers tell us that instead of the earth abiding for ever God is going to take the inheritance he has promised to give unto his Son and burn it up; yea more, the very heavens themselves, the dwelling place of the Most High, are to become a huge bonfire. Such false teaching, no doubt, arises from a lack of knowledge of the Scriptures. God does not say one thing in one place and contradict it in another; and were the passages that are thought to teach the burning up of the footstool and throne of Jehovah considered in the light of other portions of the divine record it would be seen that it is the destruction of rulers (the heavens) and ruled (the earth), and the constitutions they have established, that is the subject that is under consideration, and not the heavens—the dwelling place of God—nor the earth—the dwelling place of men. To show this is so, a few verses will be quoted from the twenty-fourth chapter of the prophecy of Isaiah, and those who are desirous of knowing the truth of the matter could do well to study the whole chapter. Verse 4 reads, "The earth mourneth, and fadeth away, the world languisheth and fadeth away, the haughty people of the earth do languish." No one would be simple enough to say that this could be applied to the literal earth. Verses 19 and 20, "The earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean dissolved, the earth is moved exceedingly. The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard, and shall be removed like a cottage; and the transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it; and it shall fall, and not rise again." Surely no one would be foolish enough to say the literal earth could transgress. Having tried to remove a little of the rubbish, it will be easier to show what is the true teaching on the matter. As the meek are to inherit the earth and dwell therein for ever, it is impossible that the earth can be burned up, and yet remain the everlasting inheritance of the faithful children of God.

The earth, then, is the theatre of the political purpose of Jehovah, and a certain portion of it the centre of his operations, for it is written that "the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever." Rev. xi. 15. This can only be brought about by a beginning being made somewhere as God works upon a definite plan from beginning to end. As the center then of his operations, the land of Canaan was chosen upon which

TO ESTABLISH HIS KINGDOM

Abraham his friend was also chosen as the medium through whom the people who were to be the rulers and inhabitants of that kingdom were to come. The land is called God's land, no doubt because he especially chose it for the purpose already indicated. The children of Israel after long affliction in the land of Egypt were brought out with a mighty hand under the leadership of Moses the servant of the Most High, and after many vicissitudes in passing through the wilderness, which came upon them because of their unfaithfulness, were brought into the promised land and there established as the kingdom of God. In this land Jerusalem was the chosen city of God as the seat of government, and it is from thence "the GLORY OF THE GOD OF ISRAEL"

shall yet shine forth and fill the whole earth. This kingdom continued to exist in one form or another until the time of the Christ, at which time it was under the dominion of the Romans who eventually destroyed it and [illegible] nations of the earth where [illegible] be found until this day; thus the kingdom of God ceased to exist because of the iniquities of its people. Has the purpose of God failed? It must have done if his kingdom is never to be re-established as some would have us believe. That it has not ceased to exist for ever the evidence is abundant. Christ said to the Jews "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof" (Matt. xxi. 43,) and he is represented as saying to those on his right hand, at the seat of judgment, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Matt. xxv. 34. Hence the kingdom must exist before the promises of Christ can be fulfilled. God says, "Hear the Word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock." Jer. xxxi. 10. Here, then, is the evidence that the people who were the inhabitants of that kingdom are to be gathered again, and according to the evidence contained in the prophecy of Ezekiel are to be made one nation upon the mountains of Israel, and one King is to be King to them all, a thing that has never happened since the kingdom was divided into two kingdoms in the days of Rehoboam the son of Solomon. When will be the time when shall fill the earth" is evident from the statement contained in the prophecy by Isaiah that "There shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots," who shall rule and judge in righteousness, and bring all things into harmony with the will of God, so that even the fiercest animals will become so tame that "the wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid." "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my (God's) holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea; and in that day the Lord shall set his hand again the second time to gather the remnant of his people from all nations whence he has driven them. The Psalmist says, "Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth is Mount Zion, on the sides of the north, the

INHERIT THE KINGDOM

"THE GLORY OF THE LORD

THE CITY OF THE GREAT KING.

Psa. xlviii. 2. In this city of God, "the Great King," the Lord Jesus Christ will be enthroned when he has overthrown those enemies who are to be made his footstool on which he will step to the throne of his father David; for all nations are to be gathered together against Jerusalem to battle, and are to be overthrown when the Lord goes forth to fight against them there.

Taking possession of the metropolis of his kingdom he will judge his brethren, giving a place to the faithful in his kingdom, which he is about to extend over all the earth, restore the seed of Abraham, according to the flesh, to their home, and issue his mandates to the nations of the earth to disarm, and beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks, and learn war no more; with the result that, the nation and kingdom that will not serve him shall perish. Thus then, will have been carried out in the kingdoms of Christ and his faithful brethren who will rule over all in righteousness and peace, for a thousand years, keeping all things in subjection to the God of Israel who by this means will have accomplished his purpose of filling the earth with his glory.

THE POLITICAL PURPOSE OF GOD

Christ taught his disciples to pray "Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so on earth." Hence the result of the coming of God's kingdom will be

"GLORY TO GOD IN THE HIGHEST

and on earth peace, good will toward men." Those who wish to participate in that glorious age, when the glory of the God of Israel will fill the earth, must seek first this kingdom of God and all others will be added unto them.

As far as my experience goes, it is hard to find any to take this divine injunction. Every one seeks some thing else before the kingdom of God; and in 99 cases out of a hundred, before they get enough of what they seek, they drop out of the crazy hurrying crowd, and with the loss of life, lose everything they have toiled for. Hard as it is to win souls to Christ by his gospel of love and mercy, our duty plain, and, by divine help we will say come, to any who may be weary and heavy laden till our voice is silent in death, or the Lord of life appears. If there be one present who is out of the ark of safety—let me plead with such to close in with God's overtures before the day of grace has passed. Time is on the wing, and in a very little while the Master will rise up and shut to the door. The signs of his speedy coming are transpiring every day. Think of his great love in dying in order that you may have life in honor and blessedness for ever. Think of his loving invitation,—come unto me, and I will give you rest, while myriads have never heard it; and do not forget that it were better you had never heard it, unless you believe it with the heart, turn away from sin, obey from the heart the form of doctrine prescribed for the remission of sin and continue faithful to the end of the journey of life; and then all will be well. You will then surely see Jesus and be made like unto him. To those who know the blessedness of those whose iniquities are pardoned and whose sins are covered, I would say the intensity of the darkness tells you that the morning without clouds will soon dawn. I for one want to make my election sure. I want more than ever to keep close to the great Shepherd of the sheep now, so that by and by I may be one of [illegible] who shall follow the Lamb whithersoever he goes.—O brethren and sisters, let us all redouble our diligence to lay hold upon eternal life, so that whether he come at midnight, or at cock-crowing, or in the morning, we may hail him with joy. Amen.

Brethren, please give your attention to reading these few lines, and especially the preaching brethren. We are living in an age of delusions, and a very strong effort is being made just now in many places to persuade people into the belief that it is necessary to keep the seventh day in order to salvation. Many fail to understand the words of Holy Writ that, "The gospel, is the power of God unto salvation," (not the Sabbath). Rom. i. 16. And I wish to call especial attention to Bro. Joblin's tract "Law or Gospel, which." It is the most thorough exposure of this delusion I have ever seen. It should be in every believer's home, every evangelist or preacher should have them in stock. By having one at hand we have just been the means of saving a very intelligent family from being deceived by the two law theory. These can be had by addressing M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, Ohio. Brethren, look up this matter at once, much may be accomplished by earnest work. Yours as ever striving for the one hope.

Editor Restitution:

The Illinois Conference is now a matter of history and I do not mean to infringe upon our Secretary's report further than to tell the brethren that on Saturday morning just before Conference convened for the day, Bro. Lyman Adams of Dixon was buried in baptism to arise to newness of life. This adds one to the Dixon body although our brother has taken a great deal of interest in the work there as long as I have known him. May he be faithful. When the final great morn dawns, may we all be found worthy to put on crowns of immortal glory. Pray for Bro. Adams that he may be strengthened in his work for the Master.

Wisdom of Solrach.

CHAPTER 18.

1. The one who toucheth pitch will have been polluted, and the one who entereth into partnership with a supercilious person will have become like him.

2. Do not carry anything too heavy for thee and do not enter into partnership with a man stronger and richer than thou; why should an earthen vessel form a partnership with an iron cauldron? It will dash against it and the pot will have been broken.

3. A rich man hath done wrong, and hath been very wroth besides; a beggar hath been wronged and will have besought besides.

4. If thou art of use to him he worketh with thee; if thou lackest though he will utterly forsake thee.

5. If thou hast he will share thy livelihood with thee, and he will empty thee of it and suffer no painstaking care.

6. He hath had his use of thee, and he will lead thee astray, and laugh at thee and give thee hope; he will talk good things to thee and will say, What is thy need?

7. And he will shame thee with his kinds of food until he hath made nought of thee twice or thrice, and at last he will mock at thee: after that he will see thee and utterly forsake thee, and shake his head at thee.

8. Take heed to thyself lest thou be led astray and humbled in thy rejoicing.

9. Should a man of influence invite thee, be retiring and all the more should he press his invitation.

10. Do not fall in with him lest thou be thrust away, and do not stand away far from him, lest thou be ignored.

11. Do not yield to enter into discourse with him, and do not put faith in his superfluous words; for with much talk he will tempt thee, and while laughing at thee he will search thee out.

12. Unmerciful is he who doth not watch to keep words, and he will not be sparing of affliction and bonds.

13. Watch to guard thyself and take heed exceedingly that thou mayest not walk into the midst of thy smiting ruin.

14. Every living creature loveth the creature like to it and every man his neighbor.

16. All flesh (every kind of flesh) is led together generically (or according to genius) and an individual man will have cleaved to one like to him.

17. Why should a wolf enter into a partnership with a lamb, just so an obdurate sinner with a truly-reverent man.

18. What peace hath a hyena with a dog? And what peace hath a rich man with a needy one?

19. Hunting for lions, wild asses in a wilderness, even so are poor men pastures for rich men.

20. An abomination to a haughty man is humility, even so is a poor man an abomination to a rich man.

21. A rich man when shaken is stayed up by friends, but a lowly man should he fall is thrust away by friends.

22. There are many to intervene for a rich man when he slips; he hath talked forbidden words, and they have justified him. A lowly man hath slipped and they have reproached him all the more; he hath given utterance to understanding, and a place hath not been allowed him.

23. A rich man hath talked and they have all kept silent, and exalted his word to the clouds; a poor man hath talked and they have said, Who is this? If he fall wantily they will turn up against him.

24. The rich man in whom there is no sin is good, and poverty is a bad thing in the mouth of an irreverent man.

25. A man's heart changeth his face whether it be toward good things or bad.

26. A cheerful countenance is a heart's foot-print in good things, and the finding of parables is discussions with weary toil.

COMMENT.

This chapter in its proverbial wisdom reminds us in its practical teaching of our own "Poor Richard" and any business man now with a few years of the experience such a career gives one will say amen to the wisdom herein contained.

Modern evolutionists evidently do not believe in the first principles of generic creation as here stated in the fifteenth and sixteenth verses, and yet this statement agrees with common observation and experience in this later age of the world.

The figure of "the heart's foot-print in good things" in the last verse of the chapter is not a bad stroke of rhetoric and is a homely trope that sticks like burr.

SOCIETY REPORTS.

The present membership of the Dixon Berean society is six. They met the past year once a month, with an average attendance of nine. They use their funds in buying tracts, paying for THE RESTITUTION each year for one reader, in helping the poor, and sending a delegate to the yearly conference. The lessons have been taken from the Berean booklets.

ADA A. OREW, Sec.

At Clark Center our society consists of fourteen members. We have had 24 meetings since organizing, and have studied 25 lessons. We have distributed one bunch of tracts.

LETITIA MURPHY, Pres.
L. M. CLAYPOOL, Sec.

Since Nov. 1902 the Adeline Bereans have met weekly until March 1. During the winter months our lessons were chosen from the Old Testament. During this time Bro. S. J. Lindsay met with us four or five times and prepared our lessons from Genesis. The class did not meet during the spring months. Since June we have tried to meet every other Sunday.

July 30 we rented a hall in Adeline, in which Bro. S. J. Lindsay gave two discourses. Our dues are 10 cents a month, one-fifth of which we send to the state treasurer. We have twelve members. We have distributed some tracts and written several social letters.

LILLIAN LINDSAY, Sec.

The Chicago Bereans meet the first Sunday afternoon of each month. The dues are ten cents a month, and are collected at each meeting. We have thirteen members, with an average attendance of eight.

We studied the lessons on the missionary work of Paul, by Bro. S. J. Lindsay. Sister Ruth Whitehead being our Leader.

On Sept. 6, 1902, it was our sad duty, with others, to witness our treasurer laid to rest in the silent grave, never to see his face again in this life. He attended the meetings faithfully, and did what he could for the benefit of the society. May the enemy death soon be put under foot. At our meeting Sept. 14 we elected a new treasurer.

At Christmas time money was taken from the treasury, together with the Sunday School, to buy provisions for Christmas dinners for several poor families.

We have written letters to some isolated members.

JESSIE M. WILSON, Sec.

The Berean society of the Moriah Restitution Church has held twenty-four meetings during the year. We have thirteen members, nearly all of whom are good workers for the cause of the Master. We take the topics in the Berean booklet for our lessons. We have distributed a great many tracts and papers; and have sent 80 cents to the state treasury.

Our members all take an active part in the meetings, generally one or more of them have a paper prepared to read bearing on the subject of our lesson. We hope the Bereans in other parts of the state are doing good work, and will continue to do so, that they may receive a home in the kingdom when Christ comes to reward his servants.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I write to tell you that the enemy death has bereft us of one near and dear to us. Clarence Cox after a long time of suffering died Aug. 10, 1903. He was eighteen years of age. We sorrow not as those who have no hope, "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." 1 Cor. xv. 27. Thanks be to God for his unspeakable gift. 2 Cor. ix. 15, "Who is the first born of every creature." Col. vi. 12, "Which in his times he will show who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings and Lord of lords." 2 Tim. vi. 15. This only supreme ruler is the Savior of all men, specially of those that believe. These things command and teach. 1 Tim. iv. 10-11. Let us ever stand firm for the whole truth.

So Much—So Little.

"So much to do, so little done."—Cecil Rhodes.

Is there no debt that thou dost owe
To lighten other's care or woe?
Is there no comfort thou canst give
To help another creature live?
Hast thou no peace thou canst bestow
And let a soldier being know?

O, fellow pilgrim, stop awhile
To give a helpful, loving smile;
Thy life is not thine own to live,
As thou hast pledged so must thou give?
But give not only of thy wealth,
Give, too, a little of thyself.

Oh, do not answer thus to me
"The greater cares that first must be."
Thou canst not live this way, my friend,
What will confront thee at the end?
Since there is little comfort stored
For those who live to merely hoard.

O soul so stultified, and mean,
What bit of love canst hope to glean,
With not one voice to intercede
To help thee in thy pressing need?
Look then to it. Aye, count the cost
Of precious, helpful moments lost.

"So much to do!" "So little—done!"
It is not strange the world's unwon.
So little done by you and me,
So little love with charity.

Papers Read at Bereans Meeting, Salem Conference.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I have taken as a basis for a few remarks the last part of Matt. xii. 34, "For out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. Surely our hearts are filled with love and gratitude to God for all the blessings he has bestowed upon us. This is an occasion that ought to fill each and every one's heart with gratitude for this blessing of being able to meet brothers and sisters whom we have never met, and may never meet again until our dear Lord comes to gather together his saints, and it ought to make each one of us feel like getting up and saying, "Praise ye the Lord," if nothing more. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." We are all co-workers with God in his vineyard, and one of our duties or desires ought to be to speak concerning the things we have learned out of his Word. It is love that moves us to speak, love for God and for his precious promises, love for the brethren and love for the church in general. We have a glorious hope and even this should cause us to glorify God. Christ is the rock on which we are to build our faith and hope. When the Spirit is in our hearts, who can study the words of Christ without longing to speak them to others? Who can trace his life in the gospel without greatly desiring to follow him in the way of suffering and of joy? Who can look into his face as outlined before the eye of faith, without burning with love to do something to please and honor him? Who can stand before his cross without being filled with a mighty desire to lead all the world to his feet that they might be saved? Who can go with the women and the disciples and stand beside his empty tomb without being thrilled by the angel's words, and longing to go out among men and sing with holy fervor the song of resurrection life and joy? The Lord is coming, let this be the herald note of jubilee. And when we meet and when we part, the salutation from the heart. With this end in view, brothers and sisters, that the Lord is coming, let each and every one of us strive the more earnestly to be overcomers, that when our Savior comes to take upon himself his great powers and reign supreme over the whole world, he may find us fit to be gathered together to share the glories that are to be revealed unto [illegible] faithful to the end.

BESSIE NICHOLLS.

OUR CONDUCT IN REFERENCE TO FUTURE LIFE.

Dear brothers and sisters:

We have had revealed to us through the Word of God, a true and faithful promise of eternal life and a share in all the glory which shall be revealed in the kingdom of God, which we know by the signs of the present times, will be set up soon, and this Word has been given to us as a light that shineth in a dark place, and as we look around us and see that all the world is unmindful of what the future will be, we ought to praise him who has given us this glorious hope. "For God who commands the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." This has all been done through the free goodness of God, and Jesus has said: "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth." John xv. 16. "Therefore, what manner of persons ought we to be, in all holy conversation and godliness." As the children of God it is our duty to strive to please him and bring our wills into subjection to his, and to walk humbly before him, to go to him in prayer, believing that his grace is sufficient for us, to let our light of the gospel shine before men; to be gracious and patient toward others, and in all our ways acknowledge him. May we let the Word of God dwell in us richly in all wisdom, and so let it control our every thought that sin may have no part in our lives, but that they may be purified and sanctified unto God, and that our steps may be so ordered that whatsoever we do, it may be done to the honor and glory of God. This may seem much to do, but if we love our heavenly Father, we will try to please him. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life." John iii. 16. My prayer is that each one may be watching for our Lord at his coming, and have an abundant entrance into his kingdom.

JENNIE SALISBURY.

THE MORTALITY OF MAN.

Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul, (or as one version puts it, is antagonistic to our spiritual life). 1 Pet. ii. 11. This I say then, "Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust or desire of the flesh; the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh; and these (the Spirit and flesh) are contrary the one to the other; so that ye cannot do the things that ye would." Gal. v. 16, 17.

From whence come wars and fightings, quarrels and brawlings among you? Come they not hence, even of your lusts or pleasures that war in your members. Ye ask, and ye receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume or use it upon your lusts or worldly pleasures. James iv. 1-3. They cry, but none giveth answer; because of the pride of these evil men. Surely God will not hear; neither will the Almighty regard it. Job xxxv. 12, 13. Watch ye, and pray, lest ye enter into temptation; the Spirit is truly ready and willing, but the flesh is weak. So Paul says, "I find then a law, that when I would do good, evil is ever present with me. For I delight in the law of God after the inward man; but I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin and death, which is in my members. O! wretched man that I am; who shall deliver me from this body of death? I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord; so then with my mind, I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin. Rom. vii. 20-25. In Isa. xl., we read, "All flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field. The grass withereth; the flower fadeth; but the Word of our God shall stand forever." Fresh and verdant in the morning it adorns the meadow. What a difference in the evening when it is cut down and withereth. Its glory is departed; such is life; and it tells us that a few short hours must suffice for earthly enjoyments. The day is past, the grass and flowers thereof are gone. We are but of yesterday as it were, and know nothing because our days are as a shadow, likened unto smoke and the wind that bloweth, we know not whither. One in a certain place testified saying, What is man that thou art mindful of him? And the Son of Man that thou visitest him? Thou madest him a little lower than the angels, to [illegible] and glory; and did set him over the works of thy hands. Thou hast put all things under his feet. Heb. ii. 6, 7.

The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord. This brings to mind this verse of poetry which I noticed in religious paper.

"If the wages of sin is death,
I do not want to begin,
If I can't get living wages,
I will not work for sin."

What caused death? Answer, Sin. Rom. v. 12, says, "Wherefore as by one man sin entered the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." The Lord said unto Adam, "Thou shalt surely die." That was but the sentence, if he disobeyed God's commands. He chose to do so, and as we all know God's command was carried out to the letter. He that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting, for says Jesus, "I will raise him up at the last day;" the resurrection morn. Why should Christ have said this, if man was already immortal? Paul says, "God only hath immortality, dwelling in that light that no man can approach unto."

John says: "He that hath not the Son of God hath not life," that is immortal life. He that believeth not the Son shall not see life, everlasting life. But if our life, eternal life, is hid with Christ in God, then when Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall we appear with him in glory. The first thing then is to get Christ. May all those that have done so, hold fast to the end, and obtain everlasting life in the kingdom of God on earth at last, is the earnest prayer of your brother in Christ.

STERLING P. GROVES.

"Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? By taking heed thereto according to thy Word," or in other words to make a practical application of God's Word.

After Adam had sinned God placed before rebellious man two ways of living, the narrow way that leads to eternal life, and the broad way that leads to eternal death, and as we can assume from the answer David gives to his question in our lesson, he referred to a young man who had chosen the narrow way to eternal life, for any one traveling in the broad way would have no use for God or his Word; and after having chosen the narrow way he gives him the key to success, the Word of God. In the 13th verse of this same chapter he says, The entrance of thy Word giveth light; it giveth understanding unto the simple. Paul in his epistle to him exhorts him thus: "But continue thou in the things which thou hast learned, and hast been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned them, and that from a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus. All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

Wherewith shall a young man cleanse his way? Why did David so designate? Does a young man's ways need cleansing any more than an old man's? Let us take a lesson from nature. Take for instance a young tree whose roots are just beginning to [illegible] grow and have not as yet taken a firm hold in the ground, and how easily it is uprooted when a severe storm comes; but on the other hand an old tree whose roots have been growing for years and have taken firm hold in the ground, is unmoved amid the storms that sweep around it. So it is with a young man who has just started on the road to life. He is not thoroughly rooted in the truth, and hence when he comes in contact with the wily adversary he is more apt to fall a prey to his subtilties than an older one who is thoroughly rooted in the truth. His power to resist depends entirely upon his belief in and his application of God's Word, as we read in Matt. vi. 24-29, "Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man which built his house upon a rock, and the rain descended and the floods came, and the wind blew, and beat upon that house and it fell not, for it was founded upon a rock, and every one that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand, and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house and it fell, and great was the fall of it." Hence we see how necessary it is to apply God's Word to ones daily life lest when they think they stand they snonin fall.

Jesus in his prayer to the Father on behalf of his disciples and those who would afterward believe on him through their word, says, "They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." What did he mean?

He had called them out from among their surroundings to follow him, they were to become separate from the world, they were to be in the world but not a part of it, they were to have no part nor lot with the workers of iniquity, and this is what God expects of all who profess to be followers of Jesus. They are to be in the world but not a part of it; they are to be the light of the world, to let their light so shine that men may see their good works and glorify God their Father which is in heaven.

Paul exhorts the Collossians to walk in wisdom toward them that are without, toward those who are strangers to the covenants of promise and aliens from the commonwealth of Israel.

How could they walk in wisdom with them if they were a part of them? If they partake of all their enjoyment would they then be apt to have been with them if there were no difference between them? I think not. And so it is with us, if we do not show by our daily walk and conversation that we have something better than the world at large.

If we do not refrain from taking part in their enjoyments we cannot expect to have any influence for good. This is making a practical application of God's Word. We are commanded to love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world the love of the Father is not in us. We certainly cannot do his will because no hope can work effectual good that does not work by love. Thus we see the practical application of God's Word carries with it a life of self-denial. See the young ruler who came to Jesus asking the way of eternal life, and when Jesus repeated to him the commandments he replied, All these things have I kept from my youth up, what lack I yet? Jesus said unto him, If thou will be saved go and sell that that thou hast and give to the poor and thou shalt have treasure in heaven, and come and follow me.

Did he show his sincerity in looking for eternal life by doing as Jesus bade him? No; for he heard that saying and went away sorrowful for he had great possessions. He could not afford to give up things that were temporal for things that were eternal. He wanted to have a good time in this life and still enjoy the life to come. What a lesson there is in this for us. What a warning not to expect to hold God's Word in one hand and the world in the other. How can we who have buried the old man of sin and have put on the new man of righteousness become enamored by the world and all its allurements, as Paul said to the Romans, How can we who are dead to sin live any longer therein? Paul in writing to the church at Colosse exhorts them thus, And let the Word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts unto the Lord. If the Word of Christ dwells in us richly in all wisdom, having taken hold of our affections, for we read it is [illegible] heart man believeth unto [illegible] and with the mouth [illegible] is made unto salvation, will [illegible] make itself manifest in our daily walk in life, and will not our ways be thoroughly cleansed from all uncleanliness that we may so live as to meet approval when the Master comes?

STANLEY SANFORD.

Conference Report.

As announced in THE RESTITUTION, the sixth annual Conference of the Church of God in Illinois, met at Oregon, continuing from August 12 to 16.

The first service was held on Wednesday evening and was in charge of our President, J. W. Wilson, who gave us an interesting discourse. Subject, "When will the King come, and why is he coming?" Text, Rev. xxii. 12.

On Thursday at 10:00 a. m. the Conference was formally opened by President Wilson, and the various committees were appointed, after which came a Symposium, the subject being, "The Signs of our times, and the Soon Coming of our Master."

12:00 m. Recess for Luncheon.

2:00 p. m. Continuation of Symposium on "The Coming of the Master."

At 3:00 p. m. we listened to a sermon by G. A. Brown, of Ashton, Ill. Topic, "Christ's Coming Kingdom."

6:45 p. m. We enjoyed a social [illegible] by sermon by A. J. Eychaner, State Evangelist for Iowa. Subject, "The Coming of Christ in Parable."

On Friday, the morning session, and the afternoon from two o'clock until three was occupied by a discussion of ordinances, church organization and government.

At 3:00 p. m. we listened to S. J. Lindsay, State Evangelist for Illinois, as he spoke to us upon "The value of Types and Shadows in Bible Study."

6:45 p. m. The Bereans were led in their Social Meeting by Miss Emma Ludwig. Topic, "Some of God's Promises."

7:30 p. m. Brother F. L. Austin spoke to us upon "The Character of God."

Saturday at 10:00 a. m. we assembled for business session and as the reports from the various churches came pouring in our hearts were cheered, and we knew loyal ones all over our field were working, even in the face of the greatest difficulties, to obey the command that this gospel be preached for a witness even unto all nations.

Evangelist S. J. Lindsay reported:

EVANGELIST'S REPORT FOR 1902-3.

Total number of sermons 151; funerals 5; marriages 4; baptisms 7. Visits were made to Lanark and Plum River twice. At Plum River a church is being built and is now ready for plastering. This comes as a result of the quarterly meeting held there in December with the meetings which followed. I suggest that the quarterly meetings be held regularly, believing that they are a means of more than ordinary proportions toward the sowing of the seed. Plum River is a field where much good work may be done. This conference should assist them in every way possible.

Regular monthly visits have been made to Adeline, Dixon and Antioch. Efforts were put forth at different times to hold a series of meetings at Adeline, but the weather defeated us on each occasion. At the suggestion of the Bereans at Adeline the last meeting was [illegible] Adeline instead of the school house two and one-half miles north. A large attendance was the result. It is my opinion the meetings should be held in the hall.

The church at Dixon is faithful. They succeed in spite of difficulties. Only that something could be done to get them a house of worship all their own.

Antioch has been holding her own well. The church here is passing through a period of depression, but with the kind of spirituality manifested by those who have the Master's cause at heart it will continue to exist to the glory of God.

The church at Oregon, briefly: No. of sermons 49; sermons by Elder Brown 11; exercises by children 1; total 61; baptisms 3; times of communion held 7; average number of communicants 15.

In addition to this we have reports from different workers in other parts of our State. A good report comes from Bro. Crowe's work at Keltner, from Bro. Brant at Moriah, and from Sister Jennie Cox, at Ripley. Also, Bro. G. M. Myers of Atchinson, Kan., made a short tour through the state, touching at Lanark and Adeline, and Eld. Brown of Ashton has preached once a month at Oregon, in my absence.

From my observation of the condition of the field, and as measured by my conception of the Christ-character, I must suggest that we are yet babes that need milk.

Everywhere I have gone I've found the brethren ever ready to investigate the Scriptures on these doctrines we have always held dear, and I find them able defenders of the truth. This is as it should be. But with this getting of knowledge let us get understanding also. Faith and works go hand in hand. Both are essential to true Christian character.

S. J. LINDSAY, Evangelist.

The officers elected for the year before us were as follows:

President J. W. Wilson, Chicago.

Vice President, S. J. Lindsay, Oregon.

Treasurer, J. M. Clotfelty, Lanark.

Secretary, Emma L. Smith, Polo.

At 3:00 p. m. we listened to a sermon by Brother A. J. Eychaner, subject, "Life and Immortality."

At 4.00 p. m., the Bereans held their annual business meeting. Sister Anna Drew of Dixon, Ill., was again elected President of the State Berean Society. May God bless her as our leader in this important work.

6:45 p. m. Social meeting conducted by Bereans, led by Miss Bertha Weaver. Subject, "Hearing and doing."

7:30 p. m. Sermon by F. L. Austin. Topic, "The Father's Care."

9:30 a. m. Sunday. Sunday School led by S. J. Lindsay. Subject, "Is the world growing better or worse."

10:30 a. m. Sermon by F. L. Austin. Topic, "Restitution."

11.45 a. m. Communion Service, Brother J. W. Wilson officiating.

At 2:00 p. m. we listened to an excellent program by the Bereans, and at 3:00 p. m. Brother Eychaner preached on the topic, "Sacrifice."

The Berean social meeting at 6:45 p. m. was led by L. H. Smith. Lesson Jno. xiv.

At 7:30 p. m. we gathered for the last service of the conference. Bro. S. J. Lindsay preached upon the subject of "Saving Faith." Then came the farewells for another year—doubtless for some of us 'till he come, unless the glorious summons should come for us all ere another year rolls by—"Even so Lord Jesus."

God's presence was with us in our meeting together; may it be with us all "Till we meet again."

EMMA L. SMITH, Sec'y.

The Thirst of God.

What does your heart cry for? A perfect, changeless, all-powerful love. And what does your mind seek? Reliable, guiding, inexhaustible and yet accessible truth. And what does your will crave? Commandments which have an authoritative ring in their very utterance, and which will serve as infallible guides for your lives. And what do your sinful natures need? Something that shall free our consciences and shall deliver us from the burden of our transgressions and shall calm our fears and shall quicken and warrant our lofty hopes. And what do men whose nature to live forever want but something that shall go with them through all changes of condition, and, like a light in the midst of the darkest tunnel shall burn in the passage between this and the other world, and in that world shall not be taken away from them? We want a person to be everything to us. And we want all our treasures to be in one Person, and we need that that Person shall live as long as we live, and as long as we need shall have stores enough to supply us. But all these requirements are only the spelling in many letters the one name, God. That is what we want, and nothing less. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness."—Home Messenger.

Let us have a personal interest in this matter. Begin at once to make plans to attend this Conference. A programme will be published later.

A. H. ZILMER, Pres.

We expect good speakers here.

The Second Annual Conference of the Church of God in Christ Jesus, will be held in the Restitution Church, at Moriah, Ill., commencing Oct. 3rd, and closing Oct. 14th, 1903. We expect Brother S. J. Lindsay, Evangelist of Ill., Bro. W. H. Wilson of Chicago, Ill., Bro. A. H. Zilmer, Evangelist of Indiana, Bro. John Claypool of Marshall, Ill., and perhaps others to be here to tell the glad tidings of the soon coming King.

Dear Brothers and sisters, one and all, we want you to come to our Conference, and have a good time. We will take care of you. The program will be arranged after we gather and it is understood that we remain at the church as much as possible. We heartily invite the Bereans to attend and we aim that you shall have a good part of the time.

Dear brothers and sisters, these brethren have promised to be here to preach to us, now, how many will write to me to meet them at Casey, on the 3rd of Oct., so that we may know how many teams to send for you. Lay aside the cares of this world and come and have a love feast that will long be remembered, and may each one be able to say that it good is to be here. Remember that Bro. Lindsay said, What a nice trip for the northern brothers and sisters it would be to come to this meeting. May all have good meetings wherever they assemble themselves together for Conference, and may the glad tidings of the gospel be preached, that men and women can see the grand and precious promises and obey them while it is called today, and if we should never meet again in this world may we all meet in the kingdom of God.

Yours, in hope of eternal life.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money set loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Collier's Weekly is conducting a very novel and interesting competition for its readers each month. To enter this contest all one has to do is to review the issues of Collier's for the current month and answer the two or three questions which are printed in each issue, giving such opinion and such suggestions as will aid in improving the paper. Collier's aims in this way to secure the assistance of every one of its readers in making the paper more to their liking. Every reader, in fact, becomes one of the editors and has his voice in building the greatest illustrated journal of the age.

The first prize each month, awarded for the most helpful suggestion, is $50 in cash, with a second prize of $25 in cash, and eighteen other prizes of sets of books, ranging in value from $32 down to $5, making in all $320 of value given in prizes each month. There are in addition, cumulative cash prizes, for those who win prizes in successive months, and a big cash prize of $1,000 for the most valuable suggestions during 1903.

For the convenience of intending contestants who can not be promptly supplied by newsdealers, all the copies of Collier's for the current month will be sent post paid, together with a handsome proof of a drawing by Charles Dana Gibson, upon receipt of 40 cents in stamps addressed to The Lion's Mouth, Collier's Weekly, 438 West 13th Street, New York.

The Bible.

"The Bible—hast thou ever heard of such a Book? The author, God himself;
The subject, God and man: salvation,
Life, and death—eternal life, eternal death—
Dread words! whose meaning has no end, no bounds—
Most wondrous book! bright candle of the Lord,
Star of eternity! the only star
By which the ark of God could navigate
The sea of life, and reach the coast of bliss
Securely! the only star which rose o'er Time,
And on its dark and troubled ocean, still,
As generation drifting swiftly by Sunk to the gulf of generation, threw a ray
Direct from heaven's own light, and to the hills of God,
The eternal hills, pointed the sinner's eye."

Funeral Sermon.

On Friday morning, July 17, 1903, at 2 o'clock A. M. at the town of Waterville, Washington, Elder Richard Corbaley fell asleep in Jesus.

A telephone message from his son, P. M. Corbaley called us from our home at Wenatchee to preach the funeral sermon, on Saturday at 2:00 P. M. After singing and prayer we read the 23rd Psalm: "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters; he restoreth my soul; he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

Brethren, Sisters, and Friends. We have met here to perform the last rites over one who was our brother, neighbor and friend. We are standing today, friends, in the presence of death. We are confronting a condition that mankind has had to meet in all of the ages that have past and gone since the history of man began. As we look upon him as he lies before us in the cold embrace of death, language is inadequate to express our feelings, and as he is now past all human aid, for he has finished his pilgrimage and run his race and is now in the hands of his Maker. His life is hid in Christ in God.

It would be useless for me to say anything about his life or character to you who are gathered here today, as your very presence shows the esteem in which you held him. We can say no thing which would benefit the dead, therefore we give a brief character sketch of his life and then direct our remarks to the living.

Richard Corbaley was born in Marion Co., Ind. of Jeremiah J. and Jane Corbaley on Aug. 7, 1820. On May 6, 1847 was united in marriage with Jane Croco and settled at Plymouth, Ind.

He was ordained to preach the gospel in 1860. In 1871 he moved to California, afterwards in 1880 he moved to Washington. During all these years his whole aim has been to preach the gospel pure and simple. How well he has succeeded the most of you know. He has stood ready to champion the cause of truth on all occasions and almost with his last breath was an admonition to those around him to stand fast in the faith.

As we take into consideration what is commonly taught and believed by mankind, that when a man dies his soul goes to its reward, thereby making an agreement with death, we read in Isa. xxviii. 18, that "your covenant with death shall be disannulled and your agreement with death shall not stand."

I turn to Job xiv. 14, and find him asking this question, "If a man die shall he live again?" I stop and enquire also, If a man die shall he live again? This is a question my friends, that man has been asking from the time when the sentence of death was pronounced upon the human race until the present time.

Let us turn to that fountain of knowledge, the Word of God, and see if we can find a solution to the question. In Eccl. iii., and beginning with the 18th verse we read as follows: "I said in mine heart concerning the estate of the sons of men, that God might manifest them, and that they might see that they themselves are beasts. For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts, even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath; so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast; for all is vanity. All go unto one place; all are of the dust and all turn to dust again." So we find that the wise man has said, when he had considered the estate of man in his present condition, that when he dies he is dead.

Does this harmonize with the sentence that was pronounced on man at the time of the first great trespass when our father Adam disobeyed God? As a result the sentence of death was passed on all men. and in Gen. iii. 17, we read "Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, "Thou shalt not eat of it, cursed is the ground for thy sake, in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life. Thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee, and thou shalt eat the herb of the field. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return."

So we see the harmony between the statement of Solomon and the curse that was pronounced on man. This condition was brought about by Adam's transgression.

Turning to 1 Cor. xv. 21–22, we find the apostle Paul making this statement: "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead; for as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive."

We see the harmony of the Scriptures on this subject. The wise man understood the purport of the original sentence and Paul bears the same testimony, that all men are under the sentence of death. Then a future state of existence depends upon a resurrection of the dead. The apostle Paul has spoken in this same letter of a resurrection of the dead, hence we see that it is a Bible doctrine.

In Psalms xvii. 15, by King David we see that he understood the matter in the same light, "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness. I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." Now we can understand with what confidence David made the statement in the twenty-third Psalm, "Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." Again, "I will be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." So we see David had this same hope of the resurrection.

Did any of the others of God's prophets have this same bright ray of hope? We find from Job, the man who asked the question, If a man die shall he live again? "Oh that my words were now written; oh that they were printed in a book! That they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock forever! For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold and not another; though my reins be consumed within me." Job xix. 23–27. So Job understood that man would live again and that by a means of a resurrection.

Take the testimony of still another of the Lord's servants. Isaiah speaks of the resurrection in this language: "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust; for thy dew is as the dew of herbs and the earth shall cast out the dead." Isa. xxvi. 19.

Having now considered from a Bible standpoint that when a man dies he is dead and that he must depend for a future existence upon a resurrection from the dead; and have found from the same authority that there is to be a resurrection, the next thing for us to find if we can when that time will come. When shall the earth cast out the dead?

We read in Luke xix. 12, a statement from the Savior while here on earth; that a certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and return. We read also in Acts i. 10-11, that "While they looked stedfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." So we find by his own statement that he has gone to heaven to receive unto himself a kingdom and return. We have from the two messengers that "this same Jesus that you have seen go into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Then he is to return to this earth again.

Zachariah xiv. 4, discloses the place to which he will return. "And his feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives which is before Jerusalem on the east."

"In that day"—what day? Let us go to Dan. xii. 1–2. We find in the eleventh chapter that the angel has been giving Daniel a brief outline of the kingdoms of this world, but when the time has come that God purposed should come, "Then shall Michael stand up, the prince which standeth for the children of thy people; and there shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time; and at that time thy people shall be delivered every one that shall be found written in the book. And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." We find that when a man dies he sleeps until the resurrection and that will be (to the righteous) when the Lord shall return to this earth.

To you, my friends, who are in sorrow because of the loss of a husband and father, I will call your attention to the consolation offered by the apostle Paul in 1 Thess. iv. 13–14, "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the Word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

In 1 Cor. xv. we have Paul explaining again the manner of this meeting of the righteous dead and the righteous living. "Behold I shew you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality."

How beautifully this harmonizes with Phil. iii. 20–21. "For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ who shall change our vile body that it might be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things to himself."

What a precious promise if we believe that Jesus died and rose again even so they that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him, and not only they but we also if we are accounted worthy. That we may have our vile bodies changed and fashioned like unto his glorious body, let us take hold of the hope set before us with renewed courage that we may meet him whom we have been so lately taken from us, "for now we see through a glass darkly but then face to face."

We would not have you to be ignorant concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not as others which have no hope. That is not the condition for we have the hope and knowledge that we shall meet him again face to face, if we are only faithful. He could say with the apostle Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give to me at that day and not to me only but unto all them that love his appearing."

Friends in Christ, and you who are not of Christ, let us one and all resolve, from this day forward that we will be accounted worthy to be caught up to meet the Lord in the air.

And thus we have laid him away but we believe and trust it will not be long. May the Lord find us watching.

N. D. TICHENAL.

Read at Salem Conference.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I have written a few thoughts on the subject of confiding. Confiding means trust or belief, self reliance, boldness. We all know how absolutely essential it is for men in the ordinary duties of life to have confidence; what a stimulating effect it has on mankind in general and what a demoralizing effect the lack of confidence has upon them. But the first great lesson we have in confidence in God's word is the case of the children of Israel in the wilderness. It was because they lost confidence in God and his ability to deliver the promised land unto them. After the many manifestations of his care and guidance they had been led through the Red Sea and had seen Pharaoh's army destroyed in their attempt to follow, had been fed with manna from heaven, had been led by a cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night. And yet in spite of all God had done for them, when ten of the spies came back with an adverse report, saying the land was full of giants, and it could not be taken, their confidence wavered, they forgot all of God's blessings toward them, and upbraided Moses for having brought them out of Egypt to starve in the wilderness. This so angered God that he declared not one of them should ever enter the promised land, and out of the thousands that left Egypt there were but two (the two faithful spies whose confidence in God remained unshaken) ever set foot upon it. What a sad commentary on the frailty of man in his natural state, how easily mislead and how ready to forget God's blessings. What a warning is this for us to trust God at all times. Abraham when he was called upon to offer up Isaac, his only son, the one through whom all the promises were to come, yet he did not waver but made every preparation for the sacrifice, and would have slain him if God had not intervened. He was confident that even should he slay Isaac God was able to raise him up again. He counted God faithful who had promised and his faith was accounted to him for righteousness. We have another beautiful lesson in confidence in Daniel's 23rd chapter, you are all familiar with it so I will not quote it. Our confidence in God was first manifested when we embraced the covenants of promise and complied with the conditions laid down by God. But this was only the beginning of our confidence. We are assured that in the world we would have tribulation, and that whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth, and if we are not chastened then we know we are not the sons of God. And it is in the enduring of this chastening that our confidence in God is made manifest, for it is through much tribulation we are made perfect. We have trials, how do we bear them? Do we complain? Or when the way seems narrowest and our future darkest, do we remain unmoved, and can we say with David, Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I shall fear no evil for thou art with me. Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. What an example of unshaken confidence we have in Job. Who, when messengers brought him word that he had lost everything, did not murmur against God, but he said, the Lord gave and the Lord hath taken, blessed be the name of the Lord. "The Lord gave," what a lesson in these three words. What a sense of the realization of the source of every blessing, what resignation to the divine will, is this not the, Not my will but thine be done spirit exemplified? Job knew he had brought nothing into the world, all that he had, had been given by God, and now if God saw fit to take it away again he had no cause for complaint, but rather as he seemed to see it, his duty was to bless God for being allowed to enjoy them thus long. And as the sequel goes to prove this confidence in God was not misplaced, for we read that God blessed his latter end more than his beginning and in the end he had twice as much as he had at first. In 2 Tim. iii. 16, we read all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works.

This gives us the source of our knowledge. God has given the Scriptures for our instruction, in them he has revealed unto us his will. And it is through a close study and application of them that we are enabled to hold fast the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end. It is from them we obtain spiritual food that enables us to grow in grace and in the knowledge and favor of our Lord Jesus Christ. And while God has given us the Scriptures for instruction he has also given us these examples of steadfastness to cheer us on the way, as an exhortation and a comfort in adversity. And what a gloomy account of them we have in the 11th chapter of Paul's epistle to the Hebrews, those of whom it is said the world was not worthy, those who suffered death itself rather than deny their faith. And when we think of these worthies and what they suffered for the cause of Christ in comparison with what we suffer today, do we not feel of all men the most highly privileged? And if we realize our position will its effect on our lives be manifest to those about us? Will they see we have a hope which is an anchor to the soul both sure and steadfast? And shall any be led to glorify God through the transforming power of the truth in us? God says that every convert thus gained shall be a star in our crown of glory. And now in summing up briefly we find that our confidence in God depends entirely upon our faith in and our application of the gospel. With services performed willingly and from the heart, assured that if we do our part God is faithful who has promised, and he will bestow upon us the reward promised to all the faithful, viz: an eternal life of joy and peace with Jesus in his kingdom. And that we may all so continue the beginning of our confidence steadfastly unto the end that when Jesus shall come to set up his kingdom we may be among those to whom he shall say, Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world, is the prayer of yours in the service of the Master.

Editor Restitution:

There seems to be a desperate effort made among some of the brethren to try to prove that the Bible account given in Matthew and Luke, of the nativity of the Christ is spurious, and ought to be ruled out. Read Matt. xxii. 41-46.

The following reasons I give for believing the record genuine—concerning his Divine begettal, viz: The prominence given throughout the whole New Testament of his being the "Son of God."

"The Son," 1 John iv. 14. "The Son of God," John i. 34. "The Son of the living God," Matt. xvi. 16. "His only begotten Son," John iii. 16. "The only begotten Son of God," John iii. 18. "The Son of the Father," 2 John iii. "The only begotten of the Father," John i. 14. "The only begotten Son which is in the bosom of the Father," John i. 18. "In this was manifested the love of God toward us because . . . that he sent his only begotten Son into the world that we might live through him," 1 John iv. 9. "A Son given," Isa. ix. 6. "One Son" (his well beloved) Mark xii. 6. "His dear Son," Col. i. 13. "My Son," Psa. ii. 7. "The Son of the Highest," Luke i. 32. "The Son of the blessed," Mark xiv. 6. "Wonderful," Isa. ix. 6. "My beloved Son," Matt. xvii. 5. "The Father," "I am the Son of God." John x. 36. "Jesus himself," "The Son of God," Mark i. 1. "The Spirit in the world," "The Son of God," Luke i. 35; ii. 11. Gabriel, "This is the Son of God," John i. 34. John the Baptist, "The Christ the Son of God," John xx. 31. The apostle John, "He is the Son of God," Acts ix. 20. Paul the apostle, "Thou art the Son of God," Mat. xiv. 33. Disciples, "Rabbi, thou art the Son of God." John i. 49. Nathaniel, "The Christ the Son of God," John xi. 27. Martha, "Jesus Christ is the Son of God," Acts iii. 37. Eunuch, "Truly this was the Son of God," Mark xv. 39. Centurion, "Thou art the Son of God," Mark iii. 11. Unclean spirits, "Thou Son of the Most High God," Mark v. 7. The legion, "Immanuel, God with us," Mat. i. 23.

These Scriptures are sufficient to prove the record of his nativity true, viz: "The Son of God by begettal—the Son of man by birth." The argument to prove that Joseph was his paternal father, does not touch on the above points. Why? because they are all in harmony with his Divine begettal. The wording of the record is proof of itself. It sounds more like inspiration than forgery; and the whole of the New Testament is a confirmation of its truth.

This is only a tithe of what might be said on the subject of the Sonship, but I think enough for the honest—thoughtful mind.

"Let God be true."

The Restitution.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPT. 9, 1903.

WE recently sent letters to a number of our patrons explaining that we needed what was due us in order that we might meet our obligations. A number have responded, and we thank them heartily for so doing. There are still a large per cent of those whom we addressed, who have not yet given heed to our call. We dislike to tell of this, but are compelled to do so. It is useless to multiply words, brethren and sisters. We simply need the money that has been earned. Need it in order that obligations that really distress us may be met. We only want to impress on your minds that the demands on us are imperative—just MUST be met. We have no other means of satisfying them, and depend on you to supply us the needed money. Please get it in some way, and send at once. To get the little that you each owe will not distress you as carrying the whole burden does us. So attend to this today—not next week, or next month, but understand that we need THIS VERY DAY every cent that is due us. Then we can pay our obligations, and not be counted dishonest.

THE little things that we neglect to do seldom remain little. They are like so many acorns. By and by we shall walk under their shadow.

THERE is a pleasure in contemplating good; there is a greater pleasure in receiving good; but the greatest is doing good, which comprehends the rest.

THE present success of truth is very limited; because but a very small proportion of the public yearn for liberty, and would be free if they knew the way.

To how many of us, dear readers, is the very mention of religion that of a prohibition of things we like to do, and of commands to do things we would much rather not do?

GEORGE F. Wright says: "Christianity in its appeal to historical evidence allies itself with modern science rather than with the glittering generalities of transcendentalism."

THE signature or mark of love is that it delights to divine and fulfil the desires of the one beloved, and that it moulds the will of each of the parties into conformity with the will of the other.

THERE is nothing besides Christ that is worth living for. All that we may achieve on our own account is not our own when done,—we have to die and leave it,—whereas, anything we achieve in Christ is eternal, because he is for ever.

ENTHUSIASM is the element of success in everything. It is the light that leads and the strength that lifts men on and up in the great struggle of scientific pursuits and professional labor. It robs endurance of difficulty and makes duty a pleasure."

THE present government of the world is a case in which a few rule the many to the detriment of all, to some extent. They are fitly represented by beasts in the symbolic vision. Merciless beasts they are wherever existing. The best are only less furious than the others.

IT seems strange to read the following article of faith of the Presbyterian church, as we never hear of its being preached, and never hear any one speaking of the blessed hope. Evidently it has been lost sight of; but possibly this paragraph was taken from the English Presbyterian articles of faith, and the American Presbyterian articles of faith may not contain it. At any rate it is going the rounds of the Press in this shape:—"We assuredly believe that on a day known only to God, the Lord Jesus Christ will suddenly come again from heaven with power and great glory; and we look for this second appearing of our Savior as the blessed hope of his Church, for which we ought always to wait in sober watchfulness and diligence that we may be found ready at his coming."

A CARD dated Sept. 2d, wishes us to inform the brotherhood that Brother T. E. Adams is now on the flat of his back, having suffered a stroke of paralysis of the left side. He is some better, and hopes to be his own self some day soon, and desires to be remembered to all the faithful ones.

IT is all very well for those whose instincts are grovelling, and their brains saddled with trashy literature, to decorate their perishing mortalities with gaudy trumpery; but Christian women ought to be the subjects of too divine a consciousness to trick themselves out in glittering peddlery.

"To take advice is no easy matter, and this, too, is a part of courage. We are all like men walking along a path backward. No one can see the way till he has passed it, but those further on than we, can see the stones and ditches that we are coming to, and if we listen to their directions we shall avoid many hard falls and ugly slips."

"THE most hopeless man in the world is the man who is drifting. If he fell into a great error, he might almost startle himself into reformation. But he goes with the current, simply because to go against it would require a strong, sturdy, manly fight, and that is what he is not capable of. Be sure of this, the man who drifts will drift toward evil. No man ever drifted into good by chance. To become good means battling, working, enduring, training, and a long severe fight."

Russia's Present Attitude.

The news from the Zionist Congress is surprising, if true. It is reported that Dr. Herzl in a speech affirmed that they were expecting that Russia will from this time forward favor the settlement of the Jews in Palestine. And being asked to explain why he had made that statement, he read a letter from a minister of the Czar which, in words, at least, indicated a decided change of front. Is Russia in this way clearing the way for a profitable raid later on? It looks that way. At any rate we know he is to come into the land that is brought back from the sword like a storm, and like a cloud to cover the land, with the object of taking a spoil and a prey from the people gathered out of the nations, which will have gotten cattle and goods, and to carry away silver and gold and to take a great spoil. There is no mistake about that. The difficulty hitherto has been that Russia has opposed the re-settlement of the Jews in the land which he will one day invade to spoil.

We cannot as yet see clearly how these things are to be brought to pass; but we think the Czar's government has devised a scheme with a view to its aggrandizement, which Jehovah will use to further his revealed purpose. As already remarked,—he is certainly to invade that land for a purpose which at present is not possible; the spoil is not there to tempt him yet. But it will be there. And when Russia comes to take it, Jehovah says HE will bring him against that land, so the Gentiles may know him, when he is sanctified in Gog before their eyes. Ezek. xxxviii. 12-16.

The Russian Aggressions in Palestine.

We learn by the Glad Tidings that a recent article in the Globe (English) calls attention to the renewed and increased activity of Russia in Palestine, which has followed upon the German emperor's trip to the Holy Land. The activity is not carried on openly, but under the guise of missionary zeal. Today there are 155 Russian schools in Syria and Palestine, educating 15,000 children as against 9,000 three years ago. Jerusalem in particular is the object of Russia's solicitude. Here she is busy buying land and erecting buildings of all kinds—missions, schools, hospitals, and monasteries. In fact, the Russian "New Jerusalem" forms a town of its own, and is practically a fortress commanding the older Jerusalem, and surrounded by a strong wall. France is fast losing to Russia the historical position she held so long as protector of Christendom in the East, though the German Emperor is also making strenuous efforts to assume a similar position on behalf of the Protestant communities. Nor are Germany's ambitions in this quarter of the world restricted to religious matters. It has made many a bold bid to capture the trade of Syria; its latest and most successful coup being the promotion of the Bagdad railway. No one knows better than Russia that this railway is aimed, among other things, at her own [illegible] encroachments in Palestine; and [illegible] renders her more anxious than ever [illegible] acquire a strong footing in Syria. [illegible] promotion of schools for the [illegible]tion of native children, serves as [illegible]cellent medium for the extension [illegible]ier influence. No money is spared. The most promising Arab pupils are sent to Russia to complete their education. They return with Russian wives to become teachers in the Palestinian schools, and having acquired strong Russian leanings, they naturally do their best to spread Russian ideas in their native land.

Russia's great object now is to lay hands upon the holy places in Jerusalem, in which at present she has no share. The Greek sepulchre and monasteries have hitherto belonged to the Greek church in Jerusalem, and this body does not acknowledge the authority of the Russian orthodox church. But it seems only a question of time when Russia will oust the Greek church and force forward the claims of her own church. "If [illegible] the Holy places [illegible] hands," says the Globe writer, the "consequences will be grievous alike for the Greeks and for all the other nations who are interested in the peace of Jerusalem." For Jews these facts are all-important. They show how impossible it is that Palestine can be made over to the Jews by the Porte, and how unwise is the Zionist scheme in the face of Russia's scarcely concealed ambitions. It is a known fact that the Sultan has prohibited further Jewish immigration to Palestine, not that he objects to the Jews as such, but because he fears that such a movement might serve as a pretext to Russia to increase her hold upon the Holy Land.

THE situation in Turkey is getting worse fast. The Sultan has notified the powers that he is not able to guarantee the lives and property of the various consuls at Constantinople, and blue jackets from the fleets are being sent to act as guards. The Macedonians are striving to influence others to join in the revolts, knowing that when it gets bad enough the powers must intervene. Bulgaria wishes outwardly to stand neutral, though many of her citizens are with the insurgents. Turkey seems determined to destroy everything in Macedonia, and it is reported that bands of Turkish soldiers have entered Bulgarian territory, and that red Bulgaria is certain. There is a report to the effect that a treaty is in existence whereby Russia is bound to take up arms for Bulgaria in case of Turkey attending her. Taken altogether the situation is quite critical.

The Revival Needed.

We have a surfeit of religion which luxuriates in the devout fervors of the prayer-meeting and the camp-ground, which sings sweet hymns and applauds sweet sermons, and then goes strait off to its money-grasping and its pleasure-seeking, pondering to self and sin. God forbid that we speak lightly of true spiritual emotion. But the Christianity which Christ demands is something deeper than a song, or a sermon, or a sacrament. It is the holy and the humble imitation of himself.

The revival, then which we need is a revival of the religion which keeps God's commandments; which tells the truth and sticks to its promises; which pays twenty shillings to the pound; which cares more for good character than a fine coat; which votes at the ballot-box in the same direction that it prays; which denies ungodly lusts, and which can be trusted in every stress of temptation. A revival which will sweeten our homes, and chasten our press, and purify our politics, and cleanse our business and commerce from roguery and rottenness would be a boon from heaven. A revival which will bring not only a Bible knowledge but a Bible conscience to all, is what the land is dying for. The world's sorest want today is more Christlike men and women. The preaching it needs is—more sermons in shoes. If you come to us freighted with such messages, and aims, and holy purposes, then may God give an abundant entrance everywhere, and a mighty success.

The field is ripe and ready for the sickle. The divine Spirit will surely attend. God's true people will welcome the efforts with prayers and eager sympathy. Scoffers may sneer and devils may rage, but the Word of Jehovah will grow mightily and prevail. To prepare for such a revival let us be putting away sin from our hearts, and let us be seeking An influx of the Spirit of Jesus.—T. L. Cuyler.

An Unprofitable Business.

The saloon produces and provides nothing of profit to society. The labor and capital employed in the liquor industry wastes millions of raw material and machinery, but add no useful product to the nation's wealth. If all this property were destroyed, and all the 600,000 employees were supported in idleness by the people, there would be no less wealth, and no less supply of food, clothing, homes and comforts in the country. But the money might not be in the hands of liquor lords, and the comforts of life might be in the homes of the common people.

The taxes paid by the saloons come out of the pockets of the people. If the saloons paid less tax, there would be less expense for jails and police. Think, too, of the thousands of laborers unfitted for work by the saloon, and so lost to the productive industry of the country. Is it too much to say that the saloon destroys more laborers than it employs? Is not at least one customer of the saloon made an idler and a wreck for every bar-tender employed? The country cannot afford such waste of capital and labor. The church finds all this army of employees of the saloon practically beyond her reach. Multitudes of its patrons must be wonned from the cup before they can be saved to Christ and the Church. The church must fight the saloon to the death.—Dr. D. H. Ela.

She Hath Done What She Could.

I imagine when Mary died if God had sent an angel to write her epitaph, he couldn't have done better than to put over her grave what Christ said;—"She hath done what she could."

I would rather have that said over my grave, if it could honestly be said, than to have all the wealth of the Rothschilds. Christ raised a monument to Mary that is more lasting than the monument raised to Cæsar or Napoleon. Their monuments crumble away, but hers endures. Her name never appeared in print while she was on earth, but today it is famous in three hundred and fifty languages.

We may never be great; we may never be known outside our circle of friends; but we may, like Mary, do what we can. May God help each one of us to do what we can! Life will soon be over; it is short at the longest. Let us rise and follow in the footsteps of Mary of Bethany.—D. L. Moody.

Dr. Gill, the commentator, wore a gown, and one of the sisters complained of the excessive length of the white bands. The doctor said, "Clip them to suit yourself." This the lady did. "Now," said the doctor, "you have something about you which is a deal too long, also. It causes me no end of trouble." "Well," said she, thinking one good turn deserves another, "here are the scissors; use them as you please." "Come, then," said he, "put out your tongue." The result is not known, but an abbreviation of this sort would save many a "church squabble," and the surgical operation wouldn't be confined altogether to the sisters.

Evangelist's Notice.

The N. W. Conference see fit to keep me in the field as their Standard Bearer, and have elected me Evangelist for the coming year.

I request any of the brethren that wish a series of meetings in their locality to address me at an early date, that I may arrange my years' work. As through the courtesy of the R. R. Company I receive half-rates to any part of the United States, I may extend my labor beyond the states of Oregon and Washington, if desired.

Address me at Scholls, Ore.

PURE RELIGION.

That is a word that has a world of meaning attached to it. Pure, that signifies that there is nothing better, and if lived up to as quoted in our text, would bring much more true happiness to mankind, than they would gain in always living for self, that is if they are true Christians. For our text reads thus, "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father, is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction and to keep himself unspotted from the world." Now as I understand this, we are not only to visit them, but we can see a way open whereby we can not only help them with some needed article that we may have, or with money which will relieve their temporal want, but speak a kind word of sympathy which will sooth their wounded spirit, and gladden sorrowful hearts. Pure religion is doing unto others as you would have them do to you, as well as to visit the fatherless and widows. It might be termed the "golden rule," which is much the same as pure religion. As a general thing there is but very little pure religion and undefiled with mankind at the present day, they are lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, as we can see manifested in all the walks of life, and we are commanded to turn away from such, and be not partakers of their evil deeds. They have a form of godliness but deny the power thereof, the power of God to raise the dead, and change the living and to establish his kingdom upon earth with Christ as King, who is to have the government of the world for one thousand years, with the twelve apostles sitting on twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel, and we, if we are found worthy will share a part in that glorious kingdom, where there will be nothing but pure religion, where there will be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying. And the last sentence in our text says, keep himself unspotted from the world. This would include not being carried away with the vain and fashionable amusements of the present day, of which there are numberless ones, which tend to draw our minds from the pure and good. We have to battle with self to keep from those vain amusements, such as card playing, ball rooms, horse racing, pool rooms, base ball, picnics, reunions, and many more that might be mentioned. All tend to draw the minds of the young from that which is noble and elevating as well as of the older ones. We can learn a good lesson from the forepart of the second chapter of James, we are told in that, that we are not to have respect to the rich and despise the poor, but how natural it is to look up to those that have plenty of money, and down on those that have not, but a poor man, if he be a true Christian he is just as good as a rich one. It is not money that makes a Christian, for it reads in the 5th verse of 2nd chapter, "Harken my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of the world rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him, but ye have despised the poor. Do not rich men oppress you and draw you before the judgment seat? Do not they blaspheme that worthy name by which ye are called? If ye fulfil the royal law. According to the Scriptures, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself, ye do well. But if ye have respect to persons ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law as transgressors. Dear ones, let us put on the whole armor that we may be able to stand in that day.

Obituary.

Benjamin Fielding Head died at his home in Plymouth, Ind., on Aug. 20, 1903, aged 71 years, 5 months, and 15 days, he having been born in Marion Co., Ind., Mar. 14, 1833.

He was among the first volunteers at the breaking out of the Civil war, being a member of the 20th Indiana regiment. At the battle of Spottsylvania he was taken prisoner, and for nine months suffered the hardships of Andersonville.

He was united in marriage with Miss Louisa J. Nash at Argos, April 18th, 1865. Three sons and two daughters with the bereaved wife, are left to mourn the death of a father and husband who was always kind and faithful, and an citizen and friend had the respect of all.

Brother Head was immersed by Brother Wagoner at Argos, on April 12, 1869, and has ever remained true to the faith of the gospel. In 1875 he with his wife, united with the Church at Plymouth, but afterwards moving to Stark Co., they united with Eagle Creek Church, where they still retain membership, though they returned to this city some years ago.

The funeral was held at the Church in Plymouth, Aug. 31, and was attended by the Grand Army Post, of which he was a member. Burial was at Oak Hill Cemetery. Brother F. L. Austin conducted the services, and in view of the loss sustained by the sorrowing family, he writes:

"But in this the exhortation of Paul to the brethren at Thessalonica was very comforting, they being not hopeless mourners. Rather that they have hope toward God that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, and that they who sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. Anxiously awaiting that day, we laid him to rest. May the promises of Holy Writ, kindled into hope by faith, indeed ever strengthen and console the bereaved."

Little Audrey Jone, daughter of Willis A. and Mary B. Roose, died at the home near Bremen, Ind., Aug. 21, [illegible] aged [illegible] years, 10 months and 5 days.

The intense love of parents, together with their utmost effort were unable to continue the little life. But there is one whose love for her, and others, is even greater than parents' love, and whose ability knows no bounds. He has planned and promised that she shall be released from the sleep of death. In this our much bereaved brother and sister in Christ may rest secure with that ever blessed assurance to Rachel "thy work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord; and they shall come again from the land of the enemy," for God "will have a desire to the work of his hands."

While waiting for the glorious resurrection to bring these things to light may faith in God be so firm that, even in the severest trials it may be truthfully accepted that all things work together "for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

F. L. AUSTIN.

Delta Florence Coons, died at Clay Center, Kansas, Aug. 12, 1903, aged 1 year, 4 months and 27 days.

Robert Andrew Coons, died at Canton, Kansas, Aug. 18, 1903, aged 3 years, 10 months and 18 days.

Children of R. P. and Mable Coons.

Sister Mable was baptized into Christ at Canton, Kansas, [illegible] 1902, by State Evangelist A. W. Darby. Since that time her home has been at Clay Center, where her husband, who is a miller is employed.

The little ones both had Cholera Infantum. Baby was brought to Canton in the little white casket. Robert sick, but the floods had made the conditions such at their home they hoped to make it better for him by bringing him away. The disease had too strong a hold on the little frame, and in less than a week two little treasures were committed to the earth. Jesus knows their resting place. How our sister has improved her time may be known by words said by baby Robert a few weeks before death claimed him. He said to the writer, "Auntie, I've quit being mean, (every little naughty act was called mean by him,) I want to be a good boy so Jesus will love me and wake me up from my grave when he comes, he can do that and take me to a better place than this; for he is bigger than I."

Surely "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings is the perfection of praise." Oh for the perfect faith of the little one. Will not the One who said "Except ye become as little children" bring again our darlings from the grave. We do not feel that the Father has dealt us "Some enemy hath done this."

Brothers and sisters, pray for the little mother that she may not grieve as one without hope; that she may guide her remaining child, Harold, aged six, aright, and may the husband be brought to a knowledge of the truth. Sister Coons is alone in the faith at Clay Center. If any reader of THE RESTITUTION should pass that way will you visit them, you will be gladly welcomed.

From your sister in the one hope.

DELTA C. FILKINS.

The Old Testament books were written in Hebrew, and the New in Greek. As the Greek language came to be used more than the Hebrew, the Old Testament was translated into Greek at an early day. This translation was begun about 280 B. C. It is supposed to have been made by seventy learned Jews of Alexandria, hence it is called the "Version of the Seventy," or the "Septuigent." This is the version commonly used by the apostles and early evangelists.

Loveliness.

In vain we climb the hills of earth
In search of some fair spot
Where beauty sits unsoiled by sin,
And curse has rested not.

Eternal beauty is to come,
When earthly things will swim,
To those who see the glory grand,
Like memory of a dream.

Notes By the Way.

My last report ended with the account of my work at Otaro, Wisconsin, where twelve believers became obedient to the faith. My last meeting was with the young Berean Association of that place, under the leadership of Sister Eva Bradley. They are doing a good work in that locality. A good live Berean band is the life of any Church.

Having completed my work for the present at Otaro, I started for my next appointment at Thessalon, in the province of Ontario, Canada. Sister George Bradley accompanied me as far as Oshkosh, Wis., where I remained over night, and took the train at three o'clock a. m. for Escanaba, Mich., where I again remained over night, and took the train next morning for the Soo Sault Ste Marie. Running side by side at this place, are two large ship canals, one called the American Soo, and the other the Canadian Soo. These canals are at the junction point of Lakes Superior, Huron, Michigan and Georgian Bay. At this point I took the Canadian Pacific R. R., crossing the Soo into the Province of Ontario, on my way to Thessalon, which is about fifty miles from the Soo.

On arriving at my destination, I found Bro. Thomas Cronkhite waiting for me at the depot, somewhat anxious for my arrival, as the meetings had already been advertised in advance of my coming. He then escorted me to his home where I was welcomed by Sister Cronkhite.

Bro. Cronkhite and sons are owners of quite an extensive woolen mill at Thessalon. After partaking of refreshments Bro. Cronkhite took me to the mill, and introduced me to his sons, and showed me the process of weaving the various fabrics the mill was designed to make. It was very interesting to watch these fabrics as made from the raw wool.

This is a comparatively newly settled country. Thessalon is only five miles from the Indian reservation. On the lake shore near the mill I saw a camp of Indians, and a little way to the north was another camp of them. Thessalon is located on the north shore of lake Huron. Although but recently settled business is quite energetic. The main industries are in the manufacture of lumber, making paper from wood pulp, and the digging of valuable minerals from the mines; principally copper, lead, nickle, iron and sulphur. Gold and silver has also been found. Excavators on the Grand Trunk Pacific R. R. have recently discovered hard coal beds in Ontario.

Meetings opened the night of my arrival. Quite an interest was manifested from the start, and grew as the meetings progressed. One thing that added to the interest, was the antagonism of the Church of England minister. I vigorously attacked the father of liars, and like a dutiful son this preacher hastened to defend his sayings. One evening just as I dismissed the meeting this preacher rose to his feet and began to antagonize my preaching.

At the end of the Hall where the meetings were held, is a public library and reading room. On the next night this preacher, unknown to me, got in to the reading room, and sat behind the door listening, and taking notes, and I had no knowledge of his presence until I once more heard his voice raised in defence of heathen philosophy. He then gave notice of his intention on the next Sunday morning to defend the truth of the serpent's lie "thou shalt not surely die," at his own church, and invited the people to attend. As our meeting was to be in the afternoon and night, Bro. Cronkhite and myself attended his church. I went prepared with paper and pencil and took notes. In the afternoon I paid some attention to this preacher of Satanic falsehoods, and the interest began to get more intense.

Not more than two hours after the morning's service, a member of the Episcopal church came to Bro. Cronkhite's house, and roundly denounced his own preacher, and acknowledged that he had made a failure, and expressed his conviction that we were right, and later on three others of his church expressed the same thing to Bro. Cronkhite on the street. Members of other churches also gave us words of encouragement. The city paper also gave a favorable editorial giving the points made in the various discourses.

In the evening I again paid a little more attention to the statements of this preacher of paganism. Some of the audience said I was all right, but it was rather hot shot that I gave. Bro. Cronkhite said it was hot dynamite.

This preacher said that people did not go to heaven at death, but went down to hades, and that hades was the place of departed spirits, both good and bad. Hades was divided into two apartments, one was the place where the damned were tormented in fire, and the other was paradise where the spirits of the good went. Hence it was do longer proper to say "up to paradise," but rather "down to paradise," the abode of the blessed and the damned, and that Abraham's bosom was the Jewish word for paradise. Now paradise was originally on the surface of the ground, eastward in Eden. But now some people have got it into the skies, and into Abraham's bosom, and underground. According to these preachers of Platonic heathenism, paradise is rather a migratory affair, but according to the Bible it was originally on the surface of the ground, and is still found there when paradise is restored.

Our preacher also made the statement that immortality and eternal life do not mean the same. If he understands eternal life to mean deathlessness, and he is a scholar, I would like to see him show any scholarly evidence that immortality is not deathlessness. The word mortal signifies liable to death. The prefix im signifies "not," and when used as a prefix to the word mortal, signifies not liable to death.

Young in his Analytical says the word immortal is from the Greek word "aphthartos," and signifies incorruptible. The word immortality is from the Greek word "athanasia," and it means deathlessness. Pray tell me what is the difference between an endless life and deathlessness? I think men like this Church of England minister presumes too much on the ignorance of the congregation. Such presumption is an insult to an intelligent audience.

His talk about everlasting punishment, meaning endless torment shows the preacher's lack of knowledge of the scriptural teaching concerning everlasting punishment. "These shall go away into everlasting punishment but the righteous into life eternal." Mat. xxv. 46.

This text is supposed to teach the eternity of conscious existence of both classes, and that one lasts as long as the other. As far as the reward and penalty of sin is concerned, one lasts just as long as the other. But there is not the least particle of difficulty in understanding this text, when we let the Holy Scriptures do the interpreting. As for instance take the phrase, "These shall go away into everlasting punishment." Note the punishment will be nothing short of "everlasting." For a Bible answer as to what the punishment will consist of, see 2 Thes. i. 9; "Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction." Here the punishment is named as everlasting, and that they "go away into" it, a future event, just like the righteous, for they "shall go away into life eternal," which also is a future event, they cannot go away into "life eternal" if it was a present possession by nature.

He referred to another text used to teach an unending conscious existence, but which teaches the reverse. John xi. 25, 26, "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." This is also quite simple. If we let the Bible interpret itself. There are two conditions of believers named in this passage, one is "dead, yet shall he live," a future event, and the other living, and he that "liveth", when the Lord comes, shall also be given the never-dying nature, which is an event yet future.

This describes an event named in 2 Thess. iv. 14-18. The Lord comes and raises the dead, according to his promise, "yet shall he live," and "we which are alive," (liveth) and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent (precede) them which are asleep. These "shall never die."

There is an interest awakened at Thessalon, which if followed up must bear fruit.

The meeting being closed, I passed on to my next appointment, at Sturgeon Falls, Ontario. This place is located on the Canadian Pacific R. R. about one hundred and fifty miles further along, on the Sturgeon river near North Bay. The Sturgeon river empties into Lake Nipissing, an inland lake, ninety-three miles long, and ranging from twenty to twenty-five miles wide. Lake Nipissing empties into another river, (St. Mary's I think) and that into the Georgian Bay.

I was invited to Sturgeon Falls by Bro. Parker, the Mayor of that city. By the way I might say, that Bro. Cronkhite, of Thessalon, was the means of bringing Bro. Parker to the knowledge and obedience of the faith. Bro. Parker is a man who stands high in the estimation of the people of the energetic city of Sturgeon Falls. He says the people can trust him better with their money, and the affairs of the city, than his religion. They are somewhat shy of that. He is very earnest in contending for the faith once delivered unto the saints. He has brought four to the obedience of faith, two of these were French Catholics. The first was a man who was sick with consumption. The sick man wished him to baptize him into the name of the Lord Jesus. He put him off for some time until he could get one of our ministers there to baptize him, he being new in the faith himself had not got off the idea that such service was peculiarly the province of a minister. The man fearing that death was on his track went down to the river and baptized himself.

The meetings at Sturgeon Falls were held in the city hall. Brother Parker says the attendance was much larger than he expected. The attention was fine. The Methodist minister attended and took notes. We also conversed with an inquirer at the home of Bro. Holmes on Sunday afternoon, when we took supper. A lady stopped me on the street to ask a question. Two men came to the home of Bro. Parker to learn more. One evening at the close of our address on the subject, "Is eternal life through Adam or through Christ," a bright young man came up to the platform and said he was much interested, and that he had never heard such teaching before. He asked if we had any literature along that line.

The outlook at Sturgeon Falls is good, and if the work is followed up good must result. Bro. Parker is an earnest worker, and I have no doubt but that it will be cared for.

Bro. Parker has started a public Bible class for inquirers, which I trust will be the means of bringing many to the knowledge and obedience of the faith.

The fishing industry is quite a business at Sturgeon Falls. The owners of one of these fishing stations invited Bro. Parker and myself to take a ride in his fish steamer, and witness the taking up of his nets, which he had sunk in Lake Nipissing. We accepted the invitation, and took a sixty mile trip on the above lake, and witnessed his system of catching fish. The nets are simply fish traps. There are long lines of nets sunk down edgewise, these are called leaders, the fish swim along side of these leaders, which conducts them into the trap. These traps are large nets sunk all the way from thirty to fifty feet deep in the lake. In the tow of the little steamer is an oar boat, used by the fishermen in lifting up their nets. It was marvelous to me how those men could keep their feet tossed about on the raging billows of the lake, while drawing in their nets. It was impossible to lift the nets over into the boat so great is the load of fish. A large number of sturgeon fish measuring often from about three to near five feet long. As the net is drawn near the boat they are taken from the net by means of a spear. The smaller scale fish are lifted from the boat by means of a net attached to a frame with a long handle. When sufficient fish have been removed from the net to enable them to do so, the net is drawn over the edge of the boat and the balance is secured that way. Some of these nets are located some ten miles distant from each other. The fish being all secured the little steamer started on its home trip. The swell on the lake was so great that the boat rocked violently from side to side, while the waves dashed clean across its bow. It was indeed a very exciting and also a pleasurable trip.

My work being completed at Sturgeon Falls, Brother Parker escorted me to the depot of the Canadian Pacific R. R, when I started on my journey homeward. I stopped off however, at Thessalon, and spent one more night with the dear children of God at that place. The next day I

Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life. How glorious the promise, everlasting life in the kingdom of God with power, and honor, and glory throughout eternal ages.

Again, be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life. How long? Until death, in order to obtain the crown of life. He that putteth his hand to the plough and looketh back is not fit for the kingdom, so let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God. He it is that promised to him that overcometh and keepeth my works to the end, to him will I give power over the nations; and he that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment, and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels. To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father on his throne.

Oh, the depths of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God. Let us who have acknowledged our faith in the gospel, strive to walk worthy of so exalted a calling, and let us labor to enter into that rest that remaineth to the people of God. Let us go forth conquering and to conquer, and like Paul say, I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing.

God is faithful who promised, and if we remain faithful, neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus.

My prayer is, that we may all endure to the end, and receive a crown of life when Jesus comes.

MRS. P. NEILL.

Wisdom of Selrach.

CHAPTER 14.

1. Blessed-happy the man who hath not been destroyed with his mouth, and hath not felt compunction with sorrow for sin.

2. Blessed-happy he whose soul hath not fully known it and fallen away from his hope.

3. To a man of few words wealth is not a good thing, and to a man with an evil eye of what use are many utilities?

4. The man who is gathering from his soul is gathering together for others, and in his good things will others delight themselves.

5. In what will a wicked man be good to himself? Even in his utilities he will not have rejoiced.

6. There is no one more wicked than he who bewitcheth (disparageth derived meaning "the evil-eye influence" literal meaning) himself; and this is the repayment for his evil-conduct.

7. Even if he do good, he doeth it unwittingly and finally manifesteth his evil.

8. The man who bewitcheth with his eye, who turneth away his face, who disregardeth souls is wicked.

9. A selfish man's eye is not satisfied with a portion, and wicked injustice withereth a soul.

10. A wicked eye is envious of a loaf of bread, and thou hast fainted at his table.

[illegible] as thou mayest have to do and bring offerings unto the Lord in a worthy manner.

12. Remember that death will not tarry, and that a covenant with the grave (hades) hath not been shown thee.

13. Before thou hast come to thy end do good to a friend, and according to thy strength extend and give to him.

14. Do not miss a good day, and let not a portion of a good longing desire pass thee by.

15. Wilt thou not leave to another the results of thy painstaking care, and of thy weary toil for the distribution of a lot?

16. Give and take and beguile thy soul because there is no delight to seek in the grave (hades).

17. All flesh waxeth old like an outer-garment; for the covenant from an animate-age was, Thou art condemned to die with death.

18. For as foliage that flourisheth on a tree for shade, some leaves now are being cast down and others are growing. Even so is a generic growth of flesh and blood, one is coming to an end and another is being begotten.

19. Every work decaying leaveth off and the one who worketh it will depart along with it.

20. Blessed-happy is the man who shall come to his end with wisdom, and who shall have made his choice with understanding;

21. Who by thinking through her ways with his heart shall also have become apprehensive in her hidden things.

22. Go out after her like a foot-step-follower and lie in wait in her ways in.

23. The one who standeth to look through her windows will become a listener at her doors.

24. The one who putteth up along nigh to her house will also stick a tent-pin in her walls.

25. He will stand his tent according to the standard of her hands, and he will put up in a lodging-house of good things;

26. He will place his offspring in her shelter, and beneath her branches will he have camped out.

27. He will have been sheltered from scorching-heat, and in her glory will he find rest.

COMMENT.

In this day and age of hypnotism and hypnotic-eye-influence, what is said here in this chapter of the "evil-eye power" of that day cannot be without interest to present day readers. In Christ's day and the days of the apostles "the Baskanos" (evil-eyed person) was recognized and listed as a reality and not a creature of the imagination or superstition as most of the commentators make out. It is quite possible that these interpreters and commentators are "wise above that which hath been written." We find it a prevailing belief anyhow in the days of old Selrach.

What is herein said of "utilities" and how to get the most out of them not only antagonize mediaval theology of all the schools Catholic and Protestant, but falls into line exactly with the most enlightened religions as well as secular philosophical teaching of the present day. In fact the highest descriptive appellation which God by inspiration teaches to apply to himself is that he is "the most useful God"—next in the sense of use or utility, and it is a great thing for the world—"the greatest thing in the world" that mankind is learning this fundamental truth at last.

What is said here in the 17th, 18th and 19th verses of the generative processes of flesh and blood also falls into line with the latest biological conclusions of this new century.

The personification of wisdom in the latter part of this chapter with its quaint and striking imagry reminds us of Saloomoon's way of teaching the same higher life, and is less strictly ethical than most of the teaching in this book.

The program will be arranged after we gather and it is understood that we remain at the church as much as possible. We heartily invite the Bereans to attend and we aim that you shall have a good part of the time.

Dear brothers and sisters, these brethren have promised to be here to preach to us, now, how many will write to me to meet them at Casey, on the 3rd of Oct., so that we may know how many teams to send for you. Lay aside the cares of this world and come and have a love feast that will long be remembered, and may each one be able to say that it good is to be here. Remember this trip for the northern brothers and sisters it would be to come to this meeting. May all have good meetings wherever they assemble themselves together for Conference, and may the glad tidings of the gospel be preached, that men and women can see the grand and precious promises and obey them while it is called today, and if we should never meet again in this world may we all meet in the kingdom of God.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few [illegible] not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Collier's Weekly is conducting a very novel and interesting competition for its readers each month. To enter the contest all one has to do is to review the issues of Collier's for the current month and answer the two or three questions which are printed in each issue, giving such opinion and such suggestions as will aid in improving the paper. Collier's aims in this way to secure the assistance of every one of its readers in making the paper more to their liking. Every reader, in fact, becomes one of the editors and has his voice in building the greatest illustrated journal of the age.

The first prize each month, awarded for the most helpful suggestion, is $50 in cash, with a second prize of $25 in cash, and eighteen other prizes of sets of books, ranging in value from $32 down to $5, making in all $329 of value given in prizes each month. The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEP. 16, 1903. NUMBER 35.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief in the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Open the Gates.

I listened, and heard beyond my gate
Homeless children softly moan.
The busy crowd that passed them by Gave no heed to their sorrowing cry,
And knew no care save its own.
And I, safe housed with my perfect flowers,
Happy and cool 'neath my dewy bowers,
Blamed the crowd for the children's fate,—
Blamed, yet I opened not my gate.

Listening! Still I heard beyond my gate
That pitiful, pleading moan.
Then a voice came down from the waving trees:
"You have I chosen to care for these;
What trouble is it if they were your own?
Would ye, safe housed with your perfect flowers,
Abide alone in your dewy bowers,
Blaming the world for your children's fate?"
I heard, and I opened wide my gate.

The Lord's Table.

[Read at Communion service at Salem Conference Aug. 16, 1903.]

We have met once more around the Lord's table. The Lord's table! Do we realize the solemnity of these words? They show that it does not belong to us. No man ever spread such a table; it was of divine origin. It does not belong to us as natural men and women. We come only as invited guests. It is the Lord's table because he spread the feast of love, which is thereon, by giving himself as a sacrifice for us. It is his table because he commanded it to be prepared and observed during his absence as a memorial of his death. It also points forward to his coming again, for it is written, "As often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come." Although he is personally absent he still presides at his table, for he said, "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." Matt. xviii. 20. In Rev. ii. 1, he represents himself as walking in the midst of the churches, and it is as true now as then. But while he is within the veil, he watches the affairs of his chosen. He is cognizant of our actions. As the great Head of the church he knows all things. He reads our inmost thoughts and knows in what spirit we come. If we have come this morning through the force of habit, or to attend to some business transaction, or because of social ties it is not hid from him to whom all wisdom and knowledge has been given; ah! or to whom all judgment has been committed.

These truths should solemnize our mind. Were the glorious Lord personally present would we always act as we do? Could we never tell of what he has done for us or would we have a burning desire to show our love for him? Would we be silent during the time given to build one another up in our most holy faith, and at the close of meeting burst forth in frivolous talk and ripple of laughter? Well, he knows all about it. He knows the secret of every heart and at last will bring forth the hidden things of darkness. Will our thoughts and words and actions stand the scrutiny of the omniscient eye of Jesus? If we always remember that this is the Lord's table we would be more serious in our approach to it, for it represents to us the Lord himself. By continually dwelling upon him and his greatness our thoughts rise higher and higher in the divine scale, for the more we reflect on his character the more we grow like him and the more will we seek his recognition. We will realize that God has highly exalted him and given him a name that is above every name; angels and principalities and power and dominion being made subject to him. If we contemplate his goodness we will know why he obtained a more excellent name than the angels. We will strive to obtain his approval "for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we can be saved." We will seek to obey his commands for "He is the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." By the Lord's table too we are reminded that he is King of kings and Lord of lords, that he is to reign from sea to sea, until all things are subject to him. Do we realize that he has invited us to share this great glory along with him, and the time is near at hand when he shall say to the angel reapers, "Gather my saints unto me?" There is another thing we should remember concerning him, he said, "All power in heaven and earth has been given unto me." There are times when all human powers fail to sustain us and every comfort flees away, but through our relationship to the Lord we become connected with the source of divine power sufficient to supply all our wants. No temptation can overtake us that he cannot succor us; no trial can come to us but that he will help us to bear it; no suffering that he cannot alleviate; no sorrow that he cannot solace; no wound that he cannot heal; no cross, if endured, that he will not exchange for a crown. In him we have boundless and enduring satisfaction. If we are fully aware of these facts we can then appreciate the exalted privilege of meeting around the Lord's table to commemorate his death. If the joy derived from the knowledge of these things is lacking in us, then we should apply the words of the apostle to ourselves, "Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread and drink of that cup." Let us consider the intention for which this sacred ordinance was given and compare our views of it and disposition of mind for it in the light of Scripture. If we can approve ourselves to our conscience in the sight of God then may we eat. O, how our minds should be solemnized in the presence of these emblems, for they take us back to Gethsemane and Calvary. They suggest to us his suffering and death for us. They tell of his unbounded love for us, a love so great that he laid down his life for us. It should be our supreme delight to reciprocate that love by coming with hearts attuned to his praise that we may serve him acceptably. We should also dwell upon the Lord's life, his devotion to the Father's will, his triumph over self and the evil world in which he lived, his sinlessness and sacrificial death. They mean much to us, for by them he has been made unto every believer "wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption." Yes, he is our sin offering unto God, through him alone we can approach unto the Most High. In partaking of this bread and wine we virtually proclaim we are sinners; we come with the slain lamb as it were in our hand, and say to the great High Priest, We recognize our guilt, sin has separated us from God, we are worthy of death, but through thy intercession we seek forgiveness, plead our cause with the Father, that justice may be staid and mercy extended to us; ask him to overlook our proneness to sin through the weakness of flesh; tell him that we are thine and have thy name upon us, that our unworthiness and forgetfulness of him is not intentional; implore him to extend to us the favor of reconcilliation and communion with him. Oh, what a source of wealth is opened to us when we spiritually partake of the Lord's table.

Much more might be said of the Lord's table, but only one thought more; we are reminded of the word: he spake at the institution of this ordinance. He said, "I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine until I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom." Here we have a foretaste of the love, unity of spirit, and freedom from sin that will exist in the kingdom, but what will it be to be there? The sublimest of all God's servants have failed to adequately describe it and it would be presumptious of me to try. I can only say with Paul, It is far more and exceeding and eternal weight of glory, and now O Father, give us wisdom.

WALTER TOMLINSON.

A Trip to Alabama.

In the fall of 1898, while on a trip to Kansas and Oklahoma, I met a young lady whose home was in Alabama, Miss Anna Smith. She was a regular attendant at our meetings at Gerda Springs, Crescent school house, and Blackwell. It became apparent in a short time that she was interested in the glad tidings of the kingdom of God; and one Sunday morning she came forward, confessed her faith in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, and requested baptism, which ordinance was administered to her and a cousin of hers at the same time. The latter has since died in the hope of life in Christ. Sister Smith afterward returned to her home in Alabama, and I was pleased to hear from time to time of her steadfastness and devotion. In the course of time I learned that her mother had embraced the truth as it is in Jesus, and also wished to be baptized in the faith of the gospel. Later, word came to me that a sister of Sister Anna also wished to obey the gospel in baptism, and I received a number of letters requesting me to go down there to minister to the needs of those whose hearts had been touched by the message of life in Christ. Finally, through the efforts of Sister Nancy Barber, of Salem, O., a cousin of Sister Anna, I started on a trip to the South land on Aug. 24th. I arrived at my destination, Jeptha, Ala., two days later, and found that meetings had been arranged for at a school house. On reaching this place we found a goodly number of persons there, among them quite a few Missionary Baptists. These people kindly opened the doors of their church house, a few rods away, and asked that the meetings be held there. The invitation was gratefully accepted, and I spoke at that place seven times, beginning with the earth and its creation, and ending with man and the earth redeemed. Meetings were held twice a day, at 11 A. M. and 7 P. M., and were attended by a large number of interested listeners. I do not say that nowhere have I found greater interest in the things which are so dear to us, and nowhere have I noticed a greater absence of prejudice, than at this place. It was a pleasure to speak to the people. I answered a great many questions privately which were propounded to elicit information. On Sunday Aug. 30th I spoke at "the college" hall at Wedowee, the county seat of Randolph Co. I was greeted by a fair sized audience, to which I spoke on "God's Purpose of the Ages." A further meeting was announced for the same place in the evening, but the M. E people requested that we occupy their church building, which we did. I also spoke to large gatherings at the same place on Monday and Tuesday evenings. I very much appreciated this generosity on the part of those people. As the time approached for my departure, arrangements were made for the baptism of Mrs. Smith and her daughter, Mrs. Dobson. I was highly gratified when Mr. Jas. M. Smith, Mrs. Smith's husband and Sister Anna's father, declared to me his intention to be baptized in obedience to the faith. On Wednesday Sept. 2nd, we gathered at the stream where Mr. and Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Adele Dobson were baptized into the name in which alone we can be saved. When we gathered at the house a little later, all expressed their joy at being able to thus put on Christ, to have remission of sins in his name, to become a part of his household, to be made heirs according to the promise, and to entertain the hope of eternal life. It was truly gratifying to listen to their unsophisticated expressions of joy and hope. I thank God that it was made possible for me to visit those dear people and to minister to them. I am also under obligations to Sister Barber of Salem, O., and Sister Mattie Randolph, of Oklahoma, for making this trip possible. May God bless them. I know he will. I enjoyed much good while among the people in the South. They received me as we would an angel of God. Requests for preaching came from different places, but as my time was limited, I was obliged to put them off until some other time. I have fully made up my mind to visit those parts again next year, if the Lord permits. I am convinced that there is material there which can be secured for the kingdom of God in the [illegible] Much interest was manifested in the preaching; and while this was not public preaching of the kind I listened to, they had heard some truths of the gospel before from Bro. [illegible] and family. And they will no doubt hear more about them. The truths of the gospel is so much needed. I have sent a quantity of our literature them for distribution, and I doubt not but it will find some ready minds to receive it.

In August a number of protracted or "revival" meetings in the South. The early crops are harvested by this time, and cotton picking usually begins about the first of September. Hence the people have leisure at this time of the year. For this reason it is not surprising to find a large crowd at a forenoon meeting on week days. I heard of a number of protracted meetings which were in progress while I was down there. The preacher can soon get "warmed up" at this time of the year, especially if he is an enthusiastic speaker. The effect of his preaching depends upon the amount of interest he can awaken in his hearers.

The country I visited is very hilly, being the foot hills of the Cumberland mountains, and day's ride in a buggy may become very tiresome. Randolph and adjoining counties are blessed with a variety of resources. Besides the yellow pine timber which can still be found in great quantities, the country abounds with mica, fire clay, and even gold, silver and copper are found in paying quantities. But the presence of the negro seems to check the development and progress of the country. The race question is, and probably will be for some time, one of the great problems of our country. I returned home on Sept. 5th, and found loved ones at the station platform awaiting me.

Wisdom of Solrach.

CHAPTER 15.

1. The one who feareth the Lord will do it (i. e. follow this line of conduct) and the one who is controlled by law from within will comprehend her (wisdom):

2. And she will meet him like a mother and like a wife of virginity will she accept him.

3. She will morsel out to him bread of understanding and water of wisdom will she give him to drink.

4. He will have been stayed up against her and he shall not lean to fall, and he will rely on her and shall not be put to shame.

5. And she will exalt him above his neighbors and in the midst of a church (ekklesia) she will open his mouth.

6. Rejoicing and a garland-crown of gladness and an eternal name will he inherit.

7. Men without understanding shall not apprehend her and men who are obdurate sinners shall not know her.

8. Far from haughty pride is she, and those who are liars shall not be mindful of her.

8. Seasonable praise is not in the mouth of an obdurate sinner, because he hath not been sent from the Lord.

10. For with wisdom will praise have been spoken, and the Lord will prosper it.

11. Do not say that it is because of the Lord that I have stood away; for the things which he hath hated thou shalt not do.

12. Do not say he led me astray; for he hath no use for an obdurate sinner.

13. Every abomination hath the Lord hated, and it is not loved by those who fear him.

14. He from a beginning created man, and let him go into the hand of his adviser (State's attorney or "devil").

15. If thou wilt thou wilt watch to keep commandments strictly, and create satisfactory faith.

16. He hath committed unto thee fire and water unto which, if thou wilt, thou mayest extend thy hand.

17. In the sight of men is life and death, and which ever he may be satisfied with will have been given him.

18. Because vast is the Lord's wisdom; strong is he in potential ability and one who vieweth all things.

19. And his eyes are upon those who fear him and he fully knoweth all man's employment.

20. And he hath not commanded any one to be irreverent, and he hath not given any one permission to sin.

CHAPTER 16.

1. Do not long for a multitude of unprofitable children, and do not rejoice in irreverent sons.

2. Though they multiplied, rejoice not in them unless fear of the Lord be with them.

3. Do not trust in their life and do not give heed to their race; for better (more efficient) is one than a thousand, and better is it to die childless than to have irreverent children.

4. For one man of understanding will a city have become inhabited, but a tribe of transgressors will have been laid waste.

5. Many such things have I seen with mine eyes and stranger things than these hath mine ear heard.

6. In an assemblage of obdurate sinners fire will have flamed out, and in an untrustworthy nation wrath will have flamed out.

7. There was no expiation found for the ancient giants who stood away (apostatized) in their strength.

8. He was not sparing concerning the sojourning of Loot whom he abominated because of their supercilious pride.

9. He did not show mercy to a nation of loss who were laid waste with their sins.

10. And in this wise were six hundred thousand of people on foot who had gathered themselves together in their hard-heartedness.

11. And if one be stiff-necked it is a wondrous thing if he be held guiltless; for mercy and wrath are from him; a celestial calm is he showing forth and pouring out wrath.

12. According to his much mercy even so is his much reproof; he judgeth a man according to his deeds.

13. An obdurate sinner will not escape with his plunder and a truly-reverent man shall not maintain patient-endurance too long.

14. For every act of mercy will he make a place; each one will find according to his deeds.

17. Do not say I will hide myself away from the Lord; will any one from on high have been mindful of me? In a vast laity I shall not have been remembered; for what is my soul in an unmeasurable generic-creation?

18. Lo, the heavens and the heavens of the heavens are God's; an abyssmal depth and an earth will have been shaken with his visitation.

19. The mountains and the foundations of the earth together when he hath looked at them shake with trembling.

20. And on account of these things shall not a heart have become apprehensive, and who will not have become enthused with his ways?

21. And there is a cyclone which man will not see, and the most of his works are in hidden ways.

22. His works of righteousness who will tell or who will abide? For the covenant is for a long time.

23. One faint in heart apprehendeth these things and a heedless erring man apprehendeth foolish (savorless) things.

24. Hear me O child and learn positive science, and with thy heart give heed to my words.

25. I am showing chastening-instruction by measure, and I am telling positive science with accuracy.

26. In the Lord's way of judging his works are from their original authorship did he direct their distributed parts.

27. As a harmonic whole (a cosmos) he determined his works unto an animate-age, and their authorities (or governments) in their generations; neither did they hunger nor grow weary, and leave off from their employments.

28. Each one did not cause his neighbor tribulation and whilst there is an animate age they will not distrust his oracular (or spoken) word.

29. And after these things did the Lord look on the earth and fill it with his good things.

30. He covered the face of it with the soul (organic-life) of every living creature and their return is into it.

COMMENT.

The 15th chapter abounds in oracular wisdom, and we have here again wisdom as a feminine personification, the gender following the grammatical gender of the word in the original meaning "wisdom," following the analogy of sun being personified as he and the moon as she—a mere figure of speech. As far as the 9th verse we are reminded of "the wisdom of Salomoon." The rest of the chapter is a return to the plain ethical teaching in which this book most abounds.

The student of "free-will" and "predestination" will be interested in the plain and positive statements in this chapter on these two great theological themes. Mankind's moral responsibility to the extent of life and death even is distinctly maintained herein the reader will observe. Read who Scirach says "the devil" is here.

Some very important teaching in matters of every day individual experience are given in the early portions of the 16th chapter, the divine ethics of your own individual practice and conduct of life; and this teaching naturally leads up to God's judgments upon sin and sinners as exemplified in the sacred record; and this again leads up to another fundamental but very difficult teaching, namely that all God's works (authorship works) are complete from the foundation of the world (cosmos).

It is evident that in the 25, 26, 27, 28 and 29th verses Scirach is speaking of the cosmic creation which preceded generic-animate creation and man's advent here on this earth, and what he says of the nature of man is significant and important in view of the discussion now going on the world over in all the churches.

CHAS. GARDNER.

The Church is not Israel.

The Romish fiction, so zealously copied by Protestants, namely that the Christian Church is Israel, "spiritual Israel," has wrought great confusion in rightly dividing the Word of God. This assumption, "made for revenue only," is not taught by the Scriptures whose writers knew nothing of a "spiritual Israel" composed of Gentiles. The Old Testament contains many prophecies and promises to Israel, most of these relate to earthly, national and temporal prosperity, usually in the coming age of Israel's glory. On the other hand those prophecies and promises of the New Testament which belong to Christians are very different, they concern heavenly things, individual salvation, immortal life, and eternal glory, not merely heirs to Canaan, but joint heirs with Christ to all things.

Whoever becomes a Christian becomes a part of a "holy nation," but that nation is not Israel in any sense. Why do Christians want to be Israelites? "Ye that desire to be under the law do ye not hear the law?" Gal. iv. 20-31. What will the immortal saints want of land, corn, cattle, gold, etc. The call, position and destiny of Israel was national, earthly and temporal. The Christian's call is far higher; it is personal, their capital city the New Jerusalem, (Heb. xii. 18-28) their destiny "ever with the Lord."

The Old Testament says but little about the Christian's church, the calling of the Gentiles being hid from those ages and generations. The New Testament says but little about Israel, but that little is very positive and plain, and need not be misunderstood. Below are some passages referring to Israel's King, Jesus, Israel's rulers, the immortal saints and Israel the nation.

The King: Matt. ii. 2-6; xxi. 5; xxvii. 11-37; Lu. i. 31-33, 47-55, 68-75; xxiii. 3; John i. 45-49; xviii. 33-37; xix. 18-22; Acts i. 6-11.

The rulers: Matt. xix. 28; xx. 21-23; Luke xxii. 28-30; Rev. ii. 26; iii. 21; xx. 4-6.

The nation: Matt. xix. 28; xxiii. 39; Acts i. 6-11; Rom. xi.; 2 Cor. iii. 14-16.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPT. 16, 1903.

We recently sent letters to a number of our patrons explaining that we needed what was due us in order that we might meet our obligations. A number have responded, and we thank them heartily for so doing. There are still a large per cent of those whom we addressed, who have not yet given heed to our call. We dislike to tell of this, but are compelled to do so. It is useless to multiply words, brethren and sisters. We simply need the money that has been earned. Need it in order that obligations that really distress us may be met. We only want to impress on your minds that the demands on us are imperative—just MUST be met. We have no other means of satisfying them, and depend on you to supply us the needed money. Please get it in some way, and send at once. To get the little that you each owe will not distress you as carrying the whole burden does us. So attend to this today—not next week, or next month, but understand that we need THIS VERY DAY every cent that is due us. Then we can pay our obligations, and not be counted dishonest.

"THE peasant can raise corn, even if he cannot explain the philosophy of growth. No man thinks of starving because he does not understand all the processes of digestion. No person need wait for the solution of every mystery, before he performs the duties which God has plainly set before him in the Word of truth. Although we do not understand all the deep things of God, we can use it as light to our feet just where we need it now."

EXPERIENCE is an excellent interpreter! Taste and see; the true Christian in this way gets a view of the truth and spiritual things which the most piercing eye of an unsanctified schoolman cannot reach. By the practice of the truth and nearness to God and concentration of the mind upon his Word one can receive more light in an hour than others who for days put their judgment and invention on the rack. It is he who wills to do the will of God, who comes to know his doctrine.

WE can report no betterment of the situation in the Balkan regions. Turkey is sending immense bodies of her troops into the affected provinces, with the seeming intent to exterminate all the Christians. Bulgaria has sent a note of warning to the powers, giving them to understand they must interfere and stop the bloodshed, or else she must fight Turkey herself. A part of the Bulgarian army has already been ordered in readiness for the field.

"THERE are many persons who suppose themselves to be full of courage, when in fact they are only full of bluster. They talk loud and long and large, and boldly tell you what they will do, or what they would do, but when they come to act, somehow their courage seems to vanish into thin air. They propose to grapple with wrongs, to denounce evils, to root out abuses, and to revolutionize things generally; but when you see them face to face with what is complained of, and the men they have denounced, it is wonderful how quiet and conservative they are."

IT WAS the privilege of the Editor and wife to attend the Indiana State Conference at Roll, last week. The Secretary will make proper report, and we will only say that it was a pleasure indeed to meet the brethren and friends of this locality, and enjoy their very hospitable treatment. The only regret is that we could not possibly visit all, but it was only for lack of time. The meeting was well attended, and the preaching excellent. The Church at Roll has been established for many years, but this is the first time a Conference has been held there. We rejoice with them on the success of the meeting, and hope a good number of them will attend our other meetings as they are appointed. They will be welcome at Plymouth any time.

Resist the beginning of evil. We make the great mistake when we imagine that sin is going too far in a wrong direction. Going at all is sin. Starting is sin. Desiring to start is sin. Trifling with sin is sin. Sporting with temptation is sin. Sin has its throne in the heart, keep thy heart with all diligence.

"Now is the acceptable time,—but it is not the best time you have ever seen, reader, to seek the salvation which is in Christ Jesus. That time has for ever passed. But this is the best time you ever will see. Today is God's time. His special invitation is to come today. Do not neglect nor refuse, nor neglect, nor despise the gracious call. "Today, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts."

WAIT patiently on God. It is becoming in a dutiful child who does not receive immediately from his father what he wrote for, to say: "My father is wiser than I; his own wisdom will tell him what and when to send to me. And should not we thank that our heavenly Father has gracious reasons for withholding what we ask for, or we would have heard from him before this.

Do believing parents always act before their children as they ought? Do they manifest the deadness to the world which is alone consistent with their "high calling of God in Christ Jesus?" If they show their children a little conformity to the world, whereby the children, through the natural tendancy of the flesh, are tempted to still more conformity, are not the parents largely accountable?

"ONE honest confession is worth a dozen plausible excuses, but it is harder to get one confession made than twenty excuses. Confessing faults leads to forsaking them. Making excuses often leads to lying to hide faults; and the road is a very short one from excuses to evasions, from evasions to deceptions, and from deceptions to downright falsehoods."

Will Sincerity Save Us?

The surging masses of humanity are mainly divided into two classes, who are travelling in two broad thoroughfares. These broad thoroughfares are in close proximity, and parallel. They start from the same place, and end at the same place, and although for ages these parallel lines have been approaching each other so close that they can almost go hand in hand, and really have much intercourse, and are certainly growing more and more alike, the travellers on one road are deluded with the idea that they are going in the opposite direction to those on the other. One of the thoroughfares is considerably broader than the other and accommodates far more travellers. It is the travellers on the narrowest way that think they are going in the opposite direction to the others, while the largest crowd more correctly judge that they all travel to one place. You will have surmised that I allude to the religious and the irreligious world.

THE IRRELIGIOUS WORLD

may be divided again. One part claims that death ends all; that future life is a myth; and that what is true of them is true of all men, including the travellers on the other road. The other part of the irreligious world believe in a future life, perhaps, but along with that hold that as God made all men they have as much right to live forever as any body else; they in fact argue like the man who foolishly claims that the world owes him a living, the idea of working for it; and if the world doesn't pay him what he claims it owes him, why he takes it, of course. Others form the opinion that they will fare as well as their neighbors over the fence, because they see that little besides the fence separates them; they look alike, dress alike, speak alike and act very much alike; know all the shrewd business dodges, —in fact it is only on Sunday that any perceptible difference is observable. They also claim that their neighbors made the fence themselves, that God had nothing to do with it, because it is constantly getting out of repair which would not be the case if God had built it. Besides, the wrangling over the way repairs shall be made shows

WHO ITS PROPRIETORS ARE.

I am talking about human creeds and confessions now. And while I am free to confess I would rather walk in the narrowest of the two ways, because the society is better, more moral or religious, and refined, and, despite the criticisms of those on the other road, more upright, honest, decent, and noble, yet, so far as salvation is concerned, one road has no advantage over the other, unless something more than the commandments and traditions of men separate them. Morality, and refinement, and honesty and nobility will save no one. If they would, we would be saved by merit instead of favor. You may think I harp a good deal upon one string, and I do, and I must, for the fact is pressed upon my notice every day that and noblest of human kind—many of them very dear to us—are making a stupendous blunder in supposing that they can mark out a course to walk in that will be acceptable to God. While in apparent sincerity they try to serve God day and night, they try to their own way; and with the greatest coolness set aside positive commands of God and put in their place some self-imposed conditions. The idea that sincerity will save them, rules them,—blinds them to the fact that the idea takes the matter out of the hands of a good, kind, wise and

THE BEST AND PUREST

GRACIOUS GOD.

and says to him, O God we know what thou wantest us to be, and we want to be just that, holy; but we don't like thy methods. O God, please let us have our own way, and we will be ever so good. And then, what presumption, without waiting for an answer they take it for granted that it will come out all right seeing they were sincere enough and deferential enough to tell the Almighty what they wanted, and what they intended to do. Do not say this is far fetched and extravagant. It is not, as you may prove by showing them that salvation depends upon belief of the

GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM

Jesus preached; then turn away from sin, and be baptized into the name of Father, Son and Spirit for the remission of past sin. Then a godly life waiting for God's Son from heaven to raise them from the dead and install them as kings and priests to reign with him on earth. In the first place they do not think it was good news at all when Jesus said the meek shall inherit the earth; "and if he really said that, he certainly did not mean it; the earth indeed, was our ancestors for ages have been told that heaven was their home? It must be figurative." But allow me to ask what he meant by heaven when he said it? Is it not strange that in all the book God has not intimated that heaven was to be

THE HOME OF THE MEEK?

And they say it is a poor rule that works only one way. And so, even if we could find one promise of heaven would we not have as much right to call that figurative as they have to say earth is? I am proving that I used no extravagant language in reference to the position of the religious world. They will not accept the home God offers them; they want something else somewhere else, and seem bound to have it, promise or no promise.

And now as to the law of pardon. Does that suit the religious world? No! The first condition of it is to believe of the very kingdom that they reject. So I would say to such, never you mind about pardon. Pardon would do you no good if you reject the kingdom, if you could obtain it in some other way. Eternal life without the kingdom is of no account—you would have no place to enjoy it in. but once for all I say, only believers of the gospel of the kingdom can be pardoned; and believers only can be pardoned when they are baptized into the Christ. That is the third condition. It follows faith and repentance. How does the religious world treat this third condition in the law of pardon? I answer, with scorn, generally. They say, "Don't tell me there is no pardon without baptism, when I have been

PARDONED WITHOUT IT."

Just think of it—pardoned in contravention of the law of pardon. Has he found an exempting clause? No! Has he been pardoned by a special act? No! Tens of thousands claim the same thing in the face of the testimony that in order to be pardoned they must believe, repent and be baptized. God is thus made to dishonor his own law, and what will be the effect on his government?

WHERE WILL THE MATTER END?

Will he set aside faith, and repentance and a godly life as well as baptism and save ALL irrespective of faith, or works, or character? If so it is great folly to preach the gospel with its conditions, as Jesus and his apostles did. But what proof have these thousands that they are pardoned without complying with the terms exacted by the law of pardon? The law has never been repealed, and no amendments have been made to it or else we would have been notified. Still they claim to have proof. What is it? This is it. "They feel they are pardoned." Why do they feel pardoned? Because from youth up they were taught that God's plan was to pardon all who sincerely asked him to do so, and having believed that to be the condition imposed, and having complied with it, they take it for granted that they are pardoned, and that makes them happy. Now,

IN ALL EARNESTNESS

I ask, if God has not said he will pardon on such conditions, how do our teachers know that he will? Do they mean to tell us that God will not pardon according to his own law of pardon? Do they mean to say that they have tried God's published conditions of pardon and found them ineffectual? If so, he is not to be trusted at all. If they have not tested God's law of pardon why do they whine around and ask him to pardon according to a formula of theirs? I do not care much about sincerity, I pray you. I only see a sincere desire to set aside God's will for your own; while Jesus says it is he who does the will of his Father that

SHALL BE SAVED.

That will is written out, and you reject it, turn it aside and assert your own. For a moment I agree that sincerity will save us, but it must be sincere faith in the gospel, sincere repentance toward God, sincere obedience to faith in baptism and whatsoever Jesus has commanded. Sincere rejection of God's conditions will condemn one as sure as God is in heaven, and as certain as he has spoken to us in his Word. In Heb. xi. 6 we read that "without faith it is impossible to please" God. He who says sincerity will save us ignores this sublime and fundamental truth as well as baptism, because what is not of faith is sin; he who does not believe in the kingdom God promises is an unbeliever; he who does not believe that baptism is necessary to pardon is an unbeliever, and an unbeliever is unpardoned, and an unpardoned sinner has not repented; and an unbaptized, unpardoned unbeliever does not sincerely love God or else he would keep his commandments. Alas then are oceans of religious infidelity all about us; pious infidels,

RELIGIOUS UNBELIEVERS.

To all such the Bible is a precious book while closed. They believe every word of it before it is opened; believe it all in a lump; believe it as a volume of mysteries, or a sacred charm, but not as a revelation of God's plans and purposes, or of man's origin or destiny, or nature. Not nor as a reliable guide to pardon, and peace and reconciliation, and adoption, they can do better themselves, they think; better in their estimation, because not so humiliating, not so mortifying to the flesh, and requires no surrender of their will to God's. But what blessed hope have they after they have taken this unction to their souls? Yes, what hope have they without either faith or obedience?

Let me prick all these human bubbles with the point of the Spirit's sword. Let Jesus select a proof-text from Isaiah to show God's estimate of those who teach for doctrine the COMMANDMENTS OF MEN.

In Matt. xv. 9 he says of those who make the commandment of God of none effect by their traditions: "Ye hypocrites, well did Esaias prophesy of you, saying, This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouths and honoreth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me." "But," mark what follows: "But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrine the commandments of men." Is is

THE SON OF GOD

who says it; it must be so. But can we know why it is so? We can. In John xvii. 17 in prayer to his Father for his disciples Jesus said: "Sanctify them through thy truth;" the very thing the religious world think they can do without, but they cannot. It requires truth to sanctify and save. And he then tells us what truth is and where to find it. It is GOD'S WORD.

He has graciously sent us that Word to reveal to us what we are, and what we are capable of becoming, viz: Divine in nature and inheritors of a world-wide and everlasting kingdom of glory on earth. This Word contains the exceeding great and precious promises of God confirmed by his oath, together with the conditions exacted of us. Yes, it is the truth not only about what God has done and offers to do for us, but what he requires of us. It is summed up in the word gospel, or glad tidings. It is called the gospel of Christ because he preached it, and because he is the central ore around whom all God's purpose revolve, and in whom all his promises center. Remember, Jesus said, "Sanctify them through thy truth, and if you wish to know Jehovah's estimate of his own Word you may learn it from the fact that he says in Prov. xiii. 13, that those who despise it shall perish. Those who set it aside for the commandments of men despise it. They will be destroyed unless they repent. Again the spirit in the Psalmist says of him: "Thou hast magnified thy Word above all thy name." How dare mortal men set it aside? It is called the Word of the kingdom, the Word of salvation, the Word of faith, the Word of reconciliation, the Word of the truth of the gospel, the Word of righteousness, i. e., it shows us how to become righteous before God. And it is also called the gospel of Christ; of this Paul said in Rom. i. 16, he was not ashamed because it was the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes it. And seeing this leaves out all who do not believe it, what becomes of the "No matter what you believe" doctrine? And the doctrine? Let no one flatter himself that he believes in Jesus while he rejects his message. It is his message that contains saving efficacy for those who believe it. He says he came that we may have life; that proves there would have been no future life had he not come. He says it is the Father's good pleasure to give the kingdom to the little flock who accept him as the way, the truth and life; plain evidence that no provision has been made for those who do not accept the offer. His good message informs us that we can be rid of our sins by baptism into the saving name after faith and repentance. Proof positive that only such will be rid of their sins. But in another of his message he says, "He that believes and is

THY WORD IS TRUTH,"

"SINCERITY WILL SAVE YOU"

BAPTIZED SHALL BE SAVED,

and he that believeth not shall be condemned." Say deluded ones, will you longer claim that it matters not what we believe if we are only sincere? Perishing souls, you need the righteousness that is reckoned on account of faith. In all the book of God you can find no offer of justification for sincerity without faith; you must be justified by faith and thus have peace with God, through the Lord Jesus. Apply your sincerity to your faith in the exceeding great and by which we may be made partakers of divine nature, and all will be well. If there be any here who have not seriously entertained God's beneficent propositions—the Word of life comes to you this morning; the bread of life and the water of life is freely offered you now. It is offered by him who was refused a draft of water while dying you might live—live ever; live in glory and honor and power in the kingdom of God's dear Son. He says "come with me." Will you come? To come to him is to accept what he offers, on the terms stated. If you attempt to climb up some other way he will regard you as a thief and a robber, and say, "I never knew you; depart." Now is the day of salvation; come. Many of you have responded to his loving call. You have tasted that the Lord is good. Are you growing in favor with him? Are you learning more of the heights and depths and breadths of his love?

PRECIOUS PROMISES

IS YOUR FAITH STRONG?

Is your hope firmly anchored? Is your appetite for spiritual things good? Is your digestion in good order so that you can assimilate readily? Do you say with David, "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God; my soul thirsteth for God, for the living God?" When shall I come and appear before God? Is your devotion to God and his truth commensurate with your devotion to the business of this life? Out of

LOVE TO GOD

do you keep faith with him as you do with men? You think it just awful to have a note go to protest. Do you feel like that when you are a defaulter with God—when you fail to pay him his dues? Do not think I want to pry into affairs that belong to God and you alone. Far from it. I want you to get ready for the reckoning, that is all. It is almost Saturday night. Post your accounts. The cry will soon be made, Behold the Bridegroom cometh, and only those who are ready will go in. O, are we ready? Momentous question! To be ready we must keep his works unto the end, then he who died for us, and lives for us, and is coming to receive us, will give us a seat upon his throne with power over the nations—we shall reign with him till all things are put under him. Till the earth is filled with the glory of the Lord. Glorious destiny, may it be ours.

Why I Love his Appearing.

It was a universal characteristic of the early saints that they all loved the appearing of the Lord. They watched for it more eagerly than for any thing else. Paul says that a crown is laid up for him, and for all them also who love his appearing.

I love his appearing, because I love him. Memorials like the elements in the Lord's Supper are precious; but nothing else satisfies our love like the personal presence of those we love. Christ in his last prayer prayed that those given him by the Father might be with him, and this is our supreme desire also.

The bentific vision of him who died for us will surpass all former joy.

"Ah, that is what I'm wanting,
His lovely face to see;
And I'm not ashamed to say it,
I know he's wanting me."

I love his appearing, because I love those who will appear with him in glory. What blessed reunions of broken and scattered families, long separated friends dear to each other as life itself, severed hearts that never should have parted, will be celebrated then. We part here in tears and with broken-hearted farewells; but we shall then meet with fullness of joy and rejoicing.

"Our loved ones before, Lord,
Their troubles are over, Lord,
We'll meet them once more,
At thy coming again."

I love his appearing, because then we shall all have glorified and immortal bodies like that of the Son of God, either by resurrection or the painless thrill of translation. These bodies, through which the ever-increasing joy and glory of the soul will shine as through a heavenly transparency, will shine with the bloom and beauty of immortal youth. Instead of fading as here with advancing years, the body will bloom with ever-increasing beauty.

Hunger, thirst, weariness, pain, sickness and death will be unknown, except in the memory of this mortal life. There they can die no more; but are as the angels of God.

I love his appearing, because then I shall receive my crown of glory. After Paul had fought the good fight, finished the course, and kept the faith, he anticipated the coronation-day when he and all who love his appearing should receive their crown.

There are reasons enough why we should all love his appearing, and the luminence of this glorious event is a cheering, purifying, and stimulating hope. If he comes soon we shall go without dying, a most blessed privilege, the highest form of redemption for the body. "For yet a little while, how short, how short, the coming One will come and will not tarry."

"Have your lamps all trimmed and burning, Waiting for our Lord's returning."

Married.

Married at the home of the bride's parents near Forreston, Ill., Sept. 9, 1903, Mr. Walter L. Miller and Miss Elsie S. Gesin. The bride is the daughter of Bro. E. F. Gesin of our State Conference Board. These young people start out in life with every prospect of success. They recognize God as the only one who can lead them to success. It was about a year ago that we led Elsie into the water to put on the name of Christ in baptism. We know that her husband's heart is with her in this matter and we hope soon to see him obey that form of doctrine he knows so well. May God bless and keep them in the way that leads to life eternal.

Baptism.

On Sunday, Sept. 12, the Oregon, Ill., brethren had the pleasure of witnessing the baptism of Mrs. Elizabeth Baldwin upon her confession of faith in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. Sister Baldwin is the mother of Sister Emma L. Smith, our Conference Secretary. May she be richly blessed in her declining years by the new hope which has sprung up within her. Pray for her.

Poetry.

Fill Me with Thy Life.

Unto thy feet, O Savior divine,
I come with my troubled life!
I am so weak; so weary with all
The constant tumult and strife.

Teach me to smile when the way is rough,
And sing when the day grows sad.
Into my heart thy sunshine put
And make thy tired one glad.

Fill me so full of thy own pure life
That each day may be lived for thee;
Then neither the strife nor the woes of life
Can darken the days for me.

Random Thoughts, No. 9.

As we have seen when the sleeping saints shall have been raised and the living ones changed at the Lord's coming, they will be both incorruptible and immortal like the Lord, and will be spirit beings, as are the angels and the Lord, and will be mighty and powerful beings, and will be able to pass among the people, seen by them or not as they wish, just as could Jesus and the angels. Many appear and disappear to the people they reign over or govern, as they may wish. For having been born of the Spirit they will be Spirit, just as those born of the flesh are flesh. Such will rule or govern in the kingdom of God. The administration will be a "ministration of the Spirit." See 2 Cor. iii. what Paul says about the ministry or administration of the New Covenant. I am aware that many understand this to refer to the church at the present time, but I do not. Paul only speaks of it as his hope. Verse 12. Besides the New Covenant is to be made with the House of Israel and the House of Judah, and the Church is neither, but a people called out from the rest of mankind, as the very word church implies—to be the means, medium, ministry or administration of the New Covenant. As Moses was the medium, mediator, minister of the Old Covenant, so is our Lord Jesus the Christ of the New. The Old was written in part on tables of stone, and was a ministration of death," (verse 7) but the New will be a ministration of Spirit and will give life. I do not understand the ministration of Spirit to refer to what people mean by "the Holy Ghost" in the churches today, but that he refers to "The last Adam—the quickening (or life giving) Spirit." 1 Cor. xv. 45. As he says himself, "Seeing then that we have such hope, we use great plainness or boldness of speech; and not as Moses who put a vail over his face that the children of Israel could not steadfastly look to the end of that being abolished (14 to 17 parenthesis). But we all with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as of the Lord—the Spirit." In the parenthesis verses 14 to 17, he says, "But their minds were blinded, for until this day remaineth the same vail untaken away in the reading of the Old Testament; which vail is done away in Christ. But even unto this day when Moses is read the vail is upon their heart. Nevertheless, when it shall turn to the Lord (when he comes) the vail shall be taken away. Now the Lord is that Spirit, and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. The Lord being the Spirit, who will mediate or be the mediator, minister or administrator of the New Covenant or will of God, that is to be made with the House of Israel and the house of Judah, after they shall be brought back to their own land? He is now preparing for the work by inviting the people to become his by believing the good news and being baptized into him and thus becoming members of his body, Jesus being the Head. He forgives all past offences, and they become his body, the church, in which they are disciples or learners of him, and those who purify themselves as he is pure, and so continue as long as they live here. He will make them like himself, and they will share with him as one Spirit in the administration of the government as kings and priests for God. There will be no change of ministry or administration, as there will be no party or parties, one out of office and another party trying to get in. No elections then, the election time is now, now is the accepted time, and now is the day of salvation. Let those who have been elected or chosen give all diligence to make their calling and election sure. Let us see to it that we have the Spirit of Christ, for if we have not the Spirit (disposition) of Christ we are none of his.

That the saints will be mighty or powerful beings is clearly taught by Jesus. John xiv. 12. And he speaks very positively, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also, and greater works than these shall he do; because I go to the Father." And so on his return when he shall come in the glory of the Father and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit on his glorious throne, etc., and the saints with him, and will judge or govern the world, all of which will become his kingdom. From that time on, though there is but one Christ, there will be many members, one Lord, one body, one spirit, etc. Many members and each member a person, and yet all are but one Body, one Spirit, and the Lord, the Anointed, is that Spirit, including all the members. This Lord, the Spirit, will be the ministry or administration of the government.

Let us think a little as to the greater work each saint may then do than the Lord did when on earth before. On one occasion a great multitude having flocked to him to hear him, were in a desert and without food. What did Jesus do? He ordered them to recline on the grass, then with a very small amount of food fed them all they could eat, and had more left than there was before they had eaten, and yet more than five thousand men had eaten! And yet Jesus says, He that believeth in me, the works that I do shall he do also, and greater works than these shall he do! From this we may learn that when the Lord and his saints shall judge or rule the world, there will be no danger of famine! He could and did cure all kinds of sickness, in some cases without going to see the patients, and yet Jesus says, That he that believeth in me, the works that I do shall he do also, and greater works than these shall he do! And not only could he cure the sick, but even if the patient was dead, as was Lazarus who had been dead four days, and had begun to decompose, yet Jesus said, Lazarus, come forth! And he that was dead came forth! Loose him, and let him go! And yet Jesus says, He that believeth in me, the works that I do, shall he do also, and greater works than these shall he do! When Jesus and his saints are the rulers of the world, there will be no danger of prevailing sickness, nor of death even! Nor of storms and cyclones for the Lord and his holy ones will be able to say peace! be still! And though when the Lord comes to set up his kingdom, the nations may oppose and make war, they will be broken to pieces and consumed.

Much more may be said as to the power and greatness of the saints when they share with the Lord in the government, but perhaps I have said enough for the present. There will be no danger of failure when the Lord with his holy ones undertakes to put down all other rule and authority and to fill the earth with God's glory. We may have full assurance of faith when we pray, Thy kingdom come, thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven.

My next topic will be the subjects of the kingdom.

GEO. ELTON.

A Letter to Mr. Jones.

Friend Jones:

My interview with you the other day has occupied my attention pretty closely since I was at your house. If I understood you correctly you believe that when a Christian dies his soul goes immediately to heaven. Now I will ask you, where do you find any proof in the Scripture to sustain such a faith as this? Can you refer me to a single promise in the entire Scripture that teaches such an idea? I am sure there is not a single promise in the Bible that teaches it. You perhaps will refer me to Christ's answer to the thief on the cross. But there is not a word or thought in that answer about heaven. Paradise was not in existence at that time, nor is it in existence at this time, and will not be in existence until Christ comes to earth to set up his kingdom and restores Paradise, which will take a thousand years after he comes. Then Paradise will be in existence, the thief will be remembered and be with Jesus.

In Rev. ii. 26, I read, "And he that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations." 27th ver. "And he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers, even as I received of my Father." See Psa. ii. 8, 9.

But let us make an application and put this rod of iron to its legitimate use. We will suppose that you have the rod of iron in your hands. You will go through the streets of Beaver Dam, and say to those men that are dealing out death and damnation to their fellow men: Gentlemen, this business must be stopped; and if they will not heed the proclamation, you will string them up to a telegraph pole. This, we understand, is the legitimate use and meaning of the "rod of iron," and what is true in Beaver Dam will be true in every city, and in all the earth until all nations and peoples shall convert their implements of war into implements of husbandry and learn war no more.

In the fulfilment of this prophecy our King Jesus will have use for many helpers, men and women, tried and faithful and true, who have studied the subject of Christ's reign over the nations, and are prepared to assist in the great and glorious work of subduing the wickedness of earth, and bringing mankind into harmony with the mind and will of our glorious King, until earth shall be full of the knowledge and glory of God as the waters cover the sea. There is an abundance of proof that Christ is to set up his kingdom on Mount Zion in Jerusalem and rule the world in righteousness, and bring all mankind into harmony with the mind and will of God until the will of God shall be done on earth even as it is done in heaven. Earth must be restored back to the position that was occupied before the fall, as it came from the hand of its Creator. God gave the dominion of earth into the hands of Adam, but the dominion of earth was on condition of obedience of God's law. But Adam failed to comply with the conditions; so the dominion of earth was taken out of his hands, and has been in the hands of wickedness for near six thousand years, in which war and blood shed have been the order of the day. But God says, "Let us have peace," and to this end God sent forth his Son made of a woman; made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law that they might receive the adoption of sons. Paul teaches that to observe days, months and years is a bondage wherever mankind are engaged in it. See Mrs. White's Visions. These are a bondage that many are rushing heedlessly into. They are great stickers for this law. But Paul says, "By the deeds of the law shall no flesh be justified before God." Paul says also, this law was our school master to lead us to Christ, but when faith, (Christ) is ours, we are no longer under a school master.

DANIEL HOWARD.

Dear household of like precious faith:

This word "Household" should be a precious one; for who is it that does not love their household. Surely we ought to love one another and we will if we belong to that blessed family with Jesus for our Brother. Is not that worth living for? All he requires of us is to sacrifice self, give God the love instead of the world. Heb. x. 22, says, "Let us draw near with a pure heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and having our bodies washed with pure water." Let us submit ourselves to the high calling; let us seek to lay up treasures where moth nor rust can corrupt nor thieves break through and steal. 2 Tim. ii. 12. "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him; if we deny him, he will also deny us." 19th verse, "Nevertheless, the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, the Lord knoweth them that are his, and let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." In Heb. iii. we read, "Wherefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus. For every house is builded by some man; but he that builded all things is God. But Christ is a Son over his own house, whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm to the end. Wherefore as the Holy Ghost saith, Today if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts, as in the provocation, in the day of temptation in the wilderness; when your fathers tempted me, and saw my works forty years. Wherefore I was grieved with that generation, and said, They do always err in their heart; and they have not known my ways. So I sware in my wrath, They shall not enter into my rest. While it is said, Today if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts, as in the day of provocation." Heb. iv. 1, 2, says, "Let us therefore fear, lest, a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it. For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them; but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it."

Dear brothers and sisters, have we the right faith? Let us try and read carefully with all hope and expectation of that better world to come. 1 Tim. vi. 17–19, says, "Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not highminded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy; that they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate; laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life." We all want eternal life. Let us remember what the Psalmist says in Psa. ciii. 13–16, "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him; for he knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust. As for man, his days are as grass; as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth. For the wind passeth over it, and it is gone." Isa. xxxiv. 1, "Come near, ye nations, to hear, and hearken, ye people; let the earth hear, and all that is therein; the world, and all things that come forth of it." Isa. xxxiii. 22. "For the Lord is our Judge, the Lord is our Lawgiver, the Lord is our King; he will save us." "Blessed be the name of the Lord now and forever."

Your sister in the one hope:

CATHERINE MILLER.

Obituary.

Julia Logan McCrory, only daughter of Charles H. and Sarah Logan, was born a few miles southwest of Plymouth Ind. April 27, 1850. She grew to womanhood, lived and died within a half mile of the place of her birth.

On Oct. 9th, 1873 she was united in marriage to J. W. McCrory, and to this union six children were born, four of whom survive her.

On March 3, 1903, having confessed her faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, she was anointed by Bro. Zilmer.

Although her sickness of the past year has been severe and constant, she bore it without murmuring, ever thankful it was no worse. Death came and relieved her sufferings on Monday morning, Sept. 14, 1903, making her 53 years, 4 months, and 17 days of age.

Left to mourn her loss is a most devoted husband, one daughter, three sons, seven brothers, and friends without number.

The funeral was held at the home on Sept. 15, conducted by Bro. A. H. Zilmer, and our Sister was laid in the [illegible] to await the coming of the Lord when all the faithful will come forth to die no more. Our prayer is, Lord, hasten the glad day.

Sarah M. Pauley was born in Virginia in 1833. She afterwards moved with her parents to Indiana where she was married to James Campbell in 1849. From there they moved to Iowa, Clarksville being their home for many years. She and her husband, who survives her, were buried in the waters of baptism by Elder Ramsey. She leaves beside the aged husband one son and one daughter to mourn their loss.

Although Sister Campbell had been a great sufferer for many years, she was of a cheerful disposition, meeting every one with a smile and a hearty hand-shake. Every one was made welcome. Her death occurred August 18th. Going to sleep in Jesus. It seemed such a peaceful rest. The funeral services were held at the late home conducted by Brother George Moyer. Without the hope of the resurrection, what is it to live? There can be no such rejoicing as that, when the graves give up their dead. May we all live so we will be able to clasp glad hands with our Sister in the morning.

Yours in hope.

ELVA CHAPIN.

William Kepner was born in Washington Co., Maryland, May 1, 1807, and died in Lanark, Ill., Sept. 10, 1903. Aged 96 years, 4 months and 9 days. At 28 years of age he moved to Ohio where he remained two years, after which he removed to Illinois, in which State he has since lived. He was married twice, his first marriage being with Susan Noiswonger, to whom two children were born. His second marriage was with Mary Ann Rench, to whom there were born seven boys and three girls. Of the twelve children born to Bro. Renner, three boys and two girls are now dead. He came into the faith about the year 1853 and has kept the faith. He was a man of intense vitality. There are perhaps few who have the record for mishap that he had. He has had bones broken in almost every conceivable way. It was stated in the presence of the writer that he had had bones broken at least thirty times. Although old, he would doubtless have lived much longer had he not met with the misfortune about three weeks ago of breaking his leg, which cost him a great deal of suffering. His death was peaceful. We laid him away in the grave in the cemetery at East Plum River there to await the time when Christ will come to bring the crowns to all who "love his appearing." May the God of all comfort, comfort the aged sister and the sons and daughters that are left.

"Get Down and Help Him."

We have lately been doing a blessed work among the cabmen of Manchester, many of whom have signed the pledge. I heard the other night that one of them had broken his pledge, and I went to the cab rooms to look after him. I saw him there, but he tried to avoid me; he was ashamed to face me. I followed him up, and at last he presented himself before me, wearing a most dejected look. I said to him:

"When you are driving your cab and your horse falls down, what do you do?"

"I jumps off the box and tries to help him up again."

"That is it, my friend," I replied, "I heard you had fallen, and so I got off the box to help you up. Will you get up? There is my hand." He caught hold of it with a grip like a vice, and said:

"I will, sir, before God, and under his own blue heavens, I promise you that I will not touch a drop of strong drink again, and you will never have to regret the trouble you have taken with me." Oh, Christian friends, there are many poor drunkards who have fallen down. Will you not get off the box and help them up?—Charles Garrett.

Beating of the Waves.

A sail boat was lost in a heavy fog off the coast of Maine. A rowboat was towing it, but its oarsman had become confused. At last the advice was given, "Listen for the beating of the waves on the shore; that never stops." They followed the advice, and soon reached land. Now there is something that will guide us as well as the sound of the breakers, and that is the voice of God in our hearts. That also never stops. Always it is calling and calling, and we have only to stop and listen.

Strike out Christ and his teachings from the books wherein they are to be found, and you have taken the very heart out of the literature of the world.—Bruce Brown.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Announcement.

Bring some bedding, an empty tick, hammer, old carpet for tent floor, eatables, dishes, knives, forks and spoons, and mosquito netting.

Brothers Dewey, Jones, and myself are all that are left in the colony. We are not rich, so will charge 50 cts per day for board and a bed on the floor for all we can thus accomodate. Others who wish to have a tent and to board themselves can have one by paying freight charges from Iowa and back on the tents. They can buy groceries from Bro. Jones, who has a small store here. Come and see our resources and town-site, and advise us as to what should be done to build up a colony of believers here, and also to attend the meetings in the big tent. We expect good speakers here.

Write for any particulars to W. L. Crowe, R. F. D. No. 3, Chanute, Kan.

The Second Annual Conference of the Church of God in Christ Jesus, will be held in the Restitution Church, at Moriah, Ill., commencing Oct. 3rd, and closing Oct. 11th, 1903. We expect Brother S. J. Lindsay, Evangelist of Ill., Bro. W. H. Wilson of Chicago, Ill., Bro. A. H. Zilmer, Evangelist of Indiana, Bro. John Claypool of Marshall, Ill., and perhaps others to be here to tell the glad tidings of the soon coming King.

Dear Brothers and sisters, one and all, we want you to come to our Conference, and have a good time. We will take care of you. The program will be arranged after we gather and it is understood that we remain at the church as much as possible. We heartily invite the Bereans to attend and we aim that you shall have a good part of the time.

Dear brothers and sisters, these brethren have promised to be here to preach to us, now, how many will write to me to meet them at Casey, on the 3rd of Oct., so that we may know how many teams to send for you. Lay aside the cares of this world and come and have a love feast that will long be remembered, and may each one be able to say that it good is to be here. Remember that Bro. Lindsay said, What a nice trip for the northern brothers and sisters it would be to come to this meeting. May all have good meetings wherever they assemble themselves together for Conference, and may the glad tidings of the gospel be preached, that men and women can see the grand and precious promises and obey them while it is called today, and if we should never meet again in this world may we all meet in the kingdom of God.

Yours, in hope of eternal life.

Secrets of the Prophetic "Times" as relating to the things which are coming on the Earth, is the title of a 64 page pamphlet, written by Thomas Clarke, an Englishman, and published by The Faith Association, at Malvern Link, England. To any who are interested in Prophetic "Times" this work is of great value. We have received an invoice of these little books, and can supply them at 20c. each.

Evangelist's Notice.

The N. W. Conference see fit to keep me in the field as their Standard Bearer, and have elected me Evangelist for the coming year.

I request any of the brethren that wish a series of meetings in their locality to address me at an early date, that I may arrange my years' work. As through the courtesy of the R. R. Company I receive half-rates to any part of the United States, I may extend my labor beyond the states of Oregon and Washington, if desired.

Address me at Scholls, Ore.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 60 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed "to The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money so t loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When leaving a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. Have You Heard of the Lion's Mouth?

Collier's Weekly is conducting a very novel and interesting competition for its readers each month. To enter the contest all one has to do is to review the issues of Collier's for the current month and answer the two or three questions which are printed in each issue, giving such opinion and such suggestions as will aid in improving the paper. Collier's aims in this way to secure the assistance of every one of its readers in making the paper more to their liking. Every reader, in fact, becomes one of the editors and has his voice in building the greatest illustrated journal of the age.

The first prize each month, awarded for the most helpful suggestion, is $50 in cash, with a second prize of $25 in cash, and eighteen other prizes of sets of books, ranging in value from $32 down to $5, making in all $320 of value given in prizes each month. There are in addition, cumulative cash prizes, for those who win prizes in successive months, and a big cash prize of $1,000 for the most valuable suggestions during 1903.

For the convenience of intending contestants who can not be promptly supplied by newsdealers, all the copies of Collier's for the current month will be sent post paid, together with a handsome proof of a drawing by Charles Dana Gibson, upon receipt of 40 cents in stamps addressed to The Lion's Mouth, Collier's Weekly, 438 West 18th Street, New York.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ—and many other kindred truths. Also a heavily belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, the requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

All—all thy good effecteth.

Restoration of the Kingdom to Israel.

The number who teach that God will restore again the kingdom to Israel is small. And yet there is no doctrine that seems plainer to the careful reader of God's Word. For centuries the Roman Catholic Church covered these truths up by keeping the Bible written in an unknown tongue. Since the translation they with others give it a spiritual interpretation which produces the same effect. In Acts i. 6 the apostles ask of Christ this question, viz., "Wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" What did they mean by this question? Is it to be taken as literal? If not how shall we interpret it? We are often met with this argument. The apostles were ignorant of the nature of the kingdom. It was a spiritual kingdom and not the old literal kingdom of Israel which Christ was speaking of when he preached to them of a king-dom. They depend for proof on two (1) the ignorance of the apos- a single proof text found in xviii. 36 in which Jesus ans- kingdom is not of this My kingdom were of this would my servants fight uld not be delivered to the now is My kingdom not ." If we get the right mean- we shall find that this ot teach that Christ's king- ot of this territory or earth, this political arrangement. sm in this text is read- and does not mean earth eal arrangement. He taught s kingdom was not from hence. ime).

To the verse following Pilate asked him, "Art thou a king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth." Did the Jews believe in a spiritual kingdom? If so why did they appeal to Cæsar's government charging Christ with trying to overthrow that government. If they had so believed their charges would have been without effect. A spiritual kingdom would not have disturbed or taken place of a literal government. Jesus answered Pilate plainly when he asked him, Art thou a king then? To this end was I born. The promise was made to Mary his mother that he should be given the throne of his father David. Luke i. 32. Was not David's throne a literal one? The Bible speaks of but one. David reigned in Jerusalem where his throne was established. In Ezek. xxi. 26 the prophet says, "I will overturn, overturn, overturn it; (the kingdom of Israel or David.) And it (the kingdom) shall be no more, until he comes whose right it is and I will give it (the kingdom) him." When the angel promised that Christ should rule over the house of Jacob forever he promised a restoration of the kingdom to Israel. It can have no other meaning. All this talk about a spiritual kingdom is to uphold the doctrine of going to heaven at death. Drop this and the truth becomes plain. This doctrine is traceable to the serpent's lie, "Thou shalt not surely die." Religionists were forced to have some place for the immortal soul. One error calls for another. After Christ arose from the dead he remained with the apostles forty days, speaking of the things concerning the kingdom of God. After they had heard him they asked him the question, Wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel? Jesus answered them, It is not for you to know the times nor the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power. They were not mistaken in the event, viz., the restoration of the kingdom, but of the times and the seasons of its restoration. Let me call your attention to the fact that the apostles never spoke of the immediate restoration of the Kingdom after this date, but still they preached the kingdom of God just the same. And all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory. Then will the twelve apostles sit upon their thrones ruling over the twelve tribes of Israel. For further proof read Jer. xxxi. 31-40.

Jesus said to the Jews, "By your traditions you have made the Word of God of no effect." We can as truthfully say to the religious world, By your spiritual interpretation you have done the same things and are leading thousands into unbelief and infidelity. The question is often asked, Why did not the apostles understand the time of the event as well as they did the event itself? I can refer you to a few reasons why. It was not regarded important for the reason that Christ nowhere taught it. The event was the important thing.

In Acts ii. 30 one of these apostles, preached that God raised Jesus from the dead to sit on David's throne. Again in Acts iii. 21 the same apostle says, The heaven must retain Christ until the times of the restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets. Restitution here means a restoring. In Matt. xix. 28 Jesus says in answer to a question, That ye who have followed me, in the regeneration (restoring time) when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. Does not this look very much like a literal restoration of the twelve tribes of Israel? In Matt. xxv. 31 again it reads when the Son of Man shall come in his glory.

The prophecies concerning his first coming and the events of that age had not been preached or spoken of as had his second coming and the events of that age. The two lines of prophecies had been merged into one or his ruling as king and restoring Israel had so overshadowed the first that they lost sight of his death. When Christ taught that he would be lifted up from the earth, signifying what death he would die, the people answered him, We have heard out of the law that Christ abideth forever. They had been reading one line of prophecies relating to his glorious reign. In fact when we read these we find them much more numerous. In truth they are more pleasant to read than those relating to his death.

As they (the apostles) heard these things, he added and spake a parable, because he was nigh to Jerusalem and because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear. What were these things that the apostles had heard? These were stirring times and many rumors were afloat. Many no doubt thought that Christ would immediately take the ruling power from the Roman government. His apostles were no doubt influenced by such things and thought that the kingdom would be set up when they arrived at Jerusalem. The parable here added was to teach them that it would not then appear. The nobleman (Christ) must yet go into a far country and receive for himself a kingdom or kingly authority and return. Read Luke xix. 11, 28. This seems to have satisfied them for the time. We should not forget that the apostles were men as we are and at this time were not under the influence of the Spirit. Our proof texts all go to prove that Christ was promised a literal kingdom and the kingdom he promised his apostles was also literal, whoever attempts to spiritualize the above Scriptures does so at his own peril.

Again, we hear that these apostles who had followed Christ three and a half years were ignorant and therefore could not understand spiritual things. They were of the common people who heard him gladly. This is no proof that they were ignorant. In Luke ix. Christ gave his apostles power over all devils, and to cure diseases. They were sent out under the power of the Spirit and preached the kingdom of God. Again it states that they went through the towns preaching the gospel and healing every where. Under this power they preached the gospel of the kingdom which means the same as taught by Christ in Acts i. 3, the things pertaining to the kingdom of God. Is it reasonable to think that Jesus would send men to preach who were ignorant of the message they were to preach? When he gave them power to heal would he not have given them the knowledge concerning the things of the kingdom of God? Who would send an ignorant person to transact business? We would not do such a thing. All agents are fully instructed in the points binding the two parties.

In closing this article let me say that to preach the gospel is to preach the kingdom of God which embraces the restoring of the kingdom to Israel. If we leave this out and substitute some thing else we are preaching another gospel. Paul says if we do this we shall be accursed. "Yea, if an angel shall preach any other gospel let him be accursed." The night is far spent and the morning draweth nigh, so let us work, that when the Master comes we will be found ready.

Your brother in the faith.

Wisdom of Seirach.

CHAPTER 17.

1. The Lord generated mankind from earth and returned him again into it.

2. Days by number and a definite period he gave them, and he gave them official-power over those upon it.

3. According to themselves he endued them with strength and according to his image created (authorship creation) he them.

4. And he put the fear of him (mankind) upon all flesh, and that he (man) should rule as lord over wild-beasts and flying-things.

6. Counsel and a tongue and eyes, an ear and a heart gave he to them to apprehend with.

7. An exact-knowledge of the way of understanding hath he supplied them with, and good and bad things hath he shown them.

8. He hath set his eye upon their hearts to show them the majesty of his works.

10. And the name of his sanctification shall they praise.

9. That they may discourse the great things of his works.

11. He hath added to him exact-knowledge (positive science) and a law of life hath he allotted unto them.

12. A covenant of an animate-age hath he instituted with them, and his judicial-renderings (verdicts) hath he shown them.

13. A majesty of his glory did their eyes see and a glory of his voice did their ear hear.

14. And he said unto them; withhold yourselves from every unjust thing, and he commanded them each one concerning his neighbor.

15. Their ways are before him constantly; they will not hide themselves from his eyes.

17. For each nation did he establish a leader, and Israel is the Lord's portion in the distribution.

19. All their works are as the sun in his sight, and his eyes are constantly on their ways.

20. Their iniquities have not been hid from him, and all their sins are in the sight of the Lord.

22. A noble man's act of mercy is as a seal with him and for the sake of mankind will he watch to keep it like the pupil of an eye.

23. After these things will he arise, and repay them, and their repayment will he repay on their head.

24. However he hath given a way unto him for those who repent, and he hath invited those who are losing patient-endurance: as follows,

25. Return unto the Lord and leave off sinning; beseech his face and diminish stumbling.

26. Lead up unto the Most High and turn away from iniquity and hate an abomination exceedingly.

27. Who will praise the Most High in hades (the grave) instead of the living even those who are living and giving confession of agreement?

28. From a dead person will perish confession even as though he had not been: the living and the well will praise the Lord.

29. How great is the Lord's sense of mercy and his atonement for those who turn unto him.

30. For all things cannot be in mere men (mankind) because a son of man is not immortal (deathless).

31. What is more luminous than a sun, and this (its luminosity) leaveth off and a wicked one will have become enthused with flesh and blood.

32. High heaven's host he overseeth, and all men (mere men) are dust and ashes.

COMMENT.

This chapter is a continuation of the argument begun in the previous chapter on the nature of all soul-life, including man its archetypo, who by the divine fiat was made lord of this form of organic life—the creation as well as the lordship begun in Adam and consummated or "realized" in Jesous the Christ. No wonder the book containing such a chapter as this was made apocryphal by an apostasy that starts with the first promise of "natural immortality." Those who still believe this first lie of Satan to mankind will do well to read this chapter carefully and prayerfully. Notice in reading the difference here made so clear and specific between the original authorship creation and the generic or the result of the operation of the natural generic laws instituted. Also what is said of "the exact way of understanding" and of "exact knowledge" (or "positive science") divinely revealed to mankind, cannot but be of intense interest to modern scientists who as a class reject revelation and class the Scriptures with the myths and fables of heathendom and classic lore. Notice in the 17th verse the exact agreement of statement with Deuteronomy xxxii. 8, which makes the original "leadership" of the nations a delegated one and angelic in its nature and not human as in the C. V. and the R. V. Notice also the emphasis placed in the 14th verse on love for neighbor. Also what is said of "the unconscious state of the dead" in the 27th and 28th and what is said of God's mercy and "atonement" in the 29th. The 30th and 32nd verses are about as plain and emphatic statements on the "nature of man" as language is capable of expressing.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Christ in the Revelation. No. 11.

"And unto the angel of the church of the Laodiceans write; these things saith the Amen, the faithful and true witness, the beginning of the creation of God." Christ affirms himself to be "the Amen; the faithful and true witness, the beginning of the creation of God." Of him it is written that, "All the promises of God in him are yea, and in him Amen, unto the glory of God." And as a faithful witness, there is no one to be compared with him, notwithstanding faithfulness is a prominent characteristic of the true servants of the Deity. David was faithful in steadfastly adhering to the worship of the one true God; and so was the prophet Nathan when he said to David, "Thou art the man." But Christ's whole life was a sacrifice to truth and righteousness. He was hated by the Jews of his generation, "Because he testified that their deeds were evil." He knowing at the same time, that his faithful testimony would cost him his life: therefore he gave his life a sacrifice to the truth, and is preeminently "the faithful and true witness."

"The beginning of the creation of God," we understand to refer to the new creation, of whom Christ is the chief, "the first born from the dead." As it is written, "Behold I create a new heavens and a new earth." And Paul says to the Ephesians, "For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus." Eph. ii. 10. The popular idea of creating something out of nothing, appears to my mind to be without any foundation in fact; and not taught in the Scriptures of truth. In Gen. v. 2, we read "male and female created he them: and blessed them, and called their name Adam, in the day when they were created." The name Adam indicates that they were made out of the earth, not out of nothing. As it is written in chap. ii. 7, "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground." And Adam and Eve are the only two of the human race that were made, or created; all their posterity are begotten; Jesus Christ our Lord being no exception to the rule. See Psa. ii. 7. "Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee." "Also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." Luke i. 35. And in agreement with this testimony it is written that "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John iii. 16. So as Adam, by being first made, or created became the federal head of the earthly race; so Jesus Christ by a process of perfect obedience, even unto death, earned life not death, "the wages of sin" became the head of the spiritual sons and daughters of the Almighty. Having fulfilled the conditions upon which eternal life was promised by his Father; he had according to divine justice a right to the eternal life; and in a sense having laid down his life—had power to take it again by fulfilling the conditions; but being ever mindful "that God is all and in all," he adds, "This commandment I received of my Father."

Concerning the work of God in creation we read in Rev. iv. 11, "Thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created." Again it is written, "Behold I create new heavens and a new earth." Isa. lxiv. 17. Christ being the head in the heaven of this new creation; and his brethren being associated with him in the government of the new earth, must pass through a preparatory process. Therefore we read in Eph. ii. 10, "For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works." Therefore we conclude that Jesus Christ is the beginning of the new creation, as Adam was the beginning of the old.

The condition of the church of Laodicea is said to be, "neither cold nor hot." How withering to a true conception of the truth, is the spectacle of the man who owes everything that he possesses to the mercy of God through the gospel of his Son, to be taking hold of the truth with a slack hand? "Neither cold nor hot." Still such is the condition of the church at the present time: "Saying I am rich..... when they are wretched, miserable, poor, blind, naked." "I council thee to buy of me," says the true witness, "gold tried in the fire," that is purity in tribulation; "and white raiment," the righteousness of Christ to cover our nakedness, "And anoint thine eyes with eye salve, that thou mayest see."

Consult the Word of God so as to be able to discern clearly thy true condition, and then in humility, and full purpose of heart go to the "true witness" for the true riches, who says, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." What condescension of the rich to knock at the poor man's door, offering rich treasures in exchange for the poverty of the poor man? "If any man hear my voice, and open the door," "any man." The call of the Master is not confined to any class of men. It leaps over all national boundaries, and embraces all races, color and conditions of men. The same voice that said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," making no exception against those men whose hands were red with his blood. Shall we not hear his voice to his disciples when giving them directions to proclaim the gospel, he said, "Beginning at Jerusalem." Proclaim a free pardon to those that hated him, and conspired to put him to death, because he testified that their deeds were evil. And today he offers a seat with him on his throne to the overcomer. What an honor awaits the faithful servants of the Deity; to be exalted with Christ to bless all the nations of the earth, to be sons and daughters of the Almighty. It is our wisdom to lay hold of these precious promises by obedience to his voice. If we miss the reward by disobedience our life is a failure.

Secretary and Evangelist, A. M. Darby.

The Evangelist to receive the same pay for his service as last year. It was voted that the car-fare and board of the speakers present be paid, and the Baker & Lockwood Tent Co., be paid $2.00 if they think it due. Motion was made and carried that we change the name of our conference from "Kansas and Missouri Conference" to "The Northern Kansas and Missouri Conference."

A. W. DARBY, Sec'y.

Notice.

I would say to the brethren that having been again put in the field as Evangelist for the Northern Kansas and Missouri Conference, I am at your service and will go wherever called. While the last year's work did not come up to what we desired, yet the work closed in a very satisfactory condition, and the new year begins with better prospects than ever before.

Now, brethren give me your assistance, send in your pledge, or what you feel able to give for this year's work, and let me know where you are and the situation in your neighborhood.

The 1st of October (Thursday) I will begin a meeting at the Prairie Point School House in Cloud County, Kansas, 14 miles south-west of Concordia and 9 miles north-east of Glasco, in J. J. Wright's neighborhood. Let all the brethren in north central Kansas attend this meeting that can.

A. W. DARBY, Evan.

Evangelist's Notice.

The N. W. Conference see fit to keep me in the field as their Standard Bearer, and have elected me Evangelist for the coming year.

I request any of the brethren that wish a series of meetings in their locality to address me at an early date, that I may arrange my years' work. As through the courtesy of the R. R. Company I receive half-rates to any part of the United States, I may extend my labor beyond the states of Oregon and Washington, if desired.

Address me at Scholls, Ore.

W. L. SKEELS.

We need what is due us on subscriptions and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

Plymouth, Indiana, Sept. 23, 1903.

We recently sent letters to a number of our patrons explaining that we needed what was due us in order that we might meet our obligations. A number have responded, and we thank them heartily for so doing. There are still a large per cent of those whom we addressed, who have not yet given heed to our call. We dislike to tell of this, but are compelled to do so. It is useless to multiply words, brethren and sisters. We simply need the money that has been earned. Need it in order that obligations that really distress us may be met. We only want to impress on your minds that the demands on us are imperative—just MUST be met. We have no other means of satisfying them, and depend on you to supply us the needed money. Please get it in some way, and send at once. To get the little that you each owe will not distress you as carrying the whole burden does us. So attend to this today—not next week, or next month, but understand that we need THIS VERY DAY every cent that is due us. Then we can pay our obligations, and not be counted dishonest.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE.

We have made the above statement and appeal, trusting you will make due effort to relieve our needs. It is surely plain to you each that where there are some hundreds owing us in small sums that it is a hardship for us to carry the load. Indeed, it has simply reached the time when we cannot longer do so. As there are five Wednesdays in this month, this is the last paper until the first of another month will be here. Bills coming due then make it an important day with us. Brothers and Sisters, will you please examine, and if you have not already paid up, then at once—right away—send us your renewal, and we can then meet Oct. 1st gladly and with joy. Please see to this matter without delay.

Cowper says, "Habits are soon assumed, but when you strive to strip them off, 'tis being flayed alive." •

God had one Son without sin, but he never had a son without chastisement. Courage, my heart, courage; not even Jesus was without chastisement. •

We are told that there are regions beyond the most distant nebulous outskirts of matter; but there are no regions beyond the divine goodness. We may conceive of tracts where there are no worlds, but not of any where there is no God of mercy." •

Reader, what do your tenants think of you since you profess to have been converted? Do they say, "I know he has been converted, by the way he collects his rents? Do your business associates and your neighbors say: "How much more fair and just he is in his dealings than he used to be?" Is your disposition, that was once as hard as a granite rock, now soft and mossy on the surface, so that vegetation might almost grow upon it? It is your life that is to determine whether you have the Spirit of Christ; and if you have not the Spirit of Christ you are none of his. •

We once read that the wife of Tigranes was among the captives on a public day, when Cyrus,—the conqueror of Asia was reviewing his troops. While the captives were pressing forward to see the conqueror, Tigranes presented himself before Cyrus and offered a thousand talents for the redemption of his wife. Among the observations afterwards made respecting the appearance and glory of the Conqueror, this noble lady was asked what she thought of Cyrus. She had not seen him. On what then was your attention fixed? On the man who offered a thousand talents for my redemption. On whom, then, should our attention be fixed, brethren and sisters, but on him who gave, not a thousand talents, but his own most precious life for our redemption? •

The more we live with Christ, the better we will love him, because we will know him better. There are some people in the world of so unlovable a nature, that to see them once in seven years is quite enough, if we wish to love them; the less we know of them perhaps the better. But of Jesus Christ it can be said, the longer we live with him the better we will love him. •

Some one has said:—"I cannot see here now without helping out my sight, first with spectacles, then with a microscope, for the minute creations of the Deity; and then with the telescope, to bring distant objects near; but when God raises me from the dead, who can tell but I will be able to adjust my eye to make it both telescopic and microscopic, and thus make it serve all the ends that God can make an optical instrument to serve in the land of mortals. O brethren! it doth not yet appear what we shall be in the world to come!" •

Passing Events In the Light of Prophecy.

As we imagine that the children of the Abrahamic faith are keenly alive to Eastern events, we again avail ourselves of several editorial paragraphs from the Blad Tidings. They say:—

"In consequence of the renewal of the insurrectionary movement in Macedonia, an irade was issued by the Porte authorizing the calling out of fresh battalions of troops.

The Macedonia Revolutionary committee has sent a circular to the Representatives of the Powers, to which it is stated that it will continue the struggle until its task has been fully accomplished.

The Bulgarian government has also issued a note to the Powers, which is described by the Times as one long indictment of the Turkish government, and a bold disclaimer of any guilt or complicity on the part of Bulgaria.

Following the murder of the Russian Consul at Monastir, a squadron of the Russian Black Sea fleet arrived at Iniada Bay, near the Bosphorus, and its appearance caused a deep impression in Constantinople. The Porte having granted the immediate fulfillment of Russia's demands, the squadron was withdrawn.

The Scotsman says:—Anarchy spreads. Reforms are urgently needed. But before reforms can be reduced order must in some measure be restored; and the Turkish government appears to be quite powerless.....The fire may burn out without spreading much further. But at best little will be left of the prosperity of Macedonia or of the solvency and stability of the Turkish government. The situation is manifestly serious, and events are not unlikely to happen that may open up the entire Eastern question.

We have frequently referred to Russia's steady movement eastward. She has virtually absorbed Manchuria. Her eastern movement continues. Korea seems to be her next prize; but there she is apparently to find more determined opposition. In regard to China, Japan is adopting the method of teaching the Chinese, so that they may arouse themselves and by and by throw off the Russian incubus. But the Koreans are a small folk. Japan in self interest feels compelled to resist the Russian incorporation of Korea. The Pekin correspondent of the Times says:—

Korea is inevitably destined to be the field where the great question of Russian or Japanese supremacy in the Far East will be solved.

The Scotsman says: "Nobody can say when the expected struggle between Russia and Japan in the Far East will begin in earnest. One hardly asks now whether there will be a conflict; one only asks when.

The unrest in Russia is another sign of the times, but of a different nature from Russia's movement towards the Far East. Disorders break out at different parts of the empire. The last was at Baku and was of a very serious nature. Forty-five thousand men were on strike. For ten days the town was entirely without railway trains and tramways; during two nights it was in total darkness, owing to the absence of gas and electric light. The troops were at first unable to quell the rioters, and only succeeded in restoring order after being largely reinforced.

It is no pleasure to record these disturbances, but they are symptoms of the general unrest all over the world. The cause is misgovernment. As long as the peoples are misgoverned, the discontent and unrest will continue. Evidently the spirit of unrest is spreading. A notable feature is that Socialism is becoming more and more organized. It is the sworn enemy of the ruling classes. It will find an opportunity in the coming melee between the nations. We look for the day of the Lord to give perfect government to mankind, but the Scriptures plainly show that the world has first to pass through a fiery trial.

The labor troubles of France which are of long standing, and lately there were serious riots at L'Orient. The rioters were charged by bodies of cavalry, but they were so desperate that the cavalry had to be reinforced by artillery.

In regard to Zionism we see that the Jewish Chronicle is not favorable to what it styles "political Zionism." It sees the issues that are raised by the proposal to have a Jewish state in Palestine under the suzerainty of the Sultan. In view of the state of matters in Turkey at this moment the views of the editor of this Jewish periodical may prove of interest to our readers. In an editorial under date of Aug. 21st he wrote:—

"Meanwhile, the near East is in a state of great unrest. At any moment events may occur that will rearrange the whole basis of power in a vast region that includes the area upon which the Zionists have set their hearts. Will the voice of Dr. Herzl be heard in this storm? At least, these events, if they occur, should give some inkling of Russian ambitions in the neighborhood of Palestine, and test the practical political changes of the Zionist movement."

The sixth Zionist Congress has been held. At the first setting Dr. Herzl, announced that the British government had placed a portion of British East Africa at the disposal of the Congress for the purpose of carrying out the Jewish colonization scheme. This territory while administered by Jews, would be under British suzerainty.

This is not what had been expected. But the haven of refuge for the persecuted Jew, although not within the land of his fathers, is a step in the right direction. It will bring him in touch with Britain. The British Power is foretold in Scripture as the latter-day friend and protector of the Jew. •

10:30 A. M. the subject of Bro. Woodward's sermon was "The now and the then," said subject was well handled. The condition of things now was clearly contrasted with the condition of things after Christ's coming.

Among those from a distance were B. W. and M. A. Woodward, Dutton, Michigan, Perry Pearson Sr. and wife of Brush Creek, Ohio, Henry Knife and Luther Worley of Tippecanoe City, O., Mrs. James Frier, Mrs. George Frier and Mrs. Wm. Huffer, Scircleville, Ind., and Mrs. A. L. Tichenor, Chicago, Ill.

The spirit of the meeting was good throughout, several driving from a distance to be there to partake of the good things. We can bespeak for Roll that she certainly did her part well in entertaining the Conference, and we hope that she will ever be the one united family that she is now. May we all be faithful and ready to enter into that glorious kingdom when Jesus comes.

Table Talk.

I have obtained mercy. In the first epistle of Timothy Paul says, This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief. He acknowledged he was a blasphemer, persecuter and injurious, but he says, I obtained mercy, because I did it ignorantly in unbelief. Yes, Paul verily thought he was serving God when he was persecuting the saints, and doing many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth. However, when this same Jesus called Paul, and said,—Why persecutest thou me? Paul immediately acknowledged him as the Lord, and asked what wilt thou have me to do?

Before this, Paul, like the priests, of whom he had received the authority to persecute and shut up in prison the saints, did not believe that Jesus was the one born to be King of the Jews, and the Savior of the world, but now he acknowledges him Lord, and on being told what to do he obeyed, was baptized, washing away his sins, calling on the name of the Lord, and from that time on what a radiant soldier of Jesus Christ was Paul. He certainly realized that he had obtained mercy from God through faith in Christ Jesus, and his whole after life proved it, for he says he counted all the things which he suffered, and they were many and great, as nothing, not worthy to be compared to the glory which shall be revealed in us.

Can we bring this lesson home to ourselves? Can I say, I have obtained mercy, and how can I prove that I believe I have obtained mercy. When I believed the gospel of the kingdom, and the things concerning the name of Jesus Christ, which is the power of God unto salvation, and obeyed from the heart, being baptized to wash away my sins, I obtained mercy.

What must I do now to prove that I believe I obtained mercy? Do you think I can prove to any that are strangers from the covenants of promise that I have obtained great mercy, if I join with them in any way in their worldly pleasures? Would that show them that I really believed that I had obtained mercy from God? Oh, no, you know it would not. It is by my godly life and conversation, by the sacrifice of my will to God's will, by so living that others may behold my good works, by shunning the very appearance of evil, that I prove to those around me, and to those also of the household of faith, that I believe that I have obtained mercy. I know that at one time I was an alien from the commonwealth of Israel, and a stranger from the covenants of promise, without God, having no hope in the world; but now having come to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus, and became obedient by baptism I am no longer a stranger, but a fellow citizen, and of the household of God.

Blessed be the God of Israel, who hath brought me from darkness into the glorious light of the gospel. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time.

Oh, beloved, if we have obtained mercy, let us exhort one another to love and good works, building ourselves up in our most holy faith, keeping ourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life. Amen.

Mrs. Mattie Neill.

Obituary.

Died at Arkansas City, Kansas on Aug. 29, 1903, Sister H. L. Vickery. Her maiden name was Manwarning She was born in Richland, Oswego Co., N. Y., Oct. 29, 1816; was married to William Vickery June 11, 1835; moved to Kansas in 1858 and settled in Doniphan Co., on a farm about two miles south of what is now the town of Severance. It was then a new country and many were the hardships endured. Her home was a kind of a neighborhood center where the people gathered for social, religious and political purposes. Sister Vickery was the mother of eight children, four sons and four daughters, only three remain among the living, to-wit: Ira M. Vickery and Mrs. Joseph Hollingsworth of Sumner Co., and Mrs. S. L. Ryan of Hiawatha, Kan. Sister Vickery was of a religious turn of mind and became a member of the Baptist Church in her girlhood, but after moving to Kansas and coming in contact with believers in the mortality of man and the future reign of Christ on the earth, she accepted that faith and remained an active worker in the same as long as her activity lasted. A few years before she died she had a record of her life made from which the above is partly taken and of which the following is a part:

"She is now past 86 years old, feeble and bent with age, but has a hope of reigning with Christ and has a great desire to meet her children and grand children where there will be no more pain nor sorrow, and when we can [illegible] hold our Savior face to face and [illegible] his praises for ever."

Keep Hot.

The icebergs of formalit[illegible] pocritical spirit of compr[illegible] criticism are all around. [illegible] once glowing with spiritual [illegible] and fire are cold and froze[illegible] the diabolical shrewdness [illegible] of darkness.

Whole churches, which yea[illegible] dwelt among the tropics, bask[illegible] der the warming sunlight of he[illegible] and existing on the various fruits of the abundant land of Canaan, are today frozen fast amidst the awful ice-chunks of worldly conformity and sin, and are struggling to catch but some faint ray of the evanescent aurora whose faint rays will light the darkness of the awful gloom fast gathering around them. With these things ever before thee, Oh, child of God, the absolute necessity of keeping all on fire and filled with the Spirit from above which melts every opposing iceberg and dispels the many fogs of doubt and fear is most apparent.

Dark though the night, and distressing though the cold may be, yet the one who is burning hot with the fire of heaven is amply prepared in the strength of God to brave every difficulty and be brought through it all, reflecting credit to his King, and gathering many precious sheaves for the garners of eternity. The warmth of heaven can so penetrate the remotest resources of the human heart that formality and the spirit of sin and Satan will be utterly dispelled before the superior forces of God and the gentle yet powerful heat and glow of celestial fire. The cloven tongues and rushing, mighty wind at Pentecost but reveal to us that God intends for his children to be in a constant spiritual flame for him, urged on by the impelling energy of the Holy Ghost.—God's Revivalist.

The Home Sickness.

Let me, then, weary be!
I shirk not—murmur not;
In all this homelessness I see
The Church's pilgrim-lot;
Her lot until her absent Lord shall come,
And the long homeless here, shall find a home.

Then, no more weariness!
No gathering cloud of gloom;
Then, no dull weight of loneliness,
No unwept cravings for the tomb:
For death shall then be swallowed up of life,
And the glad victory shall end the strife!

Dear Restitution:

The Church of God, meeting in Hart's Hall 1028-1030 Gates Ave., Brooklyn, sends Christian Greeting and loving fellowship to all of like precious faith scattered abroad, and we extend a cordial invitation to any of the brethren traveling our way to visit us; for as we are children of The Father, our church home is his home, and if it is his home, then is it the home of his children and we shall merely say "Welcome to the Father's home and the Table of our Lord."

On Sunday, August 9th, the churches of God, of Newark, New Jersey, and Brooklyn, New York, met in Union Meeting for the purpose of giving glory to the name of our God and showing honor to my dear mother, Mary[illegible] LESLIE DONALDSON, who had on that day reached the seventy-fifth anniversary of her birth, all pertaining to my mother being a surprise to her, she not knowing anything regarding it till some time after entering the hall).

The morning meeting opened at 10:30, with the usual preliminaries for the Breaking of Bread, after which Brother Samuel Wilson delivered the address of welcome, in the which he paid a strong tribute to the sterling worth as a woman and the upright character as a Christian of her to whom we were proud to do honor. His remarks were based on the 31st [illegible]ter of Proverbs, "A woman that [illegible]h the Lord she shall be praised" [illegible]he 14th chapter of Zechariah [illegible]ing time it shall be light," [illegible] by reading an original [illegible]d chose from friends most dear,

[illegible]hy natal day
[illegible]ong may bliss [illegible] along
[illegible]
[illegible]n ere care was born,
[illegible]mold frod the heather;
[illegible] strong arm guards from all harm
[illegible]ildren round her gather.

[illegible]score years and ten have passed,
[illegible]ve to give good measure;
[illegible] one brighter than the last,
[illegible]ith Faith, and Love's rich treasure.

[illegible]adows lengthen down the vale,
The evening dews are falling;
Youth's leaping pulse begins to fail
The night of rest is calling.

Yet though the Sun of Life be low,
The lowering clouds adorning,
The pathway of the just shall glow
With radiance like the morning.

The Lamp of Truth, God's blessed Word,
Shall keep her feet from falling,
When error's siren voice is heard,
And doubt for her is calling.

On every side the glowing eyes
And love-lit beaming faces,
Of kin and friends about her rise
Reflecting heavenly graces.

"At evening time it shall be light,"
No fears shall daunt nor gloom affright,
Where Love abounds, and Hope grows bright,
And God's Word guides our feet aright,
In paths illumined by the True Light.

The Chairman, Brother Wm. G. Rothe, then closed the meeting with prayer, after which we partook ourselves to the dining-room where a sumptuous repast consisting of cold ham; cold corned beef; potato salad; lobster salad; pickles; bread; rolls; butter; tea; coffee; milk; fruit; ice cream and candied fruit, was spread in a tempting manner for the edification of the inner man. The table was set for seventy-five people, and was decorated with cut flowers, palms, ferns, smilax and asparagus, with a small bouquet of roses at each plate, the tables were arranged in the shape of the letter "U" and the guest of honor sat at the center of the head and immediately in front of her was the birthday cake cut in seventy-five pieces with a small silk American flag in each, these flags with the fancy napkins were the souvenirs. Before partaking of the lunch Brother Wm. H. Donaldson offered before the throne of God the following prayer of thanksgiving:

"Our Lord and our Father, and the Father of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ: We would approach thee at this time through the name of thy dear Son, our blessed Redeemer. We would thank thee for the Bible that tells us of Thee, of thy Son, of thy great plan of redemption and of life eternal. We would thank thee that thou hast permitted so many of us here to assemble together. We thank thee for the promise that where even two and three are assembled together in thy name there thou wilt be in the midst of them. Oh God be thou in the midst of us today. We thank thee for faith and humbly ask thee to increase our faith that we may have faith to walk with thee as did Enoch of old. We would thank thee, oh Father, for our health, our food and our raiment, and for the bountiful table that thou hast been pleased to set before us at this time. We would thank thee that we know that we can not live by bread alone but by every word that proceedeth from thy mouth. We would thank thee, oh Father, for the keeping power, for the security we possess through thy promise, for thou hath said that none shall pluck us out of thy hand. We would thank thee, oh Father, that the present condition of things is but temporal, that when he comes—thy Son, our Redeemer—the second time, not with a sin-offering, but as King of kings and Lord of lords, then we shall be manifested and be forever with the Lord.

We have many things to be thankful for, but at this especial time we thank thee, oh Father, our God of mercy and consolation and peace, that thou hast permitted my dear Mother to see this day; that in thy great goodness and mercy thou hast permitted her to pass the allotted time. Oh God, let thy rich heavenly blessing rest upon her, and as she journeys through this life, and we also, may we receive thy blessing, and grant that when we have done thy will we may receive and enter into that promise of life eternal. May our meeting together this day, oh Father, all that we do and all that we say, may it be to the honor of thy great name. We would ask thy blessing to rest upon us all while we further wait upon thee. Oh Lord, bless us in the name of thy dear Son.

"The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures, he leadeth me beside the still waters, he restoreth my soul, he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake. Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of my enemies. Thou anointest my head with oil, my cup runneth over. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever." Amen.

After lunch and congratulations, a "Social converse" was indulged in, and at two o'clock Bro. Benjamin McDonald called to order the regular Conference meeting. The theme considered was "Love" and the speakers —Brothers Wm. H. Donaldson; Wm. G. Rothe; Benj. McDonald; Charles Patison; Wm. Rennie; Chas. Moore; James Brown; Edwin Hardcastle; George Boughton and Samuel Wilson handled it in a manner that gave God all the glory. Some of the speakers used Mother as an object lesson; for she has been for over fifty years in the Truth preaching it and proclaiming it, not only among strangers, but also at home in the family circle where her light has shown so that all her family of six children, with their husbands—or wives as the case may be —and their children are members of the family of God acknowledging Jesus Christ as their Elder Brother and Redeemer, and all earnestly watching and praying for the "Desire of all nations" to come and take unto himself the reins of government and rule this world in equity and in peace. Come Lord Jesus, Come quickly.

At about five o'clock the meeting was brought to a close with the singing of the hymn, "God be with you till we meet again," and we parted, with love in our hearts toward God and toward each other, without which we cannot be the children of God and heirs to his promises.

Marion Leslie Donaldson, was born August 9th, 1828 in Edinburgh, Scotland. She was married Oct. 22, 1847 to John Donaldson,

United in hand, united in heart,
United forever, till death should them part.

In the winter of '50-'51 they were baptized by the Glasgow, Scotland brethren, leaving the church of their youth, the Presbyterian—to unite themselves to the people of God. In 1853 they emigrated to America.

When they left Scotland they had three children, but when they arrived in New York they had but two, one—Marion—having died and was buried at sea. In their earlier days they were friends, companions and co-laborers with the late Doctor John Thomas whom they always admired, but did not follow when he brought forth his idea of "The mortal resurrection."

John Donaldson died on April 1st, 1892, since which date his widow—the subject of our sketch—surrounded by her loving family of sons and their wives, daughters and their husbands, grandchildren and great grandchildren has still done her part of life's work and now in her seventy-sixth year is still busy and is waiting for her Lord from heaven.

"Come Lord Jesus, Come quickly" but should he tarry.—Long life to Mother.

Tomb of the Judges.

This is situated about a mile northwest of Jerusalem. The tomb of the judges is a small room about suitable for a small family. In the sides of this room are niches cut into the solid rock, deep enough to admit a coffin. The niches are 21 in number, and leading from this room is an opening near the ground into another room where there are 15 niches. These niches look not unlike an old fashioned brick oven.

The room is presided over by an Arab with lights, so that visitors can see the place, and you are expected to give him something to help furnish oil.

Near to Jerusalem is a pile of ashes covering perhaps an acre, which are the result of burnt offerings of animals, and have been carried out and deposited in a heap, and are being used in the place of lime in making mortar for building purposes. This was being done when I was there, and I have noticed that some travelers say that the pile of ashes has all been removed, and a crop of barley was raised where the ashes were. Thus showing the constant improvement in the city.

Endless Genealogies.

Paul, that noble soldier of Jesus Christ, besought Timothy to abide at Ephesus, and charge some that they teach no other doctrine than the glorious gospel of the blessed God, and charge them not to give heed to fables, and endless genealogies. I have before me a paper of thirty-six pages by able writers, devoted to endless genealogies. This effort has called forth vain jangling, for before me is another paper by able writers, full of the opposite side of the endless genealogies, and a few letters from subscribers show that the endless genealogical vain jangling has ministered questions, instead of godly edifying. O writers and upholders of endless genealogies. You know the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. I implore you return to the simplicity that is in Christ, and not make shipwreck of faith. As one who has obtained great mercy from God, and a hope of glorious eternal life in his kingdom, through Jesus Christ our Lord, I plead, yea, earnestly plead with all who have named the name of Christ to depart from iniquity. Shun endless genealogies, strive not to boast words to no profit, vain babblings that increase unto more ungodliness. Let us all, who have the blessed hope, unite in holding forth the Word of life that we may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God without rebuke, and thus be the church that Christ loves and gave himself for.

The Coronation of God's King.

Daniel sees the divine Majesty as he will appear on the day of the coronation of his Son; when, as the Son of David, he receives the crown and the throne to "rule over the house of Jacob forever." See i. 32-33. His person, his retinue and the entire audience make this the grandest event ever to transpire. The views of the Deity in the rock on the Mount, and in his wilderness tent were obscured as to his personage. Here it will be distinct and glorious.

Jehovah calls him "My King." In verses 7 and 8 Messiah himself is introduced, saying, "I will declare the decree, the Lord said unto me, (Messiah) Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee. Ask of me (the Father) and I will give thee the heathen for thy inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." His Sonship is declared in Matt. iii. 17, at his baptism: "And lo, a voice from heaven, Thou art my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased;" and in Matt. xvii. 5 at his transfiguration: "And behold, a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him." Such is the dignity, such is the official majesty of him whom Jehovah anoints King upon Zion, the hill of "My Holiness." How exalted will be Jesus of Nazareth, the Babe of Bethlehem, as to his nature: "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him and given him a name (Jesus Savior) which is above every name. That at the name of Jesus every knee shall bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth, and that every tongue shall confess that Jesus Christ (Messiah) is Lord to the glory of God the Father." Phil. ii. 9, 10, 11. Messiah is "King of kings, Lord of lords." "The Father of the everlasting age." "Hear, all ye angels, progeny of light; thrones, dominations, princedoms, virtues, powers, hear my decree, which unrevoked shall stand. This day have I begot whom I declared my only Son, and on this holy hill him have anointed whom ye behold at my right hand; Your head I him appoint; and by myself have sworn to him shall bow all knees in heaven, and confess him Lord." Milton.

In this regal donative the whole earth is included, for the earth being the Lord's, and the fullness thereof; the world and they that dwell therein, the regal patrimony of his Son is universal. "And there was given unto him (the Son of Man, of David, of God, the Messiah) dominion and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages should serve him; his dominion an everlasting dominion which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." ver. 13-14. He is also the Redeemer. "The Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn away ungodliness in Jacob." Isa. lix. 20; Rom. xi. 26.

THE PLACE OF CORONATION.

Jehovah says, "On my holy hill of Zion." Where is the hill (Mount) Zion? Its location being a matter of divine revelation, its position is fixed by God's own Word. Jehovah calls it a hill, "My holy hill of Zion." He also calls it a mount. Is it a literal mountain? Has it a geographical position? Is it as truly a literal mountain as that of Olives?.....David took from the Jebusites the stronghold of Zion: the same is the city of David, so David dwelt in the first undefiled [illegible] the city of David. 2 Sam. v. 7 9. Did King David have his seat of royalty on any other hill in Jerusalem than that of Zion? Had the temple any other location? The topography, therefore of his seat of empire both regal and sacredotal, was the hill (or mount) of Zion. Upon it stood his palace and the temple. "Upon this all the host assembled themselves together and went up into Mt. Zion. At that time also they builded up the Mount Zion with high walls and strong towers round about, lest the Gentiles should come and tread it down before." 1 Macc. iv. 37-60. This clearly defines the hill of Zion to be a definite and literal hill in the city of Jerusalem called holy, it being the visible seat of Jehovah's visible glory in the holy of holies of God's holy temple. On that mount the holy Father crowns his only begotten Son, the Son of David, the Son of Man, to commence his reign on the throne of David, over the house of Jacob, in a universal and endless empire of peace, love and righteousness.—Selected by Mrs. C. W. Russel.

Fragrance of a Gentle Life.

Once, in crossing a meadow, I came to a spot that was filled with fragrance. Yet I could see no flowers, and I wondered whence the fragrance came. At last I found, low down, close to the ground, hidden by the tall grass, innumerable little flowers. It was from these that the fragrance came.

I enter some homes. There is a rich perfume of love that pervades all the place. It may be a home of wealth and luxury, or it may be plain and bare. No matter, it is not the houses nor the furniture, nor the adornment that makes this air of sweetness. I look closely. It is a gentle woman, mother or daughter, quiet, hiding self away, from whose life the fragrance flows. There is a wondrous charm in a gentle spirit.

The gentle girl in a home may not be well educated, may not be musical or an artist, or "clever" in any way, but wherever she moves she leaves a benediction. Her sweet patience is never disturbed by the sharp words that fall about her. The children love her, because she never tires of them. She helps them with their lessons, listens to their frets and worries, mends their broken toys, makes doll dresses, straightens out tangles and settles their little quarrels, and finds time to play with them. When there is sickness in the home she is the angel of comfort. Her face is always bright with the outshining of love. Her voice has music in it as it falls in cheerful tenderness on the sufferer's ear. Her hands are wondrously gentle as their soothing touch rests on the aching head, or as they minister in countless ways about the bed of pain.—J. R. Miller.

The New Zion.

The tract of country which has been offered by the Foreign Office to the Zionists for the establishment of a Jewish colony lies (says the Daily Chronicle) at a high altitude between Nairobi and Mau, two stations on the Uganda Railway, which runs from the coast of Mombasa to Lake Victoria Nyanza. Nairobi is situated about 6000 feet above sea-level, at a distance of 330 miles inland from Mombasa, while Mau stands over 1000 feet higher, 150 miles or so from Nairobi. In making his offer, Lord Lansdowne must undoubtedly have been influenced by the description of this portion of the Uganda Protectorate contained in Sir H. H. Johnston's reports. "In the eastern part of the Uganda Protectorate," said the Special Commissioner in 1901, "there is a tract of country almost without parallel in tropical Africa; a region of perhaps 12,000 square miles, admirably well watered, with a fertile soil, cool and perfectly healthy climate, covered with noble forests, and, to a very great extent, uninhabited by any native race. This area lies at an altitude not less than 6000 and not more than 10,000 feet. It is healthy for European settlers as the United Kingdom, British Columbia, or temperate South Africa .....I am able to say decidedly that here we have a territory (now that the Uganda Railway is built) admirably suited for a white man's country." It is clear, then, that in such a territory the new colonists will find an ample field for the energy which is characteristic of their race. The resources of the country are now pretty well ascertained. Huge tracts are covered with rubber-producing trees, a more productive source of wealth in these days than ever before. Other vegetable products likely to be of marked commercial value are coffee (which grows wild in many places), acacia[illegible] and timber, ebony, [illegible] forests in close proximity to the railway. [illegible] ton and indigo grow wild and half cultivated over considerable areas. Besides all this there is the possibility of great mineral wealth. "Surprises may be in store for us in Uganda," says the Special Commissioner, "which may equal or surpass the diamonds and gold of South Africa." From all these resources it is confidently expected by those who know the country well that the Uganda Protectorate will before long become self-supporting and even in a position to pay back to England all the moneys advanced in the early subsidies and spent on the construction of the Uganda Railway. But what is chiefly wanted is an energetic white population to develop the hidden wealth, and the experiment which seems almost certain to be tried will be watched with the closest interest by all Imperialists.—Selected by J. Cameron.

Indifference.

It is an admitted fact, that for some time a spirit of indifference has been coming upon the people in regard to religious matters. So far as known, it is general in all Christian countries, and continually increasing. In the cities, but few attend meetings but church members, and most of these are partaking of the indifferent spirit, and prefer parties of pleasure instead of the prayer meeting.

Dr. F. S. Hamlin, Washington, D. C., refers to the fact, that "it seems more difficult than ever before to stir the religious consciousness of great masses of men and women."

This corresponds with Bible teaching concerning the state of things at the coming of Christ. On the part of the unconverted portion of the world, we may expect to see that spirit of indifference will continue to increase till the last one is converted; while, at the same time, the real Christian, who loves the coming of Christ, will be more and more interested in the evidence of his coming.—Miles Grant.

If we reach the final haven we must sail sometimes with the wind, sometimes against it—but we must sail, not drift or be at anchor.—Holmes.

Please do not forget our financial needs.

Be Cautious.

Pause before you repeat an injurious story about a woman. Say to yourself, "this may not be true, or it may be exaggerated," unless you have proof of the veracity of your informant. People sometimes tell falsehoods, they often make mistakes, and they sometimes "hear wrong." There is auricular illusion as well as optical illusion. Take all these things into consideration before you even believe. As for repeating the story, ask yourself if it is necessary. It sometimes is necessary. Then do it with fear of God, and the remembrance of the golden rule before you. Let us give the helping hand, and not the downward push; so may the angels reach toward us when we stand in need.

As We Love We Give.

A man who loves his home gladly gives to the extent of his ability and needs, and without being appealed to for such liberality. The man who loves God supremely will count it a privilege to give liberally to his cause. The plain, if painful truth seems to be that most of us love him very little, else why are there empty missionary treasuries, and why unnumbered millions of heathen who have never heard about our Savior? Do we not give thousands to self-gratification and beggarly tons to world-wide evangelization? Are we not devoting days and years to acquiring wealth for ourselves and grudgingly giving a few hours each week to the service of him who redeemed us?—Sunday School Times.

John R. Mott visited a college in Ceylon where he found a band of students so poor that sixteen occupied one room. Near the building was a garden, in which they spent their spare time in cultivating bananas. When Mr. Mott inquired, "What do you do with the money?" they took him to shore and pointed to an island off in the sea. "Two years ago," they said, "we sent one of our graduates there. He started a school, and it has developed into a church. We are going to send him to another island this year." They also said that they had instructed their cook that every tenth handful of rice should be laid aside that [illegible] might sell it in order to have [illegible] more widely.

[illegible]een told of an English officer from Peking who was asked by a gentleman if he had witnessed any effects of Christianity upon the high officials of the Chinese empire. In reply the official said that he had once asked a high mandarin if he had ever read the Bible. The mandarin returned to his inner room and bringing back a book of extracts from the New Testament, said that he had copied from it the things which he most admired. Then laying the book upon the table, he put his hand upon it and said, "If only the people who profess this religion were to live in accordance with its precepts, this religion would spread over all the world."

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in sithes of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with Him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

My Confidence.

My God, whose gracious pity I may claim,
Calling thee "Father," sweet endearing name!
The sufferings of this weak and weary frame,
All, all are known to thee.

From human eyes 'tis better to conceal
Much that I suffer, much I hourly feel:
But, Oh! this thought doth tranquilize and heal,
All, all is known to thee.

Nay, all by thee is ordered, chosen, planned;
Each drop that fills my daily cup thy hand
Prescribes: for ills none else can understand,
All, all is known to thee.

And welcome, precious, can be Spirit make
My little drop of suffering for his sake:
Father! the cup I drink, the way I take,
All, all is known to thee.

ISA. LI. 3.

"For the Lord shall comfort Zion, he will comfort all her waste places, he will make her wilderness like Eden, and her desert like the garden of the Lord, and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving and the voice of melody. The Lord shall comfort Zion. O Zion, that bringest good tidings, lift up thy voice with strength, lift it up, be not afraid, say unto the cities of Judah, Behold your God. I will place salvation in Zion for Israel my glory, and the Redeemer shall come to Zion and unto them that turn from transgression. For Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest until the righteousness thereof shall go forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth. The Word of God cannot fail. Today Zion and Jerusalem are in Gentile hands, convents, mosques, and Gentile churches occupy Zion's hill and Jerusalem's high places. But God saith, Awake, awake, put on thy strength, O Zion, put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, the holy city, for from henceforth there shall no more come unto thee the uncircumcised and the unclean. The Lord loveth the gates of Zion more than all the dwellings of Jacob. "Glorious things of thee are spoken, Zion city of our God." The Lord shall comfort Zion, he will make her wilderness like Eden and her desert like the garden of the Lord. Gen. ii. 9, "And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden, and out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight and good for food, the tree of life also in the midst of it." But on account of disobedience we know how the earth has become a place of deserts and rocks with the curse of weeds and briars with drouth and storms. But Isaiah is permitted in visions to see the earth restored as the garden of the Lord. "I will open rivers in high places and fountains in the midst of valleys. I will make the wilderness a pool of water. I will plant in the wilderness the cedar, the myrtle and the oil tree, and they shall build the old wastes. They shall raise up the former desolations, they shall repair the waste cities. The desolations of many generations, and Sharon shall be a fold of flocks, and Achor a place for the herds to lie down in. Break forth with joy, sing together ye waste places of Jerusalem. Ezekiel also speaks of the redemption of the earth from the curse, and of the restoration being like the garden of Lord, with the tree of life growing on the bank of the beautiful river. The trees with their fruit for meat and their leaf for medicine for the healing of the nations.

The beloved John sees also the same vision of restoration of the earth and its glory. His descriptions of the river of life, and the trees of life which yield their fruit every month with leaves for the healing of the nations. How can we study and learn of these glories to be brought back, to be restored, and not be thrilled with their greatness? Break forth into joy and sing aloud. Yes, the waste places will be redeemed, and Zion the city of our King. Truly glorious things are spoken of thee. Therefore the redeemed of the Lord shall return and come with singing unto Zion and everlasting joy shall be upon their heads. They shall obtain gladness and joy, and sorrow and mourning shall flee away. I thank God for my hope that through our Lord Jesus Christ these promises will soon be fulfilled.

ELLA T. KNOWLES.

ISAIAH LI.

In the eleventh verse of this chapter we find those beautiful words, "Therefore the redeemed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with singing, and everlasting joy shall be upon their head." Now we see that they had dwelt in Zion before this, for they shall return. Yes, but it shall not be as at the former times, for they shall obtain gladness and joy, and sorrow and mourning shall flee away. And all that are so happy to dwell in Zion have gained the greatest blessing that can be bestowed on mortal man.

The Word says, I, even I, am he that comforteth you, and we are commanded not to be afraid of mortal man, that shall die and the son of man that shall be made as the grass and forgettest the Lord thy maker, that has stretched forth the heavens, and laid the foundations of the earth. This is the one we should love and try to please, for he is our God, and we will love and try to obey him. Where is the fury of the oppressor when God takes the great power to himself and commences his glorious reign? He says, "But I am the Lord thy God that divideth the sea, whose waves roared." The Lord of hosts is his name. Job says, "Thou hast caused men to ride over our heads, we went through fire and through water, but thou brought us out into a wealthy place. Yes, it is the will of the Lord to try all of his children, but he will not let the least one of them perish. The trials that seemeth to us grievous and hard to be borne will work for us an eternal weight of glory, if our minds are fixed on him who bought us with his precious blood. Let each one of us that are assembled here today to serve the Lord in Spirit and in truth, think soberly on these things, and on him whom we serve, for he knows our every thought. He also says in verse 16, "I have put my words in thy mouth, and I have covered thee in the shadow of my hand." Oh, what a sure protection if we are covered by the hand of him who hath all power. We often feel it a great protection when we are with the children of God, but oh, to be protected by the hand of God who can wrest us from such overwhelming power. He also says unto Zion, "Thou art my people," for his chosen will be gathered. The dear ones that were permitted to assemble in Conference with us we will meet there, for the Word of the Lord gives us encouragement if we strive to overcome the allurements of the world and live soberly and honestly before the Lord. The Life-giver in speaking of Jerusalem says, "Awake, stand up, O Jerusalem, which have drunken of the hand of the Lord the cup of his fury, thou hast drunken the dregs of the cup of trembling, and wrung them out." But there will be rest, for so the Lord has decreed, and so shall it come to pass.

Dear Restitution:

It is indeed a most pleasant thing for me to record, that the hearts of the little flock in Salem, O., were this day, Sept. 24, 1903, made glad, and we rejoice with Mrs. S. M. Moore of Salem, who made the good confession, before witnesses, of faith in the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ. Desiring baptism, we went to the brook, where she gladly from the heart obeyed that form of doctrine that was delivered. Her sins were washed away. She said a great load had been removed from her mind, being made free from sin, she is now the servant of righteousness. May she and all of like precious faith endure to the end, and be found of Jesus in peace.

The Spirit shall Return unto God Who Gave It.

Eccl. xii. 7.

When we tell people that man is mortal (Job iv. 17,) that he dies wholly on account of sin, and that in death there is no remembrance of sin (Psa. vi. 5,) they refer triumphantly to the statement at the head of this article, to prove, as they say, that "there is a part of man which never dies." In citing this passage in favor of the immortality of the soul, they have to assume the very thing they wish to prove. Let us take a calm view of this Scripture and its connections, and it will be found in perfect harmony with the rest of the Bible teaching on the condition of man in life and in death.

In this statement that at a certain time "the spirit shall return unto God who gave it," the existence of God is taken for granted, though in other portions of Scripture it is set forth dogmatically. "There is a God in heaven, that revealeth secrets," said the prophet Daniel in presence of the haughty monarch of Babylon. Dan. ii. 28.

1. There is a God.
2. This God is in heaven.

The God who is "gave" something to something. That which was given passed from the "God who gave it" to that to which it was given. That which he "gave" is termed "the spirit." To whom was it given? To man. Was that which was given, at giving endowed with consciousness before and at the time so given? Did it have personality? Men who dogmatize on the immortality of the soul should engage their thoughts along this line. Their teaching is one-sided and inconsistent. They have a great deal to say about the conscious existence of the immortal soul after the dissolution of the body, but we hear them say nothing about how or when this soul became conscious—in short, when it began to be a soul. If "the spirit" in the Scripture under discussion is the same as the theological immortal soul, was or is it conscious before being given? We would not evade the statement that "the body without the spirit (margin—breath) is dead." James ii. 26. The very "giving" of "the spirit" (Eccl. xii. 7) implies a necessity. But there are a few questions of which we should not lose sight. If that "spirit" was not endowed with consciousness before being given to man, upon what reasonable grounds can it be argued that there will be consciousness when it "shall return unto God who gave it?" It is a fact that we have no recollection of what transpired before the spirit was given. It is an unwarranted assumption that it will be conscious when it returns unto God who gave it. When the question of previous consciousness and knowledge is properly considered, the argument for consciousness after death falls flat.

What is "the spirit" when it returns "unto God who gave it?" Is it a man? a woman? an angel? a saint? a sinner? Was it pure and sinless when it was given? Is it so when it returns unto God who gave it? Or does the fact that "the spirit" animates "the body," James ii. 26, modify its condition? If this is affirmed, what modifies that spirit? Does the body, or do external conditions? If either, would not the inevitable tendency be downward? In this case no spirit returns unto God pure and holy. The fact is, that "the body without the spirit is dead;" and how a body which of itself is lifeless, could influence a spirit for evil or good, is not so easy to imagine, much less to say. Let it be stedfastly kept in mind that "the spirit shall return (not go) unto God who gave it." It is no more "the spirit" when it "returns unto God" than it was when he "gave it." Whatever entitles it to the distinction of "the spirit" when it "returns," belonged to it when God "gave it."

It is assumed that the statement under consideration means, "The immortal soul goes to heaven." Be it remembered, "The spirit shall return unto God," goes back to where it was before it was given. It was "the spirit" before God "gave it." It was "the spirit" when he "gave it," and will be the same "spirit" when it returns "unto God who gave it." I repeat these things in order to rivet them upon the reader's attention.

It is supposed that when "the spirit shall return to God who gave it," a sentient being with thought, volition, and emotions, takes its flight upward, away from the earth, and passes through space into heaven. But stop and reflect a moment. The earth is supposed to be a globe. If six men die at the same time at six different points of the earth, and they each go "up," the longer they go, the farther they will be apart. Do not dismiss this matter with a sneer. It needs and deserves looking into, along with the rest.

Whose "spirit shall return unto God who gave it?" A further question will answer this one. In the first part of our text it is said, "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was." Question: Whose dust returns to the earth? Man's, when he is dead. Which man? Every man, whether good or bad. There is no difference. Then since the first statement applies to all, good and bad alike, why should not the second? No difference is made between "the spirit" of a good man and "the spirit" of a bad man. All men have this "spirit," and when "the dust shall return to the earth as it was, the spirit shall return unto God who gave it."

Theology has it something like this, "The immortal soul of a good man goes to God who gave it, and the immortal soul of a bad man goes to a hell of eternal torture (who gave it?)". This is not, of course, very consistent, but it is the only conclusion you can reach from the premise of the immortality of the soul. If "the dust" of the most pious "returns to the earth as it was," then with equal reason does "the spirit" of the most wicked person "return unto God who gave it."

There is an adverb in this statement which we must not overlook. "Then shall" etc. Question, When? "Even "the silver cord is loosed, and the golden bowl is broken, and the pitcher is broken at the fountain, and the wheel is broken at the cistern." Verse 6. "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was." All of which is but the culmination of "the evil days" and "the years.....in which thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them." People want to die and go to heaven. They try to make themselves and others believe that their dying day will be a happy one, though they take medicine and do all in their power to ward off death and keep out of heaven as long as possible. They really feel like Hezekiah did when he was about to go to the gates of Sheol—They "chatter like a crane or a swallow." Solomon had "no pleasure" in the days which introduce and end up in the return of the dust to the earth as it was, and the return of the spirit unto God who gave it, and he knew there would be others to share this feeling with him.

What is that spirit which God gave to man? "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." Gen. ii. 7. This is the simple narrative of man's creation, endorsed by the apostle Paul. 1 Cor. xv. 45-47.

1. God formed man.
2. He formed him out of the dust of the ground (of the earth.)
3. He breathed into his nostrils the breath of life.
4. Man became a living soul.

If anything further was done with man or added to him, to make him what he was, the record does not state it. Job said that "the spirit of God" was in his nostrils (margin, "That is, the breath which God gave him.") Job xxvii. 3. This spirit (or breath) "God gave him" when he breathed into his nostrils the breath of life. It is the same breath (or spirit) referred to in Eccl. iii. 18, 20, where it is said, "Yea, they (man and beast) have all one breath; so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast; for all is vanity. All go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again." Where was "the spirit" before God "gave it?" Do you say "in heaven? In that case a spirit will return to heaven where it came from. But where is your authority? Surely, the text does not say so. Read the first chapter of Genesis. "And the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters." This is that which was in Job's nostrils, and is the element which causes man to live. When "the spirit" leaves the man and returns "unto God who gave it," it goes back to the fountain of life, (Psa. xxxvi. 9,) which supplies all creatures with life and consciousness.

With God there is no less life because he gives of his spirit to quicken man, and no more when that same spirit returns to him. That spirit is not a person with consciousness or individuality, but the vital element that acts upon the organism of man causing him to live and move, and when it returns unto God who gave it, goes back to the great reservoir of life. In Ezek. xxxvi. this "breath" came into the dead, and they lived. No immortal souls or immortal or deathless spirits came down from heaven, but "breath" came "from the four winds," and breathed upon the slain, and they lived. At the raising of Lazarus, John xi., that which had been laid into the tomb was by the Lord called "Lazarus." Lazarus "our friend" had not taken his flight to heaven, was not called and did not come from there, but "came forth" from the "place" where he had been "laid" by human hands before.

Thus, then, Eccl. xii. 7, when duly considered in all its bearings, and divested of all preconceived notions, so far from teaching the immortality of the soul, teaches the exact opposite. The man of theology is immortal, does not die, and needs no resurrection, while the man of the Bible is mortal, dies, is buried, and needs a resurrection in order to live again. "Let God be true."

Letter to the Salem Conference.

The brave hearts who thought out the plan and called the Conference will certainly be rewarded by a rich blessing from the Father. Our Church is neither populous nor popular, therefore it requires more courage on the part of the members to work in the Lord's vineyard, than it otherwise would. This timidity ought not to exist, but it is human nature that it should. How manifold are the duties resting on the true followers of the meek and lowly but brave and courageous Jesus. But what a pleasure it is to work for such a Master. Let us keep constantly busy.

Never in the history of the human family were events of such magnitude occurring in such rapid succession as at the present; and as we approach the time of the end the rapidity will be greatly accelerated. Old mother earth laboring under the curse, brought on her by those whose duty it was, and whose pleasure it should have been to have taken care of and dressed her, will, ere long, come forth in all her pristine glory and beauty, with the garden of Eden restored and made once more beautiful. Such a garden! Let us for one moment consider those beautiful rivers. Our Heavenly Father is a great lover of the beautiful, as well as of the good. A short time ago I was asked where God would get the gold with which to pave the streets of the New Jerusalem. When Eden is restored with the river which went out of it to water the garden, and the four heads thereof into which it was divided, there will be no trouble in finding all the gold needed in the land of Havilah. Gold in abundance. Precious stones without number. All that is good, all that is beautiful, all that is useful, in such great abundance that nothing more can be desired.

But let us come back to our good mother earth. How long she has patiently nurtured the thorn, the thistle and the noxious weeds; but that unpleasant work is almost at an end. Ere long instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree. Then truly shall "the mountains and hills break forth in singing." Soon "the seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head, with such terrific effect that his power will be gone for a thousand years, and at the end of that time it will only be revived for a short time, after which he will be cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, never again to come forth. May our good Father hasten the time when Jesus shall come, and when the saints shall be made immortal, and shall reign with him on earth.

Do we, can we realize what this will mean to those who are ready to enter into the bride-chamber. The marriage of God's only begotten Son will be the grandest event that ever happened in all the universe. To be even a guest at such a wedding ought to satisfy the ambition of any one, but what will it be to be a member of the Bride! No human intellect is great enough to comprehend.

My beloved, let us take new courage and go bravely on until we meet the blessed Savior.

Editor Restitution:

Our esteemed Bro. W. H. Wilson of Chicago, has come and gone after delivering eleven lectures to the people of Thessalon, on the hope of the gospel of the kingdom of God, and the signs of the times indicating the near return of the Christ for whom we wait. The lectures were listened to with marked interest by those who came out to hear. Bro. Wilson has the ability to present the truth in a clear and forcible manner, making it plain to the honest mind, and some were led to exclaim that they never witnessed the force of Scripture testimony that was presented before. It was really refreshing and encouraging to the young and also to the weary pilgrim over three score years and thirteen to meet with one of like precious faith, and listen to the glad tidings that comforted and cheered our fathers in the ages past, and caused them to walk worthy, and suffer affliction even unto death, that they might obtain the promised reward, for which we wait. We hope the good seed sown by Bro. Wilson may find a lodgment in some good and honest hearts, where the soil is of that nature that will cause it to germinate and take deep root and bring forth fruit to the glory of God. We cannot in these last days of Gentile dominancy, when deception and greed pervades and rules in almost every department from the social circle up through church and State, to the king on his throne, expect to see more than here one and there one embrace the hope contained in the gospel, as the priests bare rule by their means, and the people love to have it so. Truly history is repeating itself as with Israel in the days of old, in these Gentile times, "in swearing and lying, and killing, and stealing, committing adultery, they break out; and blood toucheth blood." The world in which we live is upside down, and afflicted with delirium, and a lie is preferred to the oath bound covenant of God, and becoming unpopular. The only cure for the craze and demonology that afflicts mankind is the soon coming of that Man who has been appointed to rule the world in righteousness. Then, and only then, will the world be turned right side up, and the people learn to serve the Lord with one consent. May the good time soon dawn and wipe away the refuge of lies, and usher in that gladsome time, when from the rising of the sun to the going down of the same, the Lord's name shall be praised, and the glory of God fill the earth. Amen and amen.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCT. 7, 1903.

AS WE go to press today there are on our list just 361 whose time is out now, and their renewals due. Some of these are owing from 1 to 5 years, and others only for the current year. If all would pay in what they should we would have in hand quite $700.00.

Now Brothers and Sisters, for some weeks past we have tried to explain our need, and urge action on your part. We are not complaining of the noble ones who always keep their subscription up and ahead, and wish to thank all such. We wish to thank also every one who is doing his very best to send as soon as he can. We wish to urge you to more earnest effort. If there are any who are careless and neglectful we wish to ask you kindly to rouse up and send us what is right.

If you could know and realize our situation we feel certain you would respond at once. It is a conviction with us that there is not a brother or Sister now owing us but who can get the amount they owe easier than we can carry the whole load. We are compelled to struggle on with the burden. Are you not also in duty bound to do your part? Please think of this very seriously, as before your God, and then act.

Another thing that makes this year hard for us is that our Helping Fund is now $100.00 below what it has been other years, and as we have kept the poor ones on our list so far we do not like the idea of cutting them off. Surely there are enough members of the Church of God in this land who have been blessed with abundance, who can spare this amount so that we shall not have to drop the name of a single worthy poor brother or Sister.

Brethren, these are the plain figures. Will you give attention to these matters? We hope you will without more delay.

ANY one who can give the address of Geo. M. Townsend, who used to be at Leadville, Colo. but in July, 1902, went to Ibex, Colo. will confer a favor by sending it to us.

Hope!

What is our hope? Hope to be of value must be grounded on substantial evidence and should have a well founded expectation of good. Life without hope is indeed sad. The most menial and humdrum life is not without hope of some sort. Cut off from hope, what wonder men and women seek the suicide's grave? When hope dies out of the human heart and blank despair reigns supreme, what wonder the mind becomes unhinged?

How often even among those who are plentifully supplied with this world's goods, is it that they find the object upon which they had set their hearts and hopes crumble at the touch and their long cherished desires fade, leaving life a blank, hopeless and valueless. For several years there have been many remarkable suicides of a class the least likely according to this world's estimation of good to be effected thereby. What is gold or other possessions to a man who knows not, or will not make a right use of them?

WHAT IS WEALTH

without health. What is fame with a shattered constitution and disease gnawing at the heartstrings, and the hand of death with icy fingers standing at the threshhold waiting to grasp his victim?

Indeed it is true that hope cannot live without an object. That object gained, if a legitimate one, so good; but if the object prove delusive, or a thing of the imagination,—what then? "What if memory proves delusive hope's most fell destroyer?" Thousands have experienced the bitter mockery of a delusive hope, and memory has stung to the quick the heart thus blighted. Delusive hope has tempted the unwary traveller out into the waste and sandy desert, and the mirage thus held up has and a snare. Instead of heeding the divine records wherein God declares the life "a vapor, a shadow that passeth," men listen to the voice of the tempter that declares life a pleasure, and promises happiness and contentment to its votaries. The world says, "let's drink and be merry." God says, "Thou fool," to those who take the world's advice.

Paul writing to the Eph. (chap. ii. 12) reminds them of the time when they "had no hope." What hope is he speaking of? Not the hope of the ungodly, certainly: for this they no doubt had. Was it the hope of the religious communities of our day,—which is the hope of heaven? We say, Certainly not! It is termed by Paul in the 4th chapter of the same epistle, even as there is but one body and one spirit, one Lord, one faith, one baptism; one God and Father of all. There is no more a plurality of hopes than there is a plurality of gods, or other things mentioned,—each is a unit complete in itself, having definite functions and issues in the great work of redemption. True, the links are interwoven and form part of a stupendous whole, but nevertheless each has and does perform its separate functions and are the seven pillars on which rests the true Church of God.

"ONE HOPE,"

What then are the facts concerning the one hope here mentioned? Is it not logical and reasonable to suppose that there cannot be any other court of appeal but the revelation God has given us concerning it?

IS IT REASONABLE

to suppose that men are at liberty to declare other hopes and other issues than that which is revealed here? Are men at liberty to say what the Bible does not reveal here, and preach another hope not founded on the Scriptures, but on tradition? We appeal to those conversant with the membership of orthodox communities, and ask if you put the question squarely, "What is your hope?" Would not the answer be "Heaven at death?"

Time and space forbid us running through a tithe of evidence as to what constitutes the "One Hope," on what it rests, and what its ultimate issue. Paul writing to Titus (ii. 13) speaks of "Looking for that and the glorious appearing of the glory of our great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." Paul again before Agrippa (Acts xxvi. 6) speaks of this hope, and calls it the "hope of the promise made to the fathers," for which "hope's sake," he is accused of the Jews.

There need not be much difficulty in searching out what this hope of the promise God made to the father was, put abreast of the hope the pulpits put before the people. To a thoughtful investigator a striking contrast will soon appear, and he will admit that the one cannot include the other. In fact, that which strikes him forcibly will be not the similarity. By no method or argument can the one include the other, the logical sequence being, if the one is Scriptural, the other is not. A further investigation will reveal the One Hope to be Scriptural,—interwoven, and forming a grand union with the units mentioned. The other resting on tradition, having no proportion or bearing with the other pillars of truth.

Do not forget that the knowledge of this One Hope not only brings with it precious privileges but serious responsibility. It is not enough to know, it remains for the will of God to be done. The responsibility is great, and should bow us in the dust in humble submission and obedience. With reverent step and lowly heart should we walk in the path marked out for our feet in his Word. What if we know the right and do it not? Our knowledge will increase our guilt. May we by divine assistance escape being castaways."

The Jews as Farmers.

From the Jewish Chronicle we cull the following to answer the question, as to when and how and why Jews have abandoned agriculture:—

"No fact is more remarkable in the sociological history of Israel than that it took ages to force the Jews into confinures. Throughout their early dispersion they settled into farming wherever they found it possible; and it was not until the harsh mediæval laws snatched the Jews bodily from the soil and chained them to walled ghettos that they adopted the barter and finance in which they have since earned so much distinction. But even throughout this urban life the memory of the golden pastoral days, when the vineyards resounded with song, and Israel's youth danced in the fields of red anemones and beneath bowers of olive and fig trees, never died. Succoth became a feast of intensified gladness, not only for its happy memories, but also for its cherished hopes. Succoth, in fact, not only reminds us that we were once successful tillers of the soil, but it embodies the Jewish aspiration to return to that occupation. It is impossible to doubt that that aspiration has been sincere, and we are confident that not much difficulty will be experienced in giving practical effect to it. Already many Jewish agricultural colonies have been successful."

The Night Watch.

If we are not of the world, we are not OF the night, though we are in the night. We are children of the day,—we belong to the day, and the day belongs to us as our true heritage, though it has not yet dawned, hope rests there. And, though deferred it will not always tarry, nor when it comes will it shame our trust. "When the desire cometh it shall be a tree of life." The night is not only one of weeping, but one of watching. No sorrow should make us less watchful. Nay, so far from tribulation throwing us off our guard, it should lead to added vigilance lest we fall asleep, due to the rigors and bitterness of the night, and so get weary before the day dawns. If the night air was mild, and the night sky clear we might grow contented with it and cease to watch for daybreak. This is our night watch. To this the Master has appointed us during his absence. "Watch ye, therefore," says he, "for ye know not when the Master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cockcrowing, or in the morning; lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you I say unto all, WATCH." Mark xiii. 35-37. It is the prospect of morning and the Master's return, that keeps us watching, especially in these last days when watch after watch has come and gone, and has not yet arrived. "His going forth is prepared as the morning." Hosea vi. 3, and that morning cannot now be very distant.

Something New—Bible Studies.

Realizing the need of a more thorough distribution of good, wholesome literature, the Committee on Literature, appointed by the Indiana Conference, purpose to publish a series of four page leaflets, to be known as "Bible Studies." They will contain expositions of Scripture by brethren W. H. Wilson, J. L. Wince, J. F. Wagoner, A. B. Zilmer, and other writers, and will be numbered consecutively. Number one appears in Oct. 7, issue of THE RESTITUTION under the heading, "The spirit shall return unto God who gave it." Others will follow later in the same way. We will offer them for sale as follows: 10 copies for 10 cents, 50 copies for 25 cents, 100 copies for 40 cents. Send money order or stamps to A. B. Zilmer, Plymouth, Ind.

Evenings at Home.

It is well for the women of the household to remember that the pleasant evenings at home are strong antidotes to the practice of looking for enjoyment abroad, and seeking for pleasure in by and forbidden places; for relaxation and recreation will be indulged in somehow, and happy are the children who find in the home circle the diversion they need. A lively game, an interesting book read aloud, or, in musical families, a new song to be practiced, will furnish pastime that will make an evening pass pleasantly.

A little forethought during the day, a little pulling of wires that need not appear, will make the whole thing easy; and different ways and means may be provided for making the evening hours pass pleasantly, and a time to be looked forward to with pleasant anticipations.

We visited once a large family where it was the duty of each sister, in turn, to provide the evening's occupation, and there was a pleasant rivalry between them as to whose evening should be the most enjoyable. The brothers entered into the spirit of the simple home entertainments, and were as loath to be obliged to spend an evening away from home as their sisters and parents were sorry to have them absent. Every one spoke of this family as an uncommonly united one, for each and every member showed such a strong attachment for the home to which each one contributed so much pleasure.—Presbyterian.

The Weedy Young Men of Today.

A report of an interview with Mr. F. A. Atkins, editor of "The Young Man," appears in the September number of the "Leisure Hour." The interviewer asked: "Do you see a change in the young man of 15 years ago and the present day?" "Yes, and not for the better. There is a falling off in the interest in politics, for instance. Fifteen years ago young fellows would argue fiercely about the great political problems; they would get positively angry about them. But since Mr. Gladstone's death this keen interest in politics seems to have died out. Do young men ever get excited over politics to-day? Do they care a snap of the fingers who is elected on the County Council? Then there is the passion for pleasure and the excessive devotion to athletics. I believe in recreation, but I also believe in a healthy ambition, and the youth who is perpetually amusing himself—or rather wasting his slender earnings to pay others to amuse him—will become only a grinning nonentity, instead of developing into a successful and useful citizen. I hardly like to say a single word to discourage sport and play, for athletics make for physical health, personal purity, and genuine manliness of character. But what is to me so alarming is that countless thousands of young men to-day are only interested in witnessing and betting on sports; they never take any active part in them. A gaping mob of loungers looking at a football match indicates no real love of athletics; a handfull of players are getting .... the exercise, while twenty thousand spectators hang around making bets, and then go off for an evening's amusement in a gin palace or music hall. But so many young men are careless, thoughtless, weak, with no ambition or grit. If they make enough money to pay for their lodgings, clothes, tobacco, and amusements they are content, and have no desire to win any of the prizes which involve struggle, and stress, and sacrifice."

The Bible Resurgent.

The following editorial appears in the Chicago Tribune of Oct. 2, and shows the full depth to which modern schools of learning have fallen regarding the study of God's Word. The Editor need not look for any improvement, but rather an increase of neglect and carelessness along this line, until it time shall continue for a few years more the average student will be a stranger to the Bible.

If the University of Chicago should require its matriculates to pass an examination on biblical literature and history it would help the modern world to reconquer the lost province of knowledge.

The Bible has been unfortunate. It is like those literary historians, Carlyle and the rest, who are so literary that the university literary departments avoid them and so historical that the university literary departments give them scant attention. The Bible falls under a similar cross fire. It is so religious that secular schools are afraid of it, and yet its religious teachings can be made to wear so many different aspects that it cannot be taught even by a religious school without giving rise to a charge of prosslytism.

The consequence is that a literary and historical monument of great importance has fallen into neglect. Job and Isaiah do not get the study which they deserve. Compare the way they are brought to the attention of the young with the way in which the same service is accomplished for "Midsummer Night's Dream" and "In Memoriam." "Midsummer Night's Dream" and "In Memoriam" are taught by professional teachers who are picked for their proficiency, and who hold their positions in the direct face of competition by continued evidences of progress. Job and Isaiah are taught for about half an hour Sunday morning by young women who have had little or no training and who use the scrappy, inadequate "selections" from Job and Isaiah found in "leaflet courses." How many Americans of the younger generation can say that they ever had to read Job (1) as a whole book and (2) under competent direction? Bible study for the young is now confined almost entirely to Sunday schools, and there it is mainly in the hands of amateurs, whose methods would not be tolerated for a moment in the study of any secular subject.

The American boys and girls who have learned the Bible in the ordinary Sunday schools grow up with a gap not only in their literary education but in their appreciation of history. It is a sad thing to have missed Job and Isaiah. It is an equally sad thing to have missed feeling the tremendous role that the Bible has played in human history. A distinguished French critic, a skeptic once said that no man could be regarded as a man of culture unless he knew enough about Catholicism to understand the way in which the shoots and fibers of Catholicism permeate the modern world. The same kind of remark can be made about the Bible. A knowledge of the Bible and of the history of the Bible is as essential to a general comprehension of present society as to the development of literary taste.

If the universities can revive the study of the Bible they will establish a new claim to our respect.

True Faith.

Strikingly in the instance of Abraham are the nature and value of faith made evident; that in its foundation and essence it is through all eternity the same, whether directed toward the promise of salvation of a yet hidden or of an already revealed and accomplished gospel. True faith is an immovable trust in the promises of salvation. Faith dwells especially in the heart; it does not rest on our insight, but on the foundation of God's Word and testimony; and even "hoping against hope," it holds fast this testimony, because it looks away from seen and temporal things up to the Unseen, concerning whom it is persuaded that he is faithful and almighty. Let it be often with us as though we heard the voice: "Look up now to heaven." The stars we can count even less than Abraham; but beyond them lives the Author and Finisher of the faith which even Abraham practiced imperfectly. His light disappears not from your gaze; his fidelity guards you here; his love awaits you yonder.— J. J. Van Oosterzee.

Recommending His Friendship.

Solomon says: "He that would have friends must show himself friendly." Emerson pithily condensed the well-known proverb thus: "If you would have a friend, be one." So may we say, If you would win friends for Jesus, you yourself must first be his loyal friend. How enthusiastic party zealots are in winning friends for their favorite candidate during a campaign! They cannot say enough in their favor. There is nothing too hard to do for them. Oh, that all were so loyal and enthusiastic in their friendship for Jesus! Enthusiasm of that kind always tells. And truly he is worthy of all the enthusiasm we can display. He loved us when there was nothing loving or lovable in us. Should it not be our greatest pleasure to recommend his friendship to others?—Christian Union Herald.

From appearances the troubles in Macedonia will soon settle down once more. Bulgaria was notified that in case she entered the field against Turkey, that even were she to come out victor, she would be allowed to reap no advantage, but would jeopardize her own existence thereby. This was virtually giving Turkey a "free hand" and no expectation of relief for the oppressed. The only course open was submission or death to all.

Tomorrow.

The only preparation for the morrow is the right use of today. The stone in the hands of the builder must be put to its place and fitted to receive another. The morrow comes for naught, if to day is not heeded. Neglect not the call that comes to thee this day; for such neglect is nothing else than boasting thyself of tomorrow.—G. Bowen.

Secrets of the Prophetic "Times" as relating to the things which are coming on the Earth, is the title of a 64 page pamphlet, written by Thomas Clarke, an Englishman, and published by The Faith Association, at Malvern Link, England. To any who are interested in Prophetic "Times" this work is of great value. We have received an invoice of these little books, and can supply them at 20c. each.

The Chicago & North-Western Line is the only double track railway between Chicago and the Missouri River.

WE recently sent letters to a number of our patrons explaining that we needed what was due us in order that we might meet our obligations. A number have responded, and we thank them heartily for so doing. There are still a large per cent of those whom we addressed, who have not yet given heed to our call. We dislike to tell of this, but are compelled to do so. It is useless to multiply words, brethren and sisters. We simply need the money that has been earned. Need it in order that obligations that really distress us may be met. We only want to impress on your minds that the demands on us are imperative—just MUST be met. We have no other means of satisfying them, and depend on you to supply us the needed money. Please get it in some way, and send at once. To get the little that you each owe will not distress you as carrying the whole burden does us. So attend to this today—not next week, or next month, but understand that we need THIS VERY DAY every cent that is due us. Then we can pay our obligations, and not be counted dishonest.

How Would It Sound In the Kingdom?

How would it sound in the kingdom—that speech of yours? It has an angry ring, and "anger is outrageous." Its words are words of the wicked throng; they were born in the slums, the alleys, the saloon. No true lady or gentleman would use them. What then of the Christian, whom the poet Young designates as "the highest style of man?" and who ought always to be found "walking in the footsteps of Jesus," "living as seeing him who is invisible," guided by the eye of God.

No such words ought to pass your lips. They speak of an inward state that is anything but satisfactory. You profess to have an in-dwelling Christ abiding in your heart; to be imbued with his Spirit, to be filled with his love—have you? Will the world believe you when they hear words that sting and wound falling from your lips?

"You fly up just as quick as I do" is their comment when they hear such words, and they blame the precious gospel of Christ because of its lack of power to change the heart, when you alone are to blame. How can we do such things? We, who have been called and chosen to do the work of the dear and adorable Redeemer? How can we disgrace that holy name?

"I could never live with her, I could not stand it," was the out-spoken opinion of a worldly man in reference to a professed Christian woman who stood high in the church to which she belonged. And why? Only because of her continued fretful stinging words to the members of her family. Yet, she longed to save that very man. Has she reformed? We hope so. The man is dead whom she might have saved, and—he died out of Christ.

Who can tell how different it might have been had she lived a consistent Christian life. How would it sound in the kingdom? How would it sound in the presence of Jesus? Let these questions probe our hearts, whenever tempted to use speech that is uncouth or unkind.

How we grieve after angry or fretful words have been uttered! How much we would give to recall them. Fault-finding words—how they rasp and hurt. Who can love us as they would were we changed as we ought to be changed by looking at the face of Christ!

"If ye love me keep my commandments." Any commandment in reference to our speech? Yes, bridle your tongues. "Let your speech be always seasoned with salt." Be courteous. "Be kindly affectioned one toward another." Kindness and courtesy does not allow the use of angry speech.

"If ye love me"—how much is involved in those words! True love will certainly make different lives—lives that would be salt to a perishing world.

Jesus is coming, let us be ready, and by "a godly walk and conversation" help others to prepare for his coming.

Afterward.

Afterward, peaceable fruit,
Afterward, bitter pain;
The words and deeds of our yesterdays,
Will come to our lives again.

The friendship we gave and sought,
The duty we left undone,
The selfish pride that held us aloof
From the soul we might have won;

The bitter or thoughtless word,
The kindness we deem but small,
The wasted hours, the secret sins,
Ah me! we must meet them all.

The bitter may then be sweet,
And the sweet may hold a sting;
So little we know of peace or pain
That our afterwards may bring.

The joy of that future day
May flow from our pain and loss;
While the gleaming gold we cherish now,
Out there may seem only dross.

God help us to be more true,
To think of each deed and word,
As things whose spirits we'll meet again,
Somewhere, in our Afterward.

Read at Roll Conference.

Dear brethren and ministers of the household of faith:

"What shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" Mark viii. 37.

Why are you met here today? Merely to enjoy yourselves and to bless and encourage one another? More than this, you have a higher purpose in view, you know that there are lost ones.

Out on the mountains wild and bare,
Away from the tender Shepherd's care.

And you want to bring these into the fold. You feel that the work of saving men for God's heavenly kingdom has been laid upon you, and you come here to sit at the feet of Jesus for a time that you may know the better how. Each one of you would fain lay a jewel at the Master's feet ere the year speeds away. This is my earnest desire, my daily prayer. I have found that "the gospel is God's power unto salvation to every one that believeth,"—salvation, not only from sin's bondage, burdens and misery, but from sin's penalty and loss; and I want others to find it, I want them to find it now, to feel that there is something to lose of inestimable value, something to be saved from, something grand and glorious to gain.

My days are near to the closing hour; my strength is waning; pulse-beats feeble, steps waxing slow. I face the relentless future, and question, Has it life or death in store for me? —eternal life or eternal death? How blissful if I shall gain the one, how terrible the thought that the other must be my doom! These things are fearfully real; there is no escaping them, and knowing that they are real what sacrifices we ought to make, how untiring we ought to be in the service of God, how faithful in sounding out the Word of the Lord, how earnest in pressing home upon lost sinners the matter of personal salvation!

God blesses and prepares us in such meetings as these for the very work of saving others. Let us keep this thought before us, and while doing it let us look at these solemn words of the Master—"What shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" No more solemn words are in the Bible than these. Turn them over and over again; consider them from every standpoint. Read them as the parallel passages in Matthew and Luke, prove that they ought to be read, "What shall a man give in exchange for his life?" For that vital or animating principle that constitutes him a living being, and which found or repossessed beyond the grave will make him live forever? Oh, what shall he give in exchange? He may "gain the whole world," but in the gaining will but "destroy or forfeit himself." Denying Jesus by giving his whole heart to the world, he has nothing to give in exchange for his life. There is no lamb to proffer: no ransom for him. Then as Jamieson, Faussett and Brown express it, "how awful is the stake!" He may gain the world's riches, honors and pleasures, but it will profit him nothing—profit him nothing!

I have in mi d's eye now a gifted young man who went to the races, bet on fast horses, lived for pleasure, bound fast to her chariot wheels by pitiful habit—wasted his own money and the money of others and—what for? What good did it do him? What did he find in it all? Ruined health and a hopeless death! How much he would have given when life was ebbing away to have had that life made sure to him for eternity!

"What shall a man give in exchange for his life?" Without Jesus there is nothing to give; he is the only sin-offering, the only Redeemer. No other name is given under heaven whereby man can be saved. We are not to fear them which kill the body but cannot kill the soul, but are to fear him which can destroy both soul and body in hell. Man cannot touch the future life. He may martyr God's saints by the million, but he cannot chain them to the grave, he has no power to say, "You shall not rise again." But God can and will destroy, and how shall we escape if we neglect the great salvation? It is because "we must flee for refuge to lay hold of the hope set before us," that we have been looking at these texts. We want to impress them upon our own hearts that we may be able to impress them strongly upon the hearts of others. He who flees for refuge, flees from danger. Cities of refuge protected men from death. Inside those cities the man-slayer could not touch them, so we say to sinners with all the strength and earnestness of our being, find refuge in Jesus! Out of him there is no hope! Destruction is certain. O to impress upon men the value, the saving power of truth! Denying the words of Jesus is denying him, confessing the truth of his words, is confessing him. Make this the keynote of your meeting. Make no compromises with error. God has no pleasure in the soul that draws back. "The just shall live by faith." "For yet a little while and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry." Be ready.

Wisdom of Sirach.

CHAPTER 18.

1. The one who liveth forever generated all things in common (that is in a way common to them all, or according to generic laws common to them all).

2. The Lord alone will have been justified.

4. No one hath he authorized to declare his doings; and who will trace out his great doings?

5. The controlling-power of his majesty who will number? And who will add to discourse his mercies?

6. It is not possible to diminish nor to add to, and it is not possible to trace out his wondrous acts.

7. Whenever man shall finish, then he beginneth, and whenever he pauseth one will be without resources.

8. What is man and what is his use? What is his good and what is his bad?

9. A man's number of days is many years, a hundred say.

10. Like a drop of water from a sea and a grain (this the word "Seephos" the other name of "Peter") of sand, even so are a few years in a day of an animate-age (one way of expressing "eternal life" in the Scriptures).

11. Therefore the Lord hath been long-suffering for them, and hath poured out his mercy upon them.

12. He saw and knew well their catastrophe, that it was bad; therefore he multiplied his expintory favor.

13. Man's mercy is toward his neighbor, but the Lord's is toward all flesh, reproving and chastening and teaching, and returning as a shepherd doth his flock.

14. To those who accept chastening he showeth mercy and to those who haste unto his judicial-renderings (or verdicts).

15. Child, in good things do not give cause for blame, and in every way of giving do not give cause for sorrow for words.

16. Will not dew give rest from scorching heat? Even so a word is more efficient than giving.

17. Lo, is not a word more than a gift? And both are the part of a man who hath experienced grace.

18. A man without savor reproacheth in an ungracious way; and the giving of a baskanos (a person with an evil-eye) melteth away eyes.

19. Learn before talking, and before loss of strength get healed (or receive courtier-service; this is the word which expresses all Christ's healing in the gospels.)

20. Before judging examine thyself and in an hour of visitation thou wilt find atonement.

21. Before thou hast become enfeebled humble thyself, and in a period of sins show an inclination to return.

22. Do not delay paying a vow in due season, and do not wait until death to be justified.

23. Before making a vow get thyself ready, and do not become like a man who is trying the Lord.

24. Remember anger in a day of an end, and a period of requittal in the turning away of a face.

25. Remember a time of famine in a time of plenty, poverty and want in days of wealth.

24. From morning to evening a definite period is changing and all things are swift in the Lord's view of things.

27. A man will show himself reverent in every period, and in days of sins he will refrain from discordant error.

28. Every man of understanding knoweth wisdom and to the one who findeth it, it will give confession.

29. Men of understanding in words have shown themselves skillful also, and those who are accurate have given showers of parable teaching.

CONTINENCE OF SOUL.

30. Do not go thy way after thy inordinate-desires, and withhold thyself from thy lusts.

31. If thou supplest thy soul with the satisfaction of thine inordinate-desire, it will make thee the laughing stock of thine enemies.

32. Do not become a beggar from a money-lender for the purpose of giving feasts and thou hast nothing in thy purse.

COMMENT.

We have here a still further emphatic statement on the subject of "soul-life" namely that it is something common in its generic laws to the whole animate-creation including man. The statements in the verses 2 to 13 both inclusive are fully substantiated, confirmed and even amplified in the Scriptures of the New Covenant record. Read for instance Paul's argument on "justification" in Romans or what Christ himself says to his disciples about some of the deeper counsels of God which he had not revealed even to the angels or the Son.

And consider what is said in the seventh verse about God's ability beginning where man's ability ends. There is a very important principle in Christian ethics summed up in this oracular statement. In short God expects us to do what we can with our finite powers before he grants us the divine enablement. The Christian life is nothing, if not a strenuous one in God's estimate of it.

Temperance-folks and prohibitionists who teach, "Touch not, taste not, handle not" will do well to read what is said here under the heading "Continence of soul." For this is the temperance doctrine taught all through the divine record Old and New—namely the law of the inner-man, not outward restraints. Ponder over the 26th verse. There is a great deal in it.

Letters Read at Salem Conference.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Conference Assembled:

Jesus is coming! "Let us therefore gird up the loins of our minds, be sober, and hope to the end: for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the Revelation of Jesus Christ." If we are ready surely we have nothing to fear, and nothing can separate us from the love of God. In this confidence the children of Christ can exclaim, "Lo, this is our God we have waited for him and he will save us." They will have no fears nor doubts, and this glory will be secure, for there is a crown laid up for all those that love his appearing. When Christ who is our life shall appear then shall we appear with him in glory. We shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is.

Hope your meeting together in Conference will be greatly blessed and be the means of having the truth spread in Ohio, for which we have long desired. Your Sister, desiring a part in the coming kingdom.

Mrs. M. J. Armitage.

To the Conference at Salem assembled Greeting:

As I cannot be with you in the flesh I shall try to be with you in the spirit or mind, joying and beholding your order, and the steadfastness of your faith in Christ. As there is but one Lord and one faith, it is essentially necessary that all should possess that faith, who expect an inheritance in the kingdom of God; for we are to be heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ; for the promise that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham nor his seed through the law, but through the righteousness of faith. And as there is but one faith, this must be the one. Surely it is a high calling of God in Christ Jesus, that those are called to who have set to their seal that God is true; for many are called but few are chosen. And truly this calling does not call any one away from the world to their inheritance, but we trust that those who attend the conference, are among the called, chosen and faithful. As the Captain of our salvation has said, "Be thou faithful until death and I will give thee a crown of life. And behold I come quickly; hold that fast which thou hast that no man take thy crown." We are not crowned unless we strive lawfully. Here again we see the necessity of a correct faith, for without faith it is impossible to please God, and faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. One of the things hoped for is eternal life, which God that cannot lie promised before the world began, and this is still a matter of hope with Abraham, for he died in the faith not having received the promise. And let the peace of God rule in your hearts to the which ye are called in one body, and that is, the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth, which is built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone, in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord, in whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the spirit. May the God of peace rule, and his wisdom direct your conference business to the good of the truth as it is in Christ. Finally be perfect, be of one mind, and let that be the mind of Christ, and the God of peace shall be with you.

John Armitage.

Brothers and sisters:

As we will not be permitted to meet with you personally we feel it our duty to send you a few lines to be read, greeting you all with Christian love, and hoping the meetings will be a success, and that much good may come from the effort. It is our earnest desire that we should have an evangelist in this state as we have a large field here without any minister. We should not be discouraged for we can all do some good in scattering the good seed. There is always work for the willing hand. We have our trials and persecutions; but, dear brothers and sisters, the time is short when our Master will come. So let us each and every one of us be ready when the Bridegroom comes that he may say "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world." Pray for us, that we may be found worthy. Knowing that it takes means to spread these truths, we should all respond cheerfully and freely. Please find $5.00 enclosed, to be used as the brethren see best.

Yours in the One Faith.

Bro. Mr. & Mrs. N. S. Westfall.

Dear brethren and sisters:

I am not permitted to meet with you this time, but am thankful that I can send you a few lines, and while to me it seems so little that I can say, yet I feel it my duty to do what I can, let it be ever so little. First, I send Christian love to you all and hope the Conference will be a success, and that much good may be done and that many will be permitted to hear the good news concerning the kingdom of God, and that it may sink deep into their hearts and bring forth fruit in abundance. I hope that others who have not the privilege of meeting regularly with the brothers and sisters may be permitted to meet at these meeting. I feel in sympathy with the isolated ones as I am comparatively one of that number. I live about fifteen miles from Bruch Creek Church and am alone here except Brother and Sister Westfall, who live within three miles of here. We have been in this community six years, and have had the privilege of having meeting in our district school house three different winters. First, Bro. F. L. Austin, next Brother J. F. Wagoner, and last Brother W. H. Wilson. It was a feast indeed to us. We are at work, doing what we can to sow the good seed. Brothers and Sisters, the time is short in which we have to work, so let each and every one of us do all we can to spread the gospel of the kingdom and not allow ourselver to become so burdened with the cares of this life as to have no time to work for the Lord.

Mrs. W. H. Edemiller.

Editor Restitution:

Please allow me space to make a report of the progress of truth in South Carolina. The Church at Guthrie Grove, in Anderson Co. began a meeting Aug. 28, and the day following E. M. Anderson baptized Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McCoy, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Anderson, Baxter Heaton and Wm. Ballard. Mr. Heaton has been a minister of the Baptist Church. He and Bro. Ballard intend, by the help of God, to preach the gospel of the kingdom. Bro. and Sister McCoy are fine singers, and clear out Christians. R. J. Anderson is a son of Brother E. M. Anderson.

"The Bible says that whatsoever we ask in the name of Christ, believing, we shall receive, unless we ask amiss. We are taught to pray for the kingdom to come; so let us pray that Jesus may come and remove all sickness and pain, and restore the earth to its Edenic state, like it was when the morning stars sang together, and the sons of God shouted for joy. The only hope that is set before us is the second coming of Jesus Christ to fulfil the promises God made to Abraham. See Eph. iv. 4. What is the "one hope?" That God will fulfil the promises made to the fathers. What are the promises? "In thee and thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." "To thee and to thy seed will I give this land."

Paul says these promises are the gospel. Gal. iii. 8. Christ says he that believes the gospel and is baptized shall be saved. He that believes not shall be condemned. Paul's hope was that God would fulfil the promises God made to the fathers. Acts xxvi. 6, 7. Gentiles are made partakers of the promises by being baptized into Christ and becoming the seed of Abraham. Gal. iii. 26-29.

As this is the only hope of the gospel those who are not acquainted with the promises have no hope. Eph. ii. 12 I want all the people of God to pray that I may recover my health so I can preach the Word.

John Anderson.

Conference Report.

Our Conference held at the proposed Colony at Rollin, Kansas, was quite well represented from different states, but especially from Iowa. The speakers were Oliver, Foore, Myers, Crowe, Eychaner and Freeburg.

The young people occupied an hour of the last three evenings, previous to the preaching service, in special music, readings, essays and recitations which all enjoyed.

A Conference was organized to be known as "The Southern Kansas and Northern Oklahoma Conference." It was decided that the meetings should be held annually at Rollin, and the time be left to the board. The officers appointed were S. C. Oliver, Pres., W. L. Crowe, Sec'y, and Delos Johnson Treasurer.

A subscription was taken up for funds to build a school house, to be used for the present for church service also. $190 were subscribed, which was increased later to $230. Work was commenced on it as soon as Conference closed, by Brothers Fish and Crown, and it is now well under way, though we still need $200 to complete the work.

We had a newly invented stove on exhibition for burning the crude oil, and the inventor claims that it will heat an ordinary room at a cost of 2 cents per day. A subscription was taken up to establish a plant at Rollin, for the manufacture of the stoves. $1200 was subscribed, and a company will be organized to be known as the "Rollin Manufacturing Co." Work will commence at once on the building. The main object of this is to furnish employment to the poor brethren who wish a home with us.

We expect a brother to put in a lumber yard, and another will put in a rug factory next January. There is a good opening for a blacksmith, and a broom factory.

Wishing to seal a letter, Gotthold called for a lighted candle. The maid obeyed his order; but, proceeding too hastily the flame, which had not yet gathered sufficient strength, went out. "Here," said Gotthold, "we have that which may well remind us of the gentleness and moderation to be observed toward weak and erring brethren. Had this candle when first lighted been carried slowly and shaded by the hand from the air, it would not have been extinguished, but would soon have burned with vigor. In like manner many a weak brother might be set right if we only come to his help in the right way."

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Justice for God's Chosen People.

"Justice for the Jew" was the subject chosen by J. L. Gordon for his sermon yesterday morning, his text being, "And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." One of the miracles of the ages, said Mr. Gordon, was the spectacle of a race persecuted and abhorred, and yet remaining a separate and peculiar people throughout the centuries. The Jews had for nearly 2000 years been execrated as members of the race which crucified Christ, yet it should be remembered that only a few had been guilty of the Saviour's death. The common people of Palestine heard him gladly, and would have made him their King. Besides, even in Christ's time the Jews were spread all over the known world, and there were thousands of them who never heard of the tragedy on Calvary. Not only the Old Testament, but the New Testament, had been written by Jews. The Jewish nation had given Christ to the world. The Mosaic code was the basis of the law of the civilized world. In short, all the dearest treasures of Christianity were the gifts of the Jewish race. England and the United States had given the Jews the rights of free citizenship, and for thus honoring his chosen people God had honored and prospered these countries beyond all others.

The Jews had been stigmatized as a grasping race, but for two centuries at least Christians had shown themselves more grasping and unscrupulous in the pursuit of wealth. The record of the Jew was one of liberality and achievement. When William, Prince of Orange, embarked to win a throne in England, it was a Jew who gave him $500,000. When George Washington began his fight for American liberty, a Philadelphia Jew named Solomon gave him $600,000 to carry on his campaign. It was a Jew who supplied money for Columbus' first voyage to America, it was a Jew who drew the map which helped the voyagers, a Jew caught the first sight of the new continent, and a Jew was the first man to leap upon the strand.

The Jews were a moral people. For 100 years not a Jew was hung in the United States for murder. The average life of the Jew is 11 years more than that of other men. He lived according to God's commands, and cancer and consumption passed him by.

God has chosen the Hebrew people and shut them in from the world. Then he has poured the vials of his wrath upon them and scattered them all over the world for his own purposes. In his own time God would again crown the Jew with glory and honor and make him an instrument in the redemption of the world.—Toronto Mail, July 27.

If We Faint Not.

Sowing is toilsome work. The Christian's life in this world is a life of labor; but it is not labor in vain; and we are exhorted to "be not weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not."

The day of reaping may be long deferred, but it will surely come. It is pleasant when we can see seed-time and harvest close together, and when the fruit of faithful sowing appears at once to gladden and bless the heart. But this is not always the case. It is in the order of Divine Providence that seed shall be sown in faith and that time must elapse before the harvest can be gathered in.

We need not murmur at this delay. It is wise, it is necessary. We need not be discouraged, nor fear that our labor has been in vain; we must wait. We may sow in other fields, and pursue other toils, but we cannot hasten the Lord's work. He will bring it to pass in his own good time. Doubtless many a seed that has been sown, despaired of, and forgotten, will yet bring forth an abundant harvest; and many a discouraged laborer shall see with glad surprise upon the hills of God, the ripened sheaves that sprang from seed which he supposed had been devoured by birds, or had withered beneath the summer's heat.

"We shall reap if we faint not." The "due season" will come; the time of resurrection, of revelation, of manifestation, of reunion, of reward.

Blessed are they who shall endure to the end, and fainting not, shall join with sowers and with reapers, to sing with joy the eternal harvest home.—Christian.

Obituary.

Isaac Scott Miller was born in Wayne Co., O., Oct. 7, 1836, and died at his home near Dorris, Woodward Co., Okla., Sept. 6, 1903. Brother Miller united with the church when just a young man while living in Indiana. He has attended the meetings at Antioch, Plymouth and Argos many times. For the past ten years he has been trying to expound God's Word and show that Jesus Christ is the light of the world to those who are walking in darkness and sin, and how well he has succeeded God, the Father, only knows. He was married three times. His first marriage was to Eliza Ann Henry (the date of which is unknown to the writer) to this union were born four children, three boys and one girl, the girl, Sister Laura Brown, is living in Woodward Co., Okla. While living with his first wife he was called into the Civil War, entering the B 17th Ind. Vol. Infantry in 1864. Soon after the war was over he lost his companion and June 17, 1866 he was married to Mrs. Evaline Carlyle, a widow and a member of the Church, to this union two children were born, Miles Miller and Mrs. Della O'Keefe, both of whom are still living. And while living near Geuda, Kan. this companion died, and on Nov. 15, 96, he was married to Lydia Mesner, who survives him with the care of four little children. Bro. Miller's sickness was brief, took sick Saturday night and died Sunday night. The church loses one of its faithful workers, and the community to which he had lately moved and had learned to love him for his kindness and Christian character now share his loss. His work at Jackson, near Oxford, Kan., will ever be remembered for his faithfulness and untiring efforts to proclaim the glad tidings of the coming kingdom and the glorious reign of Christ. He was peacefully laid to rest until he is awakened by the voice of him who hath said, "Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me to give every man as his works shall be."

Notice.

I would say to the brethren that having been again put in the field as Evangelist for the Northern Kansas and Missouri Conference, I am at your service and will go wherever called. While the last year's work did not come up to what we desired, yet the work closed in a very satisfactory condition, and the new year begins with better prospects than ever before.

Now, brethren give me your assistance, send in your pledge, or what you feel able to give for this year's work, and let me know where you are and the situation in your neighborhood.

The 1st of October (Thursday) I will begin a meeting at the Prairie Point School House in Cloud County, Kansas, 14 miles south-west of Concordia and 9 miles north-east of Glasco, in J. J. Wright's neighborhood. Let all the brethren in north central Kansas attend this meeting that can.

I Wait for Him.

"I wait for the Lord, my soul doth wait, and in his Word do I hope." Psa. cxxx. 5.

I wait for him whose promise sure,
The ages have not heard in vain.
Whose pledge unto his chosen ones
Was, "If I go I'll come again."
Not all the vain world's ruthless din,
Nor rushing of the waves of time,
Nor strife or tongues, nor clash of war,
Can drown that Word of truth sublime.

Communicated.

The Power of the Human Will.

Will, abstractly, is defined as "that faculty of the mind by which we determine either to do or forbear an action" (Webster); "the intellectual power of exercising choice" (Bascom); "the power to choose" (Edwards); "that power of the mind by which it becomes the conscious author of an intentional act" (Whedon). The will has reference to action or doing. Two or more objects of different character are presented to the mind. Reason compares these objects, the judgment determines which is preferable, and the will, as the executive officer, decides which course to pursue.

Are the foregoing definitions sustained by the word of God and human experience? If they are, we are bound to accept them; if not, we are obliged to seek some other solution of the causes that underlie human action. If true, they show that the mind is capable of originating thought and volition within certain limits; if not true, the human mind is nothing more than a tool which is not capable of action unless acted upon from without. If the human mind can determine for itself what to do or forbear, it is then responsible for its action; if incapable of such decision until moved upon from without, no responsibility can attach to its actions, or to any consequences arising therefrom. No praise is due for a favorable choice, and no blame for an adverse one. In dealing with this subject, our appeal shall be to the word of God, which is corroborated by experience.

I shall cite instances where an appeal was made urging men to make a good choice. God said to the children of Israel, while they were on the way from Egypt to Canaan, "See I have set before thee this day life and good, and death and evil; in that I command thee this day to love the Lord thy God, to walk in his ways and to keep his commandments and his statutes and his judgments, that thou mayest live and multiply; and the Lord thy God shall bless thee in the land whither thou goest to possess it. But if thine heart turn away, so that thou wilt not hear, but shall be drawn away, and worship other gods, and serve them; I denounce unto you this day, that ye shall surely perish, and that ye shall not prolong your days upon the land whither thou passest over Jordan to go to possess it. I call heaven and earth to record this day that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing: therefore choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live." Deut. xxx. 15-20. Here God sets two opposite ends before the children of Israel: "Life and good, and death and evil." Life and good will result from their keeping his commandments and statutes; "death and evil" shall come upon them, they shall "surely perish" and "not prolong their days," if their "heart turns away" so that they "will not hear." God desired their good, and therefore admonished them to "choose life." However, he did not compel them either way in this choice, but left it wholly with them which they would choose. If they choose life and lived, it was not because they were compelled to do so, but because they had duly weighed the matter thus announced to them, and had decided to obey God's commandments and statutes. Hence, if they lived, it pleased God because they obeyed his word, but it was the result of their own choice. On the other hand, if they choose death, it was not because no other choice was possible, but because they had either acted rashly in not duly weighing the consequences of their own action, or because they had preferred the temporary enjoyment they might derive from their own doings, to the pleasure that would result from obedience. If they lived, they owed this fact, in the first place to God who made this possible; and it was due, in the second place, to their own choice in the matter. If they died, no blame attached to God for either desiring their death or not having duly warned them in advance. And God not only appeals to this ability in man to make his own choice, but, is the Author of it.

Another instance of this kind is recorded in Joshua xxv. 14, 15. Joshua, at the instance of God (v. 2) commands the children of Israel to "fear the Lord and serve him in sincerity and truth," and to put away false gods. And if, after considering what he had told them in ff 2-13, it should seem evil to serve the Lord, they were to decide whom they would serve. They were compelled, by the exigencies of the case, to make a choice; but, though God very much preferred that they should serve him, they were left perfectly free in making this choice. "As for me and my house," said Joshua to the people, "we will serve the Lord." v. 16. This had been fully determined upon before the announcement was made.

In view of this, how useless it would be to require man to choose either good or evil, if he is an irresponsible tool that can choose neither good or evil, and to hold him responsible for the choice he makes.

There are numerous instances on record where a choice was made for good, notably the case of Moses. It is said that "by faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer afflictions with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach for Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt: for he had respect to the recompense of the reward." Heb. xi: 24-26. Two things weighed on the mind of Moses: First the temporary pleasures of sin amid the treasures of Egypt; and second, the recompense of the reward for bearing the reproach for Christ. They were both desirable: The former to the desires of the flesh; the latter to the thoughtful mind looking farther than present enjoyment. Moses refused (denied, declined, rejected as worthless) "the pleasures of sin for a season," and chose "affliction with the people of God, for he had respect to the recompense of the reward." This choice was not made for him by another, or when he was still young and unable to decide a case of such moment, but "when he was come to years," showing that he had come to maturity, and was therefore capable of deciding a case on its merits.

In contrast with this refusal of sin stands the refusal of men to obey the will of God. "Who gave Jacob for a spoil, and Israel to the robbers? did not the Lord, he against whom they have sinned? for they would not walk in his ways, neither were they obedient to his law." Isa. xlii: 24. Either God willed that those people should obey his law, or he did not. He gave them his commandments, and these express his will. If he willed that they should thus disobey him, they had not "sinned," as he accuses them of doing, and he did wrong in giving Jacob for a spoil, and Israel to the robbers. If he did not will such disobedience, the evil here pictured was a just punishment of their sin.

The Scriptures plainly affirm that a man has "power over his own will." 1. Cor. 7: 37. And the forgoing cases are but a mere fragment of the great mass of evidence which goes to confirm the truth of this apostolic statement. It is possible for men to sin willfully after receiving the knowledge of the truth. (Heb. 10: 26), as is evident from the statement that when some "knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful; but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened." It is also said that when they "did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind." Rom. 1: 21, 28.

Men may be willingly ignorant of certain things which may and ought to be known: men who walk in their own lusts—desires which are not inspired by God, but are peculiarly "their own." These lusts so engross their attention as to render them ignorant of God's purpose, so that they will say, "Where is the promise of his coming?" 2. Peter 3:5.

Another proof of the awful power of the human will is contained in [illegible] proof of Jesus to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, "How often would I have gathered thy children together, as an hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not." Matth. 23:37. That they were not "gathered," is a fact, not because he would not, for he made repeated efforts: "would often." They could have been gathered as far as his "will" in the matter was concerned, but they "would not," and therefore were not gathered. They had shown their rebellious disposition by killing the prophets and stoning them that had been sent to them.

"See that ye refuse not him that speaketh," is a solemn word of warning, speaking in disguise of the awful possibilites of the human will. Heb. 12: 25.

Let us, then, be careful to make the proper use of the "power over the will" which has been conferred upon us, by bringing our own will into subjection to the Divine will and training it to live the rest of our time to the will of God. 1. Pet. 4:1. This is our part in the transaction. God has done his part. If we conduct ourselves in harmony with the Divine will, it is because we have decided to do so: if we do not, God is free from responsibility. It will be the result of our own choice. We have the assurance that, after we have done the will of God, we shall inherit the promises. (Heb. 10: 36). that is, enter the kingdom of our Father. Matth. 7: 21.

Yours in the love of the truth,
A. H. ZILMER.

Wisdom of Seirach.

CHAPTER 19.

1. A drunken workman will not have grown rich; the one who despiseth the few things will fall little by little.

2. Wine and women will cause men of understanding to apostatize and the one who cleaveth to harlots will be more daring.

3. Moth and worms will inherit him the former, and a more daring soul, the latter, will have been taken away.

4. He who trusteth quickly is light of heart, and he who sinneth against his soul will commit discordant error.

5. He who is rejoicing in heart will have been well known.

6. And he who hateth talk will grow less in evil.

7. Never repeat a word and nothing shall be diminished by thee.

8. Do not tell your story to a friend and an enemy, and if it is not a sin for thee, do not reveal a matter.

9. For he has heard thee and hath come to be on his guard against thee, and in due time he will hate thee.

10. Hast thou heard a word, let it die along with thee; be of good courage; it will not burst thee.

11. A savorless (unwise) man from the face of a word will suffer woe (birth-pangs) like a woman who is bringing forth from the face of an infant.

12. A weapon pierced to a thigh of flesh, even so is a word in the bosom of a savorless man.

13. Reprove a friend, though he hath not done anything, and if he hath done it, that he may never add to it.

14. Reprove your friend, though he hath never said it, and if he hath said it, that he may never repeat it.

15. Reprove a friend, for many a false accusation hath occurred, and that he may not put faith in every word.

16. There is one who destroyeth and not from soul-life (natural or physical life) and who hath not sinned with his tongue?

17. Reprove (convict or address his reason) thy neighbor before threatening, and give place to a law of the Most High.

18. All wisdom is fear of the Lord, and all wisdom is there a doing of law.

19. Even an exact knowledge of wickedness is not wisdom, and the counsel of obdurate sinners is not prudence, counsel is.

20. There is a wickedness and it is an abomination, and there is a heedless person who is lacking in wisdom.

21. More to be feared is a man [illegible] understanding than a man abounding in thoughtfulness and an evader of law.

25. There is an accurate subtility and it is unjust, and there is one who perverteth grace in manifesting judgment.

26. There is one who doeth wickedly under the cover of darkness, and his thoughts are full of deception.

27. Bowing his face, and deaf on one side he will anticipate thee where he is not well known.

28. And if he be prevented from sinning by inferior strength, if he find opportunity, he will do evil.

29. A man of mark will have been known by seeing him, and from the answer of his face will a man of perception have recognized.

30. A man's clothing and the way he shows his teeth when he laughs (lit "teeth laughter") and a man's way of walking declare his characteristics (lit "the things concerning him.")

CHAPTER 20.

1. There is a reproof which is not timely, and there is one who keepeth silence and he is thoughtful.

COMMENT.

Is the wisdom of this chapter "wise saws and common proverbs" culled from the experience of men or something more? To me it is most decidedly more. The fact that the author is dealing with the individual and the common affairs of his every day life does not as medievalism has concluded stamp it as "uninspired," but emphasizes all the more the thought that is pervading and leavening the whole Christian idealism of this opening twentieth century—namely that God is in all his world and not in a little ecclesiastic cosmic segment of it—and that even a small portion of his spirit concerned will make even a Saul a true prophet.

The positive and negative definition of "wisdom" in the 20th and 22nd verses for practical application to one's conduct of life is of more value than whole libraries of even nineteenth century theological and exegetical teaching. For it exactly agrees with Christ's own oracular teaching. "Do what I say if ye would know of the teaching."

People will do well to heed what is said in this chapter about keeping your own counsel, sometimes even from your friends. The characteristics of a man of mark are well put here, and how to read character from observation of one's smile, dress, gait etc.

Then the timeliness of everything we do—if we would make effort effectual, especially in administering reproof silence is oftener golden than we may think.

The Bereans Column.

[Under this heading the society of "Bereans" of Hazel, will supply the copy, and endeavor to fill the space once a month.]

My subject is What the followers of Christ are and what they will be.

Priests and Kings. Co-rulers with Christ in his kingdom is an honor that awaits the righteous of all generations. He that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations. Rev. ii. 26. It is evident from the foregoing passage that an overcomer may fall short of the glory of God, but to the one that holds out faithful unto the end, the promise is sure and stead fast.

Jesus says "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne." Rev. iii. 21. What a blessed privilege awaits the faithful followers of Christ.

The reward offered is always conditional on our part. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years. Rev. xx. 6.

How we prize life in this present age, with all of its sorrows, perplexities and difficulties, with sickness abroad in the land. Every available effort is put forth to perpetuate life. Yet what is it compared with the future life where sickness and death will be no more.

We are told in the blessed Book, that the kingdom that the God of heaven sets up shall never be destroyed, but shall stand forever. The rulers in that kingdom need not fear the work of an assassin. It is deemed necessary to take the utmost precaution to guard the kings of today, and even the president of the United States, whose term is but for a few years. Not so in the kingdom of God, for we shall be able to exclaim with Paul—"Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift," which is immortality.

The inducements God sets before us are many and great, yet it is written, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard; neither have entered the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

Let us bring ourselves to a realization of the fact that God's plan is a reality and not a dream, so that when our Lord returns he may say unto us, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter into the joy of thy Lord."

ALMEDA MITCHELL.

SOWING.

In glancing over the great panorama of life we [illegible] beginnings make the greatest endings. As this is true from a financial standpoint so it is also true in our Christian career. If we wish to "fight a good fight," to hear the cry "well done thou good and faithful servant," we must begin to sow our seeds when young, that none of the precious moments may be lost.

Christ began his teaching when but twelve years of age. What then is to hinder his children from doing likewise? There are a great many fields of labor open for our service. Christ does not want idle worshipers. It is not enough for us to be good—but we must be good for something. Though not merely in preaching the gospel do we become followers of Christ. He loves the meek and lowly, and while all of us are not adapted to exhort and become great teachers, every little child can sow seeds of kindness. In this way we lay a good foundation for a noble Christian life. We are told that the occupations of our childhood are found to color and influence our later lives. If this be true, even the little children should be careful that the seeds they sow will bring forth good fruit.

We are all desirous of doing that which is right. Too many times we are more anxious about the bringing in of the fruits than we are of the preparation of the ground, forgetting that an abundant harvest comes only after unwearying labor in the seed time. Every act of thoughtfulness for mother, and every loving kindness to a school friend, are among the seeds which sown patiently from day to day will bring a sure harvest of love and peace.

There are many thorns constantly coming in the pathway of those who try to lead a Christian life. So many efforts seem to be in vain. True it is that some seeds will be lost by the wayside, or will wither away leaving no fruits; but it is also true that some will fall in good ground and bring forth bountifully. We are always sowing. The brain is never idle. Our mind must be filled with good or it invariably is filled with bad.

Dear Bereans, and Christian friends, let us be careful lest the seeds we sow will not bring forth a harvest acceptable in the sight of God.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

VOLUME LII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCT. 14, 1903. NUMBER 38.

Conference Report.

As per announcement the Quarterly Conference, met at Millbrook, Mich., Friday Oct. 2. 1903, at 7:30 P. M. Ministers present were A. H. Zilmer, Plymouth, Ind., B. W. and M. A. Woodward, Dutton, Michigan. Bro. and Sister Woodward had been at Millbrook holding meetings for a week before the Conference. Bro. Wm. McCredan of Dutton and Sister E. Jackman of Grand Rapids, completed the number from a distance. Each service was instructive and interesting, and all felt well repaid for the effort made to have a Conference so far from the center of the State, though much disappointed that so few came from other parts of the State. Although meetings are held regularly at this place once in four weeks, with Sunday School and Young People's meetings, this October Conference had been looked forward to as a time of rejoicing and having their faith strengthened. The church at Millbrook is always alive and at work. Some of the dear ones have moved away since the last Conference held at Millbrook. We missed them very much, especially our ex-president, Bro. Decker and family, and other dear ones.

Friday 7:30 P. M. praise service and prayers, and a few words of welcome by our President, Bro. B. Lake. 8:00 P. M. sermon by Bro. Zilmer, subject, "The mystery of godliness," 1 Tim. iii. 16, "God was manifested in the flesh, justified in the spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory." Saturday 9:30 A. M. social meeting led by Bro. Lake followed by a very instructive sermon from Bro. Zilmer, subject, "Occupy till I come, or the two advents." Luke xix. 13, "And he called his ten servants, and delivered them ten pounds and said unto them, Occupy till I come." At 2:00 P. M. we listened to an interesting sermon from Sister Woodward, 2 Peter iii. 11, "Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness." 7:00 P. M. social meeting led by Bro. Woodward. He gave us some good thoughts from Rom. xii. "Looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith." Sermon by Bro. Zilmer at 8:00 P. M. from Acts xvi. 30, "What must I do to be saved." Sunday 9:30 A. M. praise service and social meeting led by C. M. Cousson, lesson John xi. 1-45, followed by a sermon from Bro. Zilmer, subject; "The everlasting kingdom." Matt. vi. 11, lesson, Psa. lxxii. At 2:00 P. M. subject, "The two thrones," was ably presented by Bro. Woodward, Rev. iii. 21, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father on his throne." 6:30 praise service and social meeting led by Sister Woodward. A letter was read from our dear Sister S. Roxana Wince, followed by a sermon from Bro. Zilmer, subject, "The gospel." Gal. i. 6.

The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was partaken of at the close of the Sunday evening service conducted by Bro. Woodward, Sister Woodward Bro. Lake. We did have a good meeting, heard excellent sermons, the speakers bringing out of the treasure house of God's Word things both old and new. And the testimony meetings were interesting and comforting. We will remember the Conference for a good while to come, and I trust that the spiritual uplift that we received will abide with us and strengthen us for every duty. And how good it is that amid the cares and perplexities and troubles of this present life we need not meet them alone and in our own strength, but we may be strengthened with might by his Spirit. He has promised so much to those who trust him. The good by hand shake was given Bro. Zilmer while all sang, "God be with you till we meet again." May God keep us all pure is my prayer.

Plymouth, Indiana, Oct. 7, 1903.

As we go to press today there are on our list just 360 whose time is out now, and their renewals due. Some of these are owing from 1 to 5 years, and others only for the current year. If all would pay in what they should we would have in hand quite $700.00.

Now Brothers and Sisters, for some weeks past we have tried to explain our need, and urge action on your part. We are not complaining of the noble ones who always keep their subscription up and ahead, and wish to thank all such. We wish to thank also every one who is doing his very best to send as soon as he can. We wish to urge you to more earnest effort. If there are any who are careless and neglectful we wish to ask you kindly to rouse up and send us what is right.

If you could know and realize our situation we feel certain you would respond at once. It is a conviction with us that there is not a Brother or Sister now owing us but who can get the amount they owe easier than we can carry the whole load. We are compelled to struggle on with the burden. Are you not also in duty bound to do your part? Please think of this very seriously, as before your God, and then act.

Another thing that makes this year hard for us is that our Helping Fund is now $160.00 below what it has been other years, and as we have kept the poor ones on our list so far we do not like the idea of cutting them off. Surely there are enough members of the Church of God in this land who have been blessed with abundance, who can spare this amount so that we shall not have to drop the name of a single worthy poor Brother or Sister.

Brethren, these are the plain figures. ters? We hope you will without more delay.

There is no reason why the pulse of the inner man should fluctuate and we should be in full vigor one day, and all sadness and depression the next.

Truth of any sort is generally disagreeable to the natural man, but especially the truth concerning man claimless and unentitled condition before God, as a creature under sentence of death.

Dean Stanley confessed that for the first thirteen centuries the almost universal practice of baptism was that of which we read in the New Testament, and which is the very meaning of the word baptize—that those who were baptized were plunged, submerged, immersed, into the water.

Gennor Elliot says: "One of the most remarkable phenomena in the history of this scattered people (the Jews), made for ages "a scorn and a hiss," is, that after being subject to this process, which might have been expected to be in every sense deteriorating and vitiating, they have come out of it rivalling the nations of all European countries in healthiness and beauty and physique, in practical ability, in scientific and artistic aptitude, and in some form of ethical value."

Peace on Earth.

"Everywhere the Scriptures present a most delightful picture of the future age under the beneficent rule of the Son of David, the Prince of Peace. One unbroken calm. A morning without clouds. An untroubled sea, no casting up of mire and dirt. No raging tempest. No political storm. No unsettled Eastern question. No frontier difficulty. No boundary line to rectify. No march of armed men. No clang of deadly steel. No rumbling thunder of deadly cannon. No deadly hate betwixt man and man, no thirst for blood. No intense longing for revenge,—all nationalities merged into one. Peace flowing like a river. The whole earth quiet and at rest."

The 8th of October was the limit of time for Russia to leave Manchuria. Seeking an excuse to remain, she made demands on China that could not be met, and of course she stays. Japan is angry, and ready to fight, as she claims Corea as her rightful spoil, and with Russia in possession of Manchuria, the absorbing of Corea is but as another mouthful for her. Germany and France are willing Russia shall stay, as Germany expects at least the moral support of Russia in her plans in the near and far east, and France wants no interference in her designs in Morocco. The United States will do nothing if certain ports are kept open. England can only enter into the case should another power take active part with Russia against Japan. Some days the dispatches indicate hostilities, and the next day all is quiet. We can only watch and wait for the outcome.

When He Was Returned.

Having received the kingdom. Matt. xxv. 15. The 19th verse says this took place after a long time. This being so, the popular dogma of the kingdom being set up at Pentecost on the one hand, and the coming of Christ occuring every time a believer dies on the other hand, necessarily falls to the ground, inasmuch as that the former must have become an accomplished fact ten days only after Christ's ascent to heaven; and the latter must have taken place numberless times, whereas Christ only returns once, and there is no mention in the Bible of his ever ascending to heaven again after that! But the fact must be patent to all Bible students that he has not yet returned, and his kingdom is not yet obtained, although eighteen dreary centuries have rolled their sin-stained clouds into the archives of eternal justice. This has caused unfaithful servants to exclaim, "the Lord delayeth his coming!" The return of Jesus and his authority to receive the kingdom "under the whole heaven" takes place at the same time, and it belongs to a steward's profitable trading to wait with patience, even though the vision appear to tarry, Hab. ii. 3; and blessed indeed will those servants be whom, when the Lord cometh, shall be found watching. Matt. xxiv. 46, 51.

A Diversity of Talent.

"One, two, and five talents,"—Paul explains this diversity of ability in his letter to the Hebrews, chap. v. 11-14, and chap. vi. 1-3. Some believers appear to have attained only to the knowledge of first principles,—such are the one talent servants of the parable, and he warns them of their danger in losing even what they had—"Ye have need that one teach you again which be the first principles," etc.; then he describes the owners of the two and five talents in ver. 1-14, as those who were of full age in the truth, who by reason of use had their spiritual senses exercised to discover both good and evil, and had therefore gone on to perfection; such possessed a correct knowledge of the mysteries of the gospel, and were rooted and grounded in the faith, and mighty in the Scriptures. It is observable that the mere possession of two or five talents does not secure salvation, and having only one does not necessitate condemnation, it is their right or wrong use which influences these results; because if five be given it is merely the result of superior ability, and carries with it corresponding responsibilities, and if only one be given it is a serious warning to its possessor that it will require the whole of their inferior ability to use it profitably."

First the Natural, Afterwards the Spiritual.

The first Adam "is the figure of him that was to come." "There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body. And so it is written, the first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a life-giving Spirit. Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterwards that which is Spiritual. The first man is of the earth, earthy; the second man is the Lord from heaven." Rom. v. 14; 1 Cor. xv. 44-47.

In the generation there was the first man, "and in the regeneration there is the second Man." The first man was the "figure," or type of the second Man. The figure was incomplete and temporary, and the reality is complete and permanent. The first man was "natural," and the second Man is "spiritual." The first man was "earthy," and the second man is "heavenly." The first man was a "living soul," and the second Man is "a life-giving spirit." The first man was Lord of the earth, and the second man is Lord of both the heavens and the earth. The first man at his best was only an imperfect outline of the second Man, and in the second Man the original outline is completed, perfected and glorified.

"The Lord God said, It is not good that the man should be alone, I will make a helpmeet for him." "And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept; and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof; and of the rib which the Lord God had taken from man made he a woman, and brought her unto the man. And Adam said, this is now bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh; she shall be called woman, because she was taken out of man." "I am jealous over you with a godly jealousy; for I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ. For I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtlety, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ." Gen. ii. 18-23; 2 Cor. xi. 1-3.

In the generation there was the first woman, and in the regeneration there has to be the second woman. As the "first man" was the figure of the second man," so the first woman was the figure of the "second woman;" and as the second Man is "the first-born from the dead," Col. i. 18, so the second woman is the "general assembly and church of the first born." Heb. xii. 23. The first woman was a single individual of one sex; the second woman is a community comprising many individuals of both sexes, and of many nationalities. In the Bible, communities are very frequently spoken of under the figure or symbol of a "woman," a "virgin," etc. The first woman was of the first man, and the second woman is of the second Man. The first woman was of the life and flesh of the first man, and the second woman is of the life and spirit of the second man. 1 Cor. vi. 17. The first woman was formed because it was not good for man to be alone. And the second woman is being formed because it is not good that the second man should remain alone. The first man was incomplete until the first woman was formed, and the second man remains incomplete until the second woman is formed. Eph. i. 23. The first woman was formed to be a "helpmeet" for the first man; and the second woman is being formed to be a "helpmeet" for the Second man; and together, the second Man and the second woman are to accomplish the purpose of God in the regeneration of the world."

Christ in Us.

The question is, has Christ been formed in us? Can we say, "Though our outward man perish yet the inward man is renewed day by day?" The sincere milk of the Word first and the strong meat after, constitute the only food upon which this new creature can thrive and mature. Since it is a mental and moral creature we have to deal with, it is the mind and the heart that must attend to its wants. Its growth, therefore, depends upon our thoughts, words and actions. If they are righteous, then assimilation takes place and growth takes place. When the outward man perishes the inward man remains in the mind of God. We, then are writing our characters, to be indelibly retained by that Spirit in whom we live, move, and have our being. He knows all about us—even knows our thoughts afar off; and under these circumstances it behooves us to avail ourselves of all the divine assistance proffered us; and not deceive ourselves by trying to walk the way of life alone; we will surely come to grief if we do.

"We Have not Followed Cunningly Devised Fables."

When we read the first chapter of Peter's second letter, do we not all feel the truth of the Apostle's words, and feel persuaded that in our acceptance of the glorious truth concerning God's kingdom we have not followed cunningly devised fables? Peter was one of the three who were permitted to see the glory of their Lord and Master on the Mount of Transfiguration: and he says, "We were eyewitnesses of his Majesty, for he received from God the Father, honor and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is

MY BELOVED SON,—

hear ye him. And this voice which came from heaven we heard when we were with him in the Holy Mount." So Peter had seen the kingdom of God in minature, or a representation of it, as it will come in power. He had seen the Lord transfigured and arrayed with glory. He was assured that the second coming of the Lord which he preached to those who had not seen him when he was here before, was no cunningly devised fable. We call to mind the introduction which John gives to his first epistle. He shows the same confidence and gives the same reason. He had and had companied with him. He, too, had been on the Mount of transfiguration. He had held a position of especial love in the Savior's bosom. And he says, "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled of that which we have seen and heard declare we unto you." There is something here which helps to establish us "in the present truth," to enliven our trust. We feel assured that in believing the words of Peter and John, and of all the apostles, we are not following cunningly devised fables, but are receiving favor from him who is the way, the truth, and the life." We have heard and believed the truth as the apostles proclaimed it. We have believed the promise of our Lord's second coming, and the gospel of his

SEEN THE LORD,

THE WORD OF LIFE,

GLORIOUS KINGDOM;

and we have made up our minds that we will walk in the ways of our Lord, and not in the ways of the world. We have separated ourselves from the world and those who are of the world, in response to the exhortation of the Lord through the Apostle Paul, "Come ye out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean, and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my

SONS AND DAUGHTERS,

saith the Lord Almighty." When one resolves to leave the world and its vanities, there are often worldly objections cast in his way, to seek to turn him from his purpose. And even after he has left the world and has commenced to walk in the way of Christ, the same temptations sometimes work to induce him to return. So that, though we may often have considered such objections,—opposed to them the weightier

INFLUENCE OF THE WORD,

it is well for us at times to be put in remembrance of our weakness. The inspired writers seem to have anticipated every objection that might be raised, and to have prescribed for it an effectual remedy. One of the first, is, the numerical objection. It is not counted an honor to wait for God's Son from heaven and hope for his kingdom, because so few there are who thus

WAIT AND HOPE.

But we recall the words that were addressed to the children of Israel by Moses, when charging them to cleave to the Lord. "Thou art an holy people unto the Lord thy God. The Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto himself above all that are upon the face of the earth. The Lord did not set his love upon you nor choose you because ye were more in number than any people, for ye were the fewest of all the people." There is a great similarity between this language and that which Peter uses in his first epistle, "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood,

AN HOLY NATION,

a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who called you out of darkness into his marvellous light." Let us not be moved, then, by the comparative smallness of our number, but remember that the Lord is with the few that serve him rather than with the many that walk in the light of the world's ways. When king Asa was sorely pressed by the Ethiopians he trusted in God that he would deliver him, and cried, "Lord it is nothing with thee to help with many or with them that have no power." It is again objected that those who receive such doctrines and to this the Scripture fitly makes reply and gives exhortation,—"If ye were of the world, the world would love its own; but because ye are not of the world, therefore the world hateth you;" and the exhortation is, "Love not the world neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life is but of the world; and the world passeth away and the lust thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." Plainly, then, we will make a great mistake if we reject the doctrines of Christ because they are not popular, and the world does not accept them; for the friendship of the world is enmity with God. Whosoever, therefore, will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God.

ARE NOT POPULAR;

Still another objection raised is, that great men do not believe these doctrines. This should not be allowed to have much weight, when the words of Paul to the Corinthians are remembered, "Not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called." And Jesus thanked his Father because he had made known the gospel to those who were humble. "I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes." Hosea had to reprove wayward Israel for trusting in her mighty men,—"Ye have plowed wickedness; ye have reaped iniquity; ye have eaten the fruit of lies; because thou didst trust in thy way in the multitude of thy mighty men." It is wrong to trust in princes or in any great men. They go not my as well as those who are esteemed of little account. Ezekiel complained that all had worked iniquity, the princes, the priests, the prophets, and the people.

There is yet another objection raised,—that the acceptance of Christ's doctrines will cause a loss of material wealth. It will produce unpopularity, and injure one's business prospects. There are two replies, at least, to this. There is first the exhortation of Christ himself, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness." And then the truth that Zephaniah expressed, that neither one's silver nor gold shall be able to deliver in the day of God's wrath.

Then let us not be moved by these worldly objections; let us not lose our faith; let not our hope wane. The day is at hand when our Savior will be here. We want to live in his service that we might be found well-pleasing in his sight. Barnabas exhorted the believers at Antioch to cleave to the Lord, and we should take the exhortation to heart. We want to manifest more powerfully the spirit of the hymn which says,—

"Nearer to thee would we venture,
Of thy truth more largely take;
Upon life diviner enter,
Into day more glorious break."

The Russian Jew.

The Chicago Tribune of Oct. 4th, has the following article written by Leon Zolotkoff, who was a delegate to the late Zionist Congress at Basle, Switzerland.

If there was still anything doubtful in the attitude of the Russian government toward the Jew, the letter of the Russian minister, Von Plehve, to Dr. Herzl made it all clear beyond the shadow of a doubt. The letter is so much in keeping with the policy of Russification pursued by the Russian government with great severity that it is almost astonishing that a Russian minister should utter such a frank expression of that policy. The greatest desire of the Russian government seems to be to have a homogeneous Russian state, extending from the Baltic to the Caucasus, and from the Black sea to Manchuria. Everything that is not thoroughly Russian is foreign substance, destroying Russian continuity, and must therefore either be absorbed or removed. This policy is being pursued by the Russian government in crushing the Finns and in its persecutions of the Jews and other foreign nationalities.

Russia has a Jewish population of nearly 6,000,000. With the exception of a small percentage, which is permitted to reside outside of the pale of the Jewish settlement, the Jews populate the cities of the northwestern and southwestern provinces, overcrowding them almost to choking.

In the eyes of the Russian government the Jews form a foreign substance in the homogeneous Russian mass. It dares not open the empire to them, for the Jewish temperament and Jewish liberal ideas may carry an element of thought to the Russian people which the government does not consider to its advantage.

But as the Jewish population is growing in spite of oppression and the condition is growing worse with every increase, the Russian government must necessarily take some action in the matter. And so it does. It tells the Jews they must either emigrate or else permit themselves to be absorbed by the Russians. It is against a Jewish individuality in Russia. It is even willing to assist the Jews in establishing an independent state in Palestine, if such course would induce the Russian Jews to emigrate.

But the Russian Jews do not want to be absorbed and exterminated. Hence they must hold to the other horn of the dilemma — i. e.: emigration.

And so the question of emigration of Russian Jews is at the present moment the most important and cause great worry and apprehension to representative Jews in Russia and abroad. On the one hand there is the not unfounded fear that, when it is seen in Russian government circles that the oppression of the Jews leads to an increase in Jewish emigration, there can be no doubt the Russian government will go as far as it can to be rid of its Jews. On the other hand, it is feared the emigration of large bodies of Russian Jews to what ever land it might be directed would cause the glowing embers of anti-Semitism to burst in devasting flame, and by the increased Jewish competition occasioned by this invasion would transfer thither the condition of Jewish distress so familiar in eastern Europe.

Russian officials are always endeavoring to explain the restrictions against the Jews and the anti-Jewish outbreaks by the financial relations existing between the Jews and the peasants. Accordingly the recent massacres were nothing more than outbreaks of popular passion, occasioned by the exploitation and oppression of people on the part of the Jews. In order on the one hand, to protect the Jews from further outbreaks, and on the other hand to guard the uncultured Russian people against the commercial ascendency and exploitation of the Jews, the Russian government felt itself compelled to put into operation certain restrictions against them.

The incorrectness of this reasoning is proven by the fact that the peasant population of the provinces within the Jewish pale is economically far better situated than the Russian peasant of the interior, which is closed to the Jews.

As a matter of fact, the Russian peasant and workman is only exploited by his own kind, typified in Russian literature as "kulak" (literally, "fist"; metaphorically, a rich Russian peasant), who, as farmer, money lender, merchant, and sometimes landed proprietor, gets whole villages into his hands and cruelly sucks them dry. It is a generally recognized fact that in those parts of the interior of the empire where the Jews make their way the prices of local products rise and those of imported goods fall, that everywhere in those spots a new impetus is given to every kind of commercial and industrial activity and that the well being of the native population is palpably improved.

The commercial activity of the Jew is extremely dangerous to the "kulak." The Jew's legitimate competition is greatly inconvenient to him. The "kulak's" appetite is insatiable. In his exploitation of the distress of the Russian proletariat the "kulak" is merciless and without compassion. He stops at no barbarity, the more so as he knows now to secure the silent acquiescence of a poverty stricken bureaucracy. Then comes across his path a Jew, who carries on his business on the old Jewish principle of "live and let live." What is easier than to cry "Down with the Jew?"

A similiar policy is being pursued by the Poles in the now Russified Poland. The "omladina," a sort of Polish social party, adopts the policy of bothering Jews in all spheres of commercial activity.

It was this realization of the hopeless condition of the Jews in Russia that induced a majority of the recent Zion congress to vote reluctantly for the generous proposition of the English government offering a home for Jews in East Africa.

The better situated Jews of Europe and America have always maintained, either for the purpose of setting their conscience at rest or through ignorance of the situation of millions of their brethern, that the problem of the Russian Jews will have to be solved in Russia. Minister von Plehve, who spoke for the Russian government, has dissipated the illusion. The Jews in Russia must either be absorbed or emigrate. The former is physically impossible, the latter is extremely difficult without the help of all Jews.—Leon Zolotkoff.

Love must be in all, through all, over all our words and deeds, to make them acceptable to God and a blessing to men. Col. iii. 14.

The Child Jesus.

Lord, that once on mother's knee,
Wast a little child like me,
When I wake or go to bed,
Shed thy blessing on my head;
Let me feel thee very near,
Jesus Christ, thou Savior dear.

Once thou wast in cradle laid,
Baby bright in manger shade,
With the oxen and the cows,
And the lambs without the house;
Now thou art above the sky,
Yet dost hear a baby cry.

Thou art near us when we pray,
Never art thou far away;
Then our little hymn dost hear,
Jesus, Lord, Thou Savior dear.
Who was once, on mother's knee,
Just a little child like me.

How to Detect a Bogus Gospel.

How thankful we should be that God has made the message of salvation so plain that it need not be misunderstood, and has also shown us how we may detect a bogus gospel. Let me briefly call attention to a line of Scripture showing this. See Heb. ii. 1-4. "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip. For if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward; how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him; God bearing them witness both with signs and wonders, and with diverse miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own will?"

The subject matter of this text is "the great salvation," that it would be dangerous to "neglect," not alone to reject. As indicating what the "great salvation" is, we have three points:

1. That "which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord."

2. "Was confirmed unto us by them that heard him."

3. "God also bearing witness with signs," etc.

Let us trace No. 1. See Acts xi. 13, 14: "And he (Cornelius) showed us how he had seen an angel in his house which stood and said unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter; who shall tell thee words, whereby thou and thy house shall be saved."

The "words whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved," is the great salvation, and those words are the words which "began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached." See Acts x. 37: "That word I say ye know, which was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached."

1. Galilee is the city from which it should begin.

2. "After the baptism which John preached" is the time it should begin from Galilee. Now, with these leading lines we can make no mistake as to what the "great salvation" is.

Now turn to Mark i. 14: "After that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God." In this text we have—

1. The city Galilee as the place.

2. "After that John was put in prison" is the time.

3. The "great salvation," or the "words whereby thou and thy house shall be saved," is given by Jesus as "the gospel of the kingdom." This is the "great salvation which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord."

Now take the second point, it is "Confirmed unto us by them that heard him."

The disciples were "them that heard him." See Luke ix. 1, 2, 6: "Then he called his twelve disciples together, and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases. And he sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick. And they departed, and went through the towns, preaching the gospel, and healing every where."

The next confirmation was: "God also bearing them witness with signs and wonders," etc. See Mark xvi. 20: "And they went forth, and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following. Amen."

Now, we have clearly traced "the gospel of the kingdom," as being the "great salvation," which at the "first began to be spoken by the Lord," and the "words whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved."

Concerning what kingdom did Jesus preach good news? See Luke i. 31, 32: "And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David. And he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

The throne of Jesus' kingdom, is here designated as the "throne of his father David," and the people, "the house of Jacob." It was David's throne that was "overturned" as described by Ezekiel which was to be given to "him whose right it is," and not a spiritual affair, neither is it a spiritual "house of Jacob." See Acts i. 6: "When they therefore were come together, they asked of him, saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" It is the Israel who once had the kingdom, or it could not be "restored again to Israel." The apostasy has endeavored to substitute in their place a so-called spiritual Israel, which is a phrase as foreign to the Bible as the phrase immortal soul. See Jer. xxxi. 10-13, 28: "Hear the Word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, he that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock. For the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and ransomed him from the hand of him that was stronger than he. Therefore they shall come and sing in the height of Zion, and shall flow together to the goodness of the Lord, for wheat, and for wine and for oil, and for the young of the flock and of the herd: and their soul shall be a watered garden; and they shall not sorrow any more at all. Then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance, both young men and old together: for I will turn their mourning into joy, and will comfort them, and make them rejoice from their sorrow. And it shall come to pass, that like as I have watched over them, to pluck up, and to break down, and to throw down, and to destroy, and to afflict; so will I watch over them to build, and to plant, saith the Lord."

It is the Israel that was "scattered," that is to be gathered and not a spiritual Israel substituted by those who make void the Word of God. Eph. ii. 11, 12: "Wherefore remember, that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh, who are called uncircumcision by that which is called the Circumcision in the flesh made by hands. That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world."

Notice that "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel," are among those who are designated as "having no hope, and without God in the world."

A "commonwealth" is a civil polity, or a civil government. That civil polity, or civil government which was "overturned" until "he come whose right it is," is the throne of David which the angel said to Mary the Lord God would give him.

Do you want a rule by which you can detect a bogus gospel, it is this. If you find any one preaching a so-called gospel of the kingdom with the kingdom of Israel left out, you can safely brand it as a bogus gospel. We have a sample of that kind of a gospel preached by both First day and also Seventh day Adventists.

ACCOUNTED WORTHY.

Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man. It will take a careful and prayerful life, to be accounted worthy to stand before the Son of Man. To stand justified and hear the well done good and faithful servant. And to escape all these things that shall come on the ungodly and those who are not looking for these things to be fulfilled pray that they may escape all these things that are coming to pass. We do not obey through fear, but love for him who gave his life that we might live. Let us do all we can to show our appreciation of this great love. To be worthy of a place in Christ's kingdom we are asked to make any sacrifice that may stand in the way of our serving Christ and doing his will, even to the separation of family ties. He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me. And he that taketh not his cross and followeth after me, is not worthy of me. Then whatever our cross may be let us take it up and endeavor to bear it with patience, so that we may be accounted worthy of the great gift eternal life. The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a king that made a marriage for his son. And saith unto his servants, the wedding is ready, but they which were bidden were not worthy. May this not be said of us when the marriage of the Lamb is ready. Paul says, "I therefore, the prisoner of the Lord beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called, for I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." Then let us press onward, holding up the truth to others so that both they and we may stand before Christ accounted worthy.

REMEMBER ME.

"This do in remembrance of me." These words were spoken by our Savior on the night he was betrayed. Remember me. Did his disciples realize the meaning of his words then? Did they fully understand what this ordinance would be to them after their Master was gone? No; for after they had gone forth to the Mount of Olives and their Lord had told them to watch and pray they fell asleep and he was left alone to endure agony such as no mortal ever endured. O, if they had understood how soon the Savior's words would be fulfilled, and what he was passing through for their sakes could they have fallen asleep? But after the Lord was risen, after they had received the Holy Spirit, when they began to look forward to his coming, when they realized that only through him could they receive the gift of eternal life, O, how their hearts must have thrilled with love when they met first to partake of the emblems of his broken Body and shed Blood. His words, "Do this in remembrance of me," the disciples knew then that he had given them an ordinance that would ever keep them in remembrance of their Savior and the sacrifice he made, "for as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup ye do show forth the Lord's death till he comes." This commandment is still to his church till he comes; how great the need of meeting together, for if we neglect meeting, then we would not keep in remembrance his death. We would grow careless. Till he comes is the command, not a few weeks or years. "Do this in remembrance of me." Would we forget his suffering, how he gave his life for us, how he died that we might live, how only through him we can come to the Father, how only in him we are complete. Yes, if we forsake the assembling of ourselves together, our hearts grow cold, the Lord's death and his coming grow less dear to us, and the world and love of pleasure will take our thoughts from the glorious truths taught by our Savior. Jesus knew human hearts, he knew our temptations, he was tempted as we are tempted, yet is without sin. Brothers and sisters, as we have partaken of these sacred emblems, let us bring to mind that scene in that upper room, Jesus with his disciples around him, listen to his words of love and sorrow, and he took bread and gave thanks, and brake it and gave unto them, saying, This is my body which is given for you, this do in remembrance of me, likewise the cup, saying, This cup is the New Testament in my blood which is shed for you. O what a privilege that we are allowed to partake of the emblems that the Savior said would keep them in remembrance till he comes. Let us come prayerfully and earnestly make this ordinance one that will draw our hearts with love to him who died that we might live. Yes, we have eternal life through him, till he comes. Only just a little longer will we need to keep in remembrance, then we shall see him as he is, and behold the glories that he has promised to those that remember him. Amen.

A Wrong Conclusion.

In a tract before me, the writer after giving several quotations in proof of the Lord's perfect obedience to the law of God, draws the conclusion that the 4th commandment is still binding on all Christians. This is what in logic is called a nonsequitur, i. e. a conclusion that does not follow lawfully from the premises laid down. Our Lord's obedience was to the whole system of law as given at Sinai. If this is proof of the eternal perpetuity of the Sabbath, it must also be proof that every command embraced in the law is of eternal perpetuity. This would allow of no change in any part of the law. But, conceding, for the sake of the argument that which Sabbatarians claim that the ten commandments are the law of God, and that all the rest found in Israel's code is the law of Moses, even then the conclusion may not follow as an absolute fact. God in his wisdom might see fit to drop from the list that one positive command or he might see fit to impose it upon Christians chosen out of the nations, and who are not named as parties to the covenant. I know Sabbatarians go back of Sinai and quote in proof of its binding character on all mankind clear down to Adam, "The Sabbath was made for man," Mark ii. 27, and then say "This is generic." Are you sure my seventh day friend that this means man in a universal sense and not in the sense of Israel-man. There is more than the bare possibility that you are wrong, for, God, when he made or gave the Sabbath specified Israel whom he had just freed from Egyptian bondage. The covenant of which the Sabbath is a part was made with Israel. In proof I quote "The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, who are all of us alive here this day." Deut. v. 2, 3. It had not been made with our fathers, near or remote.

We are not obliged to concede that the ten commandments are the law of God exclusive of the rest of the law. The two law theory is made to play an important part in conducting the argument in proof of seventh day observance. It is very convenient to say, "The moral law and the ceremonial law." Thus putting asunder what God has joined together under the common term—Law. If God had classified the law some precepts not found in the Sabbatarian's moral law would be in the decalogue. He aimed not at classification into moral and ceremonial. False premises as well as wrong conclusions lead men into error.

He Hadn't Thought of That.

Our ranking in the world depends on what we do, not on what we can do; and so a shabbily-dressed young man discovered, when he applied to the manager of a large department store for employment.

"What can you do?" asked the manager.

"Most anything," answered the applicant.

"Can you dust?"

"Yes, indeed."

"Then why don't you begin on your hat?"

The young man hadn't thought of that.

"Can you clean leather goods?"

"Oh, yes."

"Then it's carelessness on your part that your shoes are not clean."

The young man hadn't thought of that, either.

"Well, can you scrub?"

"Yes, indeed," was the reply.

"Then I can give you something to do. Go out and try your strength on that collar you have on. But don't come back."

Palestine, a Hebrew Republic.

The Philadelphia Inquirer gives the following regarding Zionism: The Zionist movement in this city is expected to assume a very practical form within the the next few weeks, when, it is said, the organization will be effected of military companys, which will be prepared to defend with their lives the Hebrew Republic, which is to be established in Palestine by the purchase of the country from the Turkish government. This plan of the Philadelphia Zionists is said to be in accord with the policy outlined by them throughout the world, as they intend to have a fully equipped army and navy. Leading Zionists are very enthusiastic on the subject of the military organizations that are to be formed here. An armory for the use of the companies to drill in will in all probability be rented. The plan has the hearty approval of Rabbi B Levinthal, who is the chief rabbi of the Orthodox Hebrews of this city, and who is also one of the best known leaders in the Zionist movement in the country. He is of the opinion that it will not only be a great step toward making the future success of the Zionist movement a certainty, but that it will also be of immense value to the cause, as it will create an intense interest in it among all classes. The idea of the military phase of the movement is not original in this city, as it has been a matter of discussion among the Zionists of New York for several months. The movement, however, is more organized in this city than in any other section of the country, and the leaders feel that it is in this city that the first direct step should be taken. Meetings, it is said, will take place during the next few weeks, when the names of those wishing to join the military companies will be enrolled.

A Russian paper published at Stuttgart, announces, "That the Jews in many Russian towns have formed defence leagues. The members will be drilled and armed. The Jewish students at Kieff have organized a league, which is divided into companies of twenty men each, under the leadership of men with military experience. In the event of an anti-semetic outbreak the league will be mobilized at any point in the town within fifteen minutes."

Concerning the Jews.

The Annual Zionist Congress at Basle has come and gone, having been distinguished by large gatherings and much hopeful enthusiasm. Its goal, however, is still in the distance, for no practical progress was reported as to the early prospect of founding an autonomous Jewish State in Syria. To this the Turk still bars the way — though the aspiration and expectation thereof continues undiminished.

But current events in European Turkey may make the Turk more pliable to Jewish wishes, for he is woefully in want of money, and is moving in every financial centre to secure it. Now is the opportunity of the Jew, — for the Jews rule in the financial centres of Europe. Let them refuse all financial help, save on the terms of Jewish Autonomy in Palestine — a Jewish State, with a Jewish Prince, or, President, under Jewish laws, speaking the Hebrew tongue and fostering Hebrew literature.

Many, both Jews and Gentiles, will say "This is a large order"! It is, but it is within the bond of promise made to Judah. And that bond is much larger than the two tribes of Judah and Levi, it embraces also Israel of the Covenant, the ten tribes, with Ephraim, firstborn of Joseph by Divine change, at their head. These speak the tongue of their adoption. Who are these? Wait, until God in his providence makes it so plain that all scoffers shall be silenced.

But will Zionism profit by this opening? Well, it has shrewd and capable leaders — as Theo. Herzl, and Max Nordau— who can be trusted to make the best possible use of the opportunity, but who are hampered for lack of means, seeing that but few rich Jews have yet adopted Zionism, its many converts having been chiefly won from the poor and oppressed.

Frankly, however, we sincerely trust the Sultan will fail in his quest for money, since then he will have to accept defeat at the hands of the Macedonians, from sheer inability to keep his enormous army of 400,000 in the field— for not even Turkey can sustain war without funds. Indeed, we should have the higher appreciation of the Jewish people if they resolutely refused, at all hazards, to help the Turk to re-fasten the chains of servitude on Macedonia. For to betray the interests of Christians, who are struggling for that freedom which is the pole-star of all Zionists, would be a poor way of inaugurating that freedom for themselves, and one which would bring upon them sore chastisement of God. So we hope better things from the Sons of Judah and Levi.

In the Daily Mail of September 8th there was an interesting two-column article from the pen of the great Jewish writer Israel Zangwill. For the benefit of those who have not seen the article, or may be unable to secure it, we give therefore a brief review. He traces the history of the Jew from Mosaic times. First "an agricultural, pastoral, military people, with one great capital, the centre of the religious life and of the annual pilgrimages." "This brilliant period ends with the conquest by Nebuchadnezzar, but the captivity was restored, a second temple erected, the religion reshaped by Ezra and Nehemiah, and a renewed nationality..... managed to sustain itself in the Holy Land until the capture of Jerusalem br Titus in 70 A. D. Henceforward the Jews existed only as a religious brotherhood, ubiquitously dispersed." "The Jewish people was interfused..... with almost every people on the planet..... It lived in contact with every nation, civilized or savage; it underwent the influence of every environment; it played a part in every history." He shows here how the Jews from being an agricultural and military people, were changed by press of circumstances into what he calls the middlemen of the world, as well intellectually as commercially..... These were the terms on which they were permitted to live for the benefit of their neighbors, and so pliantly did they adapt themselves to the service of mankind that the natural human instinct for political independence was finally atrophied. Living thus everywhere, yet denied territorial possessions anywhere, and therefore tied nowhere, they were turned into a race of nomads. They become, in fact— though in a novel sense— a people of Commercial Travellers. But one thing must be added— the Commercial Traveller carries always amid his samples: a Bible. And this forms the true centre, a book substituted for a geographical centre, and a condition of spirit for a point of space.....And thus, although they speak Spanish or French, Chinese or Dutch, Russian or Arabic..... their religion, woven into the very texture of life by countless ceremonies and picturesque traditions, keeps them still unified, even as the Hebrew of the synagogue services provides an undying lingual link."

Mr. Zangwill argues that the condition of the Jewish race is one "from which one may easily prophesy persistence. A people that has learned to live without a country is unconquerable." Speaking of the altered environment of the Jews in modern times, he says: "There is a force that is greater than might — it is love. Ever since the eighteenth century this force of love has been acting upon the Jewish people. With that epoch of revolution and its quickened sense of the human brotherhood began the break up of the ghettos in Western Europe..... But the freer the Jew is left the more he tends, if not towards Christianity, towards a broader view of it, and towards the acceptance of Christ in the Apostolic chain of Hebrew prophets. The modern Jew is a pro-Christian.— The Faith.

Didn't Recognize Them.

Liquor stole this man's brains, and this made it easy for the tramp to steal his boots. A Russian peasant returning from town, where he had bought a pair of new boots and drunk a few glasses of spirits, fell asleep by the roadside and was stripped of his boots by a light-fingered tramp.

The fellow's sleep remained unbroken until a passing wagoner, seeing him lying half across the track, shouted to him to "take his legs out of the way."

"My legs?" echoed the half-aroused sleeper, rubbing his eyes, "those legs ain't mine — mine had boots on!"

Five "Minds."

Mind your tongue. Don't let it speak hasty, cruel, unkind or wicked words. Mind!

Mind your eyes. Don't permit them to look on wicked books, pictures, or objects. Mind!

Mind your ears. Don't suffer them to listen to wicked speeches, songs or words. Mind!

Mind your lips. Don't let strong drink pass them.

Mind your hands. Don't let them steal or fight, or write any evil words. Mind!

Not Higher Profession, but Higher Living.

The call is not for higher profession, but for higher living. High professions of personal attainment only advertise low conceptions of personal duty, and many a boaster of his own spiritual attainments, if his blindness were dispelled, would cry out like the prophet: "Woe is me!" It is not the pretension of piety, but the actual expression of it, that must give power to the pulpit. Nor are we an advocate at all for a piety in which the sentimental or emotional type is dominant. Spirituality in a church is not measured by those fervors which are awakened even by appeal to religious sentiments. Many a one has shouted over an imaginary love of the Saviour; just as those Jews who thought themselves the true servants of God while they crucified the Son of God. The proof of spirituality is in right living day by day. The holy fire of the sanctuary burns steadily. It sheds its light in the social circle, in the office, at the counter, in the shop and in the field. It is exhibited in faithfulness, philanthropy, official integrity, good citizenship, brotherliness, benevolence. A church which can be commended in these respects gives the best proofs of spirituality that can be given, and a preacher should be a representative and leader in all those things. — Arkansas Methodist.

Notice.

I would say to the brethren that having been again put in the field as Evangelist for the Northern Kansas and Missouri Conference, I am at your service and will go wherever called. While the last year's work did not come up to what we desired, yet the work closed in a very satisfactory condition, and the new year begins with better prospects than ever before.

Now, brethren give me your assistance, send in your pledge, or what you feel able to give for this year's work, and let me know where you are and the situation in your neighborhood.

The 1st of October (Thursday) I will begin a meeting at the Prairie Point School House in Cloud County, Kansas, 14 miles south-west of Concordia and 9 miles north-east of Glasco, in J. J. Wright's neighborhood. Let all the brethren in north central Kansas attend this meeting that can.

Have You Heard of the Lion's Mouth?

Collier's Weekly is conducting a very novel and interesting competition for its readers each month. To enter the contest all one has to do is to review the issues of Collier's for the current month and answer the two or three questions which are printed in each issue, giving such opinion and such suggestions as will aid in improving the paper. Collier's aims in this way to secure the assistance of every one of its readers in making the paper more to their liking. Every reader, in fact, becomes one of the editors and has his voice in building the greatest illustrated journal of the age.

The first prize each month, awarded for the most helpful suggestion, is $50 in cash, with a second prize of $25 in cash, and eighteen other prizes of sets of books, ranging in value from $32 down to $5, making in all $320 of value given in prizes each month. There are in addition, cumulative cash prizes, for those who win prizes in successive months, and a big cash prize of $1,000 for the most valuable suggestions during 1903.

For the convenience of intending contestants who can not be promptly supplied by newsdealers, all the copies of Collier's for the current month will be sent post paid, together with a handsome proof of a drawing by Charles Dana Gibson, upon receipt of 40 cents in stamps addressed to The Lion's Mouth, Collier's Weekly, 488 West 18th Street, New York.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

As God Leads.

Just as God leads me I would go;
I would not ask to choose my way,
Content with what he will bestow,
Assured he will not let me stray.
But as he leads, my path I make,
And step by step I gladly take,
A child in him confiding.

Just as God leads I am content;
I rest me calmly in his hands;
That which he has decreed and sent,
That which his will for me commands,
I would that he should all fulfill;
That I should do his gracious will,
In living or in dying.

Just as God leads, I all resign:
I trust me to my Father's will;
When reason's rays deceptive shine,
His counsel would I yet fulfill;
That which his love ordained as right,
Before he brought me to the light,
My all to him resigning.

Communicated.

The Spirits in Prison.

A brother in South Dakota desires an article on several passages of Scripture, "interpreting the same in a clear but simple way," viz.: 1. Pet. 3: 18-20; 4:6; 2.Cor. 12: 1-4. Much has been said in the columns of the RESTITUTION on these passages, but that is no reason why nothing more should appear. As far as those are concerned who accept the Bible teaching on the condition of man in life and death, they have no difficulty with the aforesaid Scriptures. There are so many passages scattered all over the Bible that clearly teach the mortality of man, and that in death there is no remembrance of God, that there can be no reasonable doubt as to the fact. It must be admitted, to begin with, that a few obscure statements in the Bible can not be taken to contradict or overthrow the meaning of dozens or scores that are clear. This is true of the passages above referred to. Is it a fact that in death there is no remembrance of God? The Scriptures say so. Ps. 6: 5. Does the Bible teach that there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave (Heb. sheol), whither thou goest? It does. Eccl. 9: 10. Does it teach that the dead know not anything? It does. Eccl. 9: 5. All this being true, could the Bible at the same time teach that dead men are conscious? that they know more than the living? This is impossible.

Let us now examine 1. Pet. 3: 18-20. Here we have the following statements: 1. Christ hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust. 2. The object was, that he might bring us to God. 3. Being put to death in the flesh. 4. But quickened by the spirit. 5. By which (Gr. en ho, in which) also he went, and preached to the spirits in prison. 6. Which (spirits) some time were disobedient, when once the long suffering of God waited in the days of Noah. 7. This was while the ark was preparing, wherein few, that is eight souls, were saved by water.

The crucial point seems to be Christ's preaching to the spirits in prison. Mark well, this does not say that he preached to disembodied spirits. They were spirits "which some time were disobedient.....In the days of Noah" If this Scripture taught that the preaching was simply to disembodied ghosts, as Catholicism, Mormonism, Universalism, and other man-made isms have it, there would be no need of specifying a particular class of spirits, as is the case here. But why did Christ preach to those spirits? And what did he preach? Was it the gospel? Was it with a view to their salvation? Did they repent? Let us notice now, in what manner, this preaching was done, which will help to determine what it was. "By which (spirit, by which he was quickened after being put to death in the flesh) he also went and preached." So it was by the same spirit which quickened him that he preached, and not a personal visit to the so-called "spirit-world" between his death and resurrection. When where those spirits disobedient? In the days of Noah which the ark was preparing. What did they disobey? The preaching which they heard. Who preached to them? "Noah, the eighth person, a preacher." 2. Pet. 2: 5. What did he preach? "A preacher of righteousness." How did he preach? By the Spirit of God which was in him, because he "walked with God." Gen. 6: 3, 9. In v. 3 "the Lord said, My Spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh: yet his days shall be 120 years." That "spirit" was then "striving" with those fleshly men, but would not and did "not always strive."

But it says Christ "went and preached to the spirits in prison." True. And this is not the only time when living persons are called "spirits." John the beloved disciple wrote, "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they be of God." 1 John 4: 1. Are we to "try" disembodied ghosts "whether they be of God?" If so, how can we do this? We are not required to do anything of that kind. Try the spirits.....because many false prophets are gone out into the world." These "spirits," or false prophets, did not confess "that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh." They were living men, whose teaching was to be subject to the test here mentioned. In like manner, the spirits to whom Christ preached by the Spirit, were men.

But what about the statement that "he went and preached?" Does not this prove that Christ "went" in person and preached? That does not follow. "By which (spirit) he went." He "went" by the spirit which quickened him. Notice a statement of Paul's which will throw light on the verb "went." "And came and preached peace to you which were afar off, and to them that were nigh." Eph: 2: 17. Did Christ who "came and preached" personally preach at Ephesus? If he did, we have no record of the fact. But preaching was done there by someone. By whom? Paul and others. Acts chapters 19 and 20.

Where was Christ in the interval of his death and resurrection? The apostle Paul tells us "that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and that he was buried." 1 Cor. 15: 1-4. Jesus himself had said that "the Son of man shall be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." Matth. 12: 40. And Paul further says, "Now that he ascended what is it but that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth?" Eph. 4:9. And Peter, speaking of his resurrection, says, "Men and brethren let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day. Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him that of the fruit of his loins according to the flesh he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne; he seeing this before spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell (Gr. hades, grave), neither his flesh did see corruption. THIS JESUS hath God raised up, whereof we are all witnesses." Acts 2: 30-32. "This Jesus" had been dead, was raised up, and therefore his soul was not left in hades, neither his flesh did see corruption. After he had risen the angel said to the women, "Come and see the place where THE LORD lay." Matth. 28: 6. These Scriptures show the whereabouts of Jesus while he was dead. Thus we see that this Scripture, when examined in the light of other Scriptures, does not teach that an immortal soul of Christ went to the abode of departed (?) spirits and preached to them (to what purpose we would be left to conjecture), but he preached to the ante-diluvians, through Noah, by the same spirit by which he himself was quickened after having been put to death in the flesh.

The End of this Age.

The return of our Lord, and the resurrection of the dead in Christ, the giving to the sinner death, the wages of sin, and eternal life to the obedient, the gift of God, will ever be of interest to those who are looking, and hoping for the return of the Master. And while the day or the hour of that most important event is not revealed; and we should not attempt to be wise above what is written, nevertheless it is written that, "Ye brethren are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." And again, "None of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand." Dan. xii. 10. If we pay no attention to the subject, certainly we shall not be the wise that shall understand. In briefly examining this subject, I invite attention to the testimony found in Daniel xii. 4, "But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end; many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." Therefore we expect in the time of the end, that knowledge in relation to this subject would be increased. In the first two verses of this twelfth chapter are noted, 1st, the standing up of Michael; 2nd, the time of trouble; 3rd, many sleepers in earth's dust shall awake. In verse 6, the question, "How long shall it be to the end of these wonders?" The answer is, "That it shall be for a time, times, and a half." "A time" one year, "times" two years, "half time" six months. And on the principle of symbolic prophecy, of a day for a year, it amounts to 1260 years, and is the same period of time that is spoken of in Dan. vii. 25, in which period the saints are to be given into the hand of the little horn. We find the same period in Rev. xi. 2 in which the holy city is to be trodden under foot 42 months. And in verse 3, the two witnesses are to prophesy, "A thousand two hundred and three score days, clothed in sackcloth." The same period is found in Rev. xii. 6, and again in chapter xiii. 5, and is generally understood to refer to the period of the reign of the Papacy, during which time the saints were in the hand of the little horn, he being a civil ruler—having power to make war. See margin of Rev. xiii. 5. Therefore when the question is asked, "How long to the end of these wonders?" This oft repeated period is brought to view. "But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, to the time of the end." It is evident from this language, that the design was that the words should not be understood until the period called, "the time of the end." In Dan. xi. 35, we read of this time of the end thus, "And some of them of understanding shall fall, to try them, and to purge, and to make white, even to the time of the end; because it is yet for a time appointed. And again in ver. 40, we read, "And at the time of the end shall the king of the south push at him." The natural inference from those two quotations is that, "to" or until the "time of the end," the king that exalts himself (the Papacy) should cause some intelligent saints to fall to try and purify the faithful; and that at the time "of the end" a change would take place, by "the king of the south pushing at him, (the papacy) and that until the arrival of the time of the end, the words were not intended to be understood. Now can we understand at what time, "the time of the end" commenced—and what event unsealed the book? I will say that the time of the end commenced, when the papacy lost its civil power in A. D. 1870. The proof of this statement I find in Dan. xi. 33-35, "And they that understand among the people shall instruct many; yet they shall fall by the sword, and by flame, by captivity, and by spoil, many days.....And some of them of understanding shall fall, to try them, and to purge, and to make them white, even to the time of the end. Now we learn by Dan. vii. 25, that the saints were in the hand of the little horn for 1260 years, and by the verses quoted from chapter xi. we learn that they were to fall by that power, until the time of the end. History confirms the prophecy that such is the fact, and that the power to persecute was taken from the papacy in A. D. 1870. Therefore the time of the end commenced in A. D. 1870 when the period of papal, civil authority, came to an end, and with it the papacy lost its power to persecute the saints. Now having arrived at the time of the end, when the book was to be unsealed. Dan. xii. 4. What event unsealed the book in reference to time? The ending of the 1260 period of papal rule. That power having come up gradually, no man could say positively when to start the period. But now we know that it started with the Decree of Phocas, A. D. 606-610.

Now, having an understanding of the "time, times, and a half." Of Dan. xii. 7, we can advance to an understanding of the 1260 years of verse 11 the beginning of which is distinctly given at the setting up of the abomination that maketh desolate. Now turn to chapter xi. ver. 31, and read, "And arms shall stand on his part, and they shall pollute the sanctuary of strength, and shall take away the daily sacrifice, and they shall place the abomination that maketh desolate." It is a well known fact that the Romans took away the daily sacrifice about A. D. 70, and we have seen that "they" the same party shall "place the abomination that maketh desolate." Now the Romans did not place the Sacrame abomination; but they did place the papal, in A. D. 606-610. That being the starting for the 1290 period it would end in A. D. 1900. Then it is written, "Blessed is he that waiteth, and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days." Starting this period at the same time as the other two 610, A. D. they will end in A. D. 1945. At the end of which time Daniel will stand in his lot, and the Master will have come, the resurrection will then be in the past, the saints will be immortal, and the kingdom of God established on the earth. Still there remains the uncertainty of the time at which our Lord will appear. Wisdom on our part will be to heed his admonition, "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh."

REWARD.

The word reward is found in Psalm xix. 11, and what do church people have to do that they can claim a reward? It says the law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul. The testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple, and the fear of the Lord is clean, enduring forever. Therefore we see we must comply with his laws and believe with our whole hearts his testimony, if we can lay any claim to the reward he so freely offers us all through the Word of life, and in keeping of them is great reward. David's prayers and songs are grand and instructive, always speaking of coming glory to be revealed or of the doom of the ungodly. But his hope of glory seems to lift his heart toward heavenly things.

Isaiah in speaking of the glorious time to come and the reward to be given, says, Awake, put on thy strength, O Zion, put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, the holy city. Why is this call made to adorn herself in beautiful garments? Because henceforth there shall no more come into her the uncircumcised or the unclean. O, what joy when that time shall come, for her people shall not go out with haste nor by flight, for the Lord will go before you, and the God of Israel will be your guard. How unwilling God is to let any perish or go down to death without warning. He sends chosen ones to warn them of coming events. Dear ones, we are now in the last days of Gentile times, darkness covers the minds of the people, but those that have fled to Christ for protection can look through this midnight gloom and see the Lamb of God ready to release his chosen at the appointed time, for he says to them, Light shall break forth unto you as the morning and thy righteousness shall spring forth as the morning, and the Lord shall be thy reward. Should not each one of us work diligently to gain this reward? What a small number is willing to investigate for themselves and to be led by his counsels, that they may receive this reward that is offered. Jesus says unto us, Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven, for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you. How light are our crosses when viewing them with what Christ and his prophets and apostles bore that we might take courage by what they suffered and hold out faithful unto the end, and try to keep the light of the glorious gospel shining until our Redeemer returns, and glorify our Father which is in heaven, that we may receive the great reward. Paul in speaking to the Corinthian brethren says, "Now he that planteth and he that watereth are one, and every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labor." This is very plain, so as our work is so shall our reward be. We must examine ourselves and see if we are doing works that will be approved of by our chief Captain when we come before him. Surely the Spirit is willing but the flesh is weak. I trust that we may receive his blessing—a reward, and gain the great gift of God—eternal life in his kingdom.

A GOOD CONSCIENCE.

"Holding faith and a good conscience, which some having put away concerning faith, have made shipwreck." 1 Tim. i. 19.

Conscience is a word much abused, and but little understood. One definition given by Webster is, "The practical application of the judgment to things moral." There is no danger of mistakes when the judgment is governed by the Word of God. Timothy had been taught to war a good warfare, holding faith and a good conscience. Not a sentimental feeling of what is right and wrong, but practical judgment exercised by faith in the Word of God. He was instructed that bodily exercise profiteth little, or (is for a little time, margin) but godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come. The life that now is, is indeed more profitable for having a good conscience based upon faith in God's Word. Far more happy for exercising practical judgment as to morals. The social glass, impure thoughts, even the appearance of evil will be left out, and the promise of life and peace now, and the life which is to come will indeed be an anchor to the soul both sure and steadfast. Timothy was further instructed to, "Let no man despise thy youth, but be thou an example of the believers in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity. No youth could be despised who is an example in conversation, in faith, in purity. He then tells Timothy how, he says, Till I come give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine,  Take heed to thyself and unto the doctrine, why? Continue in them; for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee. If we give heed, and with Timothy become "an example in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity, taking heed to ourselves and to doctrine, it means much more than to assent. It means to live it, to "continue in them." There will be no shipwreck, but a good conscience concerning faith.

CHAPTER 20.

2. How noble it is to convict of wrong or to show anger toward it, and the one who confesseth the wrong will have been hindered from that which belittles him.

4. A eunuch's longing desire is to deviginize a maid; even so is he who rendereth judgments with violence.

5. There is one who keepeth silent and is found wise, and there is one who is hated for much talk.

9. There is one who keepeth silent because he hath no answer to make, and there is one who keepeth silent knowing a right time.

7. A wise man will remain silent until a right time; but the swaggerer and the heedless will overstep the right time.

8. The one who is excessive in word will have been abominated, and the one who useth his qualification to excess will have been hated.

9. There is prosperity in a true man's calamities, and there is gain found in that which maketh less.

10. There is a giving that will not indemnify thee for the expense, and there is a giving, the repayment of which is double.

11. There is a diminishing for the sake of glory, and there is one who hath lifted up a head from humiliation.

12. There is one who exchangeth many things for a few, and getteth them paid back sevenfold.

13. The man wise in word will make himself beloved, but the favors of the unwise (savorless) will have been thrown away.

14. The giving of a heedless person will not profit thee; for his eyes are many instead of one.

15. He will give a few things and reproach many times, and he will open his mouth like a herald; he will lend today and tomorrow demand it back; a hateful man is such an one.

16. A savorless person will say, He is no friend of mine, and there is no gratitude for my good things; they eat my head and find fault with their tongue.

17. How often and how many people will laugh at him?

18. Destruction from the foundation up rather than from a tongue; even so will come in haste the smiting of evil-doers.

19. An ungracious man, an inopportune talk; in the mouth of the unchastened it will have been a constant quantity.

20. From the mouth of an unwise man a parable will have been accounted of no value; for he hath not spoken it in its appropriate time.

21. There is one who is prevented from sinning by reason of want, and in his interval of rest he will not suffer compunction.

22. There is one who loseth his soul because of shame, and from the face of a person lacking in good sense he loseth it.

23. There is one who because of shame telleth a friend, and he hath made an enemy of him to no purpose.

24. Lying is a bad fault in a man; in the mouth of the unchastened it will have been a constant quantity.

25. A thief rather than a constant liar as a matter of preference, and both will inherit loss.

26. It is the custom of mankind to dishonor a lie, and its disgrace is with it constantly.

WORDS OF PARABLES.

27. The man wise in words will promote himself, and a thoughtful man will be pleasing to great men.

28. The one who tilleth his land will exalt his grain-heap, and the one who pleaseth great men will atone for injustice.

29. Gifts of hospitality and bribes blind the eyes of wise men, and like a muzzle on a mouth turn away reproofs.

30. Wisdom hid away and a treasure not manifest, what profit is there in either?

31. Better a man who hideth his folly than a man who hideth his wisdom.

COMMENT.

This chapter beginning with plain statements of facts based upon universal experience should say now in this 20th century of the Christian era, and ending with illustrative parable teaching is well worthy careful study and reflection even in this late day of much teaching and preaching. The world has not yet learned the lessons taught here any too well. None of us are any too ready "to stoop to conquer" and we all talk too much or too little. None of us bide our time as we should to speak a wise word of reproof or encouragement.

Even the Christ emphasizes this great principle of ethical teaching in "Cast not thy pearls before swine," etc., and "I have many things to say unto you but ye cannot carry them now." And "It is the power and official hour of darkness." And "My time is not yet."

Many an oracular word and teaching was spoken and recorded for another and far later age and generation. What were mysteries once to the angels are now plain matters of fact to the whole Christian world, and very much that should be clear to the ordinary thinker is made a mystery of by absurd teaching and biased ways of reasoning.

Plymouth, Indiana, Oct. 21, 1903.

As we go to press today there are on our list just 352 whose time is out now, and their renewals due. Some of these are owing from 1 to 5 years, and others only for the current year. If all would pay in what they should we would have in hand quite $700.00.

Now Brothers and Sisters, for some weeks past we have tried to ex lain our need, and urge action on your part. We are not complaining of the noble ones who always keep their subscription up and ahead, and wish to thank all such. We wish to thank also every one who is doing his very best to send as soon as he can. We wish to urge you to more earnest effort. If there are any who are careless and neglectful we wish to ask you kindly to rouse up and send us what is right.

If you could know and realize our situation we feel certain you would respond at once. It is a conviction with us that there is not a Brother or Sister now owing us but who can get the amount they owe easier than we can carry the whole load. We are compelled to struggle on with the burden. Are you not also in duty bound to do your part? Please think of this very seriously, as before your God, and then act.

Another thing that makes this year hard for us is that our Helping Fund is now $150.00 below what it has been other years, and as we have kept the poor ones on our list so far we do not like the idea of cutting them off. Surely there are enough members of the Church of God in this land who have been blessed with abundance, who can spare this amount so that we shall not have to drop the name of a single worthy poor Brother or Sister.

Brethren, these are the plain figures. Will you give attention to these matters? We hope you will without more delay.

The Obedience of Faith.

It was our privilege to bury another trusting soul with Christ in baptism, on Sunday, Oct. 18, and it gives us much pleasure to introduce our dear Sister Carroll to the Church scattered abroad. To say that this babe in Christ, aged 70 years, is rejoicing in hope of the glory of God, is stating it very moderately. She seems to see the hand of God that directed her to the place where the good news of life and glory in the kingdom of God was brought to her notice, and cannot praise him enough; and the thought that possibly she might see the King in his beauty without dying, lights up her face with exceeding joy.

That her confidence may continue to the end, and that she may receive an abundant entrance into the kingdom of God, is our prayer.

Death's Doings.

It was with an admixture of sorrow and gladness that we laid away our dear Sister Minor on Oct. 3d. She had been in failing health for several years, and some two years ago we discovered that her speech was slightly afforted, and this gradually grew worse till she became powerless and almost speechless, but suffered intensely; so that we thanked God when on Oct. 1st she breathed her last—fell asleep in Jesus. A "blessed sleep from which none will ever wake to weep."

It was our privilege to instruct her in the first principles of the gospel ten years ago; and then to put on the sin-covering name of Jesus; and from that time we believe she has tried to adorn the doctrine of the Anointed, and has striven to win others to Christ. Three members of her family have followed her example and became members of the body of Christ, and we trust they will so live that they may be crowns of rejoicing to her at that day. Her solicitude that other dear ones would fall in love with the truth, and take steps to secure the great salvation, would almost always be manifest in conversation, when in health. Yes, we are thankful that time does not count with the dear sister now; and also for the prospect that the Lord of life and glory will soon call for those who are his; and that it may be ours to meet our loved ones again, and with the faithful of all ages see the King in his beauty, and have a seat upon his throne. Come, Lord Jesus, quickly come. Amen.

Remember Lot's Wife!!

In the 17th of Luke and the 32nd verse, this language is found: "Remember Lot's Wife." They are the words of the Lord Jesus. He had been giving the disciples words of warning respecting the coming of the Son of Man. He would come as a lightning flash. They must not be distracted by this or that one, who says see here, or see there. He then describes the unpreparedness of the people for his coming. It would be as was in the days of Noah,—totally absorbed in sensual pleasures, up to the very day Noah entered the ark and the flood came and did its destructive work. Also as it was in the days of Lot,—they ate, drank, bought, sold, planted and builded; but the same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and sulphur out of heaven, and destroyed them all, even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed. I have known these days before the flood and their events dwelt upon by fervent speakers till the audiences have been wrought up to a great

PITCH OF EXCITEMENT,— they could see with the mind's eye the water rising higher and higher, the terrified people climbing trees and watching the rising flood till at last it reaches and overwhelms them; others hurried off to hills and mountains,—but all the same, a like fate overtook them at last; many such vivid pictures of the past have been painted and filled audiences with awe. But the next verse of the narrative, adds: Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed. One story is some forty-three hundred years in the past,—and the other corresponding scene of judgment is about to take place,—but it seems to thrill hardly anybody. Religionists generally read the words of the Lord, "Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed," with little apparent interest. They have

NO SETTLED CONVICTION

whether it is literal or figurative, and take no pains to find out. There are a few, but a very few, in the world who claim to believe it just as it reads; but you would hardly think that some of them, even, really and truly and heartily believed it. The vivid accounts of what is to be, does not begin to enthuse them as the accounts of the flood and of Sodom in the past enthuse others. The blessed Jesus foresaw the tendency toward this; and that is the reason he sends disciples this solemn note of warning, to

"REMEMBER LOT'S WIFE."

To all intents and purposes this says to them:—"Be careful, or a similar fate awaits you,—you have been taken hold of by the spirit of truth and hustled out of Babylon, just as Lot and his wife and daughters were hustled out of Sodom; with the stern command, "Up, of this place, for the Lord will destroy this city. Arise,—take thy wife and thy two daughters which are here, lest thou be consumed in the iniquity of the city; escape for thy life, look not behind thee,—neither stay thou in all the plain; escape to the mountain, lest thou be consumed." In the 18th of Revelation John saw a mighty angel from heaven that lightened the earth with his glory, who cried mightily, Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of demons and the haunt of every impure spirit; and another angel cried,

GET YOU OUT

COME OUT OF HER

my people, so that you may have no fellowship with her sins, and that you receive not of her plagues;" put this beside the words of the apostle 2 Cor. vi. 17, "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you,—and will be a father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." Then take these two warnings, and consider them in connection with the warning given to Lot, and then you will see the force of our Lord's words to us:

"REMEMBER LOT'S WIFE."

Did you notice that this woman who supplies lessons of vast practical worth to us is only known to us as Lot's wife; her name being nowhere given. This woman from Mesopotamia had been converted from idolatry to the worship of the only true God,—whether from deep personal conviction or merely from the influence of association we do not know. But when Abraham and his little colony quitted Chaldea to go to the land God would show him she was among them. She was fortunately connected,—was the wife of a good man—a man not only prosperous, but closely related to the family in whom all the nations of the earth were to be blessed. Though not in everything to be justified,—and sometimes concerned in moves for which he was made to suffer, he was in divine estimation worth saving from

THE DOOM OF SODOMITES.

It was, however, a sad day for Lot when for a business consideration he moved into the wicked city of Sodom. But even this, God overruled, as he often does, the worst of passions, and used him as a witness against the wickedness of the Sodomites. Although it brought him great wealth, it was a bad move,—it did not profit him. When people risk their principles and religion for this world's gains, they will always be the losers in the end. Some of Lot's children married in Sodom and perished in the flames. Brothers and sisters, affections and alliances are often proved to be great hindrances. All their wealth was lost,—some of their children also, and at last his wife. But before he let his vengeance loose of the impending calamity. Lot's wife had seen and entertained these angelic messengers and heard their message,—and could not doubt that God had sent them after witnessing the miracle wrought at the door of her dwelling. It was evident that a terrible conflict was going on within them between the flesh and the Spirit. Natural affection was so strong,—the heavenly messenger had to take Lot and his wife by their hands and lead them outside the city. But after all this divine effort to save her she perished—perished in

GOD WARNED LOT

THE WAY OF SALVATION!

Perished after clear out of the city of destruction. In an instant she became her own grave and tombstone, a pillar of salt,—a memorial for ever of the terrible judgment of God upon luke warmness, half-heartedness and the sin of dividing the affection and consequent disobedience, and of presumption in taking liberties with the commands of God, because they are distasteful. This is another suitable place to quote the words of Jesus, "Remember Lot's wife;" because it is just like the flesh to think that it is hardly right for God to exact so severe a penalty for so trivial an offence. It is ever so with the natural man; the natural man that is an animal man, merely receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God,—for they are foolishness unto him,—and he is not able to understand, because they (the things of the Spirit) are spiritually examined," and they having

NO SPIRITUAL DISCERNMENT.

But there is a fatal oversight back of this thought of a trivial offence. Sin is the transgression of law. No mortal man is authorized to classify transgressions of God's law into trivial sins and otherwise. "Remember Lot's wife,"—she did not go back personally—she merely looked back; but notice that it says, she looked back from behind her husband,—as if lagging behind from her loth and sorrowful feeling at being compelled to leave her old home, friends and possessions. It is safe to say that she did not implicitly believe the message as a whole. Evidently she believed in the impending destruction, but trifled with the warning, to the extent that she thought the threat lest thou be consumed," would not be executed. She looked back notwithstanding the fore-announced penalty for so doing. In the face of clear directions and adequate evidence she only obeyed reluctantly. Again, I refer you to the words of Jesus. "Remember Lot's wife;" and learn the lesson that it should be better never to have heard the way of life than to have turned from the holy commandment delivered her. The half-hearted service tells of our knowledge and convictions,—and at the same time tells that they are held to be dishonored. Sinning against light and knowledge. Again, "Remember Lot's wife." What now? She sinned when at every step she should have said,

"LOOK NOT BACK

BLESS THE LORD,

O my soul, and all that is within me to bless and praise his holy name, for the marvelous favors granted her. Had she not been selected as one of four adults to be brought out of darkness into God's marvelous light in association with Abraham,—while millions were allowed to plod on in ignorance and idolatry? Had she not been rescued by special interposition of Providence from the captivity of the kings? Had not her house in Sodom been saved from a scene of infamous brutality, violence and shame? Had she not been snatched from the horrors of

THE DEVOURING FIRE

And desolations of the city of destruction by the angels? And yet, with this remarkable record of Jehovah's goodness to her, and the celestial voices lingering on her ear,—her God-fearing husband to accompany her, and her daughters as handmaids,—yes; at the very gates of Zoar she cast away her confidence,—put aside the clear will of that God who had been so gracious to her, and trampled on her own salvation almost completed. Reared near the southern coast of the Isle of Wight where many a noble ship that has braved the storms of old ocean for thousands of miles has gone to pieces on just as every soul on board was thrilled with hope and joy in anticipation of greeting loved ones long out of sight. I can think of nothing more distressingly calamitous than to see a vessel like that with hundreds of souls on board wrecked when coming into port. The fate of Lot's wife brings these things vividly to mind. If we reckon from the time Abraham went out of Ur, to the time of Sodom's overthrow, we think at least thirty years had elapsed,—during which there is every reason to suppose she had walked in obedience. After sharing with faithful Abraham and holding firmly to the living and true God,—and remained undefiled for all the years she was in contact with the pollutions and vexations of the accursed city, and now by angelic assistance conducted out of harm's way, her fall almost stuns us. And again in the words of Jesus I say, "Remember Lot's wife." These words of warning, as we have seen were addressed to Disciples, those who like Lot's wife, had believed the and come out of the darkness and superstition prevailing on every hand and determined to live lives of faith, not realization, while mortality endures. Decided to suffer now, in order to reign by and by. Decided to walk in the narrow way which few find,—and avoid the broad way where many go,—in a word, be singular, peculiar, isolated, declare by their conduct that they seek a better country. He bids all such to beware of the

THE NEEDLE ROCK,

DECEITFULNESS OF SIN.

To beware of the influence that is almost unconsciously exerted over us by our surroundings. He wants his disciples to realize that as Lot could not reform Sodom, so the great Babylon out of which we have been called will never be reformed, but utterly overwhelmed, like a great millstone cast into the sea. Her sentence is written in heaven and in all the Book of God. And all who would avoid her plagues and be saved from the fires of her burning,—must keep out of her, that they partake not of her sins. Through the utterances of the Master of the house, and the epistles of his

the great burden of the messages is to the effect that there must be on the part of the called-out ones, a thorough abjuration of every thing relating to the Prince of this world, its vanities, its lusts, and its ways; and close attention to the matter it will be seen that when we obey from the heart our faith in the Word of the gospel, there is a great gulf fixed between us and the world, and we are set apart as citizens of another realm.

The Spirits in Prison.—1 Peter iii. 18-20.

Dear Restitution:

A Sister in the faith, writes for an explanation of the above Scripture, saying it was a difficulty presented by some whom she is endeavoring to show the more excellent way.

This passage of Scripture is one by which immortal-soulists strive to prove the existence of disembodied spirits. If there was a plain, positive statement in the Bible to the effect that man is dual, composed of a mortal body, and an immortal soul, or never-dying spirit, then this text could possibly be construed to mean what most of the churchites think it means; but, as the contrary doctrine is most emphatically taught, i. e. that man is mortal, and that the dead know not anything, we must 'neces, sarily harmonize this statement of Peter with established truth. In doing this we must not deny the existence of spirit beings. God is a spirit—or spirit. Jno. iv. 24. The angels are spirits. Heb. i. 7. And man will be spirit when born of the spirit. Jno. iii. 6.

Even in the present existence man is called spirit, because of the spirit or tenor of his teachings. 1 John iv. 1. And by his teachings or actions we may know what spirit dwells in man. If we have not the spirit of Christ, and manifest it we are none of his. By his spirt God created and sustains all things.

By his spirit through Moses, the prophets and the apostles, God has given to us a revelation of his will and purposes concerning the Adamic race. Adam is the federal head of this mortal race, Christ the federal head of the immortal race that will have been evolved or taken out of this mortal generation. The purpose of God concerning this redeemed, or regenerated host, from the very beginning all centered in Christ. By him, through him, and on his account all things consist. God gave of his spirit to the teachers of the truth as the occasion required; but when he brought his only b gotten Son into the world, he gave not the spirit by measure to him, but bestowed upon him the spirit in all of its fulness, so that he, Jesus the Christ, could say, the words that he spoke were not his own, but the Father's words who sent him, and who dwelt in him. So then the spirit that was in the prophets and teachers of old, was the same spirit that dwelt in Christ in all of its fullness; hence was the spirit of Christ in the prophets, 1st Peter i. 2.

Now we come to Peter's statement. Christ was put to death in the flesh, but brought to life by the spirit. By which (spirit) he went and (or had) preached unto the spirits (or persons) (now) in prison (death) who were aforetime (R. V.) disobedient, when the long suffering of God waited (120 years) in the days of Noah while the ark was being built.

Evidently the preaching was done by Noah, for Peter, 2 Pet. ii. 5, says Noah was a preacher of righteousness, hence he must have preached to the generation cotemporary with the building of the ark.

Among the Conferences.

It was my privilege to attend and take part in six conferences of believers of the Abrahamic faith during the present year: The Michigan conference at Duttou; and the Indiana conference, at Antioch; the Ohio conference at Salem; the Indiana at Roll; the Michigan, at Millbrook; and the Southern Illinois, at Moriah, Ill. All were characterized by the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace, by deep earnestness and firm devotion in the presentation of the gospel of peace. This is as it should be. If there is a people who ought to be united and sound out the word of life in unison, we are that people. We can hardly appreciate the blessings that have come to us in the light of the gospel; and how earnest and how careful we ought to be in the presentation of the glad tidings. In these meetings the speakers presented a solid front. All presented the gospel. No side issues were introduced. From the reports given by the workers it appears that good has been done. The seed was sown faithfully, and not without good results. A goodly number of additions to the body of believers was reported. Our people as a rule have their heart in the work, and want the gospel carried to others. Of course, this is not saying that here and there more might not be done. But in these meetings we hear of what ought to be done, what is being done by others; and we consult as to the best way of doing more, and each one who is in hearty sympathy with the work, goes from the meeting resolved to work more loyally and faithfully than ever. I wish to record my conviction that we have reasons to be encouraged with the work. We know, to begin with, that the faith of the gospel is not popular, and this accounts for the fact that large crowds do not flock into the church. Yet the truth, faithfully and lovingly presented, reaches hearts and wins affections. What, then, should we do in these last days while the time is getting shorter and while the days are evil? Let us rouse ourselves to all the energy and activity of which our natures are capable and "preach the word" with zeal and devotion.

Means of Usefulness.

How many people earnestly covet the ability and opportunity to do good. Often they ponder the varied the various instrumentalities by the aid of which they might accomplish great things. If they had wealth, influence, education, intellectual ability, mental training, or social opportunities, they would do much for God and for humanity. But they find themselves destitute of all these things, and they are discouraged and make no effort.

Such persons do not quite understand the essential conditions of successful effort. They are reaching after things which may be unattainable, and meanwhile are neglecting something far more important which is within their reach. It is not possible for all Christians to be rich, to be talented, to be learned, to occupy high social position, or to be influential in the circles of human society. There are certain things which men cannot command. There are other things which are ever within their reach, and these attainable things are much more indespensable and much more important.

As in the natural world the great things which God gives to men, earth, air, water, fire, are more important than all the possessions, contrivances, and inventions of men, so the great gifts which God bestows upon his children without money, price or limit, are much more essential and important than the things which are beyond their reach, and yet which they are continually desiring.

The elements of spiritual power are thus within the reach and the range of the humblest, the poorest, and the lowliest. The man who cannot have wordly education, may have that wisdom which God giveth liberally to all who ask it. The man who has not an opportunity to possess worldly wealth, may, though poor in this world, yet become rich in faith, and an heir of the eternal kingdom. The man who has not the blessing of health or physical and mental vigor, may nevertheless be filled with the power of the spirit of the Lord of hosts,—a power without which all mental gifts are of little worth, but with which even the feeblest and the weakest may become strong in the Lord.

Why then should Christians waste their time and energies in vain longings after things which God has not seen fit to give them, and which are not essential to usefulness in this world, while at the same time they are neglecting and omitting to seek those higher elements of power without which nothing can be done which will glorify God or bring honor to the Saviour's name? Is it not time to be done with idle, aimless, restless longings after things which are beyond our reach? Is it not better for us to seek those more important and more essential gifts, which God is willing and waiting to bestow, and without which all other gifts and graces will leave us like the sounding brass and the tinkling cymbal, destitute of the power by which Christians live, and by which dead sinners are raised to share the life and glory of the everliving Christ? Let us have done with vain covetings, with yearnings for things which are beyond our reach. Let us each, as we would honor God and bless humanity, pray that we may be filled with the spirit, enriched with all wisdom, and strengthened with all might according to his glorious power; that the word of Christ may dwell in us richly; and that we may be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might; that Christ may dwell in our hearts through faith; that we may be filled with all the fullness of God; and so not withstanding our defects, and weaknesses and failures and infirmities, we may be mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds.—Christian.

To the Called Out Ones.

I wish to say to the Household of Faith scattered throughout the Southern States, that I have now started on my Southern trip which I have had in mind for some time. I am now laboring in Southern Illinois, and will work south from that point. Many have responded, but there may still be others who would like to engage my services. If so, they can do so by addressing me at my Chicago home. The call is open to all Southern States.

There is great need of energy at this time, the time is so very short, when this Gentile age must cease. Are we all prepared? Address W. H. Wilson, 420 N. Willow Ave., Austin Station, Chicago, Ill.

Helping the Weak.

If there be some weak one,
Give me strength to help him on;
If a blinder soul there be,
Let me guide him nearer thee.
Make my mortal dreams come true
With the work I fain would do;
Clothe with life the weak intent,
Let me be the thing I meant;
Let me find in thy employ
Peace, that dearer is than joy;
Out of self to love be led,
To God's kingdom acclimated,
Until all things sweet and good
Seem my nature's habitude.

Dear brethren and sisters of the precious faith:

Deprived of the privilege of being personally present with you, I yet feel that I can make one of your number by making use of my pen, and can help you in some slight measure in this way to honor the name of our God, and to forward his cause. There is not one of you but that desires to honor that high and holy name, you have met together for this purpose. You strive to spread the truth that his name may be exalted in the earth; his "kingdom come and his will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." But there is more to be done than we have ever dreamed of doing. We have been content to do a little for the people of our own nationality in our own land. We have not felt that we had the means, the power of numbers or the workers to attempt more than this. But I am more and more persuaded that this is not enough; that God requires more at our hands than this.

I have been watching the movements among various churches, and noting the results, and have come to this conclusion, that no church that does not have the missionary spirit is or can be blessed. Branches of the Adventists who take hold of mission work, are increasing in numbers, and in zeal, and in spiritual power, while we alas! are making very slow headway. We ought, we must do something for missions; the field is very broad, and the people ready and glad to be taught, our own nation have the Bible, and have come to scorn it, and to utterly disregard its precepts; but few more can be taken out of it now for future rulers in the kingdom; we must go into the highways and hedges. But how can we do this? In many ways. There are many unoccupied fields in our own land; isolated men in the great lumber camps, who have no one to tell them of God, poor foreigners who know nothing of the Bible, thousands of our Jewish brethren who sick at heart with hope long deferred will rapidly fall away into infidelity, if something is not done to save them.

I do not know how we are to reach these classes, but some way ought to be devised. We can at least raise a fund to give the Bible to the Jews. They are eager to get it and read it with avidity. We cannot teach error when we give the Bible. It has been translated into a language that Jews all over the world can read, and I am persuaded that this is one step in God's great plan to bring Judah back into his own olive tree. And if we want to do anything for Jesus, this is the way to do it. Hungry, naked and in prison, in the person of these, his brethren, he asks us to do for these what we would do for him were it he himself instead of them. "A word to the wise is sufficient," so far as this point is concerned. Those who wish the address of the Bible translator can send to me.

As to foreign missions, I can map out no method of procedure unless it be the sending of literature. Could we support a foreign mission? We ought to have one in Africa, India or China, I know it takes money, but the money and the workers will be given, if we make the move.

I have heard of one Advent church that was not able to raise the salary of its own pastor, and was making little or no progress, until its members were persuaded to take hold of mission work with the assurance that God would bless, and bless he did. There was no more trouble about raising the salary and there was always something to give for outside work. God wants us to think of others, he wants us to be Saviors of men, he wants us to bless all nations.

He says, "If ye walk in my statutes and keep my commandments and do them, then will I give you rain in due season, and the land shall yield her increase, and the trees of the field shall yield their fruit. And your threshing shall reach unto the vintage and the vintage shall reach unto the sowing time; and ye shall eat your bread to the full, and dwell in your land safely. And I will give peace in the land, and ye shall lie down and none shall make you afraid, and I will rid evil beasts out of your land, neither shall the sword go through your land."

Jacob vowed to give a tenth unto the Lord. It was a prophetic vow—a vow for his remotest posterity, and as such it is obligatory upon us, "A tenth of all that I have will I give unto thee."

Temporal and spiritual blessings come from giving. Every member of the Church of God ought to be "a tenth volunteer," flock and herd and fruit and grain ought to all be tithed, that means may be in our hands to do the work of the Lord.

May God bless you abundantly in this meeting and may each one come to feel as I do, to thank God that he or she has been found worthy of having a place in the great army of givers and doers. How comforting to feel that we by giving and doing are hastening the coming of the day of God, the glad time of Edenic glory!

Do Not Worry.

"And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin; and yet I say unto you, that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. Wherefore, if God so clothed the grass of the field, which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith? Therefore take no thought saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed? But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you. Take therefore no thought for the morrow." Matt. vi. 28-34.

Worrying is something that brings irritating care and anxiety, or trouble. All people are not alike, some parents when they see their child associating with those that are going the downward road to destruction, do worry, and they are so constituted they cannot help it, they have such love for their child they cannot bear the thought of it going to destruction, and they sit idly by and do not worry, and it is right to worry when the one we love is drifting away, away. The wise man said, Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it, such is not always the case. Our hearts are called to bleed over the wayward son or daughter, and causes us great anxiety, which is worrying and we cannot help it, and we sometimes think if the stern laws that God gave the Israelites were in force today it would redeem many. Deut. xxi. 18. In our daily walk and work we find a great many things that worry. What kind of a school would the teacher have if he did not strive to teach the pupil to improve his mind, and be good morally, and when he sees his efforts are not heeded it worries him. When the farmer sows his grain, and his living is depending on the outcome of that labor, it is a source of anxiety to him until it is secured. Do not worry. Can the average man or woman that has themselves and others to support sit idly by with folded hands and not worry? No, they cannot, and one of the first commands was to work, and to Adam and all of his race has this sounded in our ears, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread till thou return to the ground." And Paul in writing to Timothy says, "If any man provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." And we know that many of us do worry when we have to work. But we think our lesson is intended to teach us to live such Christian lives that we need not worry for the future. First we must obey Christ, which is to repent of our sins, believe in God's plan of salvation, and accept Christ as the one that gives eternal life, and it can be obtained through no other name. Then, when we have repented, and believe in Christ, we must be initiated into the body of Christ by the act of baptism. Then if we are sincere (and God knows whether we are or not) and our belief is the true gospel taught by Christ and his apostles, then our names are recorded in heaven, and if we do nothing to have our names blotted out of the Book of life, and we lay down and die before Christ comes to earth, we may be assured that when he does come, we will be raised to eternal life, and live with him forever. Let every one place themselves in a position where they need not worry is the prayer of your brother in Christ.

The Second Coming of Christ. No. 1.

Editor Restitution:

The articles which I hand you herewith were written in 1897, by Rev. J. G. Schwab, then of Lincoln, Neb., and published in the Evangelical Messenger, organ of the Evangelical Association. In August, 1896, Mr. Schwab read an essay before the Platte River Conference Ministerial Association, of which the undersigned was a member, on "The Jews in History and Prophecy," which was my first eye opener on any definite Bible teaching. From the views presented in that paper I saw the beauty of the Bible doctrine of the gathering of Israel and the pre-millennial coming of Christ. That one idea was the nucleus for others equally true and precious. I still rejoice because I heard said paper read, though I was not at first friendly to the views therein set forth.

A. H. Zraher.

The literal and personal second coming of the Lord is accepted by all evangelical Christians as an indisputable doctrine of the Scriptures. It is not a mere dogma or idle speculation.

The difference in the theological views of His coming grows out of this question: How does the event, considered as an isolated fact, stand related to the scheme of completed Messianic salvation as revealed in the Scriptures? What is its true and essential place in the system of revealed truth, touching the "last things"?

We believe with all our heart that God's Word places this momentous event at the end of the times of the Gentiles, in Dan. 12: 9, called "the time of the end," of which the present Christian dispensation is that part of "the times of the Gentiles" called "the gospel of the kingdom" or the kingdom of God "in a mystery," during which the Gospel is to be preached to all nations, "as a witness against them" in order "to take out of (from among the Gentiles a people for Christ's name," (Acts 15: 14,) preparatory to their admission into "the kingdom of God," when it shall be manifested. (Rom. 11:25, and 8:19.)

We believe further that this manifestation shall begin with the visible, pre-millennial advent of the Son of God, who shall appear the second time without sin unto salvation, unto them that look for him, Heb. iv. 28, at which time his saints shall be gathered to meet him in the air, and thus shall they be forever with the Lord. (1 Thess. 4: 13-18.) "When Christ who is our life shall appear then shall ye also appear with him in glory." (Col. 3: 4.) "For our citizenship is in heaven: whence also we wait for a Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ; who shall fashion anew the body of our humiliation, that it may be conformed to the body of his glory." (Phil 3: 20, 21, R. V.) The scene of the return of the Lord with his church, the glorified bride, to judge the world in righteousness and to inaugurate his glorious reign on earth, is most graphically described in the nineteenth chapter of Revelation. After portraying in sublime beauty the celebration of the marriage of the Lamb and his bride, the church of the first-born, St. John was told to write: "Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb." Then follows the vision of the Lord's return in majesty and great power: "And I saw heaven opened, and behold a white horse: and he that sat upon him was called faithful and true, and in righteousness he doth judge and make war. And his eyes were as a flame of fire, and on his head were many crowns; and he had a name written, that no man knew, but he himself. And he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood: and his name is called the Word of God. And the armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean. And out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron: and he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God. And he hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, King of Kings, and Lord of Lords.' (Rev. 19: 11-16.) There are many reasons why we are and ought to be profoundly interested in the Lord's second coming: and why we in truth are bound to place that coming before the millennial era, and the extraordinary events connected therewith.

We are naturally much interested in 'when" and "how" our Lord shall come. The latter is described in the above Scripture reference. As to the "when," it will be the inauguration of the millennium; which leads us to consider what it embraces. What other great events are associated with this great day of the Lord? For the present, and before taking up other points, let us note that there can be no millennium before the widespread and awful anti-Christian apostasy of the very last days of this dispensation. (2 Thess. 2:8.) No millennium without the resurrection of the just. No millennium without the Jews. "Salvation is of the Jews." Jno. 4: 22. No millennium so long as the whole irrational animal creation remains "subject to vanity and the bondage of corruption." (Rom. 8:21, 22.) No millennium till the Christ of God and of the Bible, and of the church, and of the nations, shall himself return to this sin-cursed and sorrow-smitten planet, and here on the very theater of the fall and Calvary complete and consummate the work of his redeeming love by delivering the natural and moral creation from the curse of sin, and by perfecting and finishing forever the reconciliation of the alienated universe with his Father, God; which divine work is and must continue in course of development until the "coming with his saints."

"This belief," says Harnack, in the Encyclopedia Britannica, speaking of pre-millennial coming of Christ," appears so early that it might be questioned whether it ought not to be regarded as an essential part of the Christian religion. It must be admitted this expectation was a prominent feature in the earliest proclamation of the Gospel and materially contributed to its success."

Prophecy in the Old and New Testaments everywhere forecasts and predicts the literal appearance of the Lord in great power and glory to judge the wicked, to give rewards unto the faithful and to rule the world in righteousness. From the days of Enoch, the seventh from Adam, to the last chapter in the Apocalypse, the oft repeated burden of the inspired seers rings out: "Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints." "Behold, I come quickly—even so, come Lord Jesus. Amen!" From the abundance of Messianic prophesy the Jews were led to look for a kingdom of great power and glory to Israel. They overlooked the fact that Christ must first suffer and die, be buried and rise again, and ascend into heaven from thence to appear the second time in glory to establish upon earth the Kingdom of God. Even the apostles of Jesus did not discern the truth until he opened their understanding and opened to them the Scriptures, beginning from Moses and all the prophets. It was a revelation to them, they had never read the Scriptures in that light. They must wait. How well they now understood the Lord we learn from Peter's address, Acts 3: 19-21: "Repent ye, therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord: And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Here is clear perception! The ascension of Christ is but the beginning of the end. Throughout the Gospel age there must be the further unfolding of God's plan, the preaching of the Gospel in all lands, that from all nations there may be gathered unto his name a people. It is not said that all nations will be nations accept Christ, or that he will be officially recognized in the constitution of any government, neither that the true Gospel will bear away in all countries of the earth at the same time; but, rather, it goes from nation to nation in its course around the globe until the circuit is completed. Israel rejected Christ. He now calles the nations through the Gospel, and finally with Israel saved, these shall hail him, David's Son, the anointed, Lord and King.

"All kings shall fall down before him and all nations shall serve him." This shall be accomplished "when the Son of Man shall come and sit upon the throne of his glory." "Lord, wilt thou at this time again restore the kingdom to Israel? It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power," but meanwhile "ye shall be witenesses unto me.....unto the uttermost parts of the earth." Soon angels appear on the scene; saying: "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." The first chapter in the scheme of redemption is finished. The disciples returned unto Jerusalem to pray, to think, to wait. After all that they had seen and heard we suppose these men to teach the second, visible return of their Lord? Is it surprising that we observe the Apostolic church to have been pre-millennarian? Philosophy and "science falsely so called" have all too soon robbed faith of her hopes and caused the church from looking steadfastly up into heaven in holy expectation, to turn and look into the grave and call death "friend," and the tomb, a second coming of Christ. How mischievous the deception!

The Foundations of our Faith.

We all like to be assured that our religious belief rests on a solid foundation; and most of us are satisfied with the general statement that "other foundation can no man lay save that which is laid, even Christ, the Lord." And it is well when we are able to say this from the heart. But the very idea of a foundation suggests a building, so that in order to have an intelligent faith some further knowledge is required.

Let us "take heed how we build;" and let it not be wood, hay, or stubble, that constitutes our edifice: but let us be workers together with God, and let each of us endeavor to be a workman that needs not to be ashamed, because his work abides.

But, to be more specific. We know, first, that God exists, before we are told that he has a Son, and that this Son, for our salvation, came down from heaven, and having accomplished the work of redemption, has returned to where he was before, thence expecting until his enemies are made his footstool. We look for his blessed kingdom in the future: for what at present exists on the earth has not the least resemblance to it: and meantime acknowledge ourselves to be pilgrims and strangers in the land. We want much encouragement, consolation, and direction, lest our footsteps should go astray, or Satan get an advantage over us. We are taught in God's holy Word that he cannot be mocked, and that mere words of profession are not accepted with him. He must himself draw us ere we can comprehend the greatness of his promises and believe upon the name of his Son. Besides this, snares are on every hand, and a Babel of tongues (full of Babylonish jargon) shout anathemas at each other, until this state of trial becomes a perfect pandemonium, and the simple inquirer knows not where to turn in order to learn even the very rudiments of saving faith.

You have heard of God's covenant with Abraham, subsequently confirmed by an oath to Isaac, Jacob, and David, and even previously shadowed forth by God's announcement to the Serpent in respect to the seed of mother Eve in the garden of Eden. To reduce the covenant to its simplest form we may say, that the just man shall live by faith, and that it is only by faith in the Son of God, as such, that in the present dispensation, we enter into covenated relationship with God. Because he is just we have been justified. Because he has become a sin-offering for us, we partake of his righteousness. Because he is the lawful heir, we become sons by adoption, and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ, and he is able to save unto the uttermost all that come unto God by him. Outside of this, we can only look for uncovenated mercies; and (granting that the judge of the whole earth will do right), I may here ask what claim can we possibly have on the divine gift of eternal life? Clearly a finite being cannot earn an infinite reward such as the life of God within the soul: and thus we are shut up to the thought of salvation only by the grace that is in Christ Jesus. As for the theology, Saint Peter had never even heard of the word when our Lord said to him, "Blessed art thou Simon Barjona, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven." And, to this day, we may add that Simon Peter's declaration is the only creed that has ever been honored by the divine sanction. Nay, more, we are entitled to say "that whatever doctrine is not written in the Word of God (though possibly true) is, nevertheless, presumably false"—as Saint Paul says, "I have not shunned to declare unto you the whole counsel of God."

Nor is there any reason to believe that either Christ or any of his apostles kept back any important doctrine. Why, indeed, should they do so in declaring the mission of him who is "Our Life"? The only reason why essential doctrine gets sometimes put in the background is, because it is not heartily preached. An instance of this may be mentioned of one of the most popular of all preachers, when (in common with 29 other fellow-ministers) he assayed compile a "summary of the things most surely believed amongst us." He and they, though they had no thought of denying it, unfortunately forgot to mention the "resurrection from amongst the dead." A sad evidence that he had been in the habit of preaching the heathen ghost-life every week, instead of the kingdom of God: for the two hopes are absolutely antagonistic. I shall not, therefore, on the present occasion, attempt to do what so many distinguished men have notably failed in, but shall content myself with exhorting every minister and ambassador of Jesus Christ to preach as essential only that which has been actually commanded in holy Scripture; and not to add to his words, lest, in so doing, he be found a liar. Neither shall any man take away from the words of the last book of prophesy, lest God add unto him the plagues that are written therein;—and I would further draw his attention to the folly of hindering men from diligently studying a book to which a special blessing is attached, both when it is read, and when it is heard, lest, forsooth, (because of our possible misinterpretation) God should withhold the blessing which he has most certainly and unreservedly promised.

In conclusion, I would say to every evangelist—Preach "One body and one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling—one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all"—Eph. iv. 4, 5, 6, —"Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a complete man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of the Christ"—Eph. iv 13—Edward Haughton, in The Faith.

Urge Action in Manchuria.

New York, Oct. 15.—[Special.]—Pres. Silas D. Webb and Sec. John Foord of the American Asiatic Association both declared that if Russian aggression in Manchuria were not stopped by the United States American trade would suffer enormously. Both speakers advocated presenting a statement of the conditions in the far east to the administration.

"The time has evidently come for the government and people of the United States," Mr. Foord said, "to recognize and accept the full measure of their responsibility in dealing with this question. That the substitution of Russian for Chinese sovereignty in Manchuria simply means the beginning of the partition of the Chinese empire does not admit of doubt. The question immediately before our government is the preservation of an open market for American products in Manchuria, but the Manchurian market must be reckoned as constituting but a small part of the field for the sale of our products presented by the Chinese empire.

"The future of the greater market depends absolutely on the process of the dismemberment of that empire being peremptorily arrested and Russia being compelled to abide by its solemn stipulation on this point.

"Beyond and above all conideration affecting the present or future of American trade in Manchuria and in the eighteen provinces in China south of the great wall," the report continued "is the larger question of the position of the United States as one of the great powers of the Pacific, with an interest in the development of its commerce closer and more vital than that of any other industrial nation."

Mr. Foord declared that this government must act now with unmistakable decision, and recommended that these considerations be brought to the attention of the government and also the vigorous prosecution of popular education on the subject.

Evolution not Conversion.

A Christian is not a sinner who has learned to quarrel with his sins, nor a man who has been trained or cultivated into Christian-hood, nor even driven into it by the desperate assault of a maddened conscience, but one who has been recreated in Jesus Christ.

I am more concerned to keep in with the Bible than with anybody's theology or with anybody's philosophy or metaphysics. A vulture's eggs will hatch vultures,—no system of incubation can coax them into hatching eagles or canaries. Discipline a thing that is essentially bad, and it will become more and more a thing egregiously bad.

Plenty of air will assist to ripen ripening fruit, but it will also hasten the rotting of rotten fruit. The mistake that so many evolutionists make is in thinking that evolution is always something good natured and that each change is a pleasant lift upward.

As a matter of fact, it only makes a thing more completely what it is already. Mere evolution will not change a bad man into a good man; it will not put into him what was not there before. And the worst thing about the human heart is what it is already.

Man as we know him is essentially bad. The Bible says so, and we know so. The doctrine of man's essential depravity is the least comforting of our theology, but it is terrifically true to Scripture, to history, experience and observation.

I would not like to recommend to any one that he should do something outrageously bad in order to bring about a moral upheaval, but it worked well in David's case. When David prayed, "Create in me a clean heart, O God!" he got a heart entirely different from what he had. — Dr. I. Parkhurst.

God knows to bless. He knew our sin, therefore Christ came to save. He knows our labor, and Christ calls us to his rest. He knows our trial, and Christ brings us help to overcome. He knows our aspirations, and Christ has gone to prepare a place for us. He knows our fear of death, and Christ shall come to receive us to himself, that where he is we may be also.

Notice.

I would say to the brethren that having been again put in the field as Evangelist for the Northern Kansas and Missouri Conference, I am at your service and will go wherever called. While the last year's work did not come up to what we desired, yet the work closed in a very satisfactory condition, and the new year begins with better prospects than ever before.

Now, brethren give me your assistance, send in your pledge, or what you feel able to give for this year's work, and let me know where you are and the situation in your neighborhood.

The 1st of October (Thursday) I will begin a meeting at the Prairie Point School House in Cloud County, Kansas, 14 miles south-west of Concordia and 9 miles north-east of Glasco, in J. J. Wright's neighborhood. Let all the brethren in north central Kansas attend this meeting that can.

Something New—Bible Studies.

Realizing the need of a more thorough distribution of good, wholesome literature, the Committee on Literature, appointed by the Indiana Conference, purpose to publish a series of four-page leaflets, to be known as "Bible Studies." They will contain expositions of Scripture by brethren W. H. Wilson, J. L. Wince, J. F. Wagoner, A. H. Zilmer, and other writers, and will be numbered consecutively. Number one appears in Oct. 7, issue of The Restitution under the heading, "The spirit shall return unto God who gave it." Others will follow later in the same way. We will offer them for sale as follows: 10 copies for 10 cents, 50 copies for 25 cents, 100 copies for 40 cents. Send money order or stamps to A. H. Zilmer, Plymouth, Ind.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When ordering a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Have You Heard of the Lion's Mouth?

Collier's Weekly is conducting a very novel and interesting competition for its readers each month. To enter the contest all one has to do is to review the issues of Collier's for the current month and answer the two or three questions which are printed in each issue, giving such opinion and such suggestions as will aid in improving the paper. Collier's aims in this way to secure the assistance of every one of its readers in making the paper more to their liking. Every reader, in fact, becomes one of the editors and has his voice in building the greatest illustrated journal of the age.

The first prize each month, awarded for the most helpful suggestion, is $50 in cash, with a second prize of $25 in cash, and eighteen other prizes of sets of books, ranging in value from $32 down to $5, making in all $329 of value given in prizes each month. There are in addition, cumulative cash prizes, for those who win prizes in successive months, and a big cash prize of $1,000 for the most valuable suggestions during 1903.

For the convenience of intending contestants who can not be promptly supplied by newsdealers, all the copies of Collier's for the current month will be sent post paid, together with a handsome proof of a drawing by Charles Dana Gibson, upon receipt of 40 cents in stamps addressed to The Lion's Mouth, Collier's Weekly, 438 West 13th Street, New York.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCT. 28, 1903. NUMBER 40.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the (literal) resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Silence.

Our best thoughts are the words we never say;
The well is deep, but naught have you and I
With which to draw for thirsting ones to-day,
And so uncomforted they pass us by.

If we could put love's fire in words! But then,
Our best thoughts are in words we never say;
The golden moment flies and ne'er comes again,
And yet its presence takes our speech away.

How often when we would a pet repay,
The fitting phrase occurs with point the dullest
And best thoughts now in words we never say;
Fame, love, applause, withheld by speech's fate.

And then how much of what we say, we rue,
Saying what we regret for many a day!
Strive as we may, we know that it is true,
Our best thoughts are in words we never say.

Notes By the Way.

After returning home from Northern Ontario, I took a rest for about one week, and met with the church at Chicago. On September 9th I started for Roll, Indiana, to attend the Annual Conference in that State, of which I am a member. I left the train at Hartford City, and was met at the depot by Bro. Johnson, and conveyed to his home at Roll, and was there welcomed by his family. After tea Bro. Kelley came for me, and took me to his residence, where I was hospitably entertained by himself and his estimable wife, who is a daughter of Bro. Roby who is in charge of the Church at Roll.

Roll is situated in the midst of the oil well belt. Thousands of oil wells are visible on every hand.

The congregation at Roll, own a nice church building, in which church the sessions of the Conference were held. Sister Kelley is the church organist, she presided at the organ during the sessions of the Conference.

The sessions of the Conference were marked by a beautiful harmony, which made it so enjoyable. I am told that such a spirit pervades the church at Roll. It does me so much good to meet with brethren and sisters who love each other. Show me a congregation where such a spirit prevails, and I will show you a church which can do effective work for the Master. If a contrary spirit exists, their work cannot prosper. God will only prosper the work of those who work in harmony with his purpose.

Bro. Zilmer, who is president of the Conference, guides the affairs wisely, and would quickly declare out of order that which would be likely to produce discord.

The preaching of the Word was on the whole profitable, instructive, and tended to encourage and build up in our most holy faith. On Sunday morning Sister Woodward addressed the young people at the Sunday school. I was much interested in her talk. I am particularly interested in the work among the young people, both in our Sunday schools, and also in our young Berean Associations. I would like to see the Berean Associations started in Indiana, as we have them in Illinois, and other States. I have seen their benefit in helping the work of local churches. If any one would like information as to their work, you can correspond with Sister Anna Drew, 620 N. Galena Ave., Dixon, Illinois. She is the President of the Illinois State Organization.

What a pleasure it was to meet with the old soldiers of Christ, such as brethren Hatch, Wagoner, Wince, and Bro. and Sister Woodward, and others, they have long held the fort, and are holding it still, though they have grown old in the service; and should the Lord tarry, we will need young ones to step in and continue to hold the fort, and where can they be better trained than in connection with our Berean Associations?

May God bless the work of the Indiana Conference, and may they continue to hold to their steadfastness in the faith, and the love of the brotherhood.

The next day after the adjournment of Conference, Bro. Roby conveyed me to Hartford City, where I took the train for Scirceville, Indiana, for the purpose of conducting a series of meetings at that place.

I am told that the church at Scirceville numbers about one hundred and twenty members. They also own a very good church building. The household at this place seem to be well established in the faith. It always cheers my heart when I go abroad, and find a church solid in the faith, and exercising love one toward another. If we feel at home among such brethren and sisters, it strikes a sympathetic cord in my heart.

"Behold, how good, and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." It is described "as the dew of Hermon that descended upon the mountains of Zion; for the Lord commanded a blessing, even life for evermore." The blessing of life for evermore will be the peculiar treasure of brethren who love each other.

The people who attended the services I conducted at that place, seemed to give earnest attention to the word spoken.

Scirceville is the old home of that faithful old comrade, Bro. J. S. Hatch. He attended the meetings and sung many of his old songs. I formed a pleasant acquaintance with his daughter Sister Scroggs and her husband, who live at that place, and also Bro. Finney and family, and Bro. Weaver and family, Bro. Frier and family, and a host of others altogether too numerous to mention.

I shall long remember my pleasant visit at Scirceville, and may God bless them in their labor of love.

The meetings being ended at Scirceville, Bro. Scroggs conveyed me to Frankfort, where I took the train for Chicago.

I then remained home until October 3rd, when I took the train for Moriah, Illinois to attend the Southern Illinois State Conference. Having to change cars at Terre Haute, Indiana, I was pleased to meet there Bro. J. S. Hatch, who was journeying to the same place. We left the train at Casey, Ill., and there met Bro. Graham, from Waynesville, Ill., and also Bro. Brant, the President of the Conference, who conveyed us to Bro. Louis Weaver's home, who lives near the church.

Conference opened on the evening of October 3, and continued for eight days, holding two sessions in the daytime, and one at night.

The preaching of the Word was done by myself, and brethren Lindsay, Hatch and Zilmer.

The night services were much better attended by the citizens than those in the day time.

The young Bereans were in attendance in good force. Each evening from 6:45 to 7:30, was allotted to the Berean services. Sister Anna Drew, their State President, living at Dixon, Ill., was present, and was the moving spirit in directing their services. The Conference re-elected Bro. Brant, as President, Bro. Louis Weaver as Treasurer, and Sister Bertie Weaver as the Secretary.

Sister Drew said she noticed a great improvement in the Bereans in Southern Illinois from that which she observed the year previous. To note improvement is always encouraging. The work of the Lord must move forward. We cannot afford any backward movement in these last days.

During the sessions of the Conference three were baptized. Two of these were Albert Lenz and wife from Loogootee, Illinois, and the other was one of the Bereans, Miss Stella Claypool, from Marshall, Illinois. May God grant that these dear ones in Christ will be faithful to the obligations and responsibilities they assumed by that act. It means a great deal to a person to have the name of Yahveh-shua called upon you, and become the bearers of that sacred name. It also means a great deal how we honor the sacred name we bear, by our conduct in life. Let no one carelessly and thoughtlessly assume such responsibilities.

In Moriah, as well as other places I visit, attachments are formed when we come in contact with kindred spirits of like precious faith.

The congregation at Moriah is presided over by Bro. Brant, as their elder, and may he be faithful in giving them food in due season. It is a responsible position to assume the spiritual oversight of a congregation, especially in the closing scenes of this Gentile age. Such an overseer must walk faultless before the [illegible] at he may command their [illegible] and also stand firm in the faith once delivered unto the saints.

I was sorry to see Sister Brant so much out of health. Bear it as patiently as possible dear sister, knowing that there is a good time coming when the inhabitant shall no more say I am sick.

On the whole the sessions of the Conference were satisfactory. I spent two days with the brethren after the close of the Conference. Bro. Brant and family accompanied me for a days visit with Bro. and Sister Elliott. I really enjoyed that visit. In their case it is love in a humble log cabin. Four square walls unless love dwells within is no home at all. A gilded palace with hatred therein is the abode of misery.

Bro. and Sister Elliott's cabin carried me back to scenes I have read about in early pioneer life. The cabin he said was about eighty years old. In it was the old fashioned fire place, with their cooking apparatus attached. Sister Elliot is a great lover of flowers, which she cultivates in large quantities, to brighten up the home with the beauties of nature. They were blessed with abundance of the productions of nature in the shape of fruits and vegetables. Their life is a humble contented life divorced from the scenes of sin, sorrow and vice, which prevails in city life. They have in their home quite a large collection of natural curiosities which were interesting to behold. Among other things he had a walking cane made from a bone taken from a shark fish. The head of the cane was made from the tooth of a whale.

In the morning Bro. Elliott conveyed me to Martinsville, a distance of eleven miles. Bro. Claypool living some miles from Marshall, met me and conveyed me to his rural home some seven miles from Martinsville.

I am now conducting a series of meetings with the Marshfield church, which I will report later on.

I am now working my way South from this point. Quite a number in the Southern States have secured my services. It may be that others desire to do so. I am open to calls any where in the South between the Atlantic Ocean on the East, and Oklahoma on the West. You may address me at my Chicago home. It will save the railroad expense to call when near your place. It will be too late when I get past your place. Write at once, and my family will forward your letters to me.

Yours rejoicing in the blessed hope.
W. H. WILSON.

Dear Restitution:

As is well known to Bible students, the Old Testament abounds in types and shadows of the good things to come, and especially is this true with regard to the history of Joseph which foreshadows the whole of Christ's work as the great Life Giver. I have been making a study of the life of Joseph with a view to a conclusion on events which I believe are in the immediate future. Israel today stands in the great drama just where Jacob and his sons stood in the face of famine. The poor Jews of Russia must flee to some other place for food and protection. Will it be to Joseph (Christ) whom they sold nineteen hundred years ago? My object in writing this is not to write or tell some "new thing," but to ask a question, and I ask for information. In the 44th chapter of Genesis is given an account of Joseph's scheme by which he made his brother Benjamin steal his silver cup. What is the significance of the silver cup in the type?

Your brother in hope.
S. J. LINDSAY.

Selections.

The Second Coming of Christ. No. 2.

Editor Restitution:

The articles which I hand you herewith were written in 1897, by Rev. J. G. Schaub, then of Lincoln, Neb., and published in the Evangelical Messenger, organ of the Evangelical Association. In August, 1896, Mr. Schwab read an essay before the Platte River [illegible] Ministerial Association, of which the undersigned was a member, on "The Jews in History and Prophecy," which was my first eye opener on any definite Bible teaching. From the views presented in that paper I saw the beauty of the Bible doctrine of the gathering of Israel and the pre-millennial coming of Christ. That one idea was the nucleus for others equally true and precious. I still rejoice because I heard said paper read, though I was not at first friendly to the views therein set forth.

A. H. ZILMER.

That it is unscriptural to speak of death as the second coming of Christ is shown by a remark of the Savior himself (John 21: 22): "If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? follow thou me. Then went this saying abroad among the brethren, that that disciple should not die: yet Jesus said not unto him, he shall not die; but if I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?" Death is a separator. The Lord's coming brings reunion. Death is an enemy. The Lord's coming brings to us the best friend. His coming is the morning, resurrection, reward, everlasting life.

Again others betray their ignorance or doubt concerning such return of the Lord by spiritualising the promise, and saying that every conversion from sin to Jesus is for such persons the second coming of Christ, and they minimize the ultimate coming to appear as a threefold exercise of divine authority in the person of Christ as a policeman, judge and executioner. There is no cause for rejoicing over such a prospect when the day of the Lord is made an object of uncertain speculations and dreadful forebodings only. Others have pet theories upon the subject and affirm that there will be a gradual gain and growth of the powers of righteousness until the world shall thereby have been subdued unto God. If that is "the blessed hope" then is the outlook gloomy indeed!

Dr. A. T. Pierson remarks upon this point: "Without being conscious of morbid despondency or pessimism, we cannot but think the present condition of both the world and the church as calculated to dishearten any Christian worker who looks for a millennium upon scientific principles of development, by a process of evolution with natural selection and survival of the fittest. Optimists triumphantly array facts and figures to prove the progress of Christianity; but if 'facts and figures do not lie;' they are sometimes arrayed and arranged in deceptive forms and combinations. The [illegible] 'numerical progress of Christianity' is like a soap bubble, brilliant but illusive. For example, Seamen's 'Progress of Nations,' gave the total number of christians in 1880 as 317, 152,009; and in 1886 this number is swelled to 350,000,000, or one-fourth the population of the globe. What intelligent man can be mislead by such a marshalling of figures? Of this vast host at least 175,000,000 are under papal sway, and millions of them do not know the Bible from the prayer book and are virtually heathen. Eighty millions are adherents of Greek and oriental churches, having a form of truth and godliness but denying the power thereof; to both oriental Catholics and oriental Armenians and Nestorians, evangelical Protestant Christendom sends missionaries as to Mohammedans and pagans. 100, 000,000 of Protestants remain (proportion 1 to 14), but not all are true disciples who are identified with Protestant governments, communities or even churches. Within the ranks of the Protestant ministry we find included attitudinarians, latitudinarians and platitudinarians, or ritualists, broad churchmen and liberalists and retailers of insipid commonplaces: among church members formalists who substitute rites and ceremonies and sacraments for renewing grace, and nominal professors who enter the church at a given age as they would an army, and with no more thought of spiritual qualifications."

"Nay," as Bishop Foster says, "the socalled Protestants are divided into five hundred sects, and this number of their strength includes also all the thieves, ex-convicts, the debased, besotted, the speckled and streaked in Christendom." We may add, it includes not only scientific sceptics, but materialists, pantheists and atheists.

It was such insight into the reality of things that constrained such a man as Dr. Thomas Chalmers to confess that his previous conceptions of the progress of Christianity had been erroneous and led him anew to examine the Scriptures upon the whole question, and to write in 1836, "I am far more confident than I was wont to be there is to be a coming of Christ, which is to precede the millennium," also in 1817 to Dr. Horatius Bonar, "I approximate much nearer to your prophetical views than I did in my younger days."

Bishop Foster again remarks: "There is a lack of information on the progress of Christianity. The facts are misstated daily in the pulpits all over the country. Ministers hesitate to present the worst side for fear of causing discouragement. They create hopes that are never to be realized. Compared with the work to be done the past is nothing. Our children's children for ten generations to come must labor harder than we are doing to accomplish the conversion of the world." But are we to expect this at all? We read that the tares and wheat grow side by side till the harvest time; and that is what we see to-day. However faithfully we sow the seed of the Kingdom, Satan's agents outstrip us in sowing tares. The parallel development of evil and good will go on until He comes who will separate them for the fire and the garner. Every cast of the gospel net encloses but a few out the world-sea, and even those embrace both the evil and the good, and so it will be until the end of the age. Christianity is not a failure, thank God! it is accomplishing its mission, but the proposed triumph over all evil is dependent upon the personal return of the Lord himself. This event is taught in the New Testament as imminent, i. e., certain, but uncertain as to time. An event imminent is not necessarily impending; it may be at hand or it may be a long time in coming to pass. The object of this uncertain certainty is to have the servants always in readiness, as is shown in Luke xii. 35, 36, "Let your loins be girded about and your lights burning; and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord when he shall return from the wedding; that when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately."

While the disciples were taught that the Lord's coming was imminent they were also told that certain occurrences must precede the event. As, for instance, false Christs, great wars and commotions among the nations and convulsions in nature, the Gospel must be preached to every nation as a witness against them. "Times of great tribulation as have not been nor shall be." Paul takes up this thought and speaks of perilous times in the last days. (2 Tim. iii. 1; iv. 3). 1 John ii. 18, and 2 Thess. ii. 3, tell of the centralising or focusing of iniquity even so that the anti-Christ, or man of sin shall be revealed. This intensifying and organizing of sin is the certain presaging of the nearness of the day of the Lord.

The coming of the Lord will be a great event. It will be a surprise to almost all men. Conditions upon the earth will be very much as they are seen to-day by the world, and as they were in the days of Noah and Lot. The spirit of the times is one of indifference and apathy by the majority. The coming of the Lord will be sudden even as the lightning. It will be visible to all, for "every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him; and all kindreds shall wail because of him." Rev. i. 7." He shall come in the clouds of heaven." Matt. xxiv. 30; Acts i. 11. "With a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God." 1 Thess. iv. 16. We read in Matt. xxiv. 31, "And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." But in Thessalonians we are told that "the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." This is the gathering together of the living elect by the ransom, the angels. "The Lord shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels." 2 Thess. i. 7. "We know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." 1 John iii. 2. "Then shall ye also appear in glory with him." Col. 3: 4.

A Conscientious Shareholder.

A certain mining company was coming to grief. The shareholders would sustain very heavy losses. Among them was one much liked for his genial ways and kindness of heart. One who was in the secrets of the company determined to advise him to sell out. He went to see him and hinted that it would be to his advantage to sell out quickly.

"Why?" asked Mr. X——.

"Well you know the value of the mines has greatly depreciated."

"When I bought the shares I took the risk."

"Yes but now you should take the opportunity of selling while you can, so as not to lose anything."

"And supposing I don't sell, what then?"

"Then you will probably lose all you have."

"And if I do sell, somebody else will lose instead of me?"

"Yes, I suppose so."

"Do you suppose Jesus Christ would sell?"

"That is hardly a fair question. I suppose he would not."

"I am a Christian," said Mr. X——, "and I wish to follow my master, so I shall not sell."

He did not, and soon after lost everything, and had to begin life again; but when men in that part want to point out a Christian they know where to find one.

Announcement.

The Quarterly Conference of the Churches of God in Indiana will be held in Plymouth, Indiana, over Sunday, Nov. 15, 1903, beginning at 7:30 P. M. on Thursday previous. It is almost needless to specially invite our brethren and sisters to Plymouth, as the hospitality of this Church is so well known as to need no further commendation. It is the desire of the brethren and sisters to have a large attendance at this gathering, both from the State and from abroad. Come one and all and have a good time in spiritual fellowship.

As we go to press today there are on our list just 312 whose time is out now, and their renewals due. Some of these are owing from 1 to 5 years, and of hers only for the current year. If all would pay in what they should we would have in hand quite $675.00.

Now Brothers and Sisters, for some weeks past we have tried to explain our need, and urge action on your part. We are not complaining of the noble ones who always keep their subscription up and ahead, and wish to thank all such. We wish to thank also every one who is doing nix very [illegible] We wish to urge you to more earnest effort. If there are any who are careless and neglectful we wish to ask you kindly to rouse up and send us what is right.

If you could know and realize our situation we feel certain you would respond at once. It is a conviction with us that there is not a Brother or Sister now owing us but who can get the amount they owe easier than we can carry the whole load. We are compelled to struggle on with the burden. Are you not also in duty bound to do your part? Please think of this very seriously, as before your God, and then act.

Another thing that makes this year hard for us is that our Helping Fund is now $144.00 below what it has been other years, and as we have kept the poor ones on our list so far we do not like the idea of cutting them off. Surely there are enough members of the Church of God in this land who have been blessed with abundance, who can spare this amount so that we shall not have to drop the name of a single worthy poor Brother or Sister.

Brethren, these are the plain figures. Will you give attention to these matters? We hope you will without more delay.

Word from Bro. and Sister Woodward who are holding meetings in Warren Co., tells us that fourteen were to be baptized last week, and likely more to follow. Let the good work go on. We will have further report later.

Remember Lot's Wife!!

(Concluded.)

Our great business is to escape the pollutions and doom of this city of destruction. So that if we are Christians in deed and in truth our backs are turned on the world. The Lord and his holy apostles have taken us by the hand and led us out and bid us hie away to the high tablelands of truth and righteousness, and commanded us not to look back. Our calling and attitude today is just as was that of Lot and his wife in their flight from Sodom. The material for the mighty conflagration is piled up,—the fires are about ready to flash forth,—we cannot afford to loiter by the way,—onward, forward, upward must be our motto, and never look back. Another lesson I apprehend our Lord would have us learn from the fate of Lot's wife, is this. That no hesitation, no parleying, no half-way work will answer here. We must be for God and Christ, or it will be a disastrous end with us. I regret to say that in 48 years connection with the truth, I have found very few but what are unduly influenced by the ties of nature, when placed in juxtaposition with the spiritual tie we sometimes sing of.

BEYOND ITS GATES,

OUT AND OUT

"Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love,
The fellowship of kindred minds is like to that above."

Strange, may I not say unjust decisions are frequently made through the warping effect of blood relationship. Natural affection is in itself right, the Creator has organized men and women with that faculty,—and his Word teaches that the lack of natural affection is to be one of the evil characteristics of these last days. At the same time, natural affection should not blind one professing godliness to the

FAULTS OF CHILDREN

on the one hand not to the faults of parents on the other. If we profess godliness there's another utterance of our Lord that we must try to keep in memory, if we do not, something is sure to go wrong; I refer now to the words, It is the Spirit that quickeneth, the flesh profiteth nothing!! Hearts will twine about beautiful forms of flesh, and doubtless it seems mighty hard to think them capable of doing wrong,—but if they are out of Christ their WHOLE LIFE IS WRONG.

If the organization capable of love and obedience fails of these traits there is neither profit to himself nor honor to God,—Jesus being the authority. The flesh profiteth nothing. It is the Lord's wish that we should remember Lot's wife in this connection too. Parental affection may have overcome her at that tremendous crisis in her history;—God is one seals and children in another,—the result was, death, from which there is no recovery. Dear brethren and sisters, I have never before given a discourse upon this phase of the Christian life, nor have I ever heard any other do so,—but I trust you will agree with me that it is a very serious phase, and one that it will pay to dwell upon. Doubtless Lot's wife had maintained her steadfastness against many a temptation, and passed unscathed through many a fiery trial,—and had entertained angels and felt her hands clasped by their hands, and seen the powers of exerted,—and yet she perished because she looked back at the last, contrary to the word upon which her deliverance hung. We of this age, too may have pleasant surroundings and friends and much to interest us in Sodom. There may be much to plead for just one more fond look—just one short halt before the final separation—just one more parting kiss thrown back to what we are called to leave. But God says,

THE AGE TO COME

"LOOK NOT BACK,

lest thou be consumed." Lot's wife looked back and instantly became a sad memorial of Jehovah's anger. Lot's wife is a solemn alarm bell warning of the danger of lukewarmness or indifference to the prophecies concerning coming judgments. The signs may appear dim, and to natural reason there may seem no cause for anxiety, and many may say all things continue as they were, etc. It was always so,—Lot went to his sons-in-law and told them what was going to happen,—but they thought he dreamed, or had taken a sudden

FIT OF CRAZINESS,— but all the same the judgments came. God had spoken, and he has magnified his Word above all his name, and they who are not willing to take it must take the plagues written therein. The slightest clause unobserved, the merest syllable disregarded, the thinnest gloss of human reasoning is liable to work the direst results, "Therefore," says the apostle, "We ought to give the more earnest heed lest at any time we should let them slip." There is one more grand lesson that we ought to learn from this reference to Lot and his wife; and I doubt not our blessed Lord was specially anxious that we should learn it; and that is to get all his children out of harm's way before he pours out his judgments. Listen to the heavenly agents for the destruction of Sodom. "Has thou here any besides? Sons-in-law, and thy sons and thy daughters,—and whatsoever thou hast in the city, bring them out of this place, for we will destroy this place because the cry of them is waxen great before the face of the Lord, and the Lord hath sent us to destroy it." And further on when Lot and his wife and daughters had been brought forth out of Sodom, Lot pleaded to be allowed to flee to Zoar instead of to the mountains and being allowed to do so,—he was told to haste thither, "for," said the angel, "I cannot till thou be come thither." As I said, I believe the blessed Jesus wanted us to know how precious the saints are in

THE DIVINE SOLICITUDE

DO ANY THING

THE SIGHT OF GOD!

And that it is all arranged in the divine programme to do as David says he will, Psa. xxvii. 5, "For in the time of trouble he shall hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock." And in Isa. xxvi. 19 it says, "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they live. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust, for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." Then follows the gracious invitation, "Come my people, enter thou into thy chamber and shut thy door about thee; hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast; for behold the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth." Remember the Lord says, "Behold

I COME AS A THIEF," unbeknown to the world,—the dead saints being raised, the living ones changed,—it would seem the immortalized hosts together with the Lord, go into a secret session as it were, they have become at this time the antitypical Most Holy Place. They are then, too the antitypical ark of the covenant in the Most Holy,—the outer world has no admission here,—the doors are shut against the world now,—they are apocalyptically in the heaven now, although on earth. In this secret place they are in preparation for manifestation to the world, for the prophet explains that the Lord is coming out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth—and the saints come with him; that the vast assembly, yea; the vast assembly of spoken of as one mighty angel coming down from heaven, clothed with a cloud and a rainbow upon his head, and his feet as pillars of fire. Rev. x. 1. This collectively is the strong man of Psa. xix. 5, in other words the Spirit and the Bride Rev. xxii. 17 who in glorious manifestation are "One head and body, and life," are all one. As a bridegroom he will come out of his secret chamber with his bride; collectively, as a strong man rejoicing to run a race. His work is before him. Oh, it was for you and me it is recorded that the angel said to Lot, I cannot do anything till thou be come thither; it is it is written, "Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees till we have sealed the servants of God in their foreheads." We are not worthy of this exaltation and glory,—if saved, it will be all of God's grace. Oh, does any one present resolve in the strength of God, to remember our blessed Lord's command, to remember Lot's wife,—and avoid her doom? Beside our eternal loss, we rob him of his purchase by not heeding his warning voice. He bought us with his blood; we have delivered ourselves over to him. We are his. Let us live to his praise now that we may reign with him gloriously by and by. Amen.

GLORIFIED ONES

FOR YOU AND ME

Wisdom of Seirach.

CHAPTER 21.

1. Child, hast thou sinned, do not add to it any more, and beseech thou for thy former ones.

2. As from the face of a serpent flee from sin; for if thou approachest it, it will bite thee; a lion's teeth are its teeth taking away men's souls.

3. Like a two edged sword is transgression; for the blow of it there is no healing.

4. Smiting down and haughty pride will desolate wealth; even so the house of the supercilious will have been laid waste.

5. A beggar's supplication is from his mouth to his ears, and his verdict cometh in haste.

6. The one who hateth reproof is in the track of an obdurate sinner, and the one who feareth the Lord will turn unto him in heart.

7. Known afar off is the one able in tongue, but the one who apprehendeth, knoweth when it is destroying him.

8. The one who is building his house with alien utilities is like him who gathered the stones in the winter.

9. Stubble gathered together is a synagogue of transgressors, and their end is a flame of fire.

10. The way of obdurate sinners is one made smooth from stones, and at the end of it is a pit of hades (the grave).

11. The one who watcheth to guard law getteth control of his reflection, and the consummation of his fear of the Lord is wisdom.

12. He will not have been chastened who is not subtle; there is a subtlety that increaseth bitterness.

13. The comprehension of a wise man will have been increased like a flood, and his counsel is as a fountain of life.

14. The inner-thought of the savorless man are like a broken earthen vessel, and they will not hold any comprehension.

15. If one hath heard a wise word of men who have exact knowledge he will praise it and will have added to it. The trifler hath heard it and denied it and turned his back upon it.

16. The exegesis of an unwise man is like a little pack on a highway; but upon the lips of a man of understanding grace will have been found.

17. The mouth of a thoughtful man will have been sought in a church (ekklesia) and his words will have been apprehended with the heart.

18. Like a house that hath been left desolate, even so is wisdom to an unwise (savorless) man, and the comprehension of a man without understanding is like words that will not stand investigation.

19. Fetters on the feet is chastening instruction for those without perception, and like manacles on one's right hand.

20. A savorless man will lift up his voice with laughter; but a subtle man will scarcely smile in a quiet way.

21. Like a cosmos (or an ornament) of gold is chastening instruction for a thoughtful man, and like a bracelet upon the right arm.

22. The foot of a savorless man will be swift to enter a house; but a man of much experience will be modest of face.

23. A man wanting in good sense will peep into a house from a doorway; but a man who hath been chastened will stand outside.

24. It is evidence of a man's lack of chastening-instruction to listen at a door, but a thoughtful person will have been oppressed with the dishonor of it.

25. The lips of aliens will have been weighed down with these things; but the words of thoughtful men will have been weighed in a balance.

26. In the mouth of unwise men is their heart; but the mouth of wise men is their heart.

27. When an irreverent man curseth Satan, he is cursing his own soul.

28. The whisperer polluteth his own soul, and in a sojourning state of things he will have been hated.

COMMENT.

The ethical teaching in this chapter in regard to "chastening" should have preserved this book from the limbo of apocryphal oblivion, and the peculiarly apt wording of the 20th verse will commend itself to any one who has familiarized himself with Christ's parable teaching. There are no new ethical principle asserted here; but many of the sayings in this chapter are like gems of unvarying value which we value all the more for their quaint old settings. Read with this thought in your mind and you will see that honor, honesty and uprightness are jewels of unchangable value in all ages.

Conference Report.

The Churches of God of Waterville and Wenatchee met in Conference at Waterville, Washington, Sept. 5, 1903, and took the following action:

We hereby withdraw from the organization known as the Northwestern Conference of Oregon and Washington, and establish an organization to be known as the "Conference of the Churches of God of Central Washington." The reason for our withdrawing from the Northwest Conference is entirely on account of our geographical situation, which makes it very difficult for us to work in harmony with the above organization.

We organize the Conference of the Churches of God of Central Washington in order to combine the resources of the churches, thereby enabling us to elect and keep in the field an evangelist, for the spreading of the gospel, also for other work in the cause of the Master in which we can co-operate to advantage.

We take the Bible as our only rule in faith and practice.

We recognize The Restitution published at Plymouth, Ind., as our church paper.

We believe and will advocate the following truths which are clearly supported by plain Bible statements, to-wit:—

"The final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

All ministers and evangelists sent out by this Conference shall be required to subscribe to this declaration of faith and principles.

This Conference shall meet every three months, on the first Friday in the month in which the meeting shall fall.

It shall have power to grant letters to ministers and elect evangelists.

The officers of this Conference shall consist of a President, who shall preside at all meetings, and first and second Vice Presidents, who shall preside in the absence of the President.

One Secretary, who shall keep a record of each Conference meeting and carry on all correspondence connected with the Conference. An Assistant Secretary, who shall perform the duties of Secretary in his absence.

One Treasurer who shall have charge of all moneys connected with the Conference. All orders drawn on the Treasury shall be signed by the President and Secretary.

The following officers were elected: President, A. L. Corbaley; first Vice President, Walker Perrine; second Vice President, Mrs. Mamie France; Treasurer, Wm. Mills; Secretary, Mrs. Myrtle Titchenal; Assistant Secretary, Mrs. Mina Lake, N. D. and Myrtle Titchenal were elected evangelists.

Letters of commendation were granted to the following persons: A. L. Corbaley, Walker Perrine, Myrtle Titchenal, N. D Titchenal.

It was moved and carried that there be an executive committee, consisting of the President, two Vice Presidents and Secretary, who shall have power to transact any business that may come up during the time of adjournment.

It was moved and carried that a paper be presented to the members at Waterville and Wenatchee, that all who wish to lay by a tenth of their income for evangelist funds may sign, and the paper be handed to the Secretary of the Conference.

Moved and carried that our next meeting be held at Wenatchee, Washington.

Moved and carried that a record of this Conference be sent to The Restitution.

Obituary.

Harry H. Evans was born March 4, 1841, in Washington Township, Warren Co., Indiana, and died Oct. 13, 1903, at his home in Jordan Township. His boyhood career was about the same as others of that period, but he had hardly passed his 19th birthday when his country's perils confronted him, and his naturally brave, honorable nature responded to the call. Sept. 16, 1861, found him a volunteer in Co. K. 33d Ind. Regiment. He was honorably discharged July 31, 1865 as sergeant. He was married Feb. 25, 1868 to Miss Jane Brown. She with 3 brothers, 7 sisters and a host of other relatives and friends are left to mourn his loss. The elder and myself expected to start Friday morning for Warren Co., to begin meetings in the Pleasant View church, the following Saturday evening. But Tuesday noon that ominous yellow envelop was handed us which seldom brings anything but sadness. With feelings of dread we opened it to read, "Preach Uncle Harry's funeral Thursday at 10 o'clock." One of the pleasant thoughts of visiting that church again was to meet Bro. Evans. Now the sad duty awaited us of preaching his funeral sermon. One bright hope came to me amid the sadness, "All was well" with Bro. Harry. How well we remembered on Dec. 10, 1890 seeing Elder Woodward lead him into the water, pushing the ice away while he was buried into the Christ. He arose to walk faithfully until death. The church has sustained an irreparable loss, as has also the faithful wife who is left without father, mother, brother or sister to lean upon, may God sustain her in this hour of sorrow. The esteem in which he was held in the army is plainly shown by the following letter from his Colonel, John Coburn. Elder B. W. Woodward spoke to a crowded house from 1 Thess. iv. 13, Bro. Zilmer and myself assisting in the ceremonies, his comrades of the G. A. R. concluding the obsequies at the grave. And may we all be so faithful that we may meet in that grand re-union that will never end.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Armstrong Evans, Dear Sir:

I have just heard of the death of one of the soldiers of Company K., 33rd Regiment, Indiana Volunteers, Harry Evans. I remember him distinctly as a good, noble hearted, and courageous gentleman; young, hearty, wide awake, brave, dutiful and manly. Such men I can never forget. We had many men of that noble type in the 33rd Indiana. He took his life in his hand in a glorious cause, that will be memorable to the remotest ages of the future. He endured many hardships, faithfully and patiently, believing that under the providence of God, the result would be for the good of this nation. Mr. Evans was a general attendant upon the Reunions of the 33rd and his heart warmed at the sight of his old comrades. The majority of them have passed over the dark river to a reunion that will have no end, while this great nation, age after age, and century after century, will pronounce blessings on the memory of those who rescued it from destruction.

Yours truly,

JOHN COBURN.

Be Kind to the Aged.

See that dear old father or mother sitting there alone in the gloaming; all the inmates of the house perhaps engaged in another room, laughing, talking, enjoying life. Perhaps they do not intend to be forgetful of the silent figure in the old arm chair, but since the dear old father or mother's eyes have become dimmed and their ears dulled, you think they are not as good company as they once were, and you make them feel that you think so by your neglect of them. Little do you realize the lonely hours they spend alone thinking, thinking, until the dimmed eyes cannot hold back the tears as they realize their seeming uselessness in this great busy world. They would like to read but their poor eyes are too dim, and you have no time to spend reading to them; forgetting the sleepless hours they have spent above your little cot, or the hard days of toil to make your life happy. There were days not so very far back when you counselled with them concerning the affairs of the farm or the home, they are just as interested now, but they do not offer suggestions, for your manner toward them has told them they were not needed, and so they sit in solitude while the weary days pass by. Ostop and think, you will reach the same position some day, and will reap what you have sown. Turn over a new leaf from today, make the parents feel they are a part of your life, and a necessary part. Tell them of your plans, ask their advice, seek their judgment. Be kind, thoughtful and patient with the aged.

M. A. WOODWARD.

To the Called Out Ones.

I wish to say to the Household of Faith scattered throughout the Southern States, that I have now started on my Southern trip which I have had in mind for some time. I am now laboring in Southern Illinois, and will work south from that point. Many have responded, but there may still be others who would like to engage my services. If so, they can do so by addressing me at my Chicago home. The call is open to all Southern States.

There is great need of energy at this time, the time is so very short, when this Gentile age must cease. Are we all prepared? Address W. H. Wilson, 420 N. Willow Ave., Austin Station, Chicago, Ill.

To the Brethren in Iowa.

Any locality desiring a meeting any time during the next year, please make application to the Conference Board, at once, stating time, desiring meeting. Address me at Bac City, Iowa.

"Sweet reasonableness," as Matthew Arnold described it, would save from many a blunder, correct many an extravagance, strip away the tinsel from many a fair pretension, readjust our estimate of the value of character and service. It seems to be a prosaic quality, but it is pre-eminently necessary to the wise prosecution of Christian work.

Comfort One Another.

For heavy is the weight of ill in every heart, and comforters are needed much, of Christlike touch.

As we go on the road of life
And often weary in the way,
With changing scenes, with many cares,
And pressing burdens every day,
Let us comfort one another.

The gentle word of sympathy
Spoken in sorrow's lonely hour,
From out a heart of tenderness,
Comes with a sweet and soothing power.
Comfort one another.

The warm clasp of a loving hand,
When words seem vain for hidden grief,
Will often cheer a lonely soul,
Help onward with a left relief,
Comfort one another.

These hearts of ours, how they can ache—
And then how dear the fond caress,
The comfort, peace, the hallowed thought,
Born of a dear one's tenderness.
Comfort one another.

A kindly presence, tender tone,
A soft hand wiping falling tear,
The soothing voice, the cheery word,
From one to whom our life is dear.
Comfort one another.

Apostolic Christianity Versus Ecclesiasticism.

A Soul-Saving Problem. It is evident that there is but very little soul-saving done by the Presbyterian church in America, said Dr. H. H. Rice at the meeting of the Presbyterian Ministerial Union yesterday morning. The reverend gentleman had prepared a thoughtful paper on Presbyterial Evangelistic Work. The central thought of the essay was an advocacy of the immediate necessity of more fruitful labors in the field of religion, which with all its elaborate machinery and enormous expenditure of money, the essayist argued, presents a humiliating picture of impotency and inability to cope successfully with the organized forces arrayed against it.

With the aid of an ingeniously prepared chart demonstrating the fluctuations in religious conversions during the last twenty years, and a long compilation of illustrative figures, Dr. Rice upheld his position that the church is not doing the work for which it was ordained. To convert a heathen in the foreign field, said the gentleman, it costs just $292. How much does it cost to bring an American within the fold? On an average it requires about $200. In some communities it is even more; an expenditure of $300 is necessary to make a Sacramento citizen a Christian and a resident of San Jose requires an outlay of $328 before he realizes the enduring consolation of Christianity. In the Presbyterian churches of San Francisco there is one conversion every four weeks; at our present rate of progress each church member brings a soul to Christ once every sixteen years. How long will it take to convert the world? With many of our churches vacant, with the mass of humanity heedless of our appeal, the problem is a serious one, but one that must be solved.—San Francisco Chronicle, Nov. 11, 1900.

The above is an index of the present church outlook almost universally. Things of an earthly character "wax old and vanish away." The Lord's saying is significant:

"Every plant which My Heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up."—Matt. xv. 13.

Despite efforts to keep the old worn out machine in successful operation, it is spent and exhausted, and destined to eternal decay. Sectarianism is at war with the truth, and will not tolerate it in its pulpits, nor allow the church mechanism to be used in enlightening the public. But its days are numbered, and nearly finished.

Disintegration and dissolution await the modern Babylon and it hastens on. "The soul saving problem" is assuming a critical aspect. The "loaves and fishes" brigade, the clergy, are in the fix we have heard of, "when the devil's to pay and no pitch hot." If the charge seems a hard one, that "the church is a mercenary concern that exists for the benefit and behoof of the clergy it is nevertheless just and true. No religious or political organization can exist where men manage it on a salary, but it must become corrupt. The methods that are in use to sustain the fashionable churches are "business" regardless of Christian propriety. It is just as impossible for a man to preach the truth and maintain popular favor as it ever was. If "the kingdom of God is not food and drink," and if it is to be attained "through much tribulation," it is not a thing that can exist for the benefit of a mercenary clergy. What would these ecclesiastical frauds do if they could not "milk the goats"? They appeal to the pride of life vastly more than to the vital and eternal life interests of man. According to their own showing, it costs them $200 to $300 to "save a soul"—that is to get one to become a profitable patron of their "soul saving" machine. Their methods have to be adapted to the changes and fluctuations of public taste and sentiment. The "pulpit orators" have to be ingeniously on the alert for new material to keep the pews tolerably well occupied. Even those who affect so much independence of thought are time serving, "wandering stars" and "clouds without water, carried about with" the popular "tempests." These "dry wells" are destitute of the "water of life"—they are strangers to the elements of saving truth, and are not searching for those heavenly treasures, having no use for them, as they are not the things with which to entertain the "itching ears" of those who are "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God."

"Progressive Christianity" is in demand, but what that signifies, none who talk about it are able to define. Macauley, the English historian, said: "Religion (Christianity) was not a progressive science, because nothing more could be known about it than had been known for the past 1800 years." Christianity is a system of revealed truth, "made known to all nations for the obedience of faith." Since that was by divine authority promulgated no new sources of information have been developed. Man-made systems of piety are ever "progressive"—that is, their subjects are "ever learning and never able to "come to the knowledge of the truth." To know God is simply to comprehend what he has by his servants taught. Counterfeit Christianity superseded the genuine original, so that now true "progress" is the way of getting back on to the apostolic platform. Original Christianity was not a financial scheme to enrich its first advocates with worldly honor or money, and so the new scheme was invented with "Peter's power" as the fundamental idea. Lordship over body, conscience and pocket lies as the corner-stone to the new scheme made "Catholic" by Antichrist who claims in "Christ's stead" to be his successor—"Vicarius Filii Dei"—the vicar of the Son of God." Helped to this title and position by a pagan monarch, that "Christianity" became the state religion. It assumed the right to absolute sovereignty, and by might suppressed every form of religion which did not conform to it. Truth could only be resurrected by a critical knowledge of what remained of the writings of the first promulgators of the good message which they received from the genuine headquarters. This is, thank God, a free inheritance of all anxious inquirers, in spite of all ecclesiastical monopolies, whether Rome, Westminster or Salt Lake City. "Blessed is he that readeth, and those who hear." Since "faith comes by hearing the Word of God," whether the student reads it for himself, or hears it from others, the effect is the same, "to produce" saving "faith." To guard and preserve this sacred right the Holy Spirit laid a heavy penalty upon all who dared to curtail or add to the Living Oracles. This Word is so free that no one can monopolize it, Papist or Protestant, under any pretense of authority, by the laying on of the hands of pope or priest, and every man who learns it directly or indirectly, by reading or hearing, can be gospel preachers, under Paul's restrictions. Under this blessed free gospel decree, it is binding upon every man who acquires a knowledge of it to publish it against the decrees of popes, priests, councils, synods, conclaves or ecclesiastical assemblies, and none but a counterfeit ever undertakes to monopolize what God has freely given to the world at large.

"Let him that heareth [any body] say come! And let him that is athirst come!! And whosoever will let him take the water of life freely!!!"—Rev. xxii. 17.

The only one who would forbid any body's free administration of it is the man who has a counterfeit that he fears will be exposed.

When Paul went up a prisoner to Rome on a charge of the Jews, for teaching sedition and heresy, candid men of sense saw the true state of the case, and he won many friends who were bold to repeat what he taught, and whether by friend or foe, Paul rejoiced to know that the Word was preached so freely. Paul was quite different from the ecclesiastical mountebanks who strut about with surplices and mitres, wearing images of the cross about their necks, bloated with pride, titled with "Reverend," "D.D." et cetera. He never subscribed himself "Rev. Dr. Paul," "Bishop Paul," "Lord," "Rabbi," or any other token of vanity. These are sure marks of a counterfeit pietism. "Be not ye called Rabbi" said YAN SOU'S. His true servants will never so heralded. They do not live for worldly honor or gain. The Sovereign of heaven and earth has a superlative contempt for pride. Those who truly have any divine charge are commanded not to be shepherds for "filthy lucre's sake, nor to be lords over God's heritage, but examples to the flock." See 1 Pet. v. 1-6.

The apostles foresaw the state of things that would soon succeed their administration. When Paul was making his last voyage toward Jerusalem, he touched at Miletus, and called the chief men of the ecclesia at Ephesus, and appealed to them concerning his unselfish conduct, telling them that "grievous wolves" would succeed him, and of their number the truth would be perverted, and the body politic would become a prey to the love of silver, gold and apparel, and that, instead of supporting the weak by labor as he and his faithful co-workers had done, the wolves would feed on the flock upon the principle that it was "more blessed to receive than to give." The wolves have had the flock in charge ever since, and keep telling the flock that the church is "infallible"—that means, the "wolves" who kill and devour. These ravenous beasts were the only "successors of the apostles" that Paul expected to succeed him. See Acts xx. 17-35.

What Paul taught Timothy, he directed him to "commit to faithful men who would be able to teach others" that system of faith, "enduring hard fare as good soldiers" in the field where luxury is unknown. The characteristics of these modern wolves in fat sleek sheepskins are "infallible" pointers to their "succession." See 2 Tim. ii. 2 12

When apostolic methods return to the management of the Christian body, God and Christ can be in fellowship with it, and not before. The apocalyptic Babylon can no more constitute the ecclesia of God than could old Nebuchadnezzar's kingdom be identical with the kingdom of Israel.—Eusebius.

Time of the Coronation of God's King.

Is it in the past, or is that great event yet to transpire? If that King be the Messiah of whom David was the type and royal father, which is very generally conceded, still, its future, by many worthy expositors, is seriously controverted. Was Jesus, the Messiah, crowned at his ascension? Stephen said, "Behold, I see heaven opened and Jesus standing on the right hand of God." Acts vii. 55. Sixty-two years after his ascension, Jesus said, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father on his throne." Rev. iii. 21. Jesus is that Nobleman that went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return. Up to this time (A. D. 96) Messiah was at the right hand of the Father occupying his Father's throne, he officiating as the ante-typical High Priest in that far country, heaven itself. Why then, did he not, at once receive for himself a kingdom? Because the duties of another office, that of his priesthood, were required to be executed before his kingdom could be received. The Messiah undertook the work necessary to secure redemption. That work required the execution of the duties of three consecutive offices: (a) those of a prophet; (b) those of a High Priest; and (c) those of a king. During the period of the first advent he filled the office of a great Teacher, like unto Moses; and when on the cross, he said, "It is finished," it was simply the winding up of those duties connected with his prophetic office, and with his introduction to the priestly office; at his ascension he entered upon the discharge of his official work of his priesthood, a High Priest upon his Father's throne; where he still sits, and will continue until when that office is fully executed. He is then introduced to the Ancient of days (Dan. vii. 13-14) as one ready through obedience to enter upon the discharge of the duties of his third office, viz., those of a king. It is then that his coronation takes place; and his inauguration or investment with all the rights and insignia of his regal office, the chief heir to the throne of his father David, with authority to re-establish that kingdom that had been without a diadem and in ruins since the days of Zedekiah; he whose right it is, is crowned, and as King of kings, and Lord of lords, entered upon the official work of subjugation (1 Cor. xv. 26) Messiah's priestly office must first be finished.

To approximate the time of the coronation let us examine the date given in Dan. vii. 9-12. The power symbolized by the little horn, is arraigned before the court of the Ancient of days, that august personage being president. Charges are brought forward, and by legal testimony, amply sustained. Judgment is rendered in favor of the saints; the criminal is ordered to execution. That national judgment has been in process of execution during the present century. That national judgment must antedate its execution, and, therefore, near the close of the last century; but the Son of Man is not introduced to the Ancient of days, till after the sentence is being executed, and consequently, does not receive his kingdom till a later date; the judgment, therefore, is future but near.—*Selected by H. Outcome of a Far Eastern War

If Japan and Russia fought single handed the winner would take Corea, would keep or gain Formosa, would immensely increase its prestige in China. Such would be the only results. Neither nationality could be submerged by the other. Neither capital, in all probability, would sustain even a temporary occupation by the troops of its enemy. The sea is as great a bulwark to Tokio as it has always been to London, and St. Petersburg is a hundred times safer against the mikado than it was against the great Napoleon.

The first question of the war would be the question of allies. If England were drawn into it on one side and France, or France and Germany, on the other, the consequences would be too far reaching even to guess at. The oriental phase of such a conflict would be lost sight of in the occidental vision, and the speculations would be occupied only with the result of the European conflict. But if the good sense of the European powers kept them, as it probably would, out of the fight, a panorama of great professional interest would unroll itself before professors of the military art.

What would be the result of this war between the most easterly of the eastern peoples and the most easterly of the western peoples? The scales hang pretty evenly at present. The weight of a great military genius thrown into either side would decide the balance. Whether such a genius would appear, and on which side he would appear, is a question insoluble. Japan is feeling that period of national exaltation, advancement, and success in which geniuses usually make their appearance—while Russia is not. But such a criterion cannot be definite enough to impose the prediction that a great captain will emerge from the mists to lead his wiry, yellow countrymen on to victory.

The first part of the war would be by sea. If Russia sunk or drove into harbors the Japanese warships the bear would then have no trouble in marching victoriously into Corea and in unloading shiploads of his Cossacks upon the tea fields of Formosa. Peace would thereupon be signed on the basis of the status in quo, for Japan could no longer resist. If, on the other hand, Japan placed a broomstick at its masthead and swept the Yellow sea the fight would just begin. The mikado would then have to unload his soldiers on the coasts of Corea, where the gray host would be waiting on a battlefield.

What would be the result of the naval part of the war? The fleets of the two powers are so nearly equal in numbers and kind that the qualities of the admirals and the qualities of the men behind the guns would decide. Russia, being a great inland empire, does not produce any considerable number of natural sailors. She may have splendid trained sailors—the event will decide that—but she has not anywhere the number of natural sailors that Japan, with a fishing population of 2,000,000, has. As to marksmanship, we know nothing. The Japanese soldiers are good marksmen, both with rifle and cannon. The Russian soldiers have not had so much practice and are not so good. The same may or may not be true of the sailors of the two nations. A point in favor of the Japanese fleet would be its nearness to home stations and its fighting on interior lines against fleets operating from Vladivostok and Port Arthur, and the reinforcements from Europe.

If the Japanese prevailed and were able to land troops on the continent, the second phase of the war would begin. Russia is said to have now a quarter of a million men in the far east. On the other hand, when Admiral Alexieff held his review at Port Arthur a few days ago, with the idea of impressing upon Japan the futility of attacking the bear, he assembled but 70,000. Japan can easily raise and equip half a million troops without drawing on its second reserve. If, therefore, Russia did not add considerably to her present forces before the naval battle was over Japan would have the best of the beginning of the trouble. In the march to Pekin it was the expression of war correspondents, as well as American and British officers, that the Japanese were the best soldiers in the expedition—better than the Americans, British, or Russians. If that be a true estimate, the Japanese would whip an equal number of Russians, and Russia would need a considerably superior force to carry off the battle flags.

Russia has about three times as many inhabitants as Japan, and, inferentially, could raise three times as many soldiers. Fifteen-sixteenths of these inhabitants, however, live 5,000 miles from the theater of war, and the conduct of military operations at that distance from the main seat of supplies is not an easy task.

If the mikado got the better of the first land campaign in Corea, Russia, rather than have an expensive war carried on in its province of Manchuria, probably would be willing to call the whole war a misunderstanding and treat on the basis of the status in quo—namely: Russia in Manchuria, with Japan suzerain of Corea.—Tribune.

A Purchased Life.

During the Reign of Terror in France—between June, 1793 and June 1794—a young man, by the name of Loizerolles, was brought before the Revolutionary Tribunal and condemned to death. His father, a venerable, white-haired old man, would not allow himself to be separated from his son, but accompanied him to prison.

On the day appointed for his execution, the young man, exhausted by the strain upon his nerves fell asleep in his dungeon, and the father kept watch beside him. Shortly afterwards the jailor, in company with some soldiers, presented himself at the door, holding in his hand a paper containing a list of the unhappy persons who were that day to suffer death.

Coming up to the unfortunate condemned ones, he called out the names from his list, ticking them off with a pencil as they answered. But when he came to the name of "Loizerolles," no one rose to reply to it. A sudden thought took possession of the breast of the aged father, and he replied to the call when it was made the second time.

He joined the ranks of the condemned, who were setting out on the sad journey to the scaffold. He did not dare to embrace his son, for fear of awakening him, and arousing the suspicion of the guards, but in a low voice addressing his companions in captivity, who were looking at him with tearful eyes, he said, "When he awakes, I conjure you to calm him, and prevent any imprudent despair on his part from rendering my sacrifice useless. I have the right to be obeyed. Tell him I forbid him to endanger the life which I have the second time given him." He then went out with the crowd of doomed men, and laying his head upon the scaffold, murmured these words: "Lord, watch over and protect my son."

Had he not a claim that the son whose life he had purchased by the sacrifice of his own should make good use of it? That is Christ's claim on every Christian. It is "the reasonable service," incumbent on every one who gave "his life a ransom for many." Matt. 20: 28. What a lesson this incident teaches!

As one looks round upon the community to-day, how clear the problem of hundreds of unhappy lives appears! Do we not all know men for whom it is just as clear as daylight that what they need is, the sacrifice of themselves for other people? Rich men who with all their wealth are weary and wretched; learned men whose learning only makes them querulous and jealous; believing men whose faith is always souring into bigotry and envy—every man knows what these men need; just something which shall make themselves go out into the open ocean of a complete self-sacrifice. They are rubbing and fretting and chafing themselves against the wooden wharves of their own interests, to which they are tied.—Philips Brooks.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

I Can't Stay if you Swear.

A boy who attends a Sunday school in town went into the country last summer to spend his holidays at a farm-house—a visit he had long looked forward to with great pleasure. He went out to help the men to gather in the harvest. One of the men was an inveterate swearer.

The boy having stood it as long as he could, said to the man, "Well, I have made up my mind to go home tomorrow."

The swearer, who had taken a great liking to him, said, "I thought you were going to stay all the rest of the summer."

"I was," said the boy, "but I can't stay where anybody swears so; one of us must go, so I will leave."

The man felt rebuked, and said, "If you will stay, I won't swear;" and he kept his word.

Boys, take a bold stand for the right; throw your influence on the side of Christ, and you will sow seed the harvest of which you will reap both in this world and the next.—Endeavor Banner.

Choosing.

The choosing of Christ decides destiny for time and eternity. Pizarro, in his earlier attempts to conquer Peru, came to a time when his followers were about to desert him. Drawing his sword he traced a line from east to west. Turning toward the south, "Friends and comrades," he said, "on that side are toil, hunger, nakedness, desertion, death; on this side are ease and pleasure. There lies Peru with its riches: here Panama with its poverty. Choose, each man as becomes a brave Castilion. For my part, I go to the south." So saying he stepped across the line. One after another, his men followed. This was the crisis in Pizarro's fate.

Christ bids us choose him and leave all to follow him. Luke ix: 23: 18: 19, 30.

"Our Cause."

"The Lord bless our cause!" Amen! But be sure "our cause" is his cause. Prayers for "our cause," "our theology," "our doctrines," have made Babylonish captives by the thousands. When you pray for "our cause" again, be very sure "our cause" is the cause for which Jesus gave his glorious life; and, lest "our cause" should be spoiled by human opinion, or mere churchism, learn first to say fervently and humbly: "Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven." This may spoil "our cause," but it will hasten the coming of Christ's kingdom, and this is all we need to wish.—Selected.

The Bible.

"Here is a looking-glass to show you your spots, and a laver to wash them off; here is a casket full of jewels, a heaven full of stars, a book full of God." Look in that glass, wash in that laver, claim that casket, gaze on that firmament so full of the stars of promise and prophecy; and love that God who hath "exalted his Word above all his name;" that it may be well with you forever.—John Cox.

There are many people who are only waiting for grand opportunities. But there is an immense difficulty in getting them, in the meantime, to do the next thing, the nearest thing, a very simple thing. If the prophet bade them to do some great thing, why, they would do it with trumpets and songs and drums; but to do the little duty, the daily task, the common round, is too much to be expected of genius. Beware of genius, if it is not translatable into some kind of action and charity. It is not a dream from heaven, but a nightmare—from whence I know not.—Dr. Joseph Parker.

The popularity of fine illustrations handsomely reproduced on good paper is becoming more and more evident, as the make-up of the leading magazines it studied. The November Cosmopolitan, for instance, contains 119 reproductions of portraits and drawings illustrating a wide range of interesting subjects.

Beware lest you forget God. It is easy enough to remember God when the times are hard and you want to ask him to make them better, but it is a very different matter to think of the Almighty when we have plenty and are having a good time in our everyday lives.

"Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him. For he knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust." Psa ciii. 13, 14.

Our Sufficiency.

Mankind considered singly and alone are fragmentary, and unable to accomplish great works; and are often led to inquire, in view of the burdens and responsibilities which confront them, "Who is sufficient for these things?"

Some suppose that our sufficiency depends upon wealth, and that as "money answereth all things," the great need of the church of Christ and the cause of God is money; hence, with some there is a constant call and clamor for money. Yet frequently those who have the most money accomplish the least work; there is no sufficiency in money.

The sufficiency of others seems to consist in organization, in combination; in not only doing what they can do and are disposed to do themselves, but in controling what others do, so that they can direct other people's work, handle other's money, and receive the credit of other people's labors. And yet all these means and measures often prove entirely insufficient to accomplish desired results. Interests thus fostered often dwindle, and men thus nourished, sheltered, protected, and coddled, become weak and inefficient, and live in the past rather than in the present, and accomplish little for God and for humanity.

The Apostle Paul had a large measure of success in the work to which he was called, and was able to accomplish much in the service of the master. He gives the secret of it: "And such confidence have we through Christ to God-ward: not that we are sufficient of ourselves; but our sufficiency is from God; who also made us sufficient as ministers of a new covenant; not of the letter, but of the spirit: for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life." 2 Cor. iii. 4-6.

Here is the sufficiency of the servant of God: not in himself; not in his knowledge, his wealth, or his wisdom; not in anything he has done or can do, or think or plan, not in managing other people, and controlling the course of events; not in shrewd and crafty management, where the wisdom of the world and of the serpent are combined; but our sufficiency is from God; from his commission which bids us to go into all the world; from his equipment, "the armor of righteousness on the right hand and on the left;" from his spirit, the divine energy dwelling within—these give us a sufficiency, independent of wealth, independent of reputation, independent of majorities, independent of votes, and plots, and schemes;—a sufficiency that enables a man to stand alone amid thousands, and which makes him a power for God; bold in the midst of danger; honest in the midst of corruption; faithful among the faithless; "steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord."

Blessed are they who know and understand the source of their sufficiency and efficiency in the work of God. Happy are they who, ceasing from man, whose breath is in his nostrils, learn to cleave unto the Lord with purpose of heart; standing steadfast in the faith, walking obediently, and doing the will of him who has called them out of darkness into light, and made them witnesses and messengers, to carry the glad tidings of salvation to earth's remotest bounds.—Christian.

Notice.

I would say to the brethren that having been again put in the field as Evangelist for the Northern Kansas and Missouri Conference, I am at your service and will go wherever called. While the last year's work did not come up to what we desired, yet the work closed in a very satisfactory condition, and the new year begins with better prospects than ever before.

Now, brethren give me your assistance, send in your pledge, or what you feel able to give for this year's work, and let me know where you are and the situation in your neighborhood.

The 1st of October (Thursday) I will begin a meeting at the Prairie Point School House in Cloud County, Kansas, 14 miles south-west of Concordia and 9 miles north-east of Glasco, in J. J. Wright's neighborhood. Let all the brethren in north central Kansas attend this meeting that can.

Have You Heard of the Lion's Mouth?

Collier's Weekly is conducting a very novel and interesting competition for its readers each month. To enter the contest all one has to do is to review the issues of Collier's for the current month and answer the two or three questions which are printed in each issue, giving such opinion and such suggestions as will aid in improving the paper. Collier's aims in this way to secure the assistance of every one of its readers in making the paper more to their liking. Every reader, in fact, becomes one of the editors and has his voice in building the greatest illustrated journal of the age.

The first prize each month, awarded for the most helpful suggestion, is $50 in cash, with a second prize of $25 in cash, and eighteen other prizes of sets of books, ranging in value from $32 down to $5, making in all $329 of value given in prizes each month. There are in addition, cumulative cash prizes, for those who win prizes in successive months, and a big cash prize of $1,000 for the most valuable suggestions during 1903.

For the convenience of intending contestants who can not be promptly supplied by newsdealers, all the copies of Collier's for the current month will be sent post paid, together with a handsome proof of a drawing by Charles Dana Gibson, upon receipt of 40 cents in stamps addressed to The Lion's Mouth, Collier's Weekly, 438 West 13th Street, New York.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. VOLUME LII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, NOV. 4, 1903. NUMBER 41.

Walter Tomlinson 24 Cincinnati

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Dreaming of Home.

It comes to me often in silence,
When the firelight sputters low—
When the black, uncertain shadows
Seem wraiths of long ago:
Always with a throb of heartache,
That thrills each jubilee vow,
Comes the old, unquiet longing
For the place of home again.

I'm sick of the roar of cities
And of faces cold, and strange;
I know where there's warmth and welcome,
And my yearning lauds range
Back to the dear old homestead,
With an aching sense of pain
But there'll be joy in the coming
When I go home again

When I go home again! There's music
That never may die away,
And it seems the hands of angels,
On a mystic harp at play,
Have mingled with a yearning sadness
On a beautiful, broken strain,
To which is my soul heart wearing—
When I go home again.

Outside of my darkening window
Is the great world's crush and din,
And slowly the autumn shadows
Come drifting, drifting in.
Sobbing, the night wind murmurs
To the sphob of the autumn rain:
But I dream of the glorious greeting
When I go home again.

Did God Introduce Sin Into the World?

The advocates of Universalism paint with a great deal of satisfaction to the statement of God, "I make peace and create evil." Isa. xlv. 7. This is done to prove that God is the first Cause of sin. Hosea Ballou, the apostle of modern Universalism, said, "If it should be granted that sin will finally terminate for good, in the moral system, it will then be necessary to admit that God is its first Cause, or we cannot say that God is the Author of all good."—On The Atonement, p. 17. Does the text before us prove that God is the "first Cause" of sin? If so, how does it prove this? What if the text does say that God makes peace and creates evil? Does that prove that he introduced moral "evil," sin, into the world? By no means! Let us enquire into the "evil" which God creates. "Evil," as a noun, is 1, "that which produces unhappiness; anything that directly or remotely causes suffering of any kind to sentient beings; injury, mischief, harm, calamity. 2. Moral badness, or the deviation of a moral being from the principles of virtue, impressed by conscience, or the will of the Supreme Being." Which of these is the "evil" of our text? God does not say, "I create sin." Are idolatry, theft, murder, adultery, and drunkenness of God's "creation?" Then let me say, that "every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving; for it is sanctified by the Word of God and prayer." 1 Tim. iv. 4, 5. If you do not want this principle applied to moral evil, I must kindly ask to be excused from making God the first Cause of sin; for if he "created" sin, it is "good," and should be "received with thanksgiving." What is sin in its essence? "Sin is lawlessness." 1 John iii. 4. R. V. What is law? A rule of conduct established by authority. Who made such a rule of conduct? God the "lawgiver." Jas. iv. 12. Whose conduct was to be affected by this rule? Man's. What was the first law given to man? "Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day thou eatest thereof, dying thou shalt surely die." Gen. ii. 16, 17. What did this law express? The will of the Lawgiver. Was it his will that man should eat of the fruit of that tree? It was not, for God said, "Thou shalt not eat of it." What did man do? He "did eat." Gen. iii. 6. He thereby became guilty of "disobedience." Rom. v. 19.

That "disobedience," by whom did it come into the world, by God, or by man? "By one man sin entered into the world." Rom. v. 12. That "sin" was Adam's transgression." 14. It was not pleasing to God, it was not "good," and therefore not to be "received with thanksgiving." It was an "offence" which brought death in its wake. To whom was it so "offensive?" To God the Lawgiver, of course. Then how can it be said God is "the first Cause" of sin? of moral "evil?" Does the Bible, and does God, blow hot and blow cold in one breath? Never! It is puny man, who taxes his ingenuity to find some excuse for his sin and to cover up his shame. In the sight of God there is no cloak or excuse for sin, John xv. 22. 24. Man may "sew fig leaves together and make aprons" (Gen. iii. 7), but God knows he is naked and "without excuse." Rom. i. 20; ii. 1.

The "evil" of which the text speaks is not sin, but punishment for sin, mischief, harm, calamity. Let any one carefully read the following, and he will see what is the "evil" which God "creates." Ex. xxxii. 12, 14; 2 Sam. xxiv. 16; Deut. xxxi. 17; Joshua xxiii. 15; Judges ii. 15. The foregoing texts may suffice for our present purpose, though the list might be considerably enlarged. Moral "evil," sin, is an "abomination" in the sight of God. Ezek. vi. 9-11. Then how can God be the Author of such a thing? Does he create that which he hates? Or if, as Universalism asserts, "sin will finally terminate for good," why does God hate sin? James tells us that "sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." Jas. i. 15. This is the "termination" of sin. Is death, the product of finished sin, good? Moses understood "death" to belong in the same category with "evil" injury, mischief, harm. Deut. xxx. 15.

Solomon tells us that "the fear of the Lord is to hate evil." Prov. viii. 13. And "by the fear of the Lord men depart from evil." Prov. xvi. 6. "Hate evil and love the good." Amos v. 15. Are we to hate that which God is said to "create?" Are we to hate that which will "terminate for good in the moral system?" How is this? Reader, ponder this!

See, by way of contrast, the difference between Universalism and the Bible. The former says God is the "first Cause" of sin; the latter, that "by man came sin." Universalism says, "Sin will terminate for good," while the Bible says, "Sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death."

A little further study of the text under consideration will show the character of the evil which God creates. "I make peace, and create evil; I the Lord do all these things." "Peace" and "evil" are here placed in contrast. "Peace" is the result of righteousness. "Evil" comes as the result of sin. God makes and creates either according to the conduct of those who are under his jurisdiction. "Shall a trumpet be blown in a city, and the people not be afraid? Shall there be evil in a city, and the Lord hath not done it?" Amos iii. 6. Why is "a trumpet blown in a city?" Because there is danger. See Ezek. xxxiii. 1-6. The sword is coming. The watchman is to blow the trumpet and warn men of coming danger. Who sends the sword? God says, "When I bring a sword upon the land." This is the "evil" of which the ped[illegible] when the trumpet is blown according to Amos iii. 6. Who brings the evil? "The Lord hath done it." In the light of the above, where is the moral "evil," sin, which "the Lord hath done?" It lies entirely outside of the teaching of the Word of God, and is to be found in the folds of a theory which vainly tries to shift the responsibility from man the sinner, to the righteous God that sinneth not. It will not bear the test of rigid investigation.

Reader, which will you believe—God or Universalism? They can not both be true. One or the other must be false. Let God be true, though every man who teaches otherwise be false. "Be not deceived. God is not mocked. Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." Gal. vi. 7, 8.

The Old Covenant and the New.

The old covenant engraven on the tablets of stone was made with the children of Israel in the third month after they left Egypt. The Sabbath is a part of this covenant—being the fourth commandment in the decalogue. The manner of its observance is set forth in Exodus 20th chapter. *The covenant as such was annulled or made void; which fact Paul plainly declares in 2 Cor. iii. There need be no mistake as to this. The two covenants are here placed in sharp contrast. The one was written or engraven on tables of stone; the other in fleshly tables of the heart by the Spirit of the living God, by Paul whose sufficiency or qualification was from God (ver. 5); so there was no danger of being wrong. He with fellow apostles was made an able minister of the new covenant. He was not made or appointed a minister of the letter or law, but was of the Spirit—to minister spiritual things—the gospel. See Col. i. 23; Rom. xv. 16. In connection with the latter passage to which I give reference are found these words: "For I will not dare to speak of any of those things which Christ hath not wrought by me to make the Gentiles obedient by word and deed." Paul preached the gospel and wrought miracles to make the Gentiles obedient. Was the Sabbath a part of the gospel which he preached at Rome and in every city he visited? If Sabbath observance was no necessary as its modern advocates claim, that salvation depends upon it, how is it that he makes no reference to the binding obligation of the 4th command in his multiplied and varied allusions to the gospel as proclaimed among the nations, which, prior to the proclamation were ignorant alike of both law and gospel. Their seeing and understanding depended upon the message spoken, and by them heard or heeded. In verse 21 of Rom. xv. Paul says, "As it has been written, They shall see to whom nothing was told (previously) concerning him, and those who had not heard shall understand." Diaglott rendering. But coming back to the contrast between the covenants, the apostle continues, "The letter killeth but the Spirit giveth life." Admitting the fact that glory attended the giving of the old covenant styled the law of death (Conybeare and Howson) he places in contrast with this: "Far more must the ministration of righteousness abound in glory." The one was soon to fade, the other to remain for ever. More from the same translation. "Yea that which then was glorified with brightness is now turned into darkness (like the superior light of the sun eclipsing the light of the stars) by the surpassing glory wherewith it is compared." The one is done away, the other remains. There is a change of ministration consequent upon the abrogation of the old covenant.

If what is said here in this chapter does not show the annulling of the Sinaitic ten commandment covenant, then it is not in the power of language to show such a thing. The 8th chapter of Hebrews confirms what Paul sets forth here. So I affirm with all confidence that the Christian is not under the covenant from Sinai now, and unless it can be shown that the law [illegible] the seventh day observance was brought over into the new or gospel covenant as a part of such covenant, I for one refuse to keep holy the seventh day as prescribed by the law regulating its observance. This is the sticking point.

Wisdom of Solrach.

CHAPTER 22.

1. A slothful man hath been compared to a beat that hath become vitiated and every one will be drawn to his dishonor.

2. A slothful man hath been compared to a lump of manure and every one who taketh it up will shake his hand loose from it.

3. In the begetting of an unchastened son is a father's shame, and a daughter hath been born to lessen it.

4. A thoughtful daughter will inherit her husband, and th. one who putteth to shame will be a sorrow for the one who begot her.

5. A [illegible]her and a husband will rashness [illegible]ht to shame, and it will have been held in dishonor by both.

6. Festive music in a time of sorrow is an untimely discourse; scourges and chastising in every time of wisdom.

7. One who gathereth a potsherd is he who [illegible]h a savorless man, who awaketh [illegible]er from a deep sleep.

8. One [illegible] discourseth to a snorer [illegible]oseth to a savorless [illegible]end of it he will say, What is [illegible]?

11. Lament over a dead person; for light hath forsaken him: and lament over a savorless person; for understanding hath forsaken him; lament sweetly over a dead man; for he hath paused (for an interval—not ceased). But the wicked life of the savorless man was worse than death.

12. Sorrow for a dead man should be seven days; but for a savorless and irreverent man all the days of his life.

13. With a person wanting in good sense (or common sense) do not multiply words; and unto a man without understanding do not go thy way; be on thy guard against him that thou mayest not have weary toil, and be not polluted with his touch. Incline away from him and thou wilt find rest, and thou wilt not be slighted with his folly.

14. What will weigh heavier than lead? And what is his name other than savorless?

15. Sand and salt and a chunk of iron are easier to carry than a man without understanding.

16. A wooden latch fastened into a building construction will not have been unloosed with an earthquake; even so a heart that hath been stayed up upon perception will not become cowardly in a time of counsel.

17. A heart that hath grasped the connate thought of understanding is like the sanded beauty of a polished wall.

18. Vine-poles raised on high against a wind will not abide; even so a cowardly heart that relieth on the perceptive-thought of a savorless man will not abide against any fear.

19. The one who pricketh an eye will bring down a tear; and one who pricketh a heart showeth apprehension.

20. He who casteth a stone at birds scareth them away, and he who reproacheth a friend will sever friendship.

21. If thou draw a sword against a friend, do not despair; for there is a return;

22. If thou open thy mouth against a friend, do not fear; for there is reconciliation. But for a reproach and for supercilious conduct, and for the revealing of a mystery and for a blow of treachery—for these every friend will flee away.

23. Acquire faith in relation to thy neighbor in poverty, that thou mayest likewise be filled with his good things; in a time of tribulation abide with him, that thou mayest inherit with him in his inheritance.

24. Before fire is there the breath of a furnace and smoke; even so is there abusive-talk before blood.

25. I should not be ashamed to [illegible]er a friend and from his face I should not hide.

26. And if evil things befall me on his account, every one who heareth will be on his guard against him.

27. Who will give me watchfulness over my mouth and a subtile seal for my lips, that I may not fall therefrom and my tongue destroy me?

COMMENT.

The good sense of all the teachings of this chapter ought to commend it to the hearty acceptance of every right thinking Christian in this late day of our ethical education, and I do not see anything in this chapter that does not make for righteousness; and I account it good chastening instruction for one's every day conduct of life. "The savorless man" of this book is what we would now call the unregenerate and unconverted sinner in the language of the New Covenant. Read Christ's own parable teaching in this line. "Ye are the salt of the world (cosmos); if the salt hath lost its savor wherewith will it have been savored? (or salted)" The soul-man or merely natural man is always and invariably savorless in Scripture teaching. "Ye must be begotten from above" as well as from below. The soul-man has received only the begetting from below and can think and reason only in the sphere of his natural or soul being moreover he is "dead in trespasses and sins," though he may think he is very much alive, and may be utterly blind to his true condition though intellectually alive to all the ethics and esthetics and culture of his human sphere and his day and generation. He may be a Daniel Webster or Rufus Choate intellectually and be more savorless than a little child who has been "renewed by the renewing his mind and heart" and who has done "the first works" or who in short is a Christian.

Baptism.

On Monday, Oct. 26, the writer drove to Dixon, Illinois, to baptize two candidates in the name of Jesus Christ. Susan M. E. Bridges is an elderly sister who has but recently come to see the truth concerning the name of Jesus Christ in his relation to the soon coming kingdom. She rejoices in her lively hope, and will be an honor to the Church in Dixon, and we trust a humble servant of Christ unto the end. Sister Lillie M. Filson, though baptized when a girl, was not satisfied with her baptism, feeling that she was not well enough acquainted with truth, and requested re-immersion. Within a year three baptisms have taken place in this church. I wish to add a word of good cheer to the faithful ones in Dixon who have been so faithful these many years. Your faithfulness is being rewarded. May God bless you all. Pray for these additions that they may be faithful.

The Eye of the Lord is in Every Place.

Some years ago George Kennan, the famous traveler and explorer, in one of a series of articles on the Russian exile system for political prisoners, described the cells in the Strubatskoi fortress in which such prisoners are first confined.

In the door of each cell is an opening, commanding every portion of the room, just large enough for a human eye. At any time that eye may appear, calm and inscrutable—nothing but the eye. There is no corner in which to hide from it. Every act can be observed, every movement watched, and the effect on the prisoner, guilty or not, is a nervous strain, under which many break completely down. It is always the eye, impersonal and terrible, standing for an avenging law seeking evidence on which to condemn.

Leave the fortress-prison, and enter the home, as it echoes with the glad voices of children. Listen to the constant call for mother or for father, the pattering of the little feet as they follow the dear ones from room to room. Watch the contented play, as long as mother or father is present, and the disturbed questioning look when they rise as though moving away. It is only when conscious of doing wrong that there is any effort to hide or get away. At all other times, being under the parents' eyes means happiness and place and safety, and the hiding is because of a change in the child itself, not in the parent.

"The eyes of the Lord is in every place, beholding the evil and the good," and the thought is either terrible or blessed, according to our view of God and our attitude toward him. If we think of the Almighty merely as a great ruler, the King of kings, whose chief aim is to uphold the majesty of his law, watchful for every slip, insistent that each shall bear the fullest penalty for every act, then no wonder if the thought of his all-seeing eye is more terrible than the eye of the watcher in the Strubatskoi fortress is to the Russian prisoner. But if we rise to the precious truth of the Fatherhood of God, then as his children we rejoice to think of his eye upon us, for it means comfort, protection and help. Even when oppressed with a sense of sin, we know his love and and his readiness to forgive. It is only when we persistently plan and continue in a course which we know to be wrong, when we are unwilling to bow to his will or to accept his ordering, that the thought of his presence need be terrible. God is love, and God is our father! With those two precious facts in mind, like children we should rejoice that God is everywhere, and that he sees us all the while, and the thought should help us in our struggle with temptation and our efforts for the higher life. "Thou God seest me!" Solemn, awe-ful as the thought may be, to Christians it should be sweet. He sees not only the acts and the failures, but the motives, the efforts, and the deep repentance—sees the hopes and struggles that none but self can know, and judges in mercy and in love. But to the impenitent and wicked it is terrible indeed.—Lutheran Observer.

How to Read the Bible.

In the rush of the present day there has been a great multiplication of Daily Text-books, and the fear is lest many get into the habit of supposing that they have done their duty by their Bibles when they have caught up a text, or glanced down a page of carefully-prepared text mosaic. But one might as well suppose that it were possible to sustain physical health by eating all one's meals at restaurant bars, selecting a choice dainty here or a biscuit there. Certainly the daily text is better than nothing, but it is a very poor substitute for deliberate, careful study of the Word of God.

Take time, or make time. If you have to curtail your Bible-reading or your prayer, let it be the latter, for it is less important for you to speak to God than to hear what God has to say to you. Sit quietly down in your most comfortable chair, prepared to have a good time. It seems to me a mistake to read the Bible in a kneeling or constrained position, whilst you read your favorite author ensconsed in comfort. Enter into your closet, and shut the door; give time for the world's glare to pass from your eyes, and it's tumult from your ears. Imitate the listener at the telephone, who shuts himself in his little cupboard and sets himself down to talk with his unseen friend.

Nothing is more irreverent to the spirit of Scripture than to read a passage here or there as the Book falls open. By all means read the Bible through. Adopt one of the many plans now in vogue. Whatever it be, mind to read the New Testament along with the Old, and perhaps spending longer over its deeper doctrinal portions than over its narratives.

Mark the words that call to one another in the same chapter, draw lines of connection between parallel phrases, insert your own references, underscore your favorite texts, put dates or names against verses which have a history attached th them. And when one Bible is worn out, be careful not to transfer your markings to another, lest your views become stereotyped, and you always read your Bible under the same aspect. But begin to make another set of references and markings. Thus we would wear our Bibles out at least as often as we change our skins.

Each day read your chapter or page with the idea that you are receiving your marching orders; that there is some new service to render, some new duty to perform, some new virtue to acquire. Let the attitude of your soul be indicated by Samuel's word, "Speak Lord for thy servant heareth." When you hear, do. What you have been taught, embody in action. Take the precepts of the Bible as requiring literal and immediate obedience. Let the Spirit guide you into all truth; the onward and upward stepping of obedience, beneath his lead, will be the best commentary on what is difficult and obscure. So shall you climb to the Pisgah height, where all the realms of Bible truth to the utmost sea shall lie apparent to your gaze.—F. B. Meyer.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, NOV. 4, 1903.

As we go to press today there are on our list just 340 whose time is out now, and their renewals due. Some of these are owing from 1 to 5 years, and others only for the current year. If all would pay in what they should we would have in hand quite $675.00.

Now Brothers and Sisters, for some weeks past we have tried to explain our need, and urge action on your part. We are not complaining of the noble ones who always keep their subscription up and ahead, and wish to thank all such. We wish to thank also every one who is doing his very best to send as soon as he can. We wish to urge you to more earnest effort. If there are any who are careless and neglectful we wish to ask you kindly to rouse up and send us what is right.

If you could know and realize our situation we feel certain you would respond at once. It is a conviction with us that there is not a Brother or Sister now owing us but who can get the amount they owe easier than we can carry the whole load. We are compelled to struggle on with the burden. Are you not also in duty bound to do your part? Please think of this very seriously, as before your God, and then act.

Another thing that makes this year hard for us is that our Helping Fund is now $136.00 below what it has been other years, and as we have kept the poor ones on our list so far we do not like the idea of cutting them off. Surely there are enough members of the Church of God in this land who have been blessed with abundance, who can spare this amount so that we shall not have to drop the name of a single worthy poor Brother or Sister.

Brethren, these are the plain figures. Will you give attention to these matters? We hope you will without more delay.

THE Vatican at Rome caught on fire the evening of Nov. 1, in the rooms directly over and connected with the library, the hall of inscriptions, and the gallery of paintings. It was necessary to call for the entire fire department from the city of Rome. The extent of damage is not yet known, but as it was necessary to flood that part of the structure, it will likely be great.

ONE of the Cleveland Dailies says: "The Sick Man of the East" will never get well. Death is the only alternative for chronic illness of a dangerous and infectious kind;" and we think so, too.

DR. Oliver Wendall Holmes, in the Autocrat, wittily says: "It is sometimes to a man's discredit if he does not go crazy; if he really believe such and such doctrines, insanity is the logical consequence!"

CHRISTIANITY in its purity does not reach the masses; the adulterated article cannot eradicate the inbred tendency to sin. But when the truth as it is in Jesus is believed from the heart, and obeyed, its transforming power is amazing.

HE whose influence is demoralizing, is sowing to the flesh. The father whose example leads his son to blaspheme the name of God, and contemn religion, frequent drinking saloons and gambling houses, is sowing to the flesh, and will reap a terrible harvest. That mother who dresses out her daughter in gay attire, and trains her for the ball room, the theater, and such places of amusement, is sowing to the flesh, and who can doubt what the harvest will be?

Another Sign of the Times.

It is a long time since the Autocrat of the Breakfast Table said, "The crack of creeds had been heard in all the Ministers' studies in Christendom." Since that time many of those cracked creeds have been broken to pieces like a potter's vessel; and many others have been cracked. The mystical system of interpretation so tenaciously held, has caused people to lose their confidence in the Scriptures, drag their anchors, and drift out into the open sea of doubt and uncertainty. Under such circumstances no mortal unaided by the Word of the Spirit can tell what things will go,—or what will come back. But those who heed the sure Word of prophecy can plainly see the outcome. We can not enlarge in that direction to any extent; but the trend of things theological may be seen by a dispatch from Chicago, Dated Oct. 4. It said:—

"The modern man no longer believes in the Divinity of Christ,—in miracles,—in the Trinity, or in blood atonement, according to the opinion of Dr. G. B. Foster, head of the University of Chicago Divinity School, given in a lecture yesterday." It continues:—

The conservatives were gasping with astonishment. One asked of another, "What is there left for us to believe?"

[He may well ask that, seeing they all alike ignore "the gospel of the kingdom" Jesus preached, Mark i. 14; and which he commissioned them to proclaim in all the world; Mark xvi. 16; and which Paul in Romans i. 16 declares to be "the power of God unto salvation to every one who believes it."]

It goes on to say:

"A clergyman of the old school left the room, saying, 'I'll hear no such doctrines propounded from a Baptist theological school." But notwithstanding this disturbance, when interviewed, Dr. Harper, President of the University, said, "I do not care to talk on the subject,—it is of so slight importance."

"According to the Baptist creed, Article 11, "There is one God, and only one, who is self-existent, eternal, and infinite in every excellence, and who has revealed himself as Father, Son and Holy Ghost, the same in essence, though distinct in personality."

"Section 6, is as follows: Jesus Christ the Son of God and Son of Man, came into the world to save men from the guilt and condemnation of sin, offering his blood as an atonement and making it available to all who exercise faith in him."

"Dr. Boynton, of Greenwood Ave. Baptist Church said in regard to the lecture, that "no man can make such statements and be a Christian. Unless he believes in the Divinity of Christ, he believes Christ to be a liar."

Prof. Foster himself said his "lecture was not intended for the Press. It was an academic speech. I did not say just what the reports give me credit for saying, but it is true there are parts in my lecture from which such statements might be deduced."

What is this, but a revival of the exoteric and exoteric faith of pagan philosophers? It reminds us of Gibbon's famous saying, that the ancient systems of religion were "with the people equally true,—with the philosophers equally false, and with the state equally necessary." And as Hudson says, "The pious fraud" which has so often been charged upon Christianity, was in fact, a part of the heathen establishment. This was the double doctrine,—the esoteric, or private, might be safely imparted to the wise man, but the populace must be instructed in the exoteric; and we quote here what Plato says of the pious fraud perpetrated upon the ignorant, and his attempt to justify it. He says:

"If falsehood indeed be of no service to the gods, but useful to men in the form of a drug, it is plain that such a thing should only be touched by physicians, but not meddled with by private persons. To the governors of the state, then, if to any, it especially belongs to speak falsely, either about enemies or citizens, for the good of the state; whereas for all the rest, they must venture on no such thing. Plato is also censured by Chrysippus, as not rightly or wisely deterring men from injustice by FRIGHTFUL STORIES OF FUTURE PUNISHMENTS. He displayed not a wrong belief, but a wrong judgment in supposing such childish terrors could be useful to the cause of virtue. And Strabo confirms the charge, in saying that the Brahmins had invented fables in the manner of Plato concerning the immortality of the soul and a future judgment in the shades below, and other things of the same nature."

The Chicago incident discloses a hopeless theological tangle, and makes it evident that the professors are not anxious for the outside world to know in advance what sort of preachers they expect to send out from that richly endowed institution. But if the Lord delay his coming a little longer it is reasonable to expect these men to reject the Bible altogether. As far as salvation is concerned, they would be just as eligible to it without the Bible as with it. They have no part in it now, and it could be no use in that respect then. To press the book of God to their breast as if its contents were very precious to them while in fact they are strangers to the covenants which alone can give life from the dead, is of no value for salvation purposes, although it may make better citizens of them. It has to be known before it can be believed into salvation unless the affection goes with the intellect and the will. It should not be necessary to say to our readers that he who claims immortality as a part of his natural outfit,—and is bound for heaven at death, and believes in three persons in one Godhead; and profess to have found pardon of his sins, although entirely ignorant of God's law of pardon, might just as well not have the Bible, because that is given to us to instruct us in these things, and the notions they hold contravene God's plan for dispensing his amazing gift—eternal life. And one who has false views of God and his Word cannot have correct views of sin; and leaders of sin go hand in hand, [illegible] and inadequate views of redemption. Sin is always the abominable thing that God hates; and as he will by no means clear the guilty, the law of justification from sin is inexorable. Sin in the Scriptures is never treated tolerantly, or superficially;—never deals with it as a mere skin disease that may be easily sloughed off, but a destructive force that is killing off the noblest human faculties, and eating the heart out of every virtue. Till sin becomes to us abominable and hateful as it is to God, what likelihood is there of our forsaking it?

God, so far as we know, does not classify sin,—it is men who speak of "trivial offences" and "white lies," etc., and there is one Scripture in point here we must omit; it says those who despise the Word shall be destroyed. This has a very wide application. It is not necessary to say vile things about it. God's Word is despised when it is rejected. It behooves us all to guard this point.

Communicated.

"He is Not Here, He is Risen."

What a wonderful announcement was this to the friends of Jesus, whose hearts were crushed, because their hopes were dead. Should it not be just as important to us now [illegible], as it was to believers at any previous time? Strange that Christians talk so little about Jesus. My sister visited her preacher the other day to tell her something about heaven. "Shall we know each other there," etc., but he could throw no light on the nature of heaven, or how we shall be employed after we get there. I thought, O why don't you tell her something about the risen Jesus. Tell her about the sealed stone, the prostrate guard that were posted by Caiphas (high priest) and Pilate the Roman governor. "He is not here, he is risen," has an interest which far surpasses the discussion of heaven or any other topic invented by creed makers for the guidance of the gullable masses who are too lazy to examine God's Word for themselves. No wonder the preacher could give sister no information on heaven as the "home of the soul." The Bible is silent on this topic, which has supplanted the great central truth, viz., a risen, living Jesus, now removed from us, but according to the divine plan is returning here again to bestow on his own, living or dead, immortal life, here on the new earth and not in heaven. It is one of the things I cannot understand why "Heaven, sweet heaven" should take the place of Jesus, blessed Jesus, our risen, living Redeemer. Hear what he [illegible] John. "I am he that liveth and was dead and behold I am alive for ever more and because I live ye shall live also." These words have soothed my own troubling heart for many days and nights that I have been on the brink of death. The thought of meeting my risen Savior was the great anchor that kept me still rather than be carrolled in heaven with other ghosts employed in doing—well the preacher says he don't know what they do. No, no, it is the risen Jesus and his return, that should employ our thoughts. There is rest and solid comfort here.

Editor Restitution:

The readers of THE RESTITUTION no doubt are wondering why they see no more of late of those interesting letters they have been accustomed to read in its pages from the pen of our worthy Bro. T. E. Adams of Osawkie, Kansas. Will say for the sake of all that have known him, either personally or by his able and earnest contributions, that In September he had a severe stroke of paralysis, causing him to be almost speechless, affecting his left side so he could not move his arm or leg, has been confined to his bed, until the last few days he has been so he can sit up a little. We sincerely hope and pray that the Father of all mercies will restore him to his former health, that his days may yet be many, and his many friends be blest with his earnest articles that always make me feel like he is of the stamp of our father Abraham, fully persuaded that what God has promised he is able to perform. Amen.

Spending Time for Christ.

"Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh." Matt. xxv. 13.

How should we spend our time? In doing good, and serving Christ. By so doing our reward will be the greatest that can be given to mortal man, and the reward is "eternal life," and none can get this reward but those that spend their time for Christ. If we spend our time for Christ we will do his will, and obey his commands, believe, repent and obey, and be baptized for the washing away of sin. And then take pains to please him; and we must be careful, and watch our every move, or the adversary will entice us away. Paul says, "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them, for they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ. And Christ in speaking of a class that he styles hypocrits, such as draw unto him with their mouth and honoreth him with their lips, but their heart was far from him, and their worship of him was vain. Why? Because they taught for doctrines the commandments of men." Matt. xv. 8, 9. Such are not spending their time for Christ, but are "creed worshipers," and do not worship in a way that is acceptable, ye cannot serve two masters; in worship ye cannot serve God and man's creed. And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily as to the Lord and not unto man. Knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward. But he that doeth wrong shall receive for the wrong which he hath done, and there is no respect of persons. Christ's answer to Satan was, "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." If we do not spend our time for Christ, then we spend our time for Satan. Those that lead a life of love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, are spending their time for Christ, and can rest assured of eternal life. But those that will not spend their time for Christ will be rewarded with eternal death.

Yours in hope,
E. W. KNAPP.

Dear Brother Underwood:

I would just say that Bro. Austin's labors at Fonthill, Ont., during the last three weeks have just closed with favorable results. Three believing ones were baptized in the name of Jesus the Christ for the remission of sins to walk in newness of life, living in a preparation for the coming kingdom, being impressed with the solemn idea that they have been bought with a price, even with the precious blood of Christ, the Lamb of God, whose blood was shed for many for the remission of sins. And one who will in due time appear the second time without a sin offering to the salvation of all them who look for and love his appearing, when he will say to them, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." These we are told will go away into life eternal. What a blessed position! Who would not want to be among that number? Let us all who name the name of Christ be careful to depart from all iniquity and overcome, and the inheritance of the promises will be sure to us. May this be our happy lot is my earnest prayer.

Yours for the truth as it is in Jesus,
P. H. BOUK.

The Quarterly Conference of the Church of God of Central Washington will meet at the church house of the Church of God at Wenatchee, Wash., on Friday evening Dec. 4th at 7:30 P. M., and continue over the following Sunday. A good programme will be provided. Every one is urged to attend. Let us not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, but gather together for strength and mutual encouragement as we see the day approaching.

What Might Have Been, But Is Not.

The ancient Romans used to say that even God himself cannot undo what has been done. How often we see too late that we might have made our life and our world entirely different if we had only known, but now the opportunity has gone! These too late discoveries, our useless hindsights where we needed foresights, are among the hardest experiences of life. If we could only go back over our steps and make our steps over again, how different the outcome would be. But in this world of ours this can never be done. The decision of a moment determines a whole lifetime, and no amount of sorrow or wishing turns the shadow back on the dial. How stubborn and unyielding the laws of the universe seem, and the change of one little circumstance would make us so happy! But just that "little circumstance" cannot be changed after it has come to pass, and our lives must flow in different channels accordingly.

A very slight "water-shed" determines sometimes the course of the rivers of a continent; a child's foot on a tender sapling has caused the twist which mars the oak of a hundred year's growth; and that one deed which we cannot undo has made the curve in the direction of our human life. The lost opportunities come not back to us, the spilled milk on the ground flows not back into our pail, the missed train does not come back to take us on. Well; is this a blind, hard fate, or is it the will of a loving Father? The ancients called it Fate. We see in it a sure token of love. How could we learn the lessons of life, how could we become men and women of character, if our deeds brought no sure consequences, and if the past could be undone at a wish? Is that mother kind and loving who changes her will to suit every wish of her child? No, the kindest mother teaches her child the meaning of consequences, and she trains the child to make good choices by showing the inexorable result of bad choices. So God deals with us. His main purpose in his "dealings" is to make men of good will. He does not want fickle, unstable men with wills as variable as the wind. But if life had no stubborn and unyielding laws, if we could at will retrace our steps and gather up our lost opportunities and try over again as soon as we began to feel any uncomfortable consequences we should never attain the measure of manhood. The product would be a jelly-fish type of man with no stamina. The child must learn that fire will burn, the traveler must find out that trains do not wait for his convenience, and we must all gain the experience that life is made beautiful add successful not by late hindsights, but by wise foresights.

Even in these hard and trying "consequences" of life God is thinking only of our good, and in our sad and bitter "might have beens" he teaches us how to achieve the "maybes" of the future.

Four Grand Arguments.

There are are four grand arguments for the truth of the Bible. The first the miracles on record, the second the prophecies, the third the goodness of the doctrine, and the fourth the moral character of the penman. The miracles flow from divine power, the prophecies from divine understanding, the excellences of the doctrine from divine goodness, the character of the writers from moral purity. Thus Christianity is built upon these four immovable pillars—the power, the understanding, the goodness and the purity of God.

The Bible must be [illegible] these things—either an invention of good men or angels, or of bad men or bad angels, or a revelation from God. Let us all who name the name of Christ be careful to depart from all iniquity and overcome, and the inheritance of the promises will be sure to us. May this be our happy lot is my earnest prayer.

The Bible must be either an invention of good men or angels, or of bad men or bad angels, or a revelation from God. But it could not be the invention of good men or angels; for they neither would nor could make a book telling lies, and at the same time saying, "Thus saith the Lord," when they knew it all to be their own invention. It could not be wicked men or devils; for they could not make a book which commands all duty, which forbids all sin, and which condemns them to all eternity. The conclusion is irresistible: the Bible must be given by divine revelation.—Religious Telescope.

Harvest Time.

The harvest time is the time of fulfilled hopes and realized expectations, when the ruddy gleam of the ripened fruit succeeds the lavish wealth of blossoms, and he who went forth weeping, bearing precious seed, returns with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him. The miracle of the loaves was a sudden putting forth of God's bountiful hand from behind the veil of his ordinary providence; the miracle of the harvest is the working of the same bountiful hand, only unseen, giving power to the tiny grains to drink the dew, and imbibe the sunshine, and appropriate the nourishment of the soil during the long bright days of summer.

The harvest fields are the golden links that connect the ages and the zones, and associate together the most distant times and the remotest nations in one common bond of sympathy and dependence. They make of the earth one great home, of the human race one great family, and of God the universal parent, to whom, day after day, we are encouraged to go with filial faith and love, not in selfishness and isolation, but in a fraternal spirit which embraces the whole world, asking not to ourselves only, but for all our brothers of mankind as well, "Our Father, which art in heaven, give us this day our daily bread."—Hugh Macmillan.

Religion and Business.

It is possible to put into one's coming and going, into one's doing, a glow of reverence for God, and to make it evident in every transaction that one is trying to be obedient to Divine will. Men may be strictly honest—true in speech and all that—and yet be worldly. How often one hears the remark that business is business. Very true. But business may be more than business; it may be a means of grace. It may be, and ought to be, a school in which the soul grows in gratitude, in patience, in faith, in love, and in all the qualities through which a soul comes into fitness to fellowship now and evermore with the Lord Jesus Christ. It is a pitiable sight to see a man hard and cold in his business life, as though this were a great section of his existence in which there is no possibility of cultivating religious principle and having the grace of God. It is a refreshing sight to see a man living in the world and doing with his might what his hand finds to do, and yet doing all in this spirit of loyalty to the Master.

Safety of Peace Principles.

A family of Friends settled in a remote part of Pennsylvania, then exposed to the savage incursions of the Indians. They had not been there long before a party of Indians, panting for blood, started on one of their terrible excursions against the whites, and passed in the direction of the Friend's abode. Though disposed at first to assail him and his family as enemies, they were received with such open-hearted confidence, and treated with such cordiality and kindness, as completely disarmed them of their purpose. They came forth not against such persons, but against their enemies. They thirsted for the blood of those who had injured them; but these children of peace, unarmed and entirely defenseless, met them only with accents of love, and deeds of kindness.

It was not in the heart even of a savage to harm them; and on leaving the Friend's house, the Indians took a white feather, and stuck it over the door, to designate the place as a sanctuary not to be harmed by their brethren in arms. Nor was it harmed. The war raged all around it; the forest echoed often to the Indian's yell, and many a white man's hearth was drenched in his own blood; but over the Friend's humble abode gently waved the white feather of peace, and beneath it his family slept without harm or fear.

Poetry.

Between the Lights.

A little pause in life—while daylight lingers
Between the sunset and the pale moonrise,
When daily labor slips from weary fingers,
And calm, gray shadows veil the aching eyes.

Old perfumes wander back from sweet-eyed clover,
Seen in the light of stars that long have set;
Beloved ones, whose earthly trial is over,
Draw near as if they lived among us yet.

Old voices call me—through the dusk returning
I hear the echo of departed feet;
And then I look with vain and troubled yearning;
"What is the charm that makes old things so sweet?"

Must the old joys be evermore withholden?
Even their memory keeps me pure and true.
And yet from out beyond the golden,
God gently, saying: "I will make all things new."

"Father," I cry, "the old must still be weary;
Still my love or give me back the past;
Give me the fair old fields, whose paths are dearer
Than all thy shining streets and mansions vast."

Peace! peace! the Lord of earth and heaven
Knoweth
The human soul in all its best and strife.
Out of his throne no stream of Love is flowing,
But the pure river of eternal life.

He giveth life, aye, life in all its sweetness—
Old hopes, old sunny scenes will he restore;
Only the curse of sin and incompleteness
Shall vex thy soul and taint thine earth no more.

Serve him in daily toil and holy living,
And rich shall lift thee to his sunlit heights;
Then shall a psalm of gladness and thanksgiving
Fill the calm hour that comes between the lights.

The Second Coming of Christ. No. 3.

Editor Restitution:

The articles which I hand you herewith were written in 1897, by Rev. J. G. Schwab, then of Lincoln, Neb., and published in the Evangelical Messenger, organ of the Evangelical Association. In August, 1895, Mr. Schwab read an essay before the Platte River Conference Ministerial Association, of which the undersigned was a member, on "The Jews in History and Prophecy," which was my first eye opener on any definite Bible teaching. From the views presented in that paper I saw the beauty of the Bible doctrine of the gathering of Israel and the pre-millennial coming of Christ. That one idea was the nucleus for others equally true and precious. I still rejoice because I heard said paper read, though I was not at first friendly to the views therein set forth.

A. H. ZELMER.

What are the effects of this hope upon him who entertains it. What its general results? St. John declares that "he that hath this hope within himself, purifieth himself even as He is pure." D. L. Moody remarks; "When this truth of the Lord's second coming really takes hold of a man, the world loses its grip on him. Gas stocks and water stocks and stocks in banks and railroads are of very much less consequence to him now. His heart is free when he looks for the blessed appearing and kingdom of the Lord." A man becomes ready to invest more freely in the kingdom of God. This "blessed hope" inspired many in apostolic days to sell their possessions and to put all things into a common treasury. There never have been days of such consecration and missionary zeal as during the first century of the Christian era. "The Lord is at hand" seemed to be ever ringing in the ears of the workers. The effects of this same hope would be the same to-day. What do we now behold as the effect of the generally accepted theory that the world is to grow better and better until the end, then the judgement? Why, to realize this end more speedily, the Church has made overtures to the world, on many points a truce has been declared, the world has grown somewhat churchly, and the Church has grown very worldly. Instead of presenting, like Joseph in Egypt and Daniel in Babylon, a perpetual contrast to our surroundings, too often the only visible line of separation that remains is the church-roll. The newspapers even now are passing around the joke that the public never knows to what church a man belongs until there is either a church social or a funeral at his home. The real character of our present civilization is gigantic in invention, discovery, enterprise, achievement; but it is gigantically worldly. This "Christian civilization" has produced giants in these days, men of renown, but they often use their intellect, knowledge and fame only to break down all faith. We have the ripest form of worldly civilization, but the ripeness borders on rottenness; while men boast of the fabric its foundations are falling into decay, and anarchy, that awful and last result of atheism, even now threatens to dissolve society itself. Those who attempt to make questions of right and wrong from a biblical standpoint, issues before contending political parties, are laughed to scorn, while matters of expediency are pushed to the front. Drunkenness, avarice and profligacy are protected, while honor lies outraged in the streets. If the purpose of this dispensation is to convert the world, developing a millennium by a process of assimilation, it has in its practical results proven little more than a failure. In the interests of truth we need to emphasize that the millennium is not a climax of human progress, but the era and epoch of a divine force uplifting, renewing and transforming human society. The thing to be heralded is the good news that the glorious Messianic kingdom, which the prophets long ago foretold and for which the fathers looked, is at hand. There is not a doctrine of Christianity upon which the light of this great truth does not shine. There is no hope which is the subject of Christian promise that is so uplifting and comforting, so rich in present peace and blessing as this "blessed hope." St. Peter, in his discourse from Solomon's porch, urged the second coming of Christ as a prime motive for repentance. See Acts iii: 19-21.

It is a motive to incite us to a mortification of earthly lusts. "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory. Mortify, therefore, your members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness," etc. Col. iii: 4-6. "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly and righteously and godly in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ." (Titus ii: 11-13.) Further to obedience and holy living, John iii: 1, 3, also 2; 28: "Little children, abide in him; that, when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming;" and Matt. xvi: 27: "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then shall he reward every man according to his works." (cf. Rev. xxii: 12.)

It is an incentive for heavenly-mindedness and holy conversation. "For our conversation is in heaven from whence also we look for a Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ." (Phil. iii: 20.) "Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God." (2 Peter iii: 11, 12.)

It incites to works of mercy. "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all his angels with him,"" "then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father inherit the kingdom prepared for you"". Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these the least of my brethren, ye have done it unto me." (Matt. xxv: 31-40.)

It leads to moderation and patience. "Let your moderation be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand." (Phil. iv: 5.) "Be also patient; establish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." (James v: 8.) "For ye have need of patience, that after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise. Yet a little while and he that shall come will come and will not tarry.' Heb. x: 35-37.) [illegible] the pastor to diligence and [illegible] Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight, willingly"" "neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being examples to the flock. And when the chief shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." (1 Peter v: 2-4.) "For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? Are not even ye, before our Lord Jesus at his coming." (1 Thess. ii: 19, 20.) It stimulates to greater watchfulness and prayer. "Let your loins be girded about," etc. (Luke xii: 35.) "Take ye heed, watch and pray, for ye know not when the time is." (Mark. xiii: 33-37.) "Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments." (Rev. xvi: 15.)

Another result is the intensifying of brotherly love. "The Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men" "to the end he may establish your hearts unblamable in holiness before our God and Father at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints." (1 Thess. iii 12, 13.) This blessed hope also begets within our hearts an earnest love for the Lord's second coming itself. This is illustrated in the experience of the Apostle Paul when he writes: "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give at that day; and not to me only; but also to all them that love his appearing." (2 Tim. iv: 7, 8.) This hope invests our faith with a higher practical value. It enriches it much during our earthly pilgrimage by lifting it up above the din and strife and trials of this fallen world. Paul congratulates the church at Corinth "for the grace of God which is given you in Christ Jesus; that in everything ye are enriched in him,"" so that ye come behind in no gift; waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, who shall confirm you unto the end, that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ." (1 Cor. i: 4-8.) The coming of the Lord with his saints is the principal event in the future for which the true believer waits. [illegible] that performing our ordinary Christian duties so as "to walk worthily of the Lord unto all pleasing, bearing fruit in every good work; and giving thanks unto the Father, who made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light." (Col. i: 10-12,) we nevertheless in thus "serving the living and true God wait for his Son from heaven." (1 Thess. i: 9.)

Whatever elevates and sanctifies the thoughts and affections, and intelligently engrosses them with an ever-increasing delight and interest, is obliged to bring comfort and peace. If our hearts are filled with the assured hope of being with Jesus in his glory as his recognized and glorified bride, will we not seek by all possible means to be found of him at his sudden coming without spot and blameless, and in peace? And is not the thought of the near approach of the personal presence of the blessed redeemer, eminently calculated to comfort his people by raising their hearts above the world with its taxing occupations and corrupting lusts? No wonder Paul closes one of his inspired descriptions of the opening scene of the coming thus, "Wherefore comfort one another with these words." (1 Thess. iv: 18.) Our struggle with sin and the devil, our conflicts with the powers of darkness, our bodily ills and infirmities, our loss of loved ones, the abounding of iniquity, and the prevalence of theoretical and practical infidelity, are often very discouraging to the humble and devout Christian. But if he is able to receive in his heart the sweet and blessed assurance that his Lord and Redeemer will soon come in person, and bring an end to all these troubles by the manifestation of his glory, and by ushering in the day of "the glorious liberty of the children of God," how comforting, how cheering is such a hope! Let us glorify God, therefore, by "rejoicing in hope, being patient in tribulation, continuing instant in prayer," (Rom. xii: 12), that we may "hold fast that which we have till he come." (Rev. ii: 25.)

My Lord will return. Will he come soon? Will he come as my Savior or judge? Am I ready for his coming? Am I praying and patiently waiting for it? Has his coming such an absorbing and vital interest for me as to lead me to watch earnestly for it, to pray for its hastening, to look for it continually, to love it and anticipate it with cheerful and fond desire, and to keep myself in constant readiness for it by always having on the wedding garment," and "oil in my vessel?" (Matt. xvii: 11, and 25: 1.)

Finally, let me say in the words of another: That "no doubt we stand upon the very threshold of the consummation of the covenant of grace with respect to the militant church, and in the very atmosphere and light and quickening power of the dawning "day of the Lord," when the coming Son of man, our elder brother, "shall fully inaugurate the millennial glory of his kingdom on earth, delivering her, blessed be God, from her long and wretched bondage of corruption into the "glorious liberty of the children of God." (Rom. viii: 21.) And when all God's high and holy purposes concerning Judah and Israel restored and re-established in the land of promise, as also the nations of Gentile heathendom and Christendom, shall have been fully accomplished during the thousand years of Christ's personal reign in righteousness and kingly power; and after that he shall have put down and abolished "all (anti-Christian) rule and all authority and power," with his "enemies under his feet," and death, the last of them destroyed; "then shall he deliver up the kingdom to God, even the Father" and the millennial glory of his Messianic kingdom (now our "blessed hope") shall then be succeeded by, and culminate in, the unspeakable blessedness of paradise restored and in the eternal glory of "the church of the first born" amid the splendor of "the new heaven and new earth"—the final regeneration of the redeemed and glorified universe." (Acts iii: 21; 2 Pt. iii, 8-13; Rev. xix: 1-8.)

"He which testifieth these things saith, yea; I come quickly. Amen. Even so, come Lord Jesus." (Rev. xxi: 20.)

BUILDERS.

When a contractor starts to build a house, he builds the foundation. If he is a careful builder, he will be particular about the foundation, to see that it is of something solid; not like a [illegible] have seen, a tile foundation [illegible] on a plank. That foundation [illegible] in pieces. Great holes are [illegible] in the tile, some day it will [illegible] over entirely, and the house will fall over. We would rather have our house built on something solid, like stone, that will not crumble away like the tile and plank. We, as Christians, should not build our house on the sands, where the winds and floods come and wash it away, but let us build it on rock, the Rock of our salvation, who we know is Jesus, the Christ, the chief Corner-stone, then our house will not fall, "For other foundation can no man lay, than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." Jesus said, "Whosoever cometh to me and heareth my sayings and doeth them, I will show you to whom he is like. He is like a man which built a house and digged deep, and laid the foundation on a rock; and when the flood arose, the stream beat vehemently upon that house, and could not shake it, for it was founded upon a rock." This is the kind of foundation he or she should have when starting in their Christian life.

Jesus says, "Whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple." Also he says that we should count the cost of our building before we start our foundation, for fear we should not have enough to finish. It is like some people who start out in their Christian [illegible] they have their foundation laid, and then are faint-hearted, and think it is too hard work, and will not have a good time as they used to have, and must give up all their amusements. Their foundation is built on sand and will be washed away.

Peter says in Acts iv., "Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand before you whole. This is the stone which was set at nought by you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven among men, whereby we must be saved." Now that Jesus was crucified and is risen from the dead and is the chief corner stone, should we not build a good structure on this best of foundations, preparatory for the life to come?

Paul says in the 2nd of Ephesians, "Therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints and of the household of God. And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together, growing unto an holy temple unto the Lord; in whom ye are also builded together, for an habitation of God through the Spirit." Again Paul says, "Nevertheless, the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his. And let every one that nameth the name of Christ, depart from iniquity. That they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate. Laying up store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life."

In the 2nd chapter of 1st Peter we read more about how precious this corner stone is. "To whom coming as unto a living stone, disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God and precious. Ye also as lively stones are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God, by Jesus Christ. Wherefore it is also contained in the Scriptures, Behold, I lay in Zion, a chief corner stone, elect, precious, and he that believeth on him shall not be confounded. Unto you therefore which believe, he is precious, but unto them which be disobedient, the stone which the builders disallowed, the same is made the head of the corner. But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light; which in time past were not a people but are now the people of God; which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy."

Brothers and sisters, let us hold fast to this good and wonderful foundation, working day by day with the help of God, to build up a good Christian character, that we may have a building fitly framed together, that we may have an abundant entrance into the kingdom, for we must work hard for this and lay hold on eternal life, which is the gift of God.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The Berean Society of the State of Illinois held its annual business meeting August 15, 1903, at the Illinois Conference of the Church of God assembled at Oregon, Ill. The meeting was presided over by our President, Miss Anna Drew. The minutes of the last meeting were read and accepted. Encouraging reports of the Chicago, Moriah, Marshall, Adeline and Dixon Societies followed. Our local societies have increased from 3 to 5 since last year. Let us hope we will do as well, if not better this year.

Several letters of greeting were sent to our society which we appreciated very much. These letters show that though many of our Bereans are separated too far to be able to organize, yet they are with us in the work, and are helping the cause of the Master. It is the little things done in his name that count. A motion was carried that we send Bro. W. H. Wilson three dollars to pay part of his expenses to Carnegie, Oklahoma, so that the isolated ones there might enjoy God's precious truth as well as we.

By motion we retained all the officers of the preceding year except the vice President. Miss Almeda Mitchell was elected to that office for the ensuing year. A report of the literary committee followed. It made a plea for free will offerings for our Berean column in THE RESTITUTION, the success of which depends entirely on our own effort. May God bless this feature of our work, and give us each a willingness to lend our aid towards its success.

The literary committee for this year was appointed as follows: Leila E. Whitehead, 5428 Ontario St. Chicago, Elsie Gesin Miller, Forreston, and Anna Adams, 603 Peoria Ave., Dixon. Let us each and all give them our hearty support this year.

The programme committee was appointed as follows: Richard Murra, Mrs. Smith and Anna Aslaksen.

We are glad we have the privilege of welcoming to our midst, three new members, Mrs. Robert Filson, of Dixon, Mrs. Smith of Polo and Mr. Richard Murra.

Let all the Bereans of Illinois during the coming year have a feeling of ownership in this Berean Society, and surely at the time of next Conference the benefits derived from being co-workers in his vineyard will be a hundred fold.

Each member of the State Bereans was asked to continue the good work of last year by earning, during the coming year, one dollar for the State Treasury.

Something about the "Spirits in Prison."

1 PETER III. 17-19.

For it is better if the will of God be so that you suffer for doing well, rather than for doing evil. For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, a just one in behalf of unjust ones so that he might lead us to God; having been put to death in flesh, but made alive in Spirit, in which he went and preached to those spirits in prison, who some time (indefinite) resisted persuasion when the longsuffering of God was waiting as in the days of Noah, while an ark was being prepared, in which few, that is eight persons were saved by means of water." I underline "he" and "as" because the reading is that he himself in proper person went and preached. That the ones he preached to were in prison when he preached to them. That the comparison is between those who disobeyed in the days of Noah and those to whom Jesus preached during his ministry. That the longsuffering of God was exercised in both cases. That the ones Jesus preached to refused to be persuaded equally with the ones Noah preached to, and more culpable. Only a few were saved from the flood in the days of Noah; and comparatively only a few were saved (being saved) in the days of Jesus. And the parallelism goes on (verse 21) baptism corresponding to this salvation (from the flood) now saves.....by means of the resurrection of Jesus Christ.....who is at the right hand of God. Consult Rom. vii. 3-5 for illustration of this fact. Particles of language (like mortar in a wall) bind the whole context together; and apart from the resurrection, no salvation for us; and no salvation for those Noah preached to outside of the ark. The plan and specifications of the ark was not of Noah's choosing—even the material was divinely appointed, as well as all the details so as to answer to the purpose in view. So also the salvation which is in Christ Jesus. Consult Rom. iii. 24, 1 Cor. iii. 10, 11; Eph. ii. 10, 20-22. And references such as Acts iv. 12.

That Christ himself did the preaching: That he was anointed for this very purpose. That he was sent to preach, and that he travelled through Judea, Galilee and Samaria in fulfillment of his mission. I might refer the reader to Isa. lxi. 1, but prefer to quote in full because some people do not go to the trouble of examining references.

"The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to (them that are) the bound." Then compare Luke iv. 18-21. Emphasize verse 21 which clinches the assertion that Christ himself did the preaching. Compare Matt. xv. 24; Jno. xvii. 3; Matt. iv. 23 and Mark i. 14; Luke iv. 43, 44; and Heb. ii. 3.

As to the personality of "spirits" I need only refer to 1 Jno. iv. 1-3. Prophets of falsehoods, teachers of lies. Those who made the Word of God of no effect by their traditions, religious and political agitators; and those who have been led by them.

Jesus was sent to open the prison, to deliver those bearing heavy burdens, imposed on them by the Scribes and Pharisees, who assumed to sit in Moses' seat to teach the people, and being blind leaders of the blind, they all fall into the ditch together—he came to open the eyes of the blind, and that those seeing might be made blind. A similar style of expression as "I came not to call the righteous (?) but sinners to repentance." And "If I had not come and spoken to them they had not had sin; but (having spoken to them) now they have no cloak for their sin." I quote these passages to show that the blindness, burden-bearing and oppression refers to the mental, moral and educational aspect of the affair. Agreeing with Isa. ix. 2 and Matt. iv. 16. "The people who sat in darkness saw great light; and to them who sat in the region and shadow of death light is sprung up." And "As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world."

It will be noticed that "light" in this connection means knowledge. The lack of which was obvious in the Israelitish world at this time. Certainly the preaching of Jesus the Anointed was glad tidings to as many as received his Word and believed in him who sent him to open the prison and let them out into the open day of mental freedom. "You shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free," said Jesus. Is. xlii. 1, 7. Read, "To open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners out of the prison, and them that sit in darkness out of the prison house."

Announcement.

The Quarterly Conference of the Churches of God in Indiana will be held in Plymouth, Indiana, over Sunday, Nov. 15, 1903, beginning at 7:30 P. M. on Thursday previous. It is almost needless to specially invite our brethren and sisters to Plymouth, as the hospitality of this Church is so well known as to need no further commendation. It is the desire of the brethren and sisters to have a large attendance at this gathering, both from the State and from abroad. Come one and all and have a good time in spiritual fellowship.

A. H. ZILMER, Pres.
LYDIA RAILSBACK, Sec'y.

Something New—Bible Studies.

Realizing the need of a more thorough distribution of good, wholesome literature, the Committee on Literature, appointed by the Indiana Conference, purpose to publish a series of four-page leaflets, to be known as "Bible Studies." They will contain expositions of Scripture by brethren W. H. Wilson, J. L. Wince, J. F. Waggoner, A. H. Zilmer, and other writers, and will be numbered consecutively. Number one appears in Oct. 7, issue of THE RESTITUTION under the heading, "The spirit shall return unto God who gave it." Others will follow later in the same way. We will offer them for sale as follows: 10 copies for 10 cents, 50 copies for 25 cents, 100 copies for 40 cents. Send money order or stamps to A. H. Zilmer, Plymouth, Ind.

Notice.

I would say to the brethren that having been again put in the field as Evangelist for the Northern Kansas and Missouri Conference, I am at your service and will go wherever called. While the last year's work did not come up to what we desired, yet the work closed in a very satisfactory condition, and the new year begins with better prospects than ever before.

Now, brethren give me your assistance, send in your pledge, or what you feel able to give for this year's work, and let me know where you are and the situation in your neighborhood.

The 1st of October (Thursday) I will begin a meeting at the Prairie Point School House in Cloud County, Kansas, 14 miles south-west of Concordia and 9 miles north-east of Glasco, in J. J. Wright's neighborhood. Let all the brethren in north central Kansas attend this meeting that can.

A. W. DARBY, Evan.

To the Called Out Ones.

I wish to say to the Household of Faith scattered throughout the Southern States, that I have now started on my Southern trip which I have had in mind for some time. I am now laboring in Southern Illinois, and will work south from that point. Many have responded, but there may still be others who would like to engage my services. If so, they can do so by addressing me at my Chicago home. The call is open to all Southern States.

There is great need of energy at this time, the time is so very short, when this Gentile age must cease. Are we all prepared? Address W. H. Wilson, 420 N. Willow Ave., Austin Station, Chicago, Ill.

To the Brethren in Iowa.

Any locality desiring a meeting any time during the next year, please make application to the Conference Board, at once, stating time, desiring meeting. Address me at Sac City, Iowa.

EVA STEARNS, Sec'y.

If God's servants never met with opposition and persecution in their work, they would not feel as if they belonged to the same company as David, Jeremiah, Paul and others. "In perils from false brethern," wrote Paul; so that his worst trials came from those who were his professed fellow-servants. "Love your enemies," said our Lord; so it should be a cause of thankfullness if we find occasion to obey this command. One of the best ways to love our enemies is to pray for them, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." It is sad to see one who professes to be looking for the Lord spending his energies in smiting a fellow-servant.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

Three trains a day Chicago to California, Oregon and Washington. Chicago, Union Pacific & North-Western Line.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money set loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Have You Heard of the Lion's Mouth?

Collier's Weekly is conducting a very novel and interesting competition for its readers each month. To enter the contest all one has to do is to review the issues of Collier's for the current month and answer the two or three questions which are printed in each issue, giving such opinion and such suggestions as will aid in improving the paper. Collier's aims in this way to secure the assistance of every one of its readers in making the paper more to their liking. Every reader, in fact, becomes one of the editors and has his voice in building the greatest illustrated journal of the age.

The first prize each month, awarded for the most helpful suggestion, is $50 in cash, with a second prize of $25 in cash, and eighteen other prizes of sets of books, ranging in value from $32 down to $5, making in all $320 of value given in prizes each month. There are in addition, cumulative cash prizes, for those who win prizes in successive months, and a big cash prize of $1,000 for the most valuable suggestions during 1903.

For the convenience of intending contestants who can not be promptly supplied by newsdealers, all the copies of Collier's for the current month will be sent post paid, together with a handsome proof of a drawing by Charles Dana Gibson, upon receipt of 40 cents in stamps addressed to The Lion's Mouth, Collier's Weekly, 438 West 13th Street, New York.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

"Thy Will be Done."

When grief imbitters every font of gladness,
When pain and anguish wound our suffering heart,
When life seems but a weary waste of sadness,
And pictured hopes like brightest dreams depart,
Teach us, O God, to lift our eyes to heaven,
To smile into thy face when all is gone,
Remembering the gifts thy love hast given
To say the gentle words, "Thy will be done!"

When cruel doubts and trials dark hang o'er us,
When every scene of [illegible] on thy gaze,
When every heart we cherish flies before us,
And [illegible] comfort in our joyless days,
Turn then on us thy loving eyes, O Father!
Give us thy strength till life's bright crown is won,
And help us whisper, though the tears must gather,
Still full of love for thee, "Thy will be done!"

Communicated.

Wisdom of Selrach.

CHAPTER 23.

1. O Lord, O Father and sole Lord of my life, do not leave me utterly to their counsel, do not allow me to fall with them.

2. Who will stand scourges over my perceptive thought and wisdom's chastening over my heart, that they may not be sparing toward my sins of ignorance, and that it (my heart) may not be along side their sins.

3. That my sins of ignorance may not be multiplied, and my sins of error may not be made more, and I fall before the adversaries, and mine enemy rejoice over me.

4. O Lord, Father and Disposer (or "God") of my life, Do not give me pride, (lit lifting up of my eyes).

5. And turn away from me inordinate desire.

6. May lust and wrong sexual intercourse not have hold of me, and do not give me up to a shameless soul life.

CHASTENING OF MOUTH.

7. May ye have hearkened ye children unto chastening of mouth, and the one who is on his guard shall not be taken with his lips.

8. An obdurate sinner will have been taken and a scoffer and a haughty one will have been caused to stumble by them.

9. Do not fill thy mouth with an oath, and do not shut it with the naming of a sacred one.

10. For even as a house-servant who is constantly being disciplined will not had less of a stripe-welt, so also the one who sweareth and nameth constantly shall not have been cleansed from sin.

11. The man of many oaths will have been filled with transgression, and a scourge will not stand away from his house; if he commit a discordant error, his sin is upon him, and if he disregard he hath sinned doubly; and if he hath sworn in vain he will not have been justified; for his house will have been filled with invading charges.

12. There is a choice that is environed with death; may it not have been in the inheritance of Jakoob; for from the truly-reverent will all these things stand away; and they will not have been involved in sins.

13. Do not fill thy mouth with a filthy lack of chastening-instruction; for there is in it a word of sin.

14. Remember thy father and thy mother though thou art sitting in joint-counsel in the midst of great ones; lest at any time thou become oblivious in their sight, and become sayorless in thy accustomed way, and thou wish that thou hadst never been begotten and curse the day of thy birth.

15. A man who gets used to words of reproach will not have been chastened during all his days.

16. Two of a kind multiply sins and the third will bring wrath; a hot soul is like a burning fire; it may not be quenched until it hath been sunk in the deep; a man who is a fornicator with the mouth of his flesh will not pause till he shall flame out fire.

17. All bread is sweet to a fornicator; he will not calm himself until he comes to his end.

18. A man who is an evador from his nuptial couch is one who saith unto his soul, Who seeth me? Darkness is round about me, and the walls hide me, and no one doth see me; what do I fear? The Most High will not have remembered my sins.

19. And men's eyes are his fear, and he hath not comprehended the fact that the eyes of the Lord are manifold more luminous than a sun, looking up on all men's ways and seeing clearly into hidden parts.

20. Before they were generated were all things known to him; even so after they were consummated.

21. This man will have been requited in the public squares of a city, and will have been laid hold of where he did not imagine.

22. In this wise also a wife who forsaketh her husband and presenteth an heir from another.

23. For in the first place, she hath been unfaithful to a law of a Most High, and in the second place, she hath committed a discordant error toward her own husband, and in the third place she hath committed adultery in fornication; she hath presented children by another man.

24. She will have been led out in a church assembly and there will be a visitation on her offspring.

25. Her children will not spread in their root, and their branches will not yield fruit.

26. They will leave the memory of her for a curse and her reproach will not have been wiped out.

27. And those left behind will comprehend that there is nothing better than fear of the Lord, and nothing sweeter than heeding the Lord's commandments.

COMMENT.

The first six verses of this chapter consist of an old covenant prayer which in form and substance is very instructive to us Christians who are worshipers of the same personal God. Observe Selrach addresses him first as "Lord," then as "Father" and then as "sole Lord of my life." The term so translated is "despotes" or anglicised "despot." There can from the very nature of the word be but one such, and "sole Lord" conveys this idea without the additional idea of "tyrant," which we have attached to the original word and which does not properly belong to it. In the fourth verse he changes the form of address to "O Lord, Father, and Disposer of my life." Now "Disposer" is the nearest English word that translates the original word which has been commonly rendered "God" (namely "Theos") any reader can readily see that Selrach is using these appellatives with a full understanding of their meaning, and this is very significant and important if one would fully apprehend what he is asking for.

This prayer reminds us of Christ's language to his disciples at the close of his ministry. "Hitherto ye have asked nothing in my name, ask, et cet." The old covenant prayer was always direct; ours are and should be mediatorial; but there is only one Mediator and one form of mediatorial prayer. This is made emphatic and clear. "There is no other name given, etc." All this attempted mediation through "the Virgin Mary" and "saints" and "angels" is in positive violation of divine instruction and revelation. There is no separate "Holy Spirit" mediator. Christ's instruction on this point is specific. The Holy Spirit will take of my things and show them unto you. "The Holy Spirit" as personified is a Helper or Revelator, but is not to be glorified per se as a person apart from "God and Christ" or "the Father and Son." There are therefore no ascriptions of praise to "the Holy Spirit" as a person apart from God and Christ in God's Word. The important thing for us to know is that God under the covenant of grace or "the new covenant" has subordinated all the natural laws and forces to the higher spiritual laws and forces, and that we are empowered to use them under certain limitations which are clearly defined and embodied in the phrase "the Holy Spirit." The angels and the whole heavenly host which was over mankind in the government of God under the old covenant of law are now made subject to "the Son of Man" and all who are really his. To control the physical laws of the universe will ultimately be the assertion of man's Lordship, and royalty under God. And he will be able to do it by being a full partaker of the divine nature and by becoming a part of the great spiritual cosmos that is higher than the natural as the heavens are higher than the earth, to use a Bible figure of speech.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Something About John xvii. 5.

"Jehovah said to my Lord: Sit thou at my right hand, till I make thy enemies a stool for thy feet." Psa. cx. 1. Compare with Acts iii. 20, 21.

"And he shall send Jesus Christ, who before was preached unto you; whom the heaven must retain until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." And I quote Jno. xvii. 5 in connection with the above so as to get the matter fairly before us: "And now, O Father, glorify thou with me thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was." This verse is regarded as the stronghold of the doctrine of the pre existence of Christ; taught and believed on the part of the "church" so called for centuries. To understand any particular text of Scripture one must understand the context, and have at least a partial knowledge of the design of the writer or reporter of the language of another or others. And note also the distinction necessary to be made between the testimony itself, and that which has been, or may be said about it.

Jesus understood accurately those Scriptures concerning himself. Luke xxiv. 27. Conversing with the Pharisees he said, Matt. xxii. 42-44, "What think you of Christ? Whose Son is he?" And quotes Psa. cx. 1 as applying to himself, and concerning which the apostles were perfectly acquainted. Peter referred to Psa. xvi. 11 as appropriate testimony in Acts ii. 27, 28. And 1 Peter iii. 22. Peter's "Full of joy with thy countenance" equals Ps. xvi. 11, "In thy presence fulness of joy, at thy right hand pleasures for an age." Namely, "Till times of restitution."

In full view of these prophecies, Jesus offered this memorable prayer. Luke xxiv. 26. Think of the state of mind under such pressing circumstances; just before his arrest, sure of conviction and certain death. He prayed for a glory unique in all human experience. Nothing like it in the world's history.

Being in perfect harmony with the prophetic records he knew the issue with reference to the case. He prayed for a glory which he had with the Father some time before he offered the prayer, and which he did not have when the prayer was offered. Notice the first word of the prayer: "Father"—such relationship inspires perfect trust on his part from full conviction. Note the deep reverence pervading every utterance....."The hour is come." See Luke xxii. 69. The "hereafter" would indicate "From this time," "this hour," the Son of Man shall sit on the right hand of God. He knew it yet he prays the Father to grant his petition, "Glorify thy Son." John vii. 39 and compare Acts iii. 18.

Note particularly the relation of the words of verse 1 to one another. The dependence of the matter of the last clause upon the matter of the preceding, "Glorify thy Son so that the Son may glorify thee." The request is that the Father glorify him "in this hour" with the glory aforesaid; so that some time in the future, he (the Son) might glorify the Father in the establishment and righteous administration of God's kingdom after his return from heaven, when the "until" expires. The necessity of the first is apparent in order to the accomplishment of the second. This first verse is the key that unlocks verse 5. The prayer was for a purpose and period; from his ascension to his return. During this long period the material for the kingdom is being separated from the mass of mankind and prepared in order to the glorification of the Father, according to promise. Oath and solemn covenant: "As I live saith Jehoval the whole earth shall be filled with my glory." His (Jesus) presence in the presence of God in heaven during all these years has a meaning as the utterance (verse 2) suggests and affirms "Inasmuch as thou hast given him official power over all flesh, so that all those thou hast given to [illegible] eternal life; and this is the life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and him whom thou hast sent, Jesus Christ."

We are now in some degree prepared for the reading of verse 5. Keep the connection of thought from verse 4 and give the "and" commencing verse 5 its natural force connecting the matter of verse 4 with verse 5 implying compensation for work accomplished, agreeing with Heb. xii. 2, "Who for the joy set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is seated at the right hand of the throne of God."

The first thought is "glorify me;" the second, the place of glorification; the third, the time; and the fourth, that particular glory prayed for. Now then we read: "And now, O thou Father, glorify me at the side of thyself." We ask here which side? The testimony affirms: "the right side;" (2) the time, "this hour." From this time onward, Luke xxii. 69. And definitely specified in the sentence, Pro ton ton kosmon einai. Pro, before, ton that, ton of the, kosmon world, einai to be. Before that (glory understood, from verse 1) of the world to be. This world (constituted order of things in the future) in which the Father will be glorified.

"1. The present infinitive (einai) takes the quality of the noun kosmon meaning world. And subsequent to the glorification for which Jesus prayed. "Glorify me in thy own presence." Campbell. "In heaven itself." Heb. ix. 24. And this before that glory of the world destined to be, in the economy of the fullness of times of restitution; when all the things will be united under one Head, to the glory of God. 3. The glory prayed for he had with the Father, in his own person. Jesus himself being the subject of the sentence, "Which I had with thee." Not as something predetermined in the mind of God. But an absolute fact in Jesus' personal experience. And in the presence of competent witnesses, who testified thereto when the proper time arrived for so doing.

For the the usage of the present infinitive consult Rom. iv. 11 and references. Putting the sentences together we have the following: "And now, O thou Father, glorify me at the side of thyself before that, of the world to be, with the glory which I had with thee." "On the holy mountain." (The "that" after "before," evidently refers to the glory of the world to be; and for which he did not pray. It was his by right of inheritance, and by solemn covenant.)

4. This last sentence, ("The glory which I had with thee") now demands our consideration. When did he have this glory? And what is the teaching of the records with reference to this case? From the hint just thrown out the reader may anticipate the answer to the inquiry; namely, the Transfiguration. Matt. xvii. 2; Mark ix. 2, 3; Lu. ix. 28-36. Three witnesses, so that the facts in the case may be established according to the law. Emphasize verses 29, 31, 32. The witnesses saw his glory (35). Let us hear Peter's testimony in the case, 2 Epis. i. 16-18, and note it down. For we have not followed cunningly devised fables when we made known to you the power and presence of our Lord Jesus Christ; but were eye-witnesses of his Majesty, for when he received from God the Father, honor and glory, a voice came to him from the magnificent glory, This is my beloved Son in whom I delight. And this voice we heard from heaven when we were with him in the holy mount." This testimony meets all the requirements of the case. Yet, would allow one more witness so as to meet the requirements of the law. Consult 1 John i. 1, 2.

"For the life was manifested and we have seen it, and testify and declare to you that eternal life which was with the Father and was manifested to us. That which we have seen and heard, we declare to you, so that you also may have fellowship with us, and our fellowship truly is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ."

Compare Luke ix. 34, 35 with 2 Pet. i. 17, 18. The "voice came out of the cloud" "From the magnificent glory." And John affirms that what they saw and heard, they declared for the purpose mentioned. The eternal life was then and there manifested. And Jesus being well aware of the glory awaiting him, took these three disciples apart as witnesses to testify as to the scene on the mountain.

Table Talk.

In the household in Salem, O., the talk goes on, and is comforting and edifying to the faithful present, but for two weeks circumstances have prevented a written paper, or subject. On Sunday last our brother Crawford read part of Mal. iii., it was read in a most impressive way, and earnest comments made on the eighth verse by the reader, especially on these words, "Will a man rob God?" Showing that men do rob God in various ways, both by offering that which is of little or no value to themselves, or by withholding that portion of their income or possessions which lawfully belong to God. Comments were also made on verse 10, showing that a blessing is in store for those who with a whole heart walk before God, and tithe their income to uphold and spread the good news of the kingdom that we ourselves so much enjoy, as the promise of God to eternal life through Jesus Christ, and when those who render to God the things that are God's, sit with Jesus on his throne, they will not only be blessed for evermore, but be a blessing to all the nations and families of the earth. "Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the Lord, as in the days of old, and as in former years." Mal. iii. 6.

Be Useful While You Live.

It is not well for persons to occupy positions which shall make their dying more desirable than their living. The house too heavily insured is in special danger of conflagration. Many a man is now in his grave whose life would have lasted longer if there had been no insurance upon it. It is as easy for a man to make his life a blessing as a burden to those around him, and the men or the women who have slaved and struggled until they have made themselves helpless, and uncomfortable, and a burden to all with whom they have to deal, have not, in so doing, exhibited the greatest wisdom or common sense.

There are people who hope to do great things in the cause of Christ, after they are dead. They will give money, found hospitals, establish schools, build orphanages, support missions, all after they are dead. But if the thing is to be done at all, why not do it now? Life is uncertain, time is passing, work is pressing, you are a steward of the Lord's. Suppose the Lord wants some of your money and wants it now, will you compel him to put you under ground before he can get it? Why not deal out that which God has intrusted to you, see that it is well used, and live and enjoy the blessing of it. Surely it is wiser to do this than to say to the Lord, "This money is yours, but you shall never have any of it as long as I live; when I am dead you can use it."

It is not a wise thing for a man to put all his money under the control of others, and make himself helpless and dependent upon them; but it is safe for men to use the possessions God has given them with wisdom, discretion, and prudence, and then, having done the work which the Lord appointed for them, trust him to provide for them and carry them safely through.

The Scriptures represent the child of God as like a fruit tree. The wicked flourishes like a green bay tree. The righteous shall flourish like a palm tree. The fruit tree is useful while it lives. The timber tree is useless until it is dead. Let Christians be like the tree by the rivers of water, which bringeth forth fruit in its season, and which is cherished and protected that it may bear fruit, rather than be like the timber tree, which is only valuable when it is hewn down.—H. L. Hastings.

Keep Thy Heart with all Diligence.

Things do not go haphazard in this world. The farmer knows very well what sort of grain he expects to harvest when he sows his field. The blacksmith does not hammer a piece of red-hot iron just to see what it will turn into. The architect has his plans all prepared before he sets his men at work. The gardener does not watch his crop come up through a tangle of weeds and expect to get good returns for the labor he has not expended.

If your heart—that is yourself—is to amount to anything, it surely needs as much care as a field of corn, does it not? It needs keeping. It will not keep itself. Weeds grow much faster than grain in this world, and your farmer knows if his land has not been planted with good seed that he will not find his farming profitable.

Much of the keeping consists in keeping out things that should have no place in a heart that is to be fitted for God's uses. The profane word, the evil companion, the demoralizing book, all these can be dropped out much easier than they can be gotten rid of after they are once in the heart. That is why people think it so much easier to keep a boy a temperance boy from the very beginning than to reform a man who has learned to love liquor so that he would do anything, give anything to gratify his craving for it. If the love for strong drink had only been kept out of his heart in the first place how much easier it would have been for him to be a good man. So in many other ways, the keeping out of evil things saves in time and in effort. Better keep the mischevious seeds out of the garden than to pull up the weeds after they are well started. Better not form the bad habit than be obliged to correct it after it is already formed.—Christian Safeguard,

Tobacco Poisoning.

Every one is familiar with the effects of tobacco on one unaccustomed to it, especially upon the young, but we are too apt to consider these effects as confined to the person smoking. This is a distinct error. The pleasurable effects generally are so confined, but the discomforts are not. Persons habituated to tobacco are usually very incredulous about these discomforts, and pay little attention to them. Yet many habitual smokers avoid a smoking-car or smoking-cabin, and we have known many men in good health who have been obliged to give up attendance at their favorite clubs because their fellow members smoked so excessively as to cause them an illness. We have even known a strong man, who rarely used tobacco, in need of medical aid, from attending a director's meeting, held in a rather small room, where the majority smoked during the meeting while he did not. With these facts before us, who can doubt the effect upon infants and young children before they acquire habituation? If a child is "poorly," with poor appetite, is languid, etc., it is always worth while to inquire if this source of poisoning exists. It may seem that such caution is unnecessary, but we daily see the men of the family smoking in the same room with the children.—Babyhood.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, NOV. 11, 1903.

As we go to press today there are on our list just 331 whose time is out now, and their renewals due. Some of these are owing from 1 to 5 years, and others only for the current year. If all would pay in what they should we would have in hand quite $350.00.

Now Brothers and Sisters, for some weeks past we have tried to explain our need, and urge action on your part. We are not complaining of the noble ones who always keep their subscription up and ahead, and wish to thank all such. We wish to thank also every one who is doing his very best to send as soon as he can. We wish to urge you to more earnest effort. If there are any who are careless and neglectful we wish to ask you kindly to rouse up and send us what is right.

If you could know and realize our situation we feel certain you would respond at once. It is a conviction with us that there is not a Brother or Sister now owing us but who can get the amount they owe easier than we can carry the whole load. We are compelled to struggle on with the burden. Are you not also in duty bound to do your part? Please think of this very seriously, as before your God, and then act.

Another thing that makes this year hard for us is that our Helping Fund is now $122.00 below what it has been other years, and as we have kept the poor ones on our list so far we do not like the idea of cutting them off. Surely there are enough members of the Church of God in this land who have been blessed with abundance, who can spare this amount so that we shall not have to drop the name of a single worthy poor Brother or Sister.

Brethren, these are the plain figures. Will you give attention to these matters? We hope you will without more delay.

It is the very essence of wisdom to draw a person to Christ, not by fear of any possible consequences resulting from a rejection of the gracious message of salvation, but by exhibiting the abounding love of Christ, and the gracious mercy of Jehovah.

THE judgment does not take place at death, but at the appearing of Jesus Christ; neither do saints go to heaven at death. No man hath ascended into heaven. John iii. 13. David is not in heaven. Acts ii. 34. There are three classes of people, just, unjust and heathen. There will be a resurrection of the just and unjust. Acts xxiv. 15.

THE final subjugation of all that is evil on earth is the hope of the believer in that power by which the Lord Jesus is able to subdue all things unto himself, and his ultimate reign establishing peace on earth, good will towards men, and love among men is the silver lining that brightens intervening clouds, and crowns the vista of those who look for and love his reappearing.

GOD seems to put no bounds to man's free will, and exercises no compulsion with regard to salvation. "God recommendeth his love to us," but we are left free to accept or reject that love as we choose. It is quite conceivable that regeneration might have been as outside our choice as was our original creation. When God created man he gave him no choice to be or not to be. But the new birth is never imposed on man without his desire for it. The power to become sons of God is given to them that believe, but not otherwise. By grace are we saved, not of necessity. Eternal life is a free gift freely accepted.

A Pure Language.

The necessity for divers languages will no longer exist after the establishment of the kingdom of God. And seeing Jerusalem will then become the throne of the Lord, and the metropolis of the world, and the restored Jewish nation the light of all other nations, as predicted in Isa. lx. 3, and the leading power upon earth, it will follow, even a natural result, that the language universally dominant nation will be universally spoken.

It will be a glorious time when men universally think and speak in the very language in which God originally spoke to man, and in which the patriarchs and prophets of all ages have meditated upon the Word and works of the Creator. It may well be said concerning that day, that they shall see eye to eye, when the Lord shall bring again Zion." A thousand "middle walls of partition" will be broken down that now divide nation from nation; and all nations from Israel; and Israel from Christ and God. Mankind will at last be one again. It may then truly be said, "One song employs all nations."

Decision of Character.

We call the following from Our Christian Life and Work, hoping it may be of service to some who never accomplish anything for want of this trait. It says:—

Nail your colors to the masthead; so that they cannot come down. Determine to be singular, if need be, but don't go with the crowd. In the counting-room, in the banks, and all places of business, in the social life with which you mingle, and in all secular affairs, no less than in the church, the Sunday school or the closet, there is a demand for Christians with back bone. An invertebrate Christian is not of the Spirit's creation; [is not that a misnomer?] he is of no use to God or man. In these times there is not one-tenth part of the danger from the open assaults of infidels upon Christianity that there is from betrayal of it by its professed followers. The Captain of our salvation gives us his colors. His honor is in our hands. His command is to be faithful unto death. Let us die sooner than lower the colors."

Endless Suffering.

Speaking on the eternal suffering of the wicked Barnes the commentator said, "A hundred difficulties meet the mind when we think on this great subject; and they meet us when we endeavor to urge our fellow sinners to be reconciled to God, and put confidence in him. I confess for one that I feel these, and feel them more sensibly and powerfully the more I look at them, and the longer I live. I do not know that I have a ray of light on this subject, which I had not when the subject first flashed across my soul. I have read to some extent what wise and good men have written. I have looked at their theories and explanations. I have endeavored to weigh their arguments, for my whole soul pants for relief on these questions. But I get neither; and in the distress and anguish of my own spirit, I confess that I see no light whatever. I see not one ray to disclose to me the reason why sin came into the world, why the earth is strewed with the dying and the dead, and why man must suffer to all eternity."

How our heart goes out toward a man whose sense of right would not allow him to accept the makeshift explanations of orthodoxy for the eternity of suffering; and at the same time was so blinded by the heathen dogma of the immortality of the soul that the divine key to the truth could not be used. How we should praise our God and Father for the rays of light that have lumined our pathway, and scattered the fog of mysticism in which we once groped.

In the Body; Out of the Body.
2. Cor. 12: 2, 3.

The above terms are supposed to teach that a man can be in a conscious state while dead as well as while he is alive. If Paul here taught that doctrine, he was greatly at variance with other portions of his writings and the Scriptures in general. Neither does this Scripture teach that Paul went to the theological "heaven" where immortal souls are supposed to go "when the body dies." We can avoid a great deal of misunderstanding of Scripture by giving due attention to everything an author says on any given subject. What is Paul writing about in this chapter? What prompts him to use the terms here employed? "I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord," says Paul. v. 1. Let us "come to" these, and follow his line of thought. He knew a man above 14 years ago (whether in the body or out of the body; he could not tell; God knew), that such a man was caught up to the third heaven and paradise, and heard words which he was not permitted to speak. v. 2, 4. This he calls "visions and revelations of the Lord." In these "visions" he saw things which added to his stock of knowledge of divine matters, and these he styles "revelations." This was perfectly in keeping with God's manner and methods of making "revelations" of his will concerning mankind. We would not rob any term here employed of its meaning or import. Yet I can not help calling the reader's attention to the Greek verb here translated "caught up"—Harpazo. It is found ten times in the N. T. The preposition "up" is not in the original, so that we are not obliged to read "caught up." We might as well read "caught down" as far as the requirements of the original are concerned. It depends upon the context and general import of the text what preposition to use. We find the same verb in Acts. viii: 39, where it is said that "the Spirit of the Lord caught away (Gr. eerpasen) Philip." The latter was conveyed away bodily. In our chapter is a man who is caught away as far as the third heaven and paradise, but whether bodily or not he is not able to say. The terms "in the body" and "out of the body" are found in other parts of Paul's writings. See I. Cor. vi: 18-20. "Every sin that a man doeth (except fornication) is without the body" (ektos ton somatos). This is precisely the same as "out of the body" (ekstos ou somatos) in 2. Cor. xii: 2-3. Did the apostle wish to be understood that sins other than fornication are committed without any relation to the body, in a disembodied state? What about theft? or murder? or swearing? Is not the body concerned in them? Certainly. Yet they are ektos ton somatos. Since the term "out of the body" in one case manifestly does not refer to a disembodied state, why should the other, especially in the entire absence of such teaching from the Bible?

Where was this man while thus "conveyed away?" As far as the third heaven and paradise. What heaven? Men are in the habit of dividing heaven into three stories: 1. The atmospheric heaven. 2. The planetary heaven. 3. The place of God's abode. And the supposition is that Paul was caught up into the presence of God. Bear in mind, Paul did not pretend to know whether in the body or out of the body; therefore let no one dogmatize that a disembodied spirit went to heaven. There is as good reason to affirm that a literal, tangible body went to heaven, as far as this language is concerned. God only knows the exact manner in which he was conveyed away. What was the object of this "vision?" The apostle does not say except to associate the idea of "revelations" with "visions." What was revealed to him, he was not permitted to tell. No doubt it was for his good and that of the church. If that proves anything in favor of men going to heaven either in or out of the body, it is difficult to see where the proof lies. He states that such a one was conveyed away to the third heaven and paradise. What heaven? "The third." We read in the epistles of Peter of "the heavens" which "were of old and the earth standing out of water and in the water: whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished. But the heavens and the earth which are now (in distinction from "the heavens and the earth" constituting "the world that then was") by the same word are kept in store reserved against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." 2. Pet. iii: 1-7. Here we have two "heavens and earth" in succession. Is there a third? We, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." v. 13. Here is a third. Paul was caught away to "the third." In connection with this he saw "paradise." We understand that paradise was once on the earth. Does it exist now? Not on the earth as far as we know. Is it in heaven? If it is, we have no record of the transfer. Paradise with all its beauty and loveliness is to be restored. The curse pronounced upon the ground because of man's transgression (Gen. iii: 17) is to be taken away, so that "there shall be no more curse" (where it was—on the ground). Rev. xxii: 3. The overcomer has the promise of eating of the tree (wood) of life which is in the midst of the paradise of God. Rev. ii: 7. The tree (or wood) of life is on either side of the river issuing from the throne of God and the Lamb. Rev. xxii: 1. That river is in the midst of the street of the holy city which John saw coming down from God out of heaven. Rev. xxi: 1-3. That city came down when the new heaven and earth were established (Paul's "third heaven"). Here are some of the features of the first paradise: The tree of life, with its fruit for the overcomer and healing for the nations, the river of water of life; no more curse, no sorrow, no crying, no more pain; all these done away, as belonging to "the former things," the "former heaven and earth" in which we now move. Gen. ii: 8-15; Rev. 21, 22. The things which Paul saw in his "visions" seemed so life-like and real that he was unable to tell whether he was conveyed away bodily or in spirit as the prophet Ezekiel. (8: 3 and others) Here the prophet says, "The spirit lifted me up between the earth and heaven, and brought me in the visions of God to Jerusalem." He was not lifted up bodily, for he himself says it was "in the visions of God."

I have endeavored to give a brief answer to the brother's questions, and trust this may do him as well as others good.

A. H. ZILMER.

Report of Labor.

By an urgent request from Bro. Zilmer and the church in Warren Co., my husband and myself arranged to go to them to hold a series of meetings beginning October 16th. We were indeed glad to meet the brethren at Pleasant View once more, for our former work among them had always been very pleasant and profitable, all working so harmoniously, drinking into the spirit of the work. The sad event of Bro. Harry Evans' death cast a deep gloom over all, for he was universally beloved, and we believe their love and respect for "Uncle Harry" actuated some to accept the Christ, for O, they must see him again when the King comes in. Bro. Evans' funeral took place Thursday Oct. 15th, and the eve of the 16th our meetings began, and from the very first meeting all felt the blessed Spirit of God moving the hearts At the first invitation to accept the gospel Ada Evans, Emma Shawcross and Harvey Conner came forward, the next evening Evert Byers, Ora Flint and Earl Mahaffey expressed their desire to become a part of the body of Christ. Night after night the interest increased, and as the gospel of God's dear Son was given to them, they seemed to realize their need of it, and eight more came forward, Mrs. Daisy Wilson, Jessie Sicks, Beaulah Martin, Clarence Sicks, Lida Wilson, Cora Wilson, Mrs. Anna McCandless and Clarence Day, and Sunday Oct. 25th, we drove nine miles to Alvin, and while throngs of people stood on the bank 14 happy souls were immersed into the Christ. In the evening the right hand of fellowship was extended to them by the church and the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper administed. What a day of rejoicing it was, it seemed our cup of joy was almost full, but we were yet to see greater proofs of God's love and mercy. We had expected to close our meetings and go to Plymouth to begin work there but word came from Bro. Underwood that the church furnace had given out and while they were getting the new one in we could remain here, and in the waiting time ten more were added to the body of Christ. Again, we with a large company of friends drove to Alvin, and buried these dear ones into his all-saving name. Monday evening Nov. 2nd we organized a Berean society and had a Bible reading. Tuesday evening was announced as our last meeting, but two more expressed a desire to become the children of God, and Wednesday morning we went again to the water and baptized them extending the hand of fellowship and administering the Lord's Supper in the evening. We made an appeal for THE RESTITUTION paper and ten names were added to the list, most of them new names. While the friends sung "God be with you till we meet again" all came and gave us the good bye hand shake. May God keep all these dear ones in the love of the truth is our prayer.

R. W. & M. A. WOODWARD.

To the brethren of Kansas and Missouri:

I have left Ransom, Kan., and until further notice I will receive letters at Canton, Kan. My meeting at Prairie Point in north central Kansas was well attended, the house being full every night, with good attention. While there were no additions, yet the interest was so good that we have hopes that the seed sown may yet bring good results. We will visit that point again in December. Sister Coons of Clay Center assisted me very materially with her singing and the organ. In January we expect to be in northeast Kansas, and in February in Missouri. Let all who desire to correspond with me address me at Canton, Kan. for the present.

A. W. DARBY.

The Indiana Conference.

Regarding the Programme for this meeting, the Committee, acting under suggestion given, have held off making definite announcement on account of Brother and Sister Woodward having meetings here. Should an interest be awakened by their efforts, then the preaching by others should naturally be along lines that will aid in advancing the work.

Bro. Wagoner will be here, and has given as a subject "An abstract of title," and will be good no doubt. Bro. Hatch gives as his subject "The judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether." Bro Zilmer says he will speak on "The Commonwealth of Israel," and Bro. Wince will fill his place as usual with something appropriate.

With this array of talent, and possibly others, added to Bro. and Sister Woodward's well known ability, all who attend can be assured that a programme will be announced that will be full of good things. The Plymouth friends are anxious to have a good attendance, and will gladly care for you while with them. Come and enjoy the meetings, and help by your presence, your counsel and your prayers.

THE PROGRAMME COMMITTEE.

What is Heroism?

The wonder has always been great to me that heroism has never been supposed to be in any wise consistent with the practice of supplying people with food or clothes, but rather with that of quartering oneself upon them for food, and stripping them of their clothes. Spoiling of armor has been an heroic deed in all ages, but the selling of clothes, old or new, has never taken any color of magnanimity. Yet one does not see why feeding the hungry and clothing the naked should ever become base business, even when engaged in on a large scale. If one could contrive to attach the notion of conquest to them anyhow; so that, supposing there were anywhere an obstinate race who refused to be comforted, one might take some pride in giving them compulsory comfort, and, as it were, occupying a country with one's gifts, instead of one's armies! If one could only consider it as much a victory to get a barren field sown as to get an eared field stripped, and contend who should build villages instead of who should "carry" them! Are not all forms of heroism conceivable in doing these serviceable deeds?—Ruskin.

Russian activity in Palestine is not carried on openly, but under the guise of missionary zeal. Today there are 155 Russian schools in Syria and Palestine educating 15,000 children, as against 2,000 three years ago. Jerusalem, in particular, is the object of Russia's solicitude. Here she is busy buying land and erecting buildings of all kinds—missions, schools, hospitals, and monasteries. In fact, the Russian "New Jerusalem" forms a town of its own, and is practically a fortress commanding the older Jerusalem, and surrounded by a strong wall ...The promotion of schools for the education of native children serves as an excellent medium for the extension of her influence. No money is spared. The most promising Arab pupils are sent to Russia to complete their education. They return with Russian wives to become teachers in the Palestinian schools, and having acquired strong Russian leanings, they naturally do their best to spread Russian ideas in their native land. Russia's great object now is to lay hands upon the holy places in Jerusalem, in which at present she has no share. The Greek sepulchere and monasteries have hitherto belonged to the Greek Church in Jerusalem, and this body does not acknowledge the authority of the Russian Orthodox Church. But it seems only a question of time when Russia will oust the Greek church, and put forward the claims of her own church.—Things to Come.

What Makes Our Gifts Worth While.

Not the amount of giving, but the spirit in which right giving goes out, is what God commends. God does not need our gifts large or small, even for his best cause. But we need the blessing which God gives freely to the cheerful giver who gives in a right spirit. The gift that has been most commended in all the ages was the simple farthing of a loving poor widow, in contrast with the large offerings of the rich, who won no commendation as a reward of their gifts or their spirit. When King Saul offered in sacrifice to Jehovah costly gifts that he had been directed to destroy, the rebuke of Jehovah came to him by Samuel, "To obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams." So always, not the gift, but the spirit of the giver, commends itself to God. A costly gift of a rich man may have a blessing when the farthing of a poor man lacks it. A good spirit does not necessarily go with a small gift or with a large one, but God knows and notes the spirit that we have this in mind as we give, or wish to give.—S. S. Times.

Can You Desire a Better Opportunity?

Not our particular position or sphere in life, but the spirit in which we do or bear what is set before us or is laid on us, measures our faithfulness and our influence in the sight of our fellows and in God's sight. Our opportunities, just where and as we are, may be the means of fitting us for highest good to those about us, and for fullest appreciation and improvement of our place in God's service. One who is on the throne of a great world-power, in the sight of all the nations of earth, has no better opportunity of doing his best and most in the sight of God, and God's dear ones, than has a helpless invalid in a garret or cellar who seems all alone in the world. God would have us do faithfully and bear lovingly what he appoints for us in the place where we are. He asks nothing more or better; why should we?—S. S. Times.

Some tell us that "man cannot live without sin." Then sin must be essential to life; and salvation from all sin would kill him. A Calvinistic preacher, holding that view, once accosted Billy Hibbard, an early Methodist preacher who was an ardent advocate of holiness, with this incredulous inquiry: "Mr. Hibbard, can you live without sin?" The laconic reply was ready: "Very comfortably, brother, very comfortably."

"Now, in order that people may be happy in their work, these three things are needful. They must be fit for it; they must not do too much of it; and they must have a sense of success in it—not a doubtful sense, such as needs some testimony of other people for its confirmation, but a sure sense, or rather knowledge that so much work has been done well, and fruitfully done, whatever the world may say or think about it."

The message of salvation is free to all the world; yet send a message of pardon today and you can't get it free out of Garrison!—F. H. Gurney.

Poetry.

Is It Worth While?

Is it worth while that we jostle a brother,
Bearing his load on the rough road of life?
Is it worth while that we jeer at each other,
In blackness of heart that we wait the knife?
God pity us all in our pitiful strife.

God pity us all as we jostle each other.
God pardon us all for the triumphs we feel,
When a fellow goes down 'neath his load on the leather,
Pierced to the heart; words are keener than steel,
And mightier far for woe than for weal.

Were it not well, in this brief little journey,
On over the isthmus, down into the tide,
We give him a fish instead of a serpent,
Extending the hands to be and abide
Forever, or days, in dust at his side?

Look at the trees saluting each other;
Look at the lambs all in peace on the plain.
Man, and man only, makes war on his brother;
And laughs in his heart at his peril and pain,
Shamed by the beasts that go down on the plain.

Is it worth while that we battle to humble
Some poor fellow down into the dust?
God pity us all! We're too small for trouble.
All of us together, like leaves in a gust,
Tumbled, jostled, down into the dust.

The Gospel of the Kingdom of God Endangered in Scotland. No. 7.

"We ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip." Hebrews. "With one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel." Paul.

The present writer's only apology for directing the attention of the readers of THE RESTITUTION to this subject is its paramount importance. The gospel is placed in jeopardy by some of its professed friends of some forty years' standing. The same thing might happen anywhere in these days of easy going so-called Christian principles. It might become any one's duty to contend, even with his brethren in defence of "the faith."

The editor and the readers of THE RESTITUTION will doubtless acknowledge that even what might seem a trifling divergence from the gospel and its obedience may call for some lengthy exposition to clear up simple points. Previous papers especially No. 5, will show this. Paul's counsel to disciples, "Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith," is clearly to this effect.

This subject has now to certain extent become public, not only in THE RESTITUTION, but in the Messenger (Glasgow). In the latter what may be called a disruption of the Church in Edinburgh has been intimated, in the secession of twenty-nine members, these forming a separate assembly.

The laxity of 1891 is seen in allowing, as valid, an admittedly defective pre-baptismal faith, in the case of applicants for membership, if such dipping had been followed by the knowledge and belief of the gospel of the kingdom of God. To make this point quite plain I quote the resolution of '91:—

"The Church carefully considered the question of the re-immersion of those whose pre-baptismal knowledge did not reach the standard above stated. It resolves that re-immersion be not required from applicants for membership who at the time of their baptism believed in the Lord Jesus Christ as the Son of God, and their Savior, and who now confess their belief in the foregoing truth." The "standard above stated," and "the foregoing truths," have reference to the things of the kingdom, etc. set out in first resolution.

In 1902 a still more lax resolution was proposed, and which was adopted by a narrow majority of members present at a meeting, at which little more than half of the members of the Church were present. I give here the terms of the resolution:—

"Membership. The Church welcomes to its membership all who believe in God, and accept the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments as the Word of God, the divine rule of faith and practice; who, having truly repented of their sins, have been immersed in water in the name of the Lord Jesus, believing him to be the Christ, the Son of God, who died for their sins, rose again for their justification, and is now in the presence of God as their great High Priest. This profession of faith by applicants for baptism shall in all cases be accepted as sufficient."

This was strongly dissented from by the minority. A plebiscite was asked but was refused.

The promoters of the new resolutions say, "We do not propose to alter in the smallest degree the principles embodied in the present constitution of the Church." That is the '91 constitution. This may be conformable to fact in the sense that the '91 constitution allowed baptism on an admittedly defective faith to be valid in the case of applicants for membership, and in the case of occasional visitors. At the same time, however, the '91 constitution, secured the true faith of the membership by requiring post baptismal belief of the gospel of the kingdom. In both cases true "obedience of faith" (Acts vi. 7) is ignored, and from this point of view both "constitutions" are indefensible. The laxity in both cases as regards the gospel may be said to be infinite; while the difference between '91 and '02 is practically infinitesimal.

Again the promoters of the 1902 resolutions give some "Reasons for their proposals." One of these is, "Appeals to the authority of the past, or to conservative instincts in general, are altogether beside the mark. Our constitution must be true, not to the standards of fifty, twenty, or even ten years ago, but to the convictions and personal practices of today." But what of the "standards" of the first century? The claim here is virtually one that the church of Christ is a voluntary society, like any secular institution. This is evident from their own words just quoted. It is also proved by the statements of the secessionists in their controversy with those left behind. Quoting the resolution of 1891 referring to re-immersion, they say, "This is what you now call a 'principle.' It has no claim to such a distinction, being a mere resort to human expediency.....It was simply resorted to as the best solution we could find for a difficulty.....The danger of such a device is seen now, when it is used as an argument for making a much more serious departure from Bible precedent." It "was a measure of expediency which is open to the grave objection that it is without divine authority. There is undoubtedly much to be said in its favors in view of the merciful nature of our High Priest," etc. But the new departure which you have made is quite on a different footing," etc. Referring to the resolution of 1902, the 29 say, speaking of the gospel of the kingdom and the truth of life in Christ—"you are drifting away from them, and the process must naturally go on.....The present condition of apostasy in Christendom was reached not all at once, but by a gradual process.....You have taken the first step in this downward course.....We are resolved to stop the evil at its beginning."

We have spoken of the 1902 party as treating the church as a voluntary institution. In such a case expediency and human wisdom come into action in moulding its constitution so-called. Along with this policy this party does not shrink from claiming apostolic authority for their action. It so happens that both expediency and claim for divine authority are met by explicit Scripture declarations. They say, "Our proposal now is designed to bring us into truer accord with the usage of the apostolic church." What is that "usage"? We have it described in plain terms. It is based on our Lord's declaration, "Upon this rock I will build my church." That is, through the instrumentality of his servants; for we read "they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following." We find the first instance of this "working" on Pentecost. "About 3000 souls were added," through belief and obedience following on Peter's testimony, the pith of which was that "the Messiah had been raised up to sit on David's throne." In the same chapter it is recorded that "the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved." Some ten years later this is (without fault) referred to as an "apostolic usage," thus, "much people was added unto the Lord." Later still, that Paul "separated the disciples." We read of this as the "church of Ephesus." At the earliest period we find the class of persons spoken of in these usages described as "obedient to the faith."

It is submitted that true "conservative instincts" will always seek to be "in accord" with the "apostolic usage" alluded to in the testimonies quoted, rather than with "the convictions and personal practices of today," as preferred by the advocates of the 1902 constitution. It is simply a question between "God's building," as Paul calls it, and man's building constructed to accord with "the convictions" of those who have declared in "dealing with the fellowship of occasional visitors, communion is made free to all baptized persons holding the common faith of Christendom."

"The convictions.....of today." What are "convictions"? In most cases in religious matters are they more than strong opinions? They may be right or they may be wrong. They may be based on "the faith of the gospel," or otherwise on mere inferences. The so-called "common faith of Christendom," from the Roman Catholic church down to Baptists, so-called "Reformation," etc. is little else than a fulfilment of Paul's prediction "they shall be turned unto fables." And yet with all these there is no lack of "convictions."

The Judgments of God.

"And as it is appointed unto men once to die and after this the judgment." Heb. ix. 27.

We notice this judgment is after death. Some men's sins are opened beforehand going before to judgment and some men they follow after. Tim. v. 24. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made. 1 Cor. xv. 22. This judgment is before death. For God told the woman, that her seed should bruise the serpent's head. Gen. iii. 15. And we see men perish under this sentence, indiscriminately, without respect of persons. But where there is no law there is no transgression. Rom. iv. 15. For until the law sin was in the world, but is not imputed where there is no law. Rom. v. 13. If this be the case how can any one perish without law. For without the law sin is dead. Rom. vii. 8. And the strength of sin is the law. 1 Cor. xv. 56. Then how can any one perish without law, except in Adam? For sin is the the transgression of the law. 1 John iii. 4. Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them who had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression, who is the figure of him that was to come. Rom. v. 14. And it did not cease at Moses. For Christ died under that reign of death, so that death could not have been the wages, but the result of sin. Here is the death he tasted for every man. Not instead of every man; and if every man is not released from the power of this death, then he paid for what he what he will never reap.

This is the death that he abolished, and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. 2 Tim. i. 10. Here the sin of the world was taken away. Jno. i. 29. And at this juncture the second death law begins. And this is the law that condemns the world; the law of sin and death. Here the second sting of the serpent is removed from them who accept Christ. For as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up; that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have eternal life. Jno. iii. 14, 15; Num. xxi. 8, 9. Here is the second death law. But the law of the Spirit of life in Christ makes man free from this law of sin and death, and there is no other that any one is made free from. Even Christ himself went down under the power of death in Adam. So the wilderness law is the second death law. And every man receives his wages for rejecting the law of the Spirit of life in Christ. For God hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness, by that man whom he hath ordained, whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead. Acts xvii. 31. And Peter says the Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation; and to reserve the unjust to the day of judgment to be punished. 2 Pet. ii. and ix. And here is evidence of a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust. Acts xxiv. 15. And by commencing at the fourth verse of 2 Peter and reading to ninth, we find he begins with angels, and says they are reserved unto judgment. And I think, if we read carefully, we will find that those angels were the ungodly, or the unjust which he says the Lord knows how to reserve to the day of judgment. And Jude speaks of the same event, and says they are twice dead and plucked up by the roots. Could any thing be twice dead, and only once alive? And Enoch prophesied of the same, and says that the saints are to help execute this judgment when Christ comes. Jude 12 to 15. For to this end Christ both died and rose and revived that he might be Lord both of the dead and living. But why dost thou judge thy brother, or why dost thou set at naught thy brother, for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ. For it is written, as I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God. So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God. Rom. xiv. 9 to 12; Isa. xlv. 22, 23. And the Psalmist David is plainer still on this point, for he says all they that be for unto earth shall eat and worship; all they that go down to the dust shall bow before him. And none can keep alive his own soul. Psa. xxii. 27 to 31. And if they were immortal; they would not need keeping alive, for they could not be killed. And Christ said, Marvel at this, for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation. Jno. v. 33, 29. But as this text is a disputed one, we will try another. Behold he cometh with the clouds. And every eye shall see him and they also which pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him, even so. Amen. Those Roman soldiers that pierced him, could hardly see him, without a resurrection from the dead. Neither could all kindreds wail; there might be a few. And Paul says, he gave himself a ransom for all to be testified in due time. 1 Tim. ii. 6. And in due time he did for the ungodly. Rom. v. 6. And Paul reasoned of righteousness, temperance and a judgment to [illegible] said, Go thy way, for this time. Acts xxiv. 25. And why did he tremble? Because it points out man's wages, after death in Adam. For he certainly knew he would die that death before Paul preached to him. Paul believed in the resurrection, both of the just and unjust; and Felix believed it too, when Paul was through with him. But when is due time? When the dead both small and great stand before God the books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. And these are the books that we are writing from. For Christ said the words that I speak unto you shall judge you in the last day. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hades delivered up the dead which were in them; and they were judged every man according to their works. And death and hades were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire. Rev. xx. 12 to 15. Here is the wages of sin, when it is finished. But sin was not finished in the first Adam. Nor all pardoned in the second, or there could have been no judgment to come. But it is thought that the ungodly get their pay at death. But what does Christ say about it? When he sent his disciples to preach he said to them, into whatsoever city ye enter and they receive you not; shake off the dust of your feet for a testimony against them, verily I say unto you, that it shall be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment than for that city. Mark vi. 11; Matt. x. 14, 15. And what would Sodom and Gomorrah have to do with the day of judgment, if they had received their pay, and the debt canceled. But we think they have not according to the prophet. When I shall bring again their captivity, the captivity of Sodom and her daughters, and the captivity of Samaria and her daughters, then will I bring again the captivity of thy captives in the midst of them. That is Jerusalem's captives will be brought at the same time. And in the midst of the captives of Sodom and Samaria, when thy sisters Sodom and her daughters shall return to their former estate, and Samaria and her daughters shall return to their former estate, then thou and thy daughters shall return to their former estate. For thy sister Sodom was not mentioned by thy mouth in the day of thy pride. For thus saith the Lord God; I will deal with thee as thou hast done, which hast despised the oath in breaking the covenant. Nevertheless I will remember my covenant with thee in the days of thy youth, and I will establish unto thee an everlasting covenant. Then thou shalt remember thy ways and be ashamed, when thou shalt receive thy sisters, thine elder and thy younger; and I will give them unto thee for daughters, but not by thy covenant. Ezek. xvi. 53, 55, 56, 59, 60, 61. Remember not by thy covenant. And Paul says, but this I confess unto thee that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets, and have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust. Acts xxiv. 14, 15. And Paul believed this, because it was written in the law and the prophets. And it agrees with Peter where he says, the Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust to the day of judgment to be punished, and in this same chapter we find Paul's argument, for a judgment to come. And Paul expected a share in this judgment for he says, do ye not know the saints shall judge the world: and if the world shall be judged by you, are ye unworthy to judge the smallest matters, know ye not that we shall judge angels; how much more things that pertain to this life. 1 Cor. vi. 2, 3.

And this agrees with Peter, Jude and Enoch, for they say they are reserved in everlasting chains of darkness unto the judgment of the great day. 2 Pet. ii. 4; Jude 6, 14. Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the councils of the hearts: and then shall every man have praise of God. 1 Cor. iv. 5. And this is the time of Christ's judgment; pointed to by himself, the prophets, and apostles. For he says the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son. Jno. v. 22. But he said, I came not to judge the world, but to save the world. So he that servant was not to judge. But if the Father had pronounced the final judgment upon two-thirds of the inhabitants of this world before Christ was born, how could he ordained of God to be the Judge of the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom. Acts x. 42; 2 Tim. iv. 1; 2 Peter iv. 5. Because he hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that Man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead. Acts xvii. 31. And that day is, when the dead small and great shall stand before God, and the books were opened and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. Rev. xx. 12.

Let him know that he which converteth a sinner from the error of his ways shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins. Jas. v. 20. What death is this? Certainly not in Adam, for in Adam all die. It is the only death that Christ will save any one from. And it is the second death.

And Job says, that the wicked are reserved to the day of destruction, they shall be brought forth to the day of wrath. Job xxxi. 30. And David says, the wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs; they shall consume into smoke shall they consume away. And when the wicked is cut off thou shalt see it. Psa. xxxvii. 34. How could he see it, if they were cut off in the first death? Let the saints be joyful in glory; let them sing aloud upon their beds. Let the high praises of God be in their mouth, and a two edged sword in their hand, to execute vengeance upon the heathen, and punishments upon the people. To bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron. To execute upon them the judgments written; this honor have all his saints. Praise ye the Lord. Psa. cxlix. 5 to 9.

As Babylon hath caused the slain of Israel to fall, so at Babylon shall fall the slain of all the earth. Jer. li. 49. If this is not a reproduction of Babylon, what is it? Although it is stated that they sleep a perpetual sleep, it cannot be until the after death judgment is rendered. For all they that go down to the dust shall bow before him and none can keep alive his own soul. Psa. xxii. 29. If there is any that doubts the literal fulfilment of this let them turn to the chapter and read the 8th, 16th and 18th verses, and see how literally they were fulfilled, and be convinced.

But let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter. Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil. Eccl. xii. 13, 14. But as Christ said, Judge not that ye be not judged. We have tried to represent the judgment of Christ, the apostles and prophets, with as little of our judgment as possible. As we hope to escape the judgment of misrepresenting them, knowing if what is written is true it will stand the test of that judgment, if not, it will be consumed as the wood, hay and stubble. For that is the day that will try every man's works, of what sort it is. 1 Cor. iii. 11 to 19. In love to all.

Obituary.

Died in Darien, N. Y., Oct. 27, 1903, Benjamin C. Simonds, aged 86 years, 6 months and 20 days. He was born in Geneseo, Livingston Co., N. Y., April 7, 1817. Was married to Almira H. Wait in 1843, who died in 1898. To them were born six sons, of whom only Frank W., Merritt D., and Chauncy T. survive him.

He purchased of his father-in-law, Russell Wait, in 1854, the homestead farm on which he lived until his death. In 1848 he began the investigation of the Bible on the nature and destiny of man, and accepted the glorious truth of eternal life through Christ alone, and saw that the doctrine of eternal torment of the wicked was not taught in the Bible, and in 1864 a church was organized with 43 members, and in 1867, a meeting house was built, and later a parsonage, he giving the land for both. All these years he has been faithful and true to the church, and loyal to every pastor. His home was a pilgrim's home until his wife died. He was always noted for his promptness and punctuality in attending all the services of the church to the last, and when he could hear but very little in the Sunday school and Bible class, he would remain, as he said, that his influence and presence might be felt on the side of truth. He was a man of decided convictions of Bible truth, a man of sterling integrity, on whose Christian character there never was a stain. He was a strong writer, and articles have appeared from time to time in THE RESTITUTION and other papers. Funeral sermon by Eld. E. B. Arnold, assisted by the writer who has twice been his pastor. A good man has fallen in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes.

A. P. MOORE.

Died at her home in Kingston, Ark., Oct. 17, 1903, of membraneous croup, Emily A., youngest daughter of Oscar A. and Mary M. Garton, aged 3 years, 4 months and 5 days. Little Emily was a bright little girl, every one loved her. We laid her to rest in the Presbyterian Campground to await the coming of the Lord. But we sorrow not as those who have no hope.

O. A. & M. M. GARTON.

Joseph Stevens, son of A. D. and Margaret Stevens, was born May 9, 1878 and died at Roll, Ind., Oct. 23, 1903. He had been a member of the C. B. church, but during the last year had attended meetings at the Church of God, and was convinced that immortality is not in this life, but is the gift of God through Jesus Christ at the resurrection at the last day. The funeral service was conducted at the Church in Roll, by the writer and the service at the grave was conducted by the Odd Fellows Lodge.

N. M. ROSEY.

Died near Foothill, Ont., on Nov. 4th, of pneumonia, Charles M. Platts, the beloved son of William and Myrtle Platts, aged two years and two months. But we sorrow not as those without hope. Jesus, the great life-giver, loved little children so much that he took them up in his arms and blessed them, and said, "Suffer them to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." He also said, "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven." Yes, the prophet says they shall come again from the land of the enemy, and that there is hope in their end. Praise the Lord for the prospect. May we so order our lives that we may be counted worthy to see them again in the resurrection state and be united with them never more to part. In this sorrowful condition truly we can say, "In the beginning of life we are in the midst of death." I know from experience how to sympathize with the above parents, having lost two dear little ones myself, but I sorrow not without hope. I believe that he who raised Jesus from the dead is able to restore them again to life. May the time soon come for it to be fulfilled. Amen.

I would say to the brethren that having been again put in the field as Evangelist for the Northern Kansas and Missouri Conference, I am at your service and will go wherever called. While the last year's work did not come up to what we desired, yet the work closed in a very satisfactory condition, and the new year begins with better prospects than ever before.

Now, brethren give me your assistance, send in your pledge, or what you feel able to give for this year's work, and let me know where you are and the situation in your neighborhood.

The 1st of October (Thursday) I will begin a meeting at the Prairie Point School House in Cloud County, Kansas, 14 miles south-west of Concordia and 9 miles north-east of Glasco, in J. J. Wright's neighborhood. Let all the brethren in north central Kansas attend this meeting that can.

To the Called Out Ones.

I wish to say to the Household of Faith scattered throughout the Southern States, that I have now started on my Southern trip which I have had in mind for some time. I am now laboring in Southern Illinois, and will work south from that point. Many have responded, but there may still be others who would like to engage my services. If so, they can do so by addressing me at my Chicago home. The call is open to all Southern States.

There is great need of energy at this time, the time is so very short, when this Gentile age must cease. Are we all prepared? Address W. H. Wilson, 420 N. Willow Ave., Austin Station, Chicago, Ill.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Dear Restitution:

To the household of faith, believers in the gospel of the kingdom of God. Many of you know, through THE RESTITUTION, that on Sept. 15, I was elected State evangelist by the Ohio Conference held at Salem, O. I have been notified to begin a series of meetings lasting three weeks, one week at Tippecanoe City, Miami Co., and one week each at two other points in that county, beginning Saturday Nov. 21. I expect to leave home Friday, Nov. 13 for Mt. Vernon, at Bro. Robison's to stay over Sunday, Nov. 15, on the way to Tippecanoe city. My services are at the command of any in Ohio or elsewhere, to preach the simple truth to salvation. Brethren or sisters, if I can be of any use in your neighborhood let me know soon. A church building, a hall or a vacant store, wherever there is ordinary comfort, with or without seats, anywhere that the public can be reached will do. Address, 306 W. Main St., Salem, O.

Your brother waiting for Jesus.

Have You Heard of the Lion's Mouth?

Collier's Weekly is conducting a very novel and interesting competition for its readers each month. To enter the contest all one has to do is to review the issues of Collier's for the current month and answer the two or three questions which are printed in each issue, giving such opinion and such suggestions as will aid in improving the paper. Collier's aims in this way to secure the assistance of every one of its readers in making the paper more to their liking. Every reader, in fact, becomes one of the editors and has his voice in building the greatest illustrated journal of the age.

The first prize each month, awarded for the most helpful suggestion, is $50 in cash, with a second prize of $25 in cash, and eighteen other prizes of sets of books, ranging in value from $22 down to $5, making in all $320 of value given in prizes each month. There are in addition, cumulative cash prizes, for those who win prizes in successive months, and a big cash prize of $1,000 for the most valuable suggestions during 1903.

For the convenience of intending contestants who can not be promptly supplied by newsdealers, all the copies of Collier's for the current month will be sent post paid, together with a handsome proof of a drawing by Charles Dana Gibson, upon receipt of 40 cents in stamps addressed to The Lion's Mouth, Collier's Weekly, 438 West 13th Street, New York.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, NOV. 18, 1903. NUMBER 43.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this and the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

The Smile Box.

In I know the box where the smiles are kept,
No matter how large the key
It stirs the look, I'd try so hard
I'm sure 'twould open for me;
The cover the hand and the eyes bounded set,
Lest some the smiles to play,
That the children's faces might hold them fast,
For many and many a day.

In I know a box that was large enough
To hold all the sunny I need,
I'd try, together the world over,
From nursery, see [illegible]
The sweet smiles I am hoarding, I'd pack them in,
And, turning the [illegible] key,
I'd hire a giant to drop the box
In the depths of the deep, deep sea.

Privileges of God's Children.

ROM. VIII. 17.

The present privileges of God's children is a subject that to them should be second only to that of the great consummation. O how exalted they are; how rich they are; how abundant they are; how gracious they are. Have we all come together in the right spirit to consider them? Have our thoughts and words indicated since rising this morning that we were trying to shut out all business and other secular affairs, so that the Word of truth may have a free course within us; and that we may worship without distraction? If so, we will be abundantly blessed while waiting upon the Lord. The words to which I could direct attention are found in Romans viii. 17, "And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ; if so be, that we suffer with him, that we may be glorified together." The form and construction of this text shows that it has an intimate connection with the preceding verses which describe the exalted character of true believers; they are interested in his paternal love, assured of his paternal care, and authorized to expect from him every blessing such a Father can bestow. And secondly, they refer to the means where those who become children can ascertain the fact of these privileges. The Spirit beareth witness with our spirit that we are children of God. Or, to use the parallel passage in Galatians, "Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying

CHILDREN OF GOD

ABBA, FATHER,"—

imparting the comforting, tranquilizing, satisfying persuasion, that although we were disobedient, our Father has forgiven us without depriving us of any of our privileges as children; and emboldening us to come to him with filial confidence and reliance and claim the exertion of his paternal love and power on our behalf without fear of contradiction or repulse. Then my text goes on to say, "If children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together;" and it behooves us all to notice the terms on which our glorification together is assured. These words mean that we shall

NOT BE GLORIFIED

together with him, if we do not suffer together with him. They mean that we certainly will be glorified together with him if we certainly suffer with him. It would be well to remember that suffering is SUFFERING, and suffering is a painful experience mentally or physically,—something to bear up under without flinching; to sustain loss or injury. All these specifications are included in the word afflictions. And we know from the Word of the Spirit, and also by experience, that no affliction is for the present joyous, but grievous; but it adds, that "afterwards it yields the peaceable fruits of righteousness to them that are exercised thereby." And therefore it is an illustration of the statement that the Father corrects his children for their profit; and whom he receives; and also the verification of the promise that all things shall work for the good of those who love the Lord, and are the called according to his purpose. This discipline, strange as it may appear to an alien, is one of the privileges of God's children; it is a part of their patrimony. If it is an honor to reign with Christ, why is it not an honor to suffer with him? We must not let it get out of our minds that suffering with Christ is essential to glorification with him.

SCOURGES EVERY SON

As the law of nature and the insti[illegible] authorize children to expect the ultimate possession of property belonging to their parents; so, when to stand towards us in the relation of a Father, and pledged himself to act the part of a Father, and is not ashamed to call himself our God, having prepared for them a city, this caused the Psalmist to say in astonishment, "O how great is thy goodness which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee. And am I not satisfied in saying there is great goodness manifested towards them that fear him which is not laid up for them,—I mean to say I think a vast amount of his goodness laid out upon us now, so that we can be happy partakers of it as we go along; and for want of which we would faint by the way. I think you all agree to this; and as these present-tense blessings are dispensed according to promise, how can we fail to take it as prima facia evidence that the rich, great, far more, exceeding and eternal weight of glory will be as certainly bestowed as are those of the present. Every live Christian finds in this assurance, much sustaining power to bridge over the trials of this transitory state. Looked at from a natural point of view the experience of God's children, in this life is often not much to be envied. They are frequently in poverty, shame, reproach, misrepresentation, opposition and persecution. This is not to be wondered at. They who are natural can only see one side. They only see the present, and do not know why the present is as it is; and hence decide that, as a bird in hand is worth two in the bush, they will get all they can out of the present, and let the future take care of itself. With how different! They have food to eat the natural man knows nothing of. And whatever their outward lot they are still heirs of God, richer than the richest, and greater than the greatest of those who are rich and great only in this world's goods. And by virtue of the Fatherhood of God they have the assurance that although things seem to go against them, the loving Father is at the helm, and will withhold no thing good for them to have, so long as they walk uprightly; and all things will work together for good to them because and have been called according to his purpose. They may not see how, it will thus work; they trust him in the dark as in the light. I do not understand that all the good to result from the working together of all things, whether pleasant or unpleasant, profitable or unprofitable may be attained in this mortal existance; some of the good results may; but I apprehend that the bulk of them will not. The Father corrects his children for their profit; that does not mean that they can depend that every business enterprise will be profitable. Or that business disaster from want of good common sense, or sound judgment will be prevented; or that ill health may be obviated although they toil day after day within a few inches of their life,—or eat or drink inordinately. I think the Spirit specially points in this Scripture to the

IS SPENT UPON US,—

LAID UP FOR US,

HEIRS OF GOD,

THEY LOVE GOD,

GRAND ULTIMATE,—

when those who have come up through great tribulation shall have passed out of the human into the divine. This was the purpose, according to which we were called; the end desired, —the eternal purpose; the purpose to people this planet with holy inhabitants, divine of nature. It is often said, practically, "Why did not God create from the ground the holy inhabitants for this planet? Why did he go such a round-about way to accomplish it if he is all-wise and all powerful?" Whoever talks like this is in utter ignorance of the principles underlying the economy of God, and also ignorant of what holiness; 'is, or else they would never t[illegible] comp to do what it was made to do, could be holy. In the very nature of things there could be no moral excellence in a creature of that kind; if ever so perfect in its action it would only be perfect

MECHANICAL ACTION.

It could not choose the right and reject the wrong; and moral excellence were an impossibility. All can see that there could be neither rewards nor punishments if men were in no sense responsible for their actions. And motives to faith and obedience could not be offered to mere living machines; no offer of salvation and eternal glory could be made to creatures like that.

I continually aim in my morning addresses to set forth God's goodness and mercy toward us now, as well as what he purposes to do for us in the future ages, and some may think the subject is getting threadbare; but as long as there are any who do not appear to appreciate God's provisions for his children in this life, I am obliged to give the note of warning, because I am persuaded there is no likelihood that they will ever have to appreciate the riches of his grace which, astonished, the Psalmist had a glimpse of, when they will be disbursed, unless they revive the things that remain, and then turn to the Lord with a full purpose of heart.

It is inexplicable to me, how one who has known the blessedness of him whose iniquities are pardoned and whose sin is covered, can miss that blessedness without feeling an aching void the world cannot fill. I wonder, that, as the blessedness of the pardoned one was a foretaste of the glory to be revealed in him;—yes; I wonder if I would not have a fearful expectation of judgment and which shall devour the adversaries, if I felt that aching void; which, thanks to the God of all grace I do not. I think I would, and I would richly deserve it; it would reveal the basest ingratitude to belittle and neglect the means provided by God to keep me in the narrow way,—and all the earnest pleadings of the Spirit not to forsake the assembly of his saints but exhort one another and so much the more as we see the day approaching,—to watch and pray lest we enter into temptation; and to enlighten the world with saving truth; and by our walk and conversation recommend the religion of the Bible, by avoiding the very appearance of evil; and to remind each other that the Lord will reward all according to their works when he comes; so that one and all may remember that if we do no work for him during his absence, he will bestow no reward. If we spend all religious efforts on ourselves,—only try just

TO SAVE OURSELVES,

it is difficult to tell how our names can get on the pay roll. It is important to remember that there are things we must do, and things we must not do. One is as important as the other, so far as I can see. It is important to remember that Jesus will say, by and by, "inasmuch as you did it not unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye did it not to me." No one will say this was only applicable to the case referred to. If it is not a broad, —universal principle, why has it been sent to us? But while it is true, that as adopted children we enjoy amazing privileges now, the words of my text do not point principally to them, when it speaks of heirs of God; they are not the inheritance proper, of the saints in light,—but point to the things in reversion,—and what Peter calls "an [illegible] nce incorruptible, undefiled [illegible] fadeth not away." Unlike [illegible] arents whose riches may take [illegible] d fly away.—the passage just [illegible] shows that we have nothing [illegible] and from

HEIRS OF FORTUNE,

[illegible] nce of the saints will never [illegible] Heirs of God are joint-[illegible] hrist and are to be glori-[illegible] h him. It is in him [illegible] inheritance [illegible] 's title be clear, our which is a share in his, is equally valid.

In the next place I call attention to the connection between the inheritance and our relation to God as his children. If children, then heirs. This implies that none but children will be recognized as heirs, or allowed to inherit. It is the relation that gives the right. Our Lord once spoke of not taking the children's bread and giving it to dogs, and he will not take the inheritance of the children and give it to those who remain aliens in spite of divine entreaty. Before passing to enumerate some of the things in reversion for us I want to mention several other things in connection with our SUFFERING WITH CHRIST.

It is possible to get into such a state of mind by trying to shun the remaining sufferings of Christ, and by long neglect of duties, as to become judicially hardened. It is possible to so provoke God by obstinate and long continued unfaithfulness while outwardly still professing, that he may let us alone. It would not be difficult to prove that God does give up some to a worldly, reprobate, backsliding spirit. No one in his right mind will say it is unreasonable that we should be required to suffer with Christ in order to be glorified together with him, when it is along with Christ we are to suffer; and when he preceded us in the path of temptation, and self-denial and trial, and since he demands nothing of us that he has not already in a vastly higher degree practiced himself for our sakes. It is for a servant to suffer as his master suffers; it is not unreasonable for a private soldier to suffer what his general suffers. Where our Captain bravely leads us we should resolutely follow. Our Master first suffered and then entered into his glory. Again, it is reasonable that God should test our faith in view of the exalted destiny offered to us,—the eternal weight of glory. He tested Abraham,—he tests the faith of all his children in some way; and we have all enlisted to suffer; and shall we become deserters? God is, however, not unkind,—we shall not be tempted above what we are able with his assistance to bear. The angels of the Lord encamp round about them that fear him. They are sent forth to serve them who are heirs of salvation. But O, let us in these days of abounding iniquity be doubly diligent, doubly watchful, doubly prayerful, so as to be ready for any crisis that shall test the texture of our faith. But be it

NOT UNREASONABLE

[illegible] LIGHT OR HEAVY,

our Lord says, "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world;" and our gracious Father says: "My grace shall be sufficient for thee;" "Call upon me in the day of trouble and I will deliver thee;" but at the worst, Paul's estimate of the trials of life was, that they were light afflictions, and are comparatively but for a moment—and not worthy to be compared with the glory to be revealed in us; and when we consider that our partnership in God includes his nature, his wisdom, his power, his glory, and his knowledge, adequate to fit us for the transcendant and glorious purpose for us in the Anointed Jesus,—[illegible] how can we

RALLY WITH THE WORLD?

How can we faint by the way? How can we weary in well doing? How can we bear the thought of being left out when the Lord shall number up his jewels?

If I had time and strength to transcribe what our God and Father has given us glimpses of in the ages to come, to round out the prize to fix the eye of faith upon, I would be glad to do it,—but it is a vast subject, and as Isaiah said thousands of years ago, "For since the beginning of the world men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, beside thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him." But I will mention some things revealed. A crown of life,

A CROWN OF GLORY,

a kingdom and glory, world-wide in extent, and everlasting in duration, —a rest remaineth for the people of God,—in a better country, where no pestilence shall flap its wings over the people, and cause them to say we are sick,—where no tears will be shed over the dying, no lamentations over the dead, where no cloud, nor storm, nor pestilence, nor famine will ever come, a country where will be the city that has foundations, a heavenly city, the new Jerusalem that all the host of God's elect have looked for, a city having the glory of God, and has no need of the sun for the glory of God will lighten it—and the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it,—and the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it, and the kings of the earth will bring their honor into it. And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day; and there shall be no night there—glory to God,—night, the time of misapprehension, of coldness, and darkness, and error and superstition, and gloom, and mistakes will have passed away for ever. O beloved we shall see Jesus then, if we get there; blessed Jesus! may we be made like to thy glorious body; and be among those thou wilt lead to living fountains of water, and from whom God shall wipe away all tears. My parting word to you, is, that the Lord is at hand to come, and it behooves us to be ready—we know not at what hour he may come; and it behooves us to remember that all these prepared things have been prepared for a prepared people! Great God, shall I be there? Shall we all be there; and swell the song of victory? God help us all to be there, Amen.

I do Not Believe It.

What? That man is mortal. Why not? Well, if it was true more people would accept it. There is not much argument in that, is there? I am afraid some one has made poor use of the brain power God has given them. Job, one of the first writers in the Bible, says, Shall mortal man be more just than God? Job iv. 17. David declares that in death there is no remembrance of God. Psa. vi. 5, which proves our weak mortal condition. Daniel, Isaiah and Hosea all speak of the dead as sleeping in the dust of the earth. Dan. xii. 2; Isa. xxvi. 10; Hosea xiii. 14. These men were among the few who believed God's teachings in their age, and lived in close touch with Budha and Confucius, who numbered their followers by the hundreds of thousands. The majority did not believe God then, when he spoke to them by angel lips, why should they now? Our Savior lived in an age when the pagan world was in the vast majority, and just a scattered few accepted the Son of God, who had power to heal the sick, raise the dead, and best of all to forgive us our sins, and promise us a home in his kingdom on conditions, which conditions would not be necessary if we were already immortal. This age has brought us a Gladstone, England's greatest thinker and statesman, who in his book on "Butler" makes this statement, "The doctrine of the immortality of the soul is not true, and is not taught in sacred Scriptures and is false, and it necessarily leads to other grave falsehoods." Again we have another very intelligent witness, Andrew Jackson, our seventh president. Commodore Elliot of the U.S. navy, secured while in Italy, a beautiful white marble sarcophagus, evidently built for one of the royal family of the Cæsars, and bringing it to America tendered it as a gift to President Jackson. The sturdy commoner refused the gift, and it was presented to the Girard college in Philadelphia, and is now in the museum of that institution. Following is the correspondence that passed between Commodore Elliott and Andrew Jackson, which is worthy of preservation for its earnest advocacy of simplicity and abhorence of the vanities of pomp and pageantry, but more valuable still for its earnest declaration of faith in God and hope of immortality through a resurrection of the dead. In his letter the Commodore said, "I pray you General to live on in the fear of the Lord, dying the death of a Roman soldier, an emperor's coffin awaits you." The following was General Jackson's reply, "With the warmest sensations that can inspire a faithful heart I must decline accepting the honor intended to be bestowed. I cannot consent that my mortal body should be laid in a repository prepared for an emperor or a king. My republican feelings and principles forbid it. Every movement created to perpetuate the memory of heroes and statesmen ought to bear evidences of the economy and simplicity of our republican institutions, and the plainness of our republican citizens, who are the sovereigns of our glorious union, and whose virtue is to perpetuate it. True virtue cannot exist where pomp and parade are the governing passions. It can only dwell with the people, the great laboring and producing classes that form the bone and sinew of our confederacy. I have prepared a simple depository for my mortal body, beside that wherein lies my beloved wife, where without any pomp or parade I have requested (when my God calls me to sleep with my fathers) to be laid, for both of us there to remain until the last trumpet sounds to call the dead to judgment, when we I hope shall rise together, clothed with that heavenly body promised to all who believe in our glorious Redeemer, who died for us that we might live, and by whose atonement I hope for a blessed immortality."

Throwing aside these men of wonderful thought and brain, how can we walk contrary to God and the revealed Word, which we are bound to take as our guide to the future life, which declares God only hath immortality, and admonishes us to "seek for glory, honor and immortality." Let us not dishonor God by a disbelief in his Word. Yours for truth.

B. W. & M. A. WOODWARD.

Dear Brother Underwood:

Allow me to present you with Pastor Russel's tangled thread, and in doing so, kindly inform me what you think of it. The end of the thread commences with the pre-existence of Christ, who was the Creator of all things, the pastor informs us, and therefore existed with the Father before the world was, in that pre-existent state, he was in nature lower than the nature of the Father, yet higher than the angels in nature, yet mortal and diabol; when the fulness of the time had come, he put off the pre-existent state nature, and took hold of the seed of Abraham, and thus became related to David. In which state he remained clothed during his sojourn on the earth to his death, when he put off the flesh, severing his relation to David and Abraham as their seed; and ascended, not to his pre-existent state, but one degree higher, taking on the nature of the Father, the divine nature, making in all four natures, the Father's nature, his pre-existent nature, the nature of angels, and the seed of Abraham; to which Christ was related to three natures, but now only to one, as two natures cannot inhere in one person at one and the same time, that being true, we inquire in view of what has been said, how can such a Christ be the heir to the throne and kingdom of Israel, to sit as the fruit of David's body on David's throne? Having found the other end of the thread, will some one whose head is not twisted straighten out the thread and give its measurement and value? To me it looks like a conglomeration of ideas, that could only eminate from a visionary mind.

As we go to press today there are on our list just 321 whose time is out now, and their renewals due. Some of these are owing from 1 to 5 years, and others only for the current year. If all would pay in what they should we would have in hand quite $645.00.

Now Brothers and Sisters, for some weeks past we have tried to explain our need, and urge action on your part. We are not complaining of the noble ones who always keep their subscription up and ahead, and wish to thank all such. We wish to thank also every one who is doing his very best to send as soon as he can. We wish to urge you to more earnest effort. If there are any who are careless and neglectful we wish to ask you kindly to rouse up and send us what is right.

If you could know and realize our situation we feel certain you would respond at once. It is a conviction with us that there is not a Brother or Sister now owing us but who can get the amount they owe easier than we can carry the whole load. We are compelled to struggle on with the burden. Are you not also in duty bound to do your part? Please think of this very seriously, as before your God, and then act.

Another thing that makes this year hard for us is that our Helping Fund is now $117.50 below what it has been other years, and as we have kept the poor ones on our list so far we do not like the idea of cutting them off. Surely there are enough members of the Church of God in this land who have been blessed with abundance, who can spare this amount so that we shall not have to drop the name of a single worthy poor Brother or Sister.

Brethren, these are the plain figures. Will you give attention to these matters? We hope you will without more delay.

Self-knowledge lies at the bottom of the doctrine of motives. One will exert himself for praise; another to gratify his large acquisitiveness; a third from a sense of duty; a fourth, from excessive constitutional activity, making rest painful to him.

"The more we live with Christ the more we will love him. It is enough to see some people once in seven years if we wish to love them. The less we know of them the better. But of Jesus Christ it can be said, the longer you live with him the more you will love him."

Some people seem to be "cut on the bias?" Their thoughts, aims, purposes in life, their characters even, seem to be hopelessly askew. To convince them of any error is almost an impossibility—it would be in fact, like "cutting across the grain." One-sided people are very combative, and in order to get along with them it is necessary to sacrifice one's own peculiarities.

Christ in Us.

The question is, has Christ been formed in us? Can we say, "Though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day?" The sincere milk of the Word first, and the strong meat after, constitute the only food upon which this new creature can thrive and mature. Since it is a mental and moral creature we have to deal with, it is mind and heart that must attend to its wants. Its growth, therefore depends upon our thoughts, words and actions. If they are righteous, then assimilation goes on and growth is the result. When the outward man perishes the inward man remains in thought in the mind of God. And it is here we come to the awful thought, that we are all dwelling in the halo of God's Spirit, and we are now writing our characters, as it were, of that Spirit. In him we live, move and have our being; and we are like men speaking into a phonograph words, thoughts and actions that confront us at the judgment seat of Christ, either to our shame, or to our honor and glory. Which shall it be? is a question for us to decide now.

There is a right and a wrong end to everything, and if you only get hold of the right one, how nicely the "chain-stitch" of life unravels. Hardly anything is too difficult for a man of ordinary resolution, if only he begins right. Some people begin in the middle—some begin where they ought to have left off, and some never begin at all! Luck often gets the blame,—Providence sometimes, the wrong scapegoat always. It is so easy to slip off the responsibility on to somebody else's shoulders, whether it belongs to them or not. But in nine cases out of ten, if a man comes to grief, you can trace the chain of misfortune back to his own hand,—he did not begin right. Begin right! First the alphabet—then the printed volume, first the tiny blade, then the ear of corn fully ripe. A little time, a little patience, and then all will come out straight, if you only begin right."

A question before us asks, "If any persons are so organized by nature that they instinctively take a vicious course?" Ans. In Psalms lviii. 3 we read, "The wicked are estranged from the womb. They go astray as soon as they are born, speaking lies." This would indicate that some inherit such strong tendencies to wickedness, or to a perverted action of the animal propensities that they do not live moral lives, but are morally unsound, unbalanced, insane. Certainly there are physical cripples, intellectual imbeciles, —and there are genii in talent and goodness,—and why should there not be those morally imbecile, with predominant passions, with these tendencies inborn, inherited. The motto relative to the poet,—he is born, not made, is universally accepted, and we see no reason to be startled at the idea that the tendency to vice is inborn, and not altogether the result of bad associations.

The Conference at Plymouth is in the past. We had the pleasure of entertaining a good number of those who are regular attendants at this meeting, and also a number who had never visited here before. Bro. J. C. Thompson, of Cleveland, O., Brothers Aslakson and Day, and Sister Dean of Chicago, Ill., Bro. T. Swindler of Hartford City, Bro. and Sister Snoks of South Bend, Ind., were among those who came for the first time. We sincerely hope they will come again, and bring others with them. There was some disappointment when Bro. Wagoner failed to come and take his part in the programme. As Bro. and Sister Woodward have been holding meetings here for a week before the Conference began, they were permitted to do most of the preaching, all of which was excellent. One Sister was added to the body on Saturday, Bro. Zilmer immersing Mrs. Vinnedge. On Sunday afternoon he had to conduct Robert Batey and wife (she being blind) into the yielding wave, and bury them, arising therefrom to walk in the new life. At the same hour the the hearts of all were rejoiced that Miss Minnie Pogue, one of our Sunday school girls submitted to a like ceremony, and at the evening service her sister, Mattie Pogue expressed her desire to be immersed also, which will be done as soon as practicable. It was decided to continue the meetings a few evenings longer, and on Monday evening Bro. Zilmer preached a most excellent discourse, and an invitation being given two more of our Sunday school girls stepped forward, desiring immersion, and Miss Chloe Butler and Miss Lois Thompson, will be added to our list. While a second hymn was being sung Miss Fay Webster went forward, and she too desires baptism. There are others who know their duty, and our prayer is that they may yet come, and that the ones who have started in the new life will never falter and fall out by the way, but be ever followers of the blessed Master.

Signs of the Times.

We recently remarked upon the advice given to his flock by the most popular preacher in Cleveland, to attend the vaudeville theatre it was all right,—would do them good,—improve their dispositions. But he did not recommend them to go as often as he himself did. It is not surprising to the followers of the meek and lowly Jesus that this man draws the largest crowd of any one in the city. He knows that catering to the flesh will always do that, when everything else fails.

Before us is proof that others want to fill their houses by the same means. A despatch from Akron, O., dated Nov. 10 says:

"A dramatic club, composed of members of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, is to be organized here, in the near future, if the pastor, Rev. Watson, D. D. finds [illegible] talent in the church to [illegible] dramatic purpose." The Gospel Preached that are dea[illegible] to Them 1. Pet. [illegible]d.

This Scripture is t[illegible] teach that the gos[illegible] some to to dead persons. W[illegible] preached tice that Peter [illegible] dader no- [illegible] nor, "The [illegible] them that were dead;" [illegible] to convey the idea that the dead could hear, appreciate, or be benefited by, the gospel. What Peter wrote and evidently meant is this: "For this cause WAS the gospel preached also to them that ARE dead." That preaching was done while those who "are dead" were alive, but they have since died. What was the object of such preaching? The apostle answers this question by saying, "For this cause..... that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit." He did not say, "That they may be judged," as if that judgement were future from Peter's day, but "might be judged," showing the judgment future from the time when "the gospel was preached." "Judged" in what state? "In the flesh." This term describes the present soul life. And be it remembered that the believer of "the gospel" is in this state, as Peter shows in v. 2 of this chapter. Paul was aware of this fact. He wrote, "And the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God." Gal. ii: 20. Paul basit "now.....in the flesh," and Peter, "the rest of his time in the flesh." Both have the same thought. This state is not after men are dead, but while they live "in the flesh." This flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the [illegible] after men are dead, not while they live "now in the flesh"); so that ye can not do the things that ye would." Gal. v: 17. Here are these propensities of "the flesh"' even in the believer. "YE can not do the things that YE would," unaided by the spiritual impulses of "the gospel" which "was preached." What is to be done? "Arm yourselves with the same mind" which was in Christ who "hath suffered for us in the flesh." Why, Peter? "For he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin" (v. 1), and therefore he lives "no longer the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God." He is still "in the flesh" so far as the manner of his existence is concerned, but he does not live after the flesh. "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die." Rom. viii: 13. That fleshly or carnal [illegible]osition is at enmity with God, and will result in death as surely as "the wages of sin is (not simply was, but is) death." Rom. vi: 23. By hearty belief of "the gospel" (the subject of "preaching") and obedience to its requirements, the believer is made free from the law of sin and death (Rom. viii: 2); he is brought into a new relation with God, the "old man" is "crucified" and "the body of sin" is "destroyed," that "henceforth" he "should not serve sin." Rom. vi: 6. He is and considers himself "dead" indeed—to sin." Rom. viii: 2, 11. "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts." Gal. v: 24. This "crucifixion" is but the execution of a previously convicted and condemned sinner. The result is that "the time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquettings, and abominable idolatries." Instead of living any longer after the will of the Gentiles he lives the rest of his time to the will of God. "For this cause was the gospel preached." This is the object which it has in view. If it does not produce such results, its preaching is in vain.

"Judged [according to men in the flesh." "In the flesh" was before they were dead. Who were to be judged? "They" to whom "the gospel was preached." How judged? "According to men in the flesh." The sinner in this case is the old man, the carnal mind, the body of sin, sin in the flesh. This was "condemned (katakrinpo) in the flesh" by the sacrifice of Jesus (Rom. viii 3), and must be "judged krithoosin, in the flesh" of the believer. Elsewhere the apostle speaks of "the fiery trial which is to try you," of being "partakers of Christ's sufferings," of being "reproached for the name of Christ," and says, in view of this, "happy are ye," ending with the exhortation, "But let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or as an evil doer, or as a busybody in other men's matters. Yet if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed, but let him glorify God on this behalf." Why "glorify God" on behalf of suffering? "For the time is come that the judgment must begin at the house of God." What this "house of God" is, is shown by the question, "And if first at us, what shall be the end of them that obey not the gospel of God?" 1. Pet, iv: 12-27. Obedience to the gospel bring this "reproach for the name of Christ;" this "fiery trial" will cause "suffering" [illegible]ment." And this was not to be deferred to some distant future day, but the time for it had even then come for "the house of God," while they were "in the flesh." So with "them that are dead."

"Live according to God in the Spirit." How is this done? By the Spirit of God which comes by "the hearing of faith." Gal. iii: 5. This "hearing" is "the gospel" mentioned by Peter. By this means God brings into the life of man a new power, a dynamic spiritual force, which, if he follows its promptings, renews and elevates him to a spiritual, instead of carnal, plane of life and experience. Such a life is not only characterized by intense fervency, but is also deeply intellectual. It is a spiritual, intelligent, and reasonable service, and therefore acceptable unto God by Jesus Christ. Rom. xii: 1-3. This is the end and aim, the "cause," as Peter said, why "the gospel was preached," and it affects all who believe it in the same way. It is indeed "the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth." Rom. i: 16. Peter says, "For this cause was the gospel preached ALSO to them that are dead," showing that we are not the only ones to whom it was preached," and that all to whom it comes are treated in the same way.

To me the foregoing exposition affords the most reasonable view of this [illegible] I am indebted to Luther's translation for the thoughts outlined above. Yours in Christ,

Wisdom of Seirach.

CHAPTER 24.

WISDOM'S PRAISE.

1. Wisdom will praise her soul, and in the midst of her laity will she boast.

2. In a church of a Most High will she open her mouth, and in the presence of his host will she boast.

3. I came forth from the mouth of a Most High, and like a misty cloud I covered an earth.

4. I tabernacled down with high ones and my throne was in a pillar of cloud.

5. I alone went around the circuit of the heavens, and in a depth of an abyss I walked.

6. In the waves of the sea and on all the land and in every laity and nation I obtained acquisition.

7. In the midst of all these I sought rest, and in the inheritance of a certain one I shall have camped.

8. Then the Generator (Creator in this sense) of all things commanded me, and the one who generated me gave my tabernacle final rest and said, In Jakoobs pitch thy tent down, and in Israeel assert thine inheritance.

9. Before the animate-age from a beginning he generated me, and whilst there is an animate-age I shall not have left off.

10. In a sacred tabernacle in his presence I publicly served, and in this wise in Sioon was I stayed up.

11. In a beloved city likewise did he give me final-rest, and in Hierousaleem was my official-power.

12. And in a glorified laity I took root, in the Lord's inheritance.

13. Like a cedar on the Libanon I was lifted up, and like a cypress on the mountains of Aermoon.

14. Like a palm-tree on the shores of a sea was I lifted up, and like rose-plantings in Hierichoo; like a becoming olive-orchard on a plain, and like a plane-tree was I lifted up.

15. Like cinnamon and aspalathos did I yield an odor of aromas, and like choice Smurna (myhr) did I yield a sweet smell; like Chalbanee and onux and slaktee, and like a breath of Libanon in a tabernacle.

16. Like a terminthos I extended my branches, and my branches were branches of glory and grace.

17. Like a vine I budded grape and my flowers fruit of glory and wealth.

19. Ye who long for me come unto me and be filled with my generic products.

20. For the remembrance of me is more than sweet honey and my inheritance more than honey-comb.

21. Those who eat me will still hunger and those who drink me will still thirst.

22. The one who hearkeneth to me will not have been put to shame, and those who work with me will not sin.

23. A book of a covenant of a Most High God is all these things, a law which Moouseos commanded, an inheritance for synagogues of Jakoob.

25. It (the book) is that which supplieth wisdom like Pheison, and like Tigris in the days of new moons.

26. That filleth with understanding like Euphratees, and like Jordanees in days of summer-harvest.

27. That manifesteth chastening-instruction like light, like Geeoon in the days of vintage.

28. The first did not finish comprehending it and the last like [illegible] made not traced it out—(its wisdom).

29. For from a sea hath its thought been filled, and its counsel from a great abyss.

30. And I, like an irrigation-ditch from a river, and a water-conduit, have come out into a paradise.

31. I have said I will water my garden, and I will make my leek-pot drunk with it; and lo, the ditch hath become a river for me, and my river hath become a sea.

32. Yea, I am enlightening like a dawn with chastening instruction, and I am making it shine even afar off.

33. Yea, I am pouring forth teaching like a prophecy and I shall leave it behind to generations of animate-ages.

34. May ye have perceived that I have not toiled for myself alone, but for all those who seek it out.

COMMENT.

Starting as the chapter does with a bold and startling personification of wisdom, towards the close of the chapter the author just as abruptly changes to the strictly ethical form of teaching, and plainly tells us that the wisdom here referred to and so personified is merely the figurative embodiment of God's teaching and enlightenment contained in "a book of a covenant of a Most High, a law which Moouseos commanded, an inheritance for synagogues of Jakoob;" and just as boldly makes the claim that he Seirach is an inspired prophet to chasten and teach the precepts of this divinely revealed wisdom, just this and nothing more nor less. The fulfilment of his own prophecy, that he was going to leave this book or the results of his own labor "to generations of animate-ages," and that his enlightening teaching "would shine afar off" is the best evidence to us unto whom it has come in these very far off last days that his claim to inspiration was well founded, and he was a true prophet.

VIRTUE—COURAGE.

Virtue means courage, it takes courage to live a Christian life, and to do the things that Christ bids us to do. It takes courage to believe the gospel of the kingdom, and it takes courage to live it, it takes courage to tell it to others. According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue, and besides this giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, and to virtue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance, and to temperance patience, and to patience godliness, and to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness charity, for if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. Wherefore the rather brethren give diligence to make your calling and election sure, for if ye do these things ye shall never fall. While it takes courage to live the gospel yet think how great is the promise which he has promised us, even eternal life. Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God. Although it takes courage to walk worthy of this high calling, yet Paul says, "I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us, when Christ comes. But he that lacketh these things is blind and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins." Those who know they have obtained mercy, they have courage.

Obituary.

On Nov. 1, 1903, at 10:50 P. M. Maria Wilson, aged 50, wife of Thomas H. Wilson, of Austin, Ill., after months of patient suffering, fell asleep to wait until she hears the voice of the Savior calling her to come forth to live and love forever more. She was born in Northfield, Ill., a section of country thirty miles north of Chicago. Her father, Mr. Wood, was one of the early pioneers of Illinois. A native of New York, he moved to Chicago when a young man and from there on to a farm. He, having heard the Abrahamic faith as preached by Dr. Thomas, believed and put on Christ in the waters of baptism. Our dear Sister followed his example and from her youth until death overtook her, followed in the footsteps of our Savior, and by faith and works laid up treasures in heaven which she will joyfully receive at his coming. As long as strength permitted she was always in her place in the assembly on the Lord's day, and when no longer able to attend herself, it was one of her greatest pleasures to see her husband and son start for the service. Along as she could hold a needle her busy hands were employed for others benefit. We all miss her sorely, for all loved her who knew her, as the many floral offerings and large attendance at the last sad obsequies bore testimony.

Bro. Lindsay spoke words of comfort on the comforting topic of "The Resurrection." Some young friends of hers sang, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," a favorite hymn of hers, and "Rest in the Lord." Then we bore her away to her resting place, where after a few words of loving comfort from Bro. Lindsay we left her. Asleep in Jesus, her life hid with him, we know that he will bring it with him when he comes to crown his faithful ones. "Beloved, it is well, God's ways are always right, and love is o'er them all.

The Army Canteen.

The scientific experiments of the British generals as to the value of abstinence in the army, outweighs all mere opinions and impressions. Of the experiments the Washington Star says:

"Three regiments were selected from each of the several brigades for tests at different times, partly during manœuvres. In one, every man was forbidden to drink a drop while the test lasted; in the second, malt liquor only could be purchased; in the third, a sailor's ration of whiskey was given to each man. The experiment was repeated in several instances where forced marches and other hard work was required. The whiskey drinkers showed more dash at first, but generally, in about four days, showed signs of lassitude and abnormal fatigue. Those given malt liquors displayed less dash at first, but their endurance lasted somewhat longer. The abstainers, however, are said to have increased daily in alertness and staying powers. As a result of this experiment, the British war department decided that in the Soudan campaign not a single drop of stimulant should be allowed in camp, save in hospital use. To-day it is a great feather in the headgear of the advocates of military total abstinence that Lord Kitchener's brilliant victory was won for him by an army of teetotalers."

We also cite Surgeon General Stienburg, who says: "I do not think much of the beer canteens. The theory that the soldier needs a beer canteen to keep him from going to outside saloons for something stronger is all wrong. There is nothing in it. On the contrary, a great many young soldiers who are not accustomed to drink, contract drinking habits at these canteens and are ruined. There is no need whatever for intoxicating drinks at these canteens, and it will be a good thing for the army if they are abolished."

In and about Manila many American soldiers were laid low by bullets —disease was far more fatal—a great many hundreds were made insane by strong drink. What is sadder than a living death? The body still alive—the mind dead—hopelessly insane, as the reports read. Who is to blame for the army canteen? Rest assured there will be no restoration army canteen if all will do their duty in the matter and unite in one mighty protest.

Poetry.

It Must Be Settled Right.

However the battle is ended,
Though proudly the victor comes
With flattering flags and prancing nags
And echoing roll of drums,
Still truth proclaims this motto
In letters of living light—
No question is ever settled
Until it is settled right.
Though the heel of the strong oppressor
May grind the weak in the dust,
And the voice of fame with one acclaim
May call him great and just,
Let those who applaud take warning
And keep this motto in sight—
No question is ever settled
Until it is settled right.

Let those who have failed to take courage,
Though the enemy seemed to have won,
The his ranks are strong, if he be in the wrong
The battle is not yet done.
For sure as the morning follows
The darkest hour of the night,
No question is ever settled
Until it is settled right.

Selections.

Immortality of the Soul.

An Australian paper, the Daily Telegraph, forwarded to England last spring (1873), contained a very full report of a sermon delivered by a Church of England clergyman, which may be characterized as the most extraordinary sermon preached or published by an orthodox clergyman in modern times. It appears to be one of a series, all of which, judging from this specimen, would be well worth perusing. Such a sermon, from such a source, indicates, first, the wide-spread dissatisfaction existing in the thinking religious mind, in reference to the doctrine of eternal torments; and, secondly, the influence which the proclamation of the truth, in its primitive, apostolic simplicity, is exerting, though limited to the efforts of a very few persons, in comparatively humble position.

The following is a report of the sermon, which is here reproduced entire, together with the prefatory remarks of the Daily Telegraph:

"Yesterday morning, the Rev. H. N. Wollaston, in Trinity Church, East Melbourne, preached the fourth of his course of sermons on the future punishment of the wicked. The church was more than usually crowded. As the subject is one much discussed at present, both in and outside the religious world, we (Daily Telegraph) publish the sermon fully. Mr. Wollaston having kindly at our request, permitted the use of his manuscript for that purpose.

"The text was Romans vi. 23: "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ, our Lord." Mr. Wollaston said:—

"The doctrine of the eternal life of pain and suffering for the lost of the human family, as a punishment for their sin, is based entirely upon the belief that the human soul is created immortal, incapable of death and destruction, which is the common belief, and is accepted without question or enquiry as a doctrine of God, taught in Holy Scripture; and the inevitable consequence is that only two alternatives are left to us as to the future destiny of the body and soul of a sinner, after death and judgment, since, according to this theory, man must live on forever—and Scripture declares that there are only two places for all men hereafter, heaven and hell, and only two states, happiness and misery—it follows, that one of two things must happen to him. If he die in his sin unsaved, either he must be forgiven, and restored to God's love and favor, and heaven, after paying the penalty of his sin, by a just and adequate punishment in hell, which is the doctrine of Origen, the Christian Platonist, and of the modern Universalist; or he must live on an eternal life of pain and suffering, and consequently, never die, which is the doctrine of Tertullian and Augustine, and of a large majority of Protestant Christians. No other alternative can possibly be conceived of by the believer in the natural inherent immortality of the human soul, and, as a matter of fact, we find, that while most men believe or profess to believe, in endless life of pain in hell, many whose whole souls revolt against its terrible and appalling character in their natural revulsion of feeling, fall back upon Origen's purgatory and his theory of ultimate restoration to God. Both support their belief by a forced interpretation of some two or three texts of Scripture, which they suppose favor their views, and both are compelled by their theory of the soul's inalienable immortality to reject a third view of this subject, which is in reality, the only doctrine, concerning the destiny of the lost sinner taught in God's word, and which teaches it plainly, persistently and dogmatically, in a hundred passages of the sacred volume. Now it may startle some of you, when I affirm, without any fear of contradiction, that this popular and common belief in the natural immortality of the human soul, is not supported by a single text, or a single line or word, in the whole Bible, from the first of Genesis to the last of Revelations; and moreover, that it is essentially a Pagan doctrine, introduced in the early days of Christianity into the theology of the church by learned Christian writers and preachers, who borrowed it from the great heathen philosopher, Plato, and whose disciples they were: and is therefore, the doctrine of men, and not of God. But I will go further than this, and say advisedly that we have overwhelming evidences in the pages of Holy Writ, that the human soul is not by creation and nature immortal, that it is not the condition of his being, that man should live for ever either in heaven or hell.

"In the first place we are distinctly told, what our reason sufficiently attests, that God, the self-existent Creator, the eternal, immortal, and invisible Jehovah, is the only possessor, as he is the only source and dispenser, of eternal life, or immortality. And here I may remark, that many persons seem to entertain the strange notion that eternal life and immortality are not convertible terms, that they do not mean the same thing; but I ask why? Immortal means deathless, and immortal life is deathless life; and a deathless life is a life that will never die, which lasts forever, and, therefore, it is an "eternal" life, an everlasting life. Hence to attempt to attribute a meaning to one of these terms which the other will not bear, is only playing upon words, a distinction without a difference, a mere quibble of speech, "immortality" and "eternal life" are identically the same thing.

"But to resume. St. Paul in 1 Tim. vi. thus speaks of God; "He is the blessed and only potentate, King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, who only hath immortality." And if God, the Creator, only hath it, how can man the creature possess it? Man might have had it, in Eden, but he lost all claim to it in his fall, and all men lost it in him; that fall, so far as his future life was concerned, brought him down to the level of the brute. God said, 'Eat of that forbidden tree and thou shalt die," he did eat, and did die, body and soul; he forfeited eternal life, immortality; and this is no mere fancy or theory, for we are told distinctly that, after they had sinned, lest Adam and Eve should put forth their hands and take of the tree of life and eat, and live forever, the Lord God drove them out of the garden, and placed at its entrance, cherubim with flaming swords, turning every way to keep or guard the road to the tree of life. We are all then, by birth or nature, mortal, not immortal; in a state of death, and not of life; of eternal death not of eternal life. But the text before us, which is only one of a multitude, tells us that we may attain to immortality, may recover our forfeited life eternal; and it tells us, moreover, how that blessing may be acquired. "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord."

"So that immortality is a free gift of God to all those who believe in his Son Jesus Christ, and serve him; and to none others. The great scheme of human redemption, by the voluntary and vicarious sacrifice of himself by the son of God, upon the cross, as an atonement for sin, whereby men could recover the love and favor of God, and attain to immorality, was not known under the old dispensation of Moses. It was Christ who revealed that; and who according to the Apostle "brought life and immortality to light through the gospel," not through the law, and hence he says that those who, by patient continuance in well-doing, seek for glory, and for honor, immortality, shall find eternal life"; and if we are to seek it, how can we possess it by nature? And brethern, the multitude of passages in the New Testament which speaks of death, not of life, as being the normal condition of fallen man, and the fate of the lost hereafter, prove to demonstration, that the doctrine of man's natural immortality is a pure human fiction. To quote them all at present would be to occupy a great deal of your time. I will, therefore, read only a few:—"He that hath not the Son, hath not life;" "Sin, when it is conceived bringeth forth death;" "The gospel is (to the unbeliever) the savour of death unto death;" "If ye walk after the flesh ye shall die[illegible] minded is death;" "The e[illegible] things is death:" "If a man sayings he shall never see death, that believeth on me shall never [illegible] "The ungodly bringeth forth [illegible] to death." But enough. It is always death and never life; [illegible] of soul and body, and not imm[illegible] up, which is declared to be, its [illegible] Word, the spiritual condition of [illegible] man by nature; and that immorta[illegible] is the special work of grace, the [illegible] and merciful gift of God to the [illegible] in his Son Jesus Christ, who for[illegible] his sins and serves him, and the[illegible] and he alone can possess immortal[illegible] "The wages of sin is death, but [illegible] gift of God is eternal life, thr[illegible] Jesus Christ our Lord." There[illegible] any one doctrine in the New [illegible] ment more clearly revealed, [illegible] frequently or more authoritatively taught by Jesus Christ and his [illegible] tles, than this; that men [illegible] creation and nature, immo[illegible] incapable of death and [illegible] but is mortal and perish[illegible] therefore, the common [illegible] notion that the soul [illegible] as well as the body, but must of [illegible] essity, live forever in heaven or h[illegible] is totally opposed to the teachin[illegible] the Word of God, and is unworth[illegible] place in the Christian's creed. A[illegible] may just add, as confirming this v[illegible] of the question, that the Church o[illegible] England, whatever many of her d[illegible] vines may teach to the contrary, doc[illegible] not hold the natural immortality o[illegible] man as one of her doctrines; for in th[illegible] collect for the first Sunday in advent she teaches us to pray that when our Lord Jesus Christ shall come a second time "to judge the quick and dead" we may rise to the life immortal. Now if the writer of that collect (one of our Reformer's probably) believed in the Pagan doctrine of immortality is it not strange that he should have put such words in our mouths as these? For if we are by nature immortal, and can never die, we surely require no prayer to God that we become immortal, if that life is already ours. The writer clearly regarded this immortal life as a great spiritual boon and blessing which we have not by nature, and which God will only give, as an act of grace, for the sake of his Son Jesus Christ, to those who believe on him. And now, brethren, we come to make an important and necessary enquiry. If the doctrine that the soul of man is by creation and nature immortal, is not [illegible] the Bible, and upon which alone, [illegible] have shown, the belief of an eter[illegible] life of pain and suffering for [illegible] lost is based, where did it come fr[illegible] How came it to be introduced i[illegible] Christian theology? I find no diffi[illegible]ty in answering these questions. [illegible] easily trace its origin to Plato, [illegible] great heathen sage, who lived [illegible] years before Christ, and whose phi[illegible]phy has colored and influenced [illegible] theology of the Christian church in [illegible]ages, even from apostolic times, [illegible] who had for his disciples, the [illegible]able and influential of the Chris[illegible] Fathers, whose writings and pre[illegible]lings have to a great extent, mould[illegible] the faith of Christendom. Plato, sometimes called the "divine Plato," although a pagan, from the wonderful resemblance of some of his [illegible] of God and man, to those revealed in the Bible. Plato taught the human soul could not die or be destroyed, that it was, in its very nature, immortal, and must live on forever! He held also, that for the good in this world, there was, hereafter, an eternal abode of happiness, or Elysium; and for the very wicked—the worst of mankind—a place of eternal pain and suffering, with its streams of fire, called Tartarus, whence none could [illegible]er, throughout eternity, come [illegible]th again. He also taught [illegible] was a medium place, a purg[illegible]ry, which he called the Acherusian [illegible]ke, into which all those too bad for Elysium, but not bad enough for Tartarus, were cast at death, and [illegible]om which they issued forth again [illegible]to upper air, after a purgative and refining process in the fire. And this you will observe in all its features—its Elysium, its Tartarus, its Purgatory, is precisely a doctrine of the present day. We see then in the philosophy of Plato, who died four centuries before Christ was born, the origin and almost counterpart of the popular belief of the inherent immorality of the soul, and of the two-fold dogma based upon it—that everyone dying in sin, must either go to purgatory to expiate his guilt there, and then be restored to God's love and favor, or he must live on forever and ever in torment and anguish in hell. The first Christian writer who advocated this latter doctrine was Clement Athenagoras, a Greek by birth, who [illegible] and died about [illegible] contemporary with [illegible]tian, in Mesopotamia, [illegible]owed some thirty years [illegible]famous Tertullian, the [illegible]theologian," as he has [illegible] These views were opposed [illegible] years after Tertullian, [illegible] Origen, who maintained [illegible]restoration and salvation, and not only of men [illegible] also. This theory of [illegible]ver, did not take very [illegible] some 150 years af[illegible] was well nigh regarded [illegible]hen Augustine the cele[illegible]p of Hippo, in Africa, [illegible] his mighty power and [illegible] of the Christian Church [illegible]ls writings, preaching [illegible], for more than 1200 [illegible] reappeared in its pres[illegible]veralism in these lat[illegible]ustine, an ardent dis[illegible] adopted, like Tertullian, [illegible] Platonic theory of the [illegible] the soul, of everlast[illegible] in Tartarus, or hell, as [illegible] of the wicked: and of [illegible] purgatory; and this [illegible] we know, remained an article of the Christian faith for many centuries, until the Reformation, when the Protestant churches discarded the purgatory of Augustine and Plato; but perpetuated Plato's and Augustine's hell, which is to this hour, the teaching of many divines, and a belief of the majority of the members of the Protestant churches.

Such is the origin and history of the popular doctrines of the immortality of the soul, and of an eternal life of pain and agony for the impenitent and unconverted after death. But I must call your attention to another important fact. Athenagoras, the first Christian writer who advocated this dogma, as I said, died about A. D. 200. There are still extant, books, or portions of books, written by seven well known Christian fathers who lived before Athenagoras, namely: Barnabas, (Paul's companion), Clement (of Rome, mentioned by Paul in Rom. xvi.), Hermas, Ignatius, Polycarp (disciple of St. John), Justin Martyr, and Theophilus of Antioch: there were also two others, his contemporaries, Irenæus and Clement, of Alexandria. Barnabas, the eldest of these, died about A. D. 90, or some fifty years only after the death of Christ; and it is very singular (if this doctrine were true), that not one of these writings should contain the Augustinian theory of an eternal life of torment in hell for the lost sinner. It is scarcely credible that these eminent confessors, half of whom were martyrs to the faith, would not have referred to this dreadful truth, if it had been, in their day, the doctrine of the Christian church; and the conclusion we should naturally draw from this remarkable omission, would certainly be that no such tenet was known to them; that it was introduced into Christ-theology subsequent to their times; and as a matter of fact, we find no trace of this doctrine until two hundred years after Christ. I have already proved to you by quotations from the book of Common Prayer, that the articles, creeds and formularies of the Church of England are entirely in favor of the view which I have taken of the condition of the lost, so far as they refer to it at all, which, however, is only incidental.

In my last sermon, I showed you that this terrible Pagan doctrine which Tertullian and Augustine in imposing on the Christian Church, through the influence of their great names, vast learning, and fiery zeal and eloquence, receives no support whatever from the Word of God; and that there is not one text fairly quoted and honestly interpreted which contains any such tenet as this, from Genesis to Revelation. The Old Testament does not once refer to it; we may therefore, safely assume that it was unknown to the authors of these ancient books. In the New Testament there are twenty-one epistles written by five of Christ's apostles, none of them speak of, or refer to, this frightful doctrine, still less preach or teach it for the obvious reason that they did not believe in it: for if such had been the habit of the early Christian church, or had they been taught it by their Master, it is inconceivable that it should have been excluded from the twenty-one epistles which contain the doctrinal portions of the gospel, the dogmas of the Christian faith; and as I pointed out to you last Sunday, there are only two passages in the whole of the four gospels which contain the teaching of Christ himself and which are always quoted as stock texts by advocates of the Augustinian theory, which can by any possibility be tortured and twisted into a crutch to support this view of eternal punishment—Mark ix. 43, and Matt. xxiv. 46—both of which texts, I believe, and hope, I then satisfactorily disposed of, by showing you, that fairly and critically examined and interpreted, they were in perfect harmony with the universal testimony of the Bible; that the sinner's future doom is not life, but death; mortality; not an endless life of pain, but the extinction of life; not everlasting existence but everlasting destruction; that "the wages of sin is death;" that if you or I die in our sin impenitent, unsanctified, unsaved, we shall be raised again from the dead at the last day, by our great Judge, and having received from him the reward of our deeds, and endured a perfectly just and equitable amount of suffering for our sins here,—the "many stripes," or the "few stripes" as God's Omniscience alone can know that we have righteously deserved—we shall be consigned as mortal children of Adam, to eternal death; we shall in our Lord's own words, be literally destroyed, both body and soul in "sheol," an "everlasting death," which will be our "everlasting punishment;" which, in Apostolic words, is "everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and our fellow men." Such is the uniform teaching of our Lord Jesus Christ and his apostles, as well as the Church of England concerning the future destiny of the children of this world, of the ungodly and unconverted: whilst the children of God, the penitent and believing, the sanctified and regenerated, having, by faith in the Savior of sinners, attained to immortality, as a free gift of God's love and goodness, will enjoy an eternal, never ending life of peace, rest, joy, and blessedness with Christ and his saints and angels in a glorious heaven. This is God's own Word, "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." The only portion of the Bible I have not mentioned is the Apocalypse, or Revelation of John, and in that book there is one passage which is always quoted in connection with those two texts referred to in the gospels, to prove the eternal duration of the sinner's suffering in hell. Chapter xvi. 10, 11. "If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand, the same shall be tormented with fire and brimstone and the smoke of their torment ascendeth for ever and ever." Now in the first place, it is not by any means clear that this passage refers to the future punishment of sinners at all. Elliott the prophetic writer, a great authority, thinks it does not; but in the second place, whether it does or not, we cannot put a literal interpretation and base so awfully important a dogma as that of the consignment of a human soul to an eternal life of agony in hell, upon a single prophetic utterance found in a book which is confessedly the most obscure, figurative, mysterious and difficult ever written; a book so crowded with allegory and flowing imagery, foreshadowing future events, that no one can venture to dogmatize upon the meaning of its contents.

"I shall (D. V.) conclude my remarks on this important subject next Sunday, and will only add a few words of warning and advice to what I have said already, and I say, first, do not be afraid of this subject. Do not fear to investigate it for yourselves. Do not be deterred from ascertaining the truth or error of this or any other doctrine, preached from this or any other pulpit, as the teaching of God, by the idea that you are meddling with matters that do not concern you, and that they are best left alone; that it is dangerous to look too closely into the mysteries of godliness, or that your faith may be unsettled in the doing of it and so forth. Listen not to these voices, for they are not wise. It is your business. It does concern you. It is not best left alone. It is not dangerous to look into it. On the contrary, in these days of abounding and progressing infidelity, it becomes a positive and sacred duty that you should search the Scriptures earnestly, carefully, deliberately, to see if these things are so, or not; that you may be prepared to repel, as our Master did, the assaults of the enemy upon your faith, in his own words:—"It is written." You are bound, as Christian men and women, to speak with certainty as to your own convictions of what the Word of God teaches, and thus to be always ready to "give to others a reason for the hope that is in you." The well-known saying of Chillingworth, that the "Bible, and the Bible alone, is the religion of Protestants," is a hackneyed, but a wise and a true one; and our sixth article of religion says: "Holy Scripture containeth all things necessary to salvation, so that whatsoever is not read therein, or may be proved thereby, is not required of any man that it should be believed as an article of Christian faith;" therefore it is your duty and your interest to exercise the reason and understanding, and talents which God has given you to convince yourselves of the truth in his Word, and not to take it from the lips of other men on trust; and sure I am, that if you have faith in God, and approach the study of the Scriptures in a humble, earnest, teachable, and prayerful spirit, he will direct your hearts and understanding aright to see the truth as it is in Jesus, and to maintain it unto the end. That Word "which has God for its author, truth for its matter, and salvation for its end," can never suffer by examination, nor can it be destroyed or neutralized by the heresies of man. "For the Word of our God shall stand forever," and this is his Word: "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Amen.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Religion is not a thing the world can do without. Some good people seem to consider it a sort of veneer, very nice, but not necessary; admirable in the wardrobe, but entirely unnecessary. This is all wrong. Religion is bread; it is life, for it is the staff of life.—Frank G. Tyrrell.

A Piano at a Nominal Price.

Chicago's largest music house, Lyon & Healy, announces a Clearing Sale of Pianos. This is owing to the fact that their warerooms are being entirely remodeled. Several hundred splendid instruments are offered without reserve until all are sold. In this stock are a number of Steinway and Knabe pianos, and new and second-hand pianos including instruments of the following well-known makes: Miller, Mason & Hamlin, Hazelton, McPhail, Sterling, Huntington, Vose, Fischer, Weber, Chickering, etc., etc. In square pianos there are fine-toned instruments at $25, $40, $60, and upwards. In Upright Pianos neat instruments at $100, $120, $140, $150, $165, $190, $200 and upwards. In Baby Grands some nice specimens at $250 and upwards. Nearly all these pianos were intended to sell for much more than these clearing sale prices. Lyon & Healey will send a list and full particulars upon application. Any piano not proving entirely satisfactory may be returned at their expense. Address Lyon & Healy, 1 Adams St., Chicago. Distance is no obstacle in taking advantage of this remarkable chance to obtain a piano, for in proportion to the saving to be made the freight charges are insignificant. If you do not already know Lyon & Healy by reputation any banker will assure you of their entire responsibility and record of forty years for honorable dealing. Write at your early convenience so as to avoid disappointment.

Announcement.

The Quarterly Conference of the Church of God of Central Washington will meet at the church house of the Church of God at Wenatchee, Wash., on Friday evening Dec. 4th at 7:30 P. M., and continue over the following Sunday. A good programme will be provided. Every one is urged to attend. Let us not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, but gather together for strength and mutual encouragement as we see the day approaching.

A. L. CORMLEY, Pres.
MYRTLE TITCHENAL, Sec.

To the brethren of Kansas and Missouri:

I have left Ransom, Kan., and until further notice I will receive letters at Canton, Kan. My meeting at Prairie Point in north central Kansas was well attended, the house being full every night, with good attention. While there were no additions, yet the interest was so good that we have hopes that the seed sown may yet bring good results. We will visit that point again, in December. Sister Coons of Clay Center assisted me very materially with her singing and the organ. In January we expect to be in northeast Kansas, and in February in Missouri. Let all who desire to correspond with me address me at Canton, Kan. for the present.

A. W. DARBY.

To the Called Out Ones.

I wish to say to the Household of Faith scattered throughout the Southern States, that I have now started on my Southern trip which I have had in mind for some time. I am now laboring in Southern Illinois, and will work south from that point. Many have responded, but there may still be others who would like to engage my services. If so, they can do so by addressing me at my Chicago home. The call is open to all Southern States.

There is great need of energy at this time, the time is so very short, when this Gentile age must come. Are we all prepared? Address W. H. Wilson, 420 N. Willow Ave., Austin Station, Chicago, Ill.

Something New—Bible Studies.

Realizing the need of a more thorough distribution of good, wholesome literature, the Committee on Literature, appointed by the Indiana Conference, purpose to publish a series of four-page tracts, to be known as "Bible Studies." They will contain expositions of Scripture by brethren W. H. Wilson, J. L. Wince, J. F. Wagoner, A. R. Zilmer, and other writers, and will be numbered consecutively. Number one appears in Oct. 7, issue of THE RESTITUTION under the heading, "The spirit shall return unto God who gave it." Others will follow later in the same way. We will offer them for sale as follows: 10 copies for 10 cents, 50 copies for 25 cents, 100 copies for 40 cents. Send money order or stamps to A. H. Zilmer, Plymouth, Ind.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before your readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. C. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Dear Restitution:

To the household of faith, believers in the gospel of the Kingdom of God. Many of you know, through THE RESTITUTION, that on Sept. 15, I was elected State evangelist by the Ohio Conference held at Salem, O. I have been notified to begin a series of meetings lasting three weeks, one week at Tippecanoe City, Miami Co., and one week each at two other points in that county, beginning Saturday Nov. 21. I expect to leave home Friday, Nov. 13 for Mt. Vernon, at Bro. Robison's to stay over Sunday, Nov. 15, on the way to Tippecanoe city. My services are at the command of any in Ohio or elsewhere, to preach the simple truth to salvation. Brethren or sisters, if I can be of any use in your neighborhood let me know soon. A church building, a hall or a vacant store, wherever there is ordinary comfort, with or without seats, anywhere that the public can be reached will do. Address, 366 W. Main St., Salem, O.

Your brother waiting for Jesus.

P. NEILL.

Evangelist Notice.

In so much as the Conference of the Church of God of Central Washington has seen fit to elect us as evangelists for the ensuing Conference year, we wish to state that we stand ready to answer the call to duty. Any one desiring work done in our line will please drop us a line at our address at Wenatchee, Wash. Yours for the work.

N. D. & MYRTLE TITCHENAL.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Have You Heard of the Lion's Mouth?

Collier's Weekly is conducting a very novel and interesting competition for its readers each month. To enter the contest all one has to do is to review the issues of Collier's for the current month and answer the two or three questions which are printed in each issue, giving such opinion and such suggestions as will aid in improving the paper. Collier's aims in this way to secure the assistance of every one of its readers in making the paper more to their liking. Every reader, in fact, becomes one of the editors and has his voice in building the greatest illustrated journal of the age.

The first prize each month, awarded for the most helpful suggestion, is $50 in cash, with a second prize of $25 in cash, and eighteen other prizes of sets of books, ranging in value from $32 down to $5, making in all $320 of value given in prizes each month. There are in addition, cumulative cash prizes, for those who win prizes in successive months, and a big cash prize of $1,000 for the most valuable suggestions during 1903.

For the convenience of intending contestants who can not be promptly supplied by newsdealers, all the copies of Collier's for the current month will be sent post paid, together with a handsome proof of a drawing by Charles Dana Gibson, upon receipt of 40 cents in stamps addressed to The Lion's Mouth, Collier's Weekly, 438 West 13th Street, New York.

Redemption.

[TUNE—When you and I were young, Maggie.]

We're out on the sea of life, my Lord,
Where death's dark waters roam,
And beneath its restless tide, my Lord,
Our fallen race have gone.

CHORUS—

But there is life from the dead in Thee, my Lord,
A life from sorrow free;
And a home for the weary saint, my Lord,
Beyond life's troubled sea.

When the tempest surrounds my bark, my Lord,
Thy Word shall be my guide;
When the breakers are thickening fast, my Lord,
I will in Thee confide.

We are waiting for Thy return, my Lord,
To be first raised from the dead,
To join in redemption's song, my Lord,
In shouts of Victory.

Wisdom of Seirach.

CHAPTER 25.

1. With three things have I adorned myself and with three appropriate things in the sight of the Lord and of men, have I arisen, namely with like mindedness of brethren, and friendship of one's neighbors, and a wife and husband adapting themselves to one another.

2. And three things seen hath my soul hated, and I have been exceedingly opposed to their life; namely, a haughty beggar, and a rich liar, an adulterous old man growing inferior in understanding.

3. In youth thou didst not lead on together and how wouldst thou find in thine old age?

4. How appropriate for gray hairs is judging, and for elders to fully know counsel.

5. How appropriate for old men is wisdom, and thought and counsel for those who have been glorified.

6. A garland-crown for old men is experience, and their boast fear of the Lord.

7. Nine things apprehended with one's heart I have recounted blessed things, and the tenth will I speak in respect to a tongue; a man who rejoiceth in children, who liveth and looketh upon the smiting of enemies.

8. Blessed-happy he who dwelleth along with an understanding wife, and who hath not been destroyed with a tongue, and who hath not served unto bond-servant some one unworthy of him.

9. Blessed-happy is he who hath found thoughtfulness, and who discourseth to the ears of listeners.

10. How great is the one who findeth wisdom, but he is not greater than he who feareth the Lord.

11. Fear of the Lord hath surpassed everything; the one who getteth it, to whom shall he have been likened?

13. Any blow and not a blow of the heart; and any wickedness and not the wickedness of a woman.

14. Any inductive-conclusion and not the inductive-conclusion of those who hate you; and any requital and not the requital of enemies.

15. There is no head worse than the head of a serpent, and there is no anger worse than the anger of an enemy.

16. I would rather live with a lion and a dragon than with a wicked wife.

17. The wickedness of a wife changeth her looks and darkeneth her countenance like sackcloth.

18. In the midst of his neighborhood will her husband fall, and one who hath heard hath sighed bitterly.

19. Any evil is a small thing compared with the evil of a wife; may the lot of an obdurate-sinner have befallen her.

20. A sandy ascent for the feet of an elderly man, even so is a tonguey wife for a quiet husband.

21. Do not stumble at the beauty of a woman and do not inordinately desire a wife.

22. Wrath and shamelessness and a great disgrace is a wife, if she furnish them to her husband.

23. A humbled heart and a downcast face and a heart's plague is a wicked wife; hands that hang down and enfeebled knees is she who doth not make her husband blessed-happy.

24. From a wife was a beginning of sin and for her sake we are all condemned to die.

25. Do not give an outlet for water nor official-power to a wicked wife?

26. If she doth not go her way according to thy hand cut her off from thy flesh.

COMMENT.

The gist of this chapter is marital relation and warning and instruction for the one entering into it. It is even more pertinent and applicable at the opening of this twentieth century, and in the midst of all the culture and refinement of the present day than in the cruder and earlier age of old Seirach. Young people contemplating matrimony who will study and act upon the fundamental teaching here recorded will find their moral welfare and happiness singularly promoted thereby, and their higher spiritual life still more enhanced. The generative processes natural are laid hold of in the parable teaching of the Scriptures Old and New as best adapted of anything in this present order of things to illustrate and make comprehensible in some degree the higher and incalculably more important spiritual processes of life, to a participation in which we are called, and other things being equal the married man or woman subordinated to the laws of God conscientiously in the natural marital relation will be and is better fitted to follow the spiritual instincts awakened with regenerative conversion to their analogous logical conclusions, and to thus apprehend the higher spiritual things of the kingdom which we are told the merely natural or soul-man cannot comprehend. Read this chapter with this thought in your mind, gentle reader and see.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Read at Plymouth Conference.

To the Household of Faith:

Dear ones in Christ, as the time draws near for the approaching Conference at Plymouth, I can realize in advance the rich spread of spiritual things that it will be the privilege of many to partake of, and have a longing desire to partake of it with you. While you are enjoying the feast I shall be proclaiming the Word of life to perishing sinners, and may God give them a listening ear. I opened meetings yesterday at Ripley, Ill., the opening was good, the church was crowded, not a vacant seat remained. The attention was splendid.

Dear ones, pray for me, that God may use me to his honor and glory, and that sinners may be saved, as I proclaim the gospel of the kingdom in my trip throughout the Southern States.

While I rejoice in the work, and it is a pleasure to me, yet I do feel it a cross to be so long separated from my dear ones at home.

Dear ones in Christ, while you are congregated together it will be an opportune time to further consider plans by which the good work can be advanced, and the practical spirit of the blessed Christ rule and abide in the hearts of all true believers. I apprehend that when this spirit is the controlling power which shall dominate the life of believers, it will be but little labor to raise means sufficient to proclaim the glad tidings both by voice and press to the perishing. Not only this, but the sweet and gentle spirit of Jesus, is a sure preventative of all discord between brethren.

The longer I live, and the more experience I have in the service of the Master, the more need I see of the life of the blessed Christ being radiated from the lives of all those who profess the Christ life, and are in truth his name bearers.

I have noticed that spirit prevailing in the Indiana Conferences I have attended, and I trust the keynote of the Conference now in session, will be to intensify that beautiful and blessed spirit.

Conferences which are given over to the agitation of the Josephite and Sabbatarian hobbies, don't have much of that blessed spirit, and that alone brands such teaching as false. With the consummation of our faith and hope in sight, we cannot afford to have anything to do with those things which will tend to blight the Christ life.

Beloved, let us love one another with a pure heart fervently, and live rejoicing day by day as we together press forward in the blessed work which has captivated our hearts. God be with you all and bless you.

Yours in the blessed hope.

W. H. WINCE.

DRAW NIGH UNTO GOD.

"Draw nigh unto God and he will draw nigh unto you," is the emphatic teaching of Holy Writ and the testimony of every true Christian life. God's laws were given to us for our good, for so he declares by the mouth of his servant Moses. Health, happiness, peace, contentment, all temporal blessings, the respect of men, and the long life of eternity are bound up in the keeping of the commandments and the statutes of the Lord. It is not in vain that we serve him, I can say this with all assurance, looking back on the blessed experience of a long life. Not for all the riches of the world would I exchange what I have known of God and of the riches of his grace. It is only in drawing nigh to him that I have found a place of rest in this tempest-tossed world. "He giveth songs in the night." No night of affliction so dark but what the Christian can lift up his voice in song. O that men would draw nigh unto him and be saved! It is for this that we earnestly work and pray. Come unto him, O weary, sin-burdened ones, and find rest for your weary souls. It is awful to go down into death without God and without hope. We cannot draw nigh unto him by keeping his laws, when life is ebbing away. Come now, come today. And O dear ones, met together in this sweet, sweet place of prayer, forget not your responsibility as stewards of the grace of God. The precious treasure of the gospel is put into your hands that you may give it to others. In season and out of season, you are to labor to bring lost ones in. Do not throw off the burden, plead with tears; pray much; bear the unsaved always on your hearts. Give and work that others may share with you in the glories of the coming kingdom. Do not forget that Jesus is coming, that he brings the reward to all the faithful. God's blessing rest upon all who are gathered here and may we all meet in the Canaan of rest.

Conference Report.

Pursuant to the call, the churches of God in Indiana met in Conference session at Plymouth, Nov. 12, 1903. As Brother and Sister Woodward were there holding meeting the Thursday evening service was conducted by them as usual. There were no services on Friday morning on account of so few having arrived from a distance. Friday at 2:00 P. M. found a goodly number at the church and meeting was opened by singing, reading Rom. I. and prayer, after which we listened to a sermon by Brother Hatch on Psa. xix, subject, "The judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether."

7:30 Scripture lesson Psa. I. and xi. Sermon by Bro. Woodward, subject, "The two thrones." How plain he showed where Christ is now and whose throne he occupies; and where he will be and whose throne he will occupy at his second coming.

Saturday, 10:00 A. M. met in business session, meeting was opened by singing, reading 2 Cor. v. and prayer.

Roll call showed the following churches represented, viz: Antioch, Bracken, Plymouth, Roll, South Bend and Scircleville. Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Brother Wince spoke in regard to Eagle Creek, said they had been neglected and that they wanted some meetings.

Sister Woodward gave a report of the meetings recently held at Pleasant View, which was very encouraging, they having twenty six accession to the church.

Brother Zilmer spoke of the meeting at Roll. Although no additions were reported we trust that seed was sown which will in time bear fruit.

Other reports were given and all seemed encouraged. Several new places were spoken of where meetings were wanted and a wish was expressed that all such places be given attention.

11:00 Sermon by Sister Woodward. Subject, "Little, there a little. Line upon line, precept upon precept." Isa. xxviii. 10. "The importance of little things." She showed how little things for good or evil might prove eternity for others. And the neglect of those little things may prove the opposite of eternity.

2.00 P. M. sermon by Brother Zilmer. Subject, "Baptism." He clearly brought out why baptism is essential to salvation, its importance, the mode of, what it did for the person and what is shown to the world.

7:00 social meeting led by Brother Thompson of Cleveland, Ohio. Subject "Study to show thyself approved of God." 2 Tim. ii. 15. Besides testimonies form a number of the dear ones present, a letter was read from Brother W. H. Wilson.

7:30 sermon by Sister Woodward. Subject, "The outstretched arms." "All day long have I stretched out my hands to a gainsaying people."

Sunday 10:00 social meeting led by Sister Woodward, twenty-three spoke in thirty minutes. 10:30 sermon by Brother Woodward, subject, "What must I do to be saved?" Acts iii. 16.

2:30 Communion by Bro. Wince, Lesson 1 Cor. xi.

7:00 social meeting led by Brother Zilmer and 7:30 sermon by Sister Woodward.

The meetings were all good, four were baptized and one more came forward Sunday evening. Those baptized were Sister Viveigo, Brothers [illegible] Sister Bury, and Sister Pogue. What a pathetic scene it was when Sister Bury was led down into the water! Unable to behold any of the beauties of this world, she arose from that watery grave with the promise, that if she proves faithful her sight will be restored when Christ comes to claim his own. Oh glorious thought, all our infirmities will be gone then.

Among those from a distance were brothers Aslaksen, Alexander and Day and Sister Dean of Chicago, Bro. Thompson of Cleveland, O., Brother and Sister Snoke of South Bend, Sister Fry of Huntington, and Bro. Swindler of Hartford City.

We rejoice to know that we can meet with the dear ones of like precious faith now, and we will rejoice more to be able to meet each and every one of them in the kingdom of God. The church at Plymouth is working, trying to do what they can, and we can speak for them that they certainly do their part well in entertaining the Conference. We always appreciate the many favors we receive while among them. May we all meet in that blessed kingdom when Christ comes.

A Cure for Heart Sorrow.

There is no anodyne for heart-sorrow like ministry to others. If your life is woven with the dark shades of sorrow, do not sit down to deplore your hapless lot, but arise to seek out those who are more miserable than you are, bearing them a balm for their wounds and love for their heart-breaks. And if you are unable to give much practical help, you may largely help the children of bitterness by listening to their tales of woe or to their dreams of foreboding. The burdened heart longs to pour out its tale in a sympathetic ear. There is immense relief in the telling out of pain. But it cannot be hurried; it needs plenty of time. If you can do nothing else, listen well, and comfort wherewith you yourself have been comforted of God. And as you listen and comfort and wipe the falling tear, you will discover that your own load is lighter, and that a branch or twig of the true tree—the tree of the cross—has fallen into the bitter waters of your own life, making the Marah, Naomi, and the waters of salt tears will have been healed.—F. B. Meyer.

The Bereans Column.

[Under this heading the society of "Bereans" of Illinois, will supply the copy and endeavor to fill the space once a month.]

Again have I had the privilege of attending the Southern Illinois Conference, and meeting with the Bereans in that part of the State. It was with pleasure I noticed the progress that had been made in the Berean work, since [illegible] organized one year ago. Forty-five minutes before the evening sermon, had been given for our use. There was a good attendance, and all willing to take an active part in the meetings. Our lessons were from the following topics: The Word of God, compared to a mirror, a seed, a lamp, etc., What is a Christian, The Christian's walk, The Christian's reward, also a temperance lesson. The dangers of strong drink. During this service, a recitation, The Old Man's story, was ably given by Laura Frakes, one of our youngest Bereans. Two evenings addresses were given by Bros. W. H. Wilson and E. J. Lindsay, which were greatly appreciated by all. We were pleased to be remembered by Bro. Aslaksen of Chicago, in a letter of greeting. We met at this meeting Sister Lizzie Woods of Winterrowd, who recently became a State member, also Miss Lucy Slack of Ingraham, who decided to unite with us in searching the Scriptures. We missed the faces of Bro. and Sister Rogers, who have moved to the west. In this removal we lose five of the Bereans from this State, but it is their intention, wherever they locate, to organize a class, so they will help spread the good work. At the business meeting, Myrtle Fears of Moriah was elected 2nd Vice President of the State society. At this meeting officers were elected for the local society. Several new members were admitted, they now have a society of seventeen members. Great was our joy to learn that three more Bereans had decided to become members of the household of faith. On Sunday morning Oct. 11, they put on Christ in baptism. They are Bro. and Sister A. O. Lenz of Loogootee, and Sister Stella Claypool of Marshall. They have been faithful Bereans, may they be as faithful to him whose name they have taken.

From Moriah I went to St. Louis to visit a cousin, who is also a Berean, then to Lebanon, Ill., where I spent a few days with Sister Kathryn Townsend, another of our isolated members. This family is alone in the faith at this point, but every effort is made by them to sow the good seed by distributing and loaning tracts and books and in conversing with friends and neighbors of their hope. We enjoyed reading and talking together of the many precious truths in God's Word. One more decided to join the ranks of the Bereans and we trust through these others may desire to learn more of the truths in the Scriptures. As we look back over the work of the past year, there is much to encourage us. The increase in membership and in the distribution of tracts and papers, is double that of the previous year. The corresponding in business and social letters, has been three times as great. Through the efforts of those in other states, who have united with us, classes have been formed in Wisconsin, Oklahoma and New York. We have members at eighteen different points in Illinois, also at one point in Virginia, Missouri and Indiana. Dear Bereans, let us make greater efforts to persuade others to become daily searchers of God's Word, for many words of thankfulness have been received from those who through this work, have become better acquainted with God's plan of salvation and more active workers in his vineyard. Keep up your organizations. To those who have none, work toward that end. So much more can be accomplished where several are banded together. If there are several in one family, form a home circle Berean class, as has been done at some points with good results. If each one faithfully does his or her part, you will surely grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ, which is of more importance than growth in numbers. So let us remember, that the success of this work depends upon our loyalty to him, whose service we are in. God be with you.

ANNA E. DREW, Pres.

Dear Bereans:

My letter may be a little off the line of thought found in the letters of this column this month. But as no subject was assigned me, my subject will be advice to young people concerning our parents. It may be that you have noticed careworn looks upon their faces lately. Of course you feel that it has not been brought there by any act of yours, still it is your duty to chase it away. Get up tomorrow morning and do the work yourselves. And when they express their surprise go to them and kiss them or give them a kind word. You cannot imagine how it will brighten up their dear faces. Besides you owe them a kiss or kind word. Away back when you were little they kissed you when no one else was tempted by your fever tainted breath. You were not so attractive then as you are now. And through those years of childish sunshine and shadows they were always ready to cure by the magic of a parent's kiss the little dirty chubby hands whenever they were injured in their skirmishes with this rough cold world. These have all been of interest all the past years. Of course your parents are not so pretty as you are, but if you had carried your share of burdens in the past, the contrast would not be so marked. Their faces are full of wrinkles far more than yours. And yet if you were sick their dear faces would appear as beautiful as an angel's, as they would be watching every opportunity to minister to you. They will leave you one of these days. These burdens, if not lifted from them, will drag them down. Those willing hands that did so many unnecessary things for you will be crossed upon their lifeless breast. Those neglected lips that gave you your first baby kiss will be silenced, and those tired eyes will be closed in death, then will you appreciate your parents, but it will be too late. Cheer them up and care for them while you have them with you.

EMMA LINDSAY.

A young man recently told me he did not believe that God possessed a form, because he was supposed to be everywhere at once, and hence such a thing was impossible. What are the facts of the matter? If we turn to the history of the creation in Genesis, we find that God said, "Let us make man in our own image, after our own likeness." How could he do this if he had no form? In Col. I. 15, Paul says, "We have redemption through the blood of Christ, who is the image of the invisible God, the first born of every creature;" and again in Heb. I. 3, he says that God hath spoken unto us by his Son, who being the brightness of his glory and the express image of his person, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high." This is certainly proof enough that God is a person, and possesses a definite form. The failure to believe that God can possess a form and still be every where at once is due to the inability of the human intellect to conceive of a spiritual being whose knowledge and power extend beyond his immediate surroundings.

E. T. RENNER.

What Made Her "Splendid."

A friend of mine once exclaimed to me: "I love to make myself do what I don't want to do!"

She was a very young girl when she made this remark, but it is because she has steadily continued in truly loving to do what has been distasteful, though really for her good, that her life is the success it is.

Whenever I hear it said, "Isn't Miss ——— a splendid girl!" I think of the day when, with so much enthusiasm, so much real pleasure, she uttered the seeming paradox.

Would that more people loved to do what they don't want to do! The world would be a cheerier place, for most of our duties have to be done in spite of lazy inclinations.—The Examiner.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1901 all the papers for December of this year, and all of 1901 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

The spirit of praise fosters the spirit of prayer.

There is a weakness which betrays Christ—there is a false liberality which sacrifices principle.

We rise above servant principles when we arrive at filial obedience. Legal causes will not produce gospel fruits.

If salvation were not of God's favor, it would be a self-procuring, self-sustaining, self-seeking, self-glorifying salvation.

Perfect assurance of one's own safety is calculated to make him strive earnestly for the safety of those around him.

The knowledge of Christ is first by revelation; but he is endeared by experience, and this is maintained by constant need.

1 Thes. iv. 1 verse shows that we may not only please God, but that there is such a thing as pleasing him more and more.

Every day we meet with those who are alienated from God through ignorance; but we can scarcely evade the conclusion that its seat is in the hardness of heart.

We apprehend that many a believer has been drawn into a vortex, not knowing that the FIRST CIRCLE had a tendency to draw him to the innermost point.

A good man, who has seen much of the world, and is not tired of it, says: —"The grand essentials to happiness in this life are something to do, something to love, and something to hope for." In that case, those who have the truth should be the happiest people in the world.

The theory of the "universal fatherhood of God" is of the devil, according to Milton; for he represents the devil as saying:

> The Son of God I also am, or was,
> And if I was I am; relation stands;
> All men are Sons of God.

Plumb-lined—In Amos vii. 8 we read: "Behold, I will set a plumb-line in the midst of my people Israel." Reader, do we not find a divine plumb-line suspended for us on every page of the gospels and epistles? It is not called by that name, but if we wish to, we can find something to test our uprightness on every page.

Soul.

"Thou hast much goods laid up for many years, eat, drink and be merry." Luke xii. 19. The parable in which these words occur affords a striking instance of Christ's exposure of the sinful habit of men consulting their fleshly desires, and being influenced by the instincts of a grovelling nature, instead of submitting all things to the arrangement of God and seeking his glory in the disposal of all

TEMPORAL TREASURES.

In this case the man proceeded as if he were the sole proprietor and withholden by no one; and said, "This will I do,—I will pull down my barns and build greater, for there will I bestow all my goods;" without any reference whatever to the condition of others. Had he been wise unto salvation he would have said, "It might have experienced but the Lord blessed me with plenty, therefore he shall have the increase, and the poor shall buy at such prices that they need not starve." Instead of this he became unthankful, unholy.

Let us now notice the passage at the head of this article:—the word "soul" could not refer to an immortal and immaterial soul, as is generally believed. Such supposed existencies are said to be entirely independent of the fruits of the soil. The Greek term rendered "soul," is psuche, and is translated by a variety of terms, soul, life, lives, mind, heart, you, etc., and means either or the life, or disposition of such person. In the case before us it is easily seen that the term refers to the man's whole existence, which he supposed was the chief thing to be concerned about. It is remarkable that in the 15th verse another Greek word is used to distinguish the things spoken of:—"For a man's life, (Gr. zoe) consisteth not in the abundance of the things he possesseth," but a man's psuche or soul does consist in the possession of such things as money,

THE PERSON HIMSELF,

FOOD AND RAIMENT,

and without such goods it would cease to be; and even when surrounded by them disease may set in and destroy its vitality, or an accident may in a moment snap its silver cord, hence a man is a fool who lays up store only for that which exists today

AND CEASES TO BE

tomorrow. But a wise man recognizes the difference between zoe and psuche, the former generally having reference to that which is promised in the gospel, and is centered in Christ as the zoe or resurrection-life giver. See John vi. 33, 35, 40, 47, 48; Col. iii. 34, in all of which places the word rendered life is zoe. This is independent of the goods we possess; but that is mere animal life and may cease to be at any time,- the other is a promise, and will be the reward of the worthy at the while the other is the birthright of men, animals, trees, plants, vegetables and insects. The expression, "Take thy ease, eat, drink and be merry," also affords additional proof that the soul spoken of is neither immortal nor immaterial. How could such eat, drink and be merry? Prosperity is very fascinating to the flesh, we are in danger of settling down to its exclusive enjoyment, especially when obtained in the spirit of covetousness."

Reader, the divine verdict, "THOU FOOL," is before you. Meditate upon it carefully,—and govern yourself accordingly. The books will be opened before long, that is certain, or the signs hung out by our Lord have failed. One and all let us make sure that we are not robbing God.

"Follow Me."

Jesus called himself the "Good Shepherd," John x. 11, and likened his disciples to sheep, for whom he laid down his life, that they with him, might be partakers of that life which shall never end. Christ's sheep have been gathered out from among the Gentiles by hearing the voice of the Shepherd, as it is written, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me; and I give unto them and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand." John x. 27, 28. The cry has gone forth through the gospel, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Matt. xi. 28. Again, "I am the bread of life, he that cometh to me shall never hunger, and he that believeth on me shall never thirst." John vi. 35. Having heard these words, and having the assurance from the lips of the Master that him that "cometh to me I will in no wise cast out," John vi. 37, we have

ETERNAL LIFE,

RESPONDED TO HIS CALL,

and by a knowledge, belief, and obedience to the gospel, we have become children of God, and brothren of the Lord Jesus Christ. But we find that after we have heard the voice of Jesus calling to us through the gospel, we have something else to do besides merely believing the things which he taught. Concerning his sheep, he says, "They follow me;" that is the most difficult part of the matter, and it is the test of our sincerity.

THE GOOD SHEPHERD

has called to us, and we have heard his voice, and now, if we are full of gratitude to him for the price he paid for our redemption, and we love him in sincerity and truth, we shall follow him. "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me." John xiv. 21. We must seek to know him, and learn more of his commandments, endeavoring, though feebly, to in harmony with his life, and to walk in his footsteps. Commencing at the waters of baptism we follow him through that symbolic death and resurrection, and henceforth our whole life is to be one continuous journey over the same road he traversed

MOULD OUR LIVES

> "Wherever I'll follow;
> My trust in him repose," should be our determination, and as we meet with temptations within, and foes and snares without, with persecution and scorn, with sorrow and mourning, let us not forget that he has experienced the same. Tempted in all points like as we are, touched with the feelings of acquainted with grief, and bowed down with sorrow, he will step of the way, and ask us to follow him. Just before the betrayal of Jesus, all the disciples promise to follow their Master even unto death; but in the hour of his trial they all forsook him and fled, except Peter and John, and Peter only followed him "afar off," Luke xxii. 54; and very soon after he denied that he knew Jesus. Following afar off will not do. We know how it happened in Peter's case. He followed afar off—that was the first wrong step; then he sat down amongst those who were the enemies of Christ, and afterwards denied Christ altogether.

If we profess to be disciples of Christ, we must follow him even unto death, if necessary, remembering that they who endure unto the end will obtain salvation. The world hated Jesus, and if we follow him it will hate us, and we must, as the writer of the Hebrews says, Go forth unto him outside the camp, and bear his reproach. Heb. xiii. 13. "If we be dead with him we shall also if we suffer with him we shall also reign with him; if we deny him, he will deny us." 2 Tim. ii. 11, 12. The reward for following Christ all the way will be that we, like him shall rise from the dead, and receive that eternal life which he has to bestow, upon his faithful brethren. The simple invitation, "Follow me," was once so powerful, and fell upon such good and honest hearts, that they who heard it, and followed him, Luke v. 11, and we who follow that same Jesus now, must forsake all that hinders, and without so much as a last lingering look back, must press forward, counting all trials but slight afflictions, and all earthly fame as dross, so that Christ and the power of his resurrection may be ours. We read of one period in the history of Christ when certain of his brethren will follow him wherever he goes, and enjoy forever the privilege of his presence. That favored multitude, represented by the 144,000 having

LIVE WITH HIM;

FORSOOK ALL

THE NAME OF GOD

in their foreheads, are those who have kept themselves pure from defilement with the corrupt daughters of the great harlot, and having been redeemed from amongst men, they follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. Rev. xiv. 4. But before attaining that exalted position they followed him through the PATH OF SUFFERING.

Neglect to closely and earnestly follow Christ through this antitypical wilderness will meet with the loss of the same reward as the Israelites experienced—exclusion from the Promised Land. Their history is recorded for our benefit, and as we read Heb. xii. 2, "Let us therefore fear, lest a promise being left us of entering his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it; for unto us was the gospel preached as well as unto them, not being in them that heard it." When we think of what Christ has endured on our account,—of his life of self-sacrifice, of his cruel death, and the sorrow and shame which he endured that we might have life, surely we must see how little we do for him, how insignificant are our acts of self-denial, and how, at our very best, we do but follow him "afar off."

We one and all know, and God knows how matters stand with us, and we must remember that if our heart condemns us, God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things. 1 John iii 20. Bearing in our minds continually these facts, let us determine that in every relation and circumstance of life, we will follow our good Shepherd, endeavoring to grow in grace and in the knowledge of him, so that even our adversaries may know that we have been with Jesus and learned of him." The evidence accumulates daily that the coming of the Lord draweth nigh; and if we would meet his approving smile, we must use all the energies of body, mind and estate for his glory. He owns us.

Selections.

A Wrong Way to Read the Bible.

In an argument about the rich man and Lazarus the other day, after I had made the statement that this parable did not teach future torment for the wicked, a man said: "Why! Don't you believe the Bible? It says, 'In hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments.'" I assured him that I believed the Bible and everything in it; and showed him that the parable had no reference to the future, and hence "he" who "lifted up his eyes in torments" was not some one in the "orthodox" hell. He had neither read the parable critically, nor considered the reasons why Jesus spoke it; which are easy to find in the context.

The devil said in the Bible: "Thou shalt not surely die." Then must I believe that Adam and Eve did not die? No: because the Bible also says, (and this is not a quotation,) that Adam "died." (Gen. v: 5). The devil lied; and the Bible in relating the incident quotes him verbatim. The Bible says: "Use a little wine for thy stomach's sake;" a command, surely. But this was Paul's instruction to Timothy, not to me.

The method of interpretation which takes everything thus absurdly literal, would lead me to be circumcised, keep the Sabbath, wash feet, shave my head as Paul did (Acts xxi: 26), remain unmarried (1 Cor. vii: 1), forbid the ladies to braid their hair (1 Tim. ii: 9), etc., and many other things which the contexts, or the treatment of the subjects in general make it clear are not intended for all persons at all times.

A favorite text of the "imitators" is: "leaving us an example that we should follow his steps." (1 Pet. ii: 21). But the context reveals that as Christ suffered wrongfully, and took it patiently—we should take our sufferings patiently; and so on through several verses. Another text is: "Jesus the author and finisher of our faith." That is, Jesus tells us what to do and gives all needed instructions concerning it—"finishes it"—so that an apostolic comment is unnecessary. But this contradicts Peter, who says heed "the commandments of us the apostles." (2 Pet. iii: 2); and the apostles taught some things that are not recorded in the gospels.

Find out first what the passage of Scripture refers to; then draw your conclusions in the light of the context, and other Scriptures.—W. Alford in Our Hope.

Man's Fall.

There is a very real sense in which we may speak of "The Descent of Man," and also of "The Ascent of Man." The former takes place every time a man yields to his passions and appetites in spite of the Spirit's remonstrance sounding in his ears. The latter takes place when the ethical, rational element triumphs over the lustful, brutish element.

We have been accustomed to regard the fall of man as a historical event of long ago, a terrible disaster which befell the first human pair, and entailed woe upon all their posterity. But we must remember that the fall is an actual occurrence in the life of every human soul that becomes truly self-conscious. When he "comes to himself" as a moral being, it is discovered that he has slipped, fallen and injured himself. It matters not whether the fall has been brought about through hereditary weakness, unfortunate environment, or personal waywardness, he must face the fact that he is down, and that he has fallen down. He realizes that the animal part of his nature is in the ascendant and is stifling the spiritual part. Then comes the appeal and the decision, to determine whether he will remain down, or arise and stand; whether the lower nature will be gratified at the expense of the higher, or the higher hold dominion over the lower; whether he will be content with his "Descent" or struggle for an "Ascent."—The Watchman.

Higher Criticism.

The Rev. Mr. Macleod, of John Knox U. F. Church, delivered on Sunday night a scathing attack on the Higher Critics. Every earnest man will endorse his denunciation of "the moral cowardice that entrenched itself behind a theological chair, casting aspersions upon, or raising a doubt, regarding a creed it was bound to uphold, to teach, and to defend." The sad thing is that those in high office in the Church who adhere to Higher Criticism, have gratuitously pinned their faith to views which are being riddled by research. What has happened to the Higher Criticism when applied to Homeric literature is happening to it when applied to Hebrew literature. Scholars are familiar with the fact that Wolf based his theory of the late origin of the Homeric poems on the assumption that writing for literary purposes was unknown in Greece before the sixth century B. C. Since then much has happened. The excavations of Dr. Schliemann have revealed to the world just such a state of culture and civilization as Homer describes. The same thing has happened in this connection with Hebrew literature. By the German originators of the Higher Criticism, it was taken for granted that the Israelites of the Mosaic age were a horde of illiterate wanderers whose mental condition was quite unequal to the production of the Pentateuch. Accordingly, it was necessary to relegate the Hebrew literature to a much later period of considerable religious development and culture. The period fixed upon was the time of the Exile. In the Pentateuch, according to the Higher Critics, we have not history, but romance. As for the patriarchs, they are as unhistorical as the character in Æsop's Fables, or the familiar heroes of nursery tales. Now research is doing for the early history of the Hebrews what it did for the early history of the Greeks. It is revealing large areas of history in what the Higher Critics have hitherto thought to be the land of mythology and legend. Recently the Rev. Mr. Urquhart, who has done splendid service in this department, showed how completely the Higher Critics have been baffled by archæological discoveries. According to the Higher Critics, the patriarchs had no existence; the records in Genesis are quite unhistorical. Mr. Urqhart, in his pamphlet, has the following: "The history of Abraham begins with the statement that Abraham came from the city of Ur, in Chaldea. I ask the Assyriologist: Was there really a city called by that name at his time—about 2000 B. C.? He immediately assures me that there was; that its site has been recovered, its ruins explored, and its ancient inscriptions read.....Scripture tells us that Abraham was not alone there, for when he leaves the place a large company goes with him—his father and his father's house.

I ask, therefore: Is it true that there was a Hebrew colony in Ur about 2000 B. C.? The Assyriologist replies; 'There was, and there had been for centuries, a Hebrew speaking people among the inhabitants of Ur, for we have found Hebrew names upon the monuments and among them the very name of Abram—probably an ancestor of the Abram of the Bible.' I turn to the Assyriologist and say: You have been recovering the ancient records which speak of these countries. Can you tell me if it is true that a Hebrew colony was planted in the city of Haran? He replies that there was a Hebrew section among the inhabitants of that city also. For he finds upon the monuments of the Assyrian kings, who poured their armies again and again over that region, the names of the chief inhabitants of Haran, and among these are undoubted Hebrew names. He tells me, too, that 'your Hebrew emigrants probably brought the idolatry of Ur with them, for Haran became the second great seat of the worship of the moon-god—Ur being the chief seat of it.'" By bringing to light the great civilizations of the past, archaeology has not only provided an environment for the Pentateuch, especially Genesis, but by confirming the Bible record at unexpected points, has knocked the bottom from the myth and legend theory of the Higher Critics.—Selected by J. Cameron, Edinburg, Scotland.

If you believe God's Word about the condition of things you are called a pessimist, but if you believe the devil's lie you are called an optimist.—Christian Worker.

"The Bible gives light, the creed often darkens."

As we go to press today there are on our list just 812 whose time is out now, and their renewals due. Some of these are owing from 1 to 5 years, and others only for the current year. If all would pay in what they should we would have in hand quite $625.00.

Now Brothers and Sisters, for some weeks past we have tried to explain our need, and urge action on your part. We are not complaining of the noble ones who always keep their subscription up and ahead, and wish to thank all such. We wish to thank also every one who is doing his very best to send us soon as he can. We wish to urge you to more earnest effort. If there are any who are careless and neglectful we wish to ask you kindly to rouse up and send us what is right.

If you could know and realize our situation we feel certain you would respond at once. It is a conviction with us that there is not a Brother or Sister now owing us but who can get the amount they owe easier than we can carry the whole load. We are compelled to struggle on with the burden. Are you not also in duty bound to do your part? Please think of this very seriously, as before your God, and then act.

Another thing that makes this year hard for us is that our Helping Fund is now $112.50 below what it has been other years, and as we have kept the poor ones on our list so far we do not like the idea of cutting them off. Surely there are enough members of the Church of God in this land who have been blessed with abundance, who can spare this amount so that we shall not have to drop the name of a single worthy poor Brother or Sister.

Brethren, these are the plain figures. Will you give attention to these matters? We hope you will without more delay.

First Things First.

God's order in everything is not only gracious and good, it is essential. When we put first things first we carry out God's thought.

"In the beginning, God" is essential to a perfect walk in the perfect way. In the beginning of the day, the first thoughts of God. In the beginning of the establishment of a home, the first desire of the heart for God's approval. In the beginning of the establishment of any work, the first desire for God's glory. In the beginning of any pleasure, the impulse that it shall please God also.

Faith is the first of the three great graces, though love is the greatest. There must be an outflow of faith to God before there can be an outflow of love to him. Never tell a child to love God: teach him to believe God. Love is the spontaneous result of faith. We cannot please God and we cannot love God until we have believed in him.

Again, seeking first the kingdom of God is the way to earthly blessing. Giving God the first fruits is the pathway to increase. There are overflowing promises to those who, in the disposing of money, see that God has a generous supply first. How much we have missed because we have not always put first things first.

Did you know that you are doing something all the time either to discourage or to encourage others? If you stay away from meeting because there will be only a few out, you are discouraging those who are there and those who stay away for the same reason. If you live a careless life and indulge in doubtful things, your influence may discourage those who are very strict with themselves before God. If you are faithful all the time, you encourage the weak and feeble ones. If you testify definitely to what grace God has given you, without urging and coaxing, you encourage those who hang back and are timid.

Sing of His Love.

My precious Redeemer,
My Lord and my King,
O! blessed redemption,
To thee let me sing!
Thou hast lain down thy life
To redeem from the fall,
In due time to be testified
A ransom for all.

O, sing of his mighty love,
Sing of his mighty love,
Sing of his mighty love,
Mighty to save.

My blessed Redeemer,
My Lord and my King,
Thou hast lain down thy life,
Life-etornal to bring!
Such love was never known,
So wonderful to me,
That while we were sinners
Thou hast died us to free.

My blessed Redeemer,
My Lord and my King,
To thee, O, to thee,
In truth let me cling;
Thou sweetest name,
On earth or in heaven,
Eternal life.

From Jaffa to Jerusalem

It is much more interesting to go to Jerusalem by train than by carriage, as one can see from the train all the places of Biblical interest on the carriage road, except one, and ten others that cannot be seen from the road at all.

It is fifty-five miles from Jaffa to Jerusalem by train, and takes three hours and forty minutes. It cost fourteen million seven hundred and forty-two thousand francs to make the road. The making of the railway appears to be the fulfillment of prophecy: "The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall justle one against another in the broad ways, they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightning." Nahum 2, 4.

The train runs along in sight of the carriage road until after it leaves the Ramleh station. It stops at five stations between Jaffa and Jerusalem. Jerusalem is two thousand six hundred and seventy feet higher than Jaffa.

Soon after leaving Jaffa we come to the Plains of Sharon, and, if in spring, see the roses, Solomon's Songs 2, 1, see on the right a Jewish agricultural school which was established in 1869. We pass just to the left of a modern village, Yasur, on the site of Hazar-Shual. Josh. 19, 3. It is the traditional site where Samson caught three hundred foxes. Judges 15, 4. Away to the left is a modern village, Mabraka, on the site of Bene-Berak. Josh. 19, 45. The next village is on the right, called Beit Dejon, thought by some to be the house of Dagon, which was at Ashod, eighteen miles south. 1 Samuel v, 1 and 2. Next on the right is a modern village called Safieh. In thirty-five minutes from Jaffa is the first station, Lydda, the site of Lod, which was built fourteen hundred years before Christ. Ezra ii, 33. Neh. vii, 37 and xi, 35. It is Lydda of the New Testament where Peter visited the saints and cured Aeneas, who was sick of the palsy and had kept his bed for eight years. Acts 9, 32, 33, 34, 35. Peter was at Lydda when he was called to Joppa, and raised Tabitha. Acts ix, 36 to 43.

Soon after leaving Lydda we see at the left Jimzo, the site of Gimzo, one of the royal cities of the Philistines, which they took from the Israelites in the reign of King Ahaz. 2 Chronicles 28 18. From the train we can see two villages, Kabuh and Latran, between which is the valley of Ajalon, over which Joshua commanded the moon to stand still. Josh. 10-12. In ten minutes from Lydda we reach the second station, Ramleh, the traditional site of Arimathea. Matt. 27, 57. In the town there is an old crusader's church, now used as a mosque. About a quarter of a mile to the west is an old picturesque tower, said by some to have been built by the son of Kalif Omar, and by others by Abu Fettak, the son of Luthan Mooser, in the year 1818. It was most probably built by the crusaders. From its top is a fine view. In 1099 Ramleh was occupied by the crusaders, and in 1266 it was taken by the Moslems.

Soon after crossing the carriage road we see, away to the left on the top of a mountain, the upper Beth-haron, and on the top of the table land, Neby Samuel (Mizpeh). All the children of Israel, from Dan to Beer Sheba, were called together at Mizpeh several times. Judges xx, 1, and 21, 1, also 1 Samuel 7, 5. Saul, the first king of Israel, was choosen at Mizpeh. 1 Samuel x, 17 to 24. Just a little way to the left, on a hill, we see the site of Gezer, a city which Pharaoh took from the Canaanites and gave to his daughter, Solomon's wife. 1 Kings ix, 16.

After passing a modern village on the left, called Nanah, we see a Jewish colony to the right, on the site of Ekron where all the lords of the Philistines gathered to send away the Ark of God. 1 Samuel v, 10-11 and 6th chapter. In forty-five minutes from Ramleh we reach the third station, Sejed. The railway goes the same way that the two cows did with the Ark, passing just to the left of Beth-shemesh. "And the kine took the straight way to the way of Bethshemesh." 1 Samuel vi, 12.

In twenty-five minutes from Sejed we reach the fourth station, Deir-Aban. Opposite the station, on a hill to the left, is Zorah, the birthplace of Samson. Judges xiii. In a few minutes after leaving the fourth station the train enters a narrow ravine in the mountains of Judea. We see a large cave in the top of the rock to the left, called Samson's Cave. "And he went down and dwelt in the top of the rock Etam." Judges xv, 8.

In an hour and a quarter from Deir-Aban we reach Bittin, the fifth station, which is on the site of Bether. Solomon's Song's ii, 16. According to Jewish history this was a place of great strength. It contained four hundred synagogues, and in each four hundred teachers. Here the Jews under their commander, Barroch (the son of a star), made their last stand against the Romans, three and one-half years, and when the place was captured, eight hundred thousand persons were killed, and the blood ran in the streets so strong as to carry away stones weighing four pounds. Robinson's Researches, 3d Vol., page 268.

Soon after reaching the station we pass just to the left of the traditional fountain, where Philip baptised the Eunuch. Acts 8, 36. 37, 39. We go on up the Valley of Roses and across the Valley of Rephaim, where the Philistines came and spread themselves. 2 Samuel v. 18 to 25. On the top of a hill to the left is a place which belongs to the Greeks, called Katman, and nearby the Leper's Hospital.

In twenty-five minutes from Bittin we reach the last station at the German colony, on the northern end of the Valley of the Giants. "And the border went up to the top of the mountain that lieth before the Valley of Hinnom, westward, which is at the end of the Valley of Giants, northward." Josh. xv, 8. In going from the station to the city we pass, at our right, the hill of Evil Counsel. Matthew xxvi, 3 and 4.

We cross the Valley of Gihon where Solomon was anointed king. 1 Kings i, 33 to 39. We ride along by the west side of Mt. Zion, near the Tower of David. "Nevertheless David took the stronghold of Zion, the same is the City of David." 2 Samuel v, 7. Jerusalem is built upon four hills, and yet the mountains around are higher than the city. Psalms 125, 2.

ROLLA FLOYD.

What Shall we Sing?

Paul would have us sing "hymns and spiritual songs." Eph. v: 19. The qualification "spiritual" no doubt pertains to divine things, or things revealed by the spirit. To sing "spiritual songs," then, is to sing songs that are in harmony with what God has revealed. Judging the current church hymnology by this standard, there is a great lack of the "spiritual" element in it; for much has been incorporated into it that does not represent the spiritual idea of the word of God. What I mean is, for example this: We are required to join in singing, "My Father's house is built on high. Far, far above the starry sky; When from this earthly prison free, That heavenly mansion mine shall be." This is good rhyme, and the tune may be very pleasing to the ear; but is it spiritual? Does it harmonize with what God has revealed? God spoke through his Son who said, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." Matth. v; 5. What does "blessed" mean? Happy, because fortunate. Who are "blessed?" A certain class of persons who are styled "the meek." What is the cause of their blessedness? "For they shall inherit the earth." What is this "earth?" It is "the terraqueous globe which we inhabit." What is it to "inherit?" To take possession and enjoy. Thus, then, the meek are happy because they shall take possession of and enjoy the earth. They are not happy because they shall inherit heaven, or because they now possess the earth, but because "they SHALL inherit the earth." To sing about things "far, far above the starry sky" is not singing spiritual songs about the abode of God's people.

Again, we hear it sung,

A charge to keep I have,
A God to glorify;
A never-dying soul to save,
And fit it for the sky.

Now, if man has a "never-dying soul," that "soul" can "never die." Therefore it is neither dead or in danger of dying, and hence has no need of being "saved." The soul of which the Bible speaks is one that can die. "The soul that sinneth shall die." Ezek. xviii; 4, 20. That kind of "soul" needs to be "saved from death." Jas. v. 20 There is manifestly something wrong about a song which sings a quality into a soul which the Bible nowhere attributes to it. That kind of singing is not "spiritual," because not in harmony with what the Spirit has revealed.

Now, shall we as a people encourage the singing of such un-Scriptural sentiment as that mentioned above? Shall we buy hymn books which are full of such things, and sing them in our congregations, while our speakers are proclaiming the great truths of the Bible? We can hardly calculate the effect of singing error. Besides, let us be consistent. If we have a truth which is precious enough to hold us aloof from the others to maintain it, and to preach it, let us not neutralize the effect of our preaching by singing what we do not indorse. Let our singing as well as our praying be as was that of Paul: "With the spirit, and with the understanding." 1. Cor. xiv: 15. While we want "spirit" (fervency) in our worship, let not "the understanding also" be wanting. Then we will sing "with grace in our hearts to the Lord" (Col. iii: 16), and he will be pleased. Submitted in the love of the truth.

Dear Restitution:

On Sunday October 18th, the churches of God of Brooklyn, New York and Newark, New Jersey, met in union meeting at the meeting place of the latter body on West Park Ave. near Broad St. Newark to consider the question, "What is the duty of the Church toward the world?" The lessons read were the thirteenth Psalm and the seventeenth chapter of John. As usual the morning meeting was devoted to the Breaking of Bread, then from twelve noon, till two P. M. was what is termed the "Social" meeting, when lunch was served by the good sisters of the home church, after partaking of which, we have an opportunity of renewing old acquaintances or forming new ones, and talking over those things most dear to our hearts. At two o'clock opened the Conference meeting, at which the question of the day was considered. The meeting was opened by the writer who read a preamble and resolution, the substance of which was, that as the membership was greatly scattered, causing some—through many causes—to be irregular in attendance, therefore the meeting advised those living at a distance to open small meetings in their home neighborhoods, thus beside doing good to themselves would be a benefit to hearers who might attend, and above all else would glorify God's name among men. That the home churches would pledge themselves to supply speakers when called upon, and that a committee be appointed to take charge of the matter.

The majority of the speakers were in favor of the resolutions as read, but some—three—spoke against them, saying in part that this was the age of watching and waiting and that those who did this were fulfilling the commands of God, for was it not said that "God was taking out of the Gentiles a people for his name," and that [illegible] was capable of doing his work without aid, that none could come unto Jesus without God called them, and that all so called would come whether we gave them opportunity or not, that our work was in the future age when we would be with our King, the Lord from heaven, when nations would be converted in a day and the glory of God would shine forth like the sun at noonday. One brother said that he would not question what the great God had called others to do. If any believed that they had been called of God to publicly preach, then it was their duty to preach the gospel as God had revealed it unto them, but for him he did not think there were any called for such work, at least he knew he had not been, and until God revealed unto him that it was his pleasure to have such work go on, he would not do it himself, nor would he assist others who did do it. His idea was that "we were not to forsake the assembling of ourselves together," but that "we were to exhort one another, and so much the more as we saw the day approaching," that it was the Church which was to be encouraged, and not to try to convert the world. Jesus said, "I pray not for the world, but for those whom thou hast given me out of the world." If he had a wrong idea, and it could be proven so from the Scriptures, then would be not only devote his life to the preaching of the Word of God, but every dollar in his possession—and he has a few—would be devoted to the same purpose.

At about 5 o'clock the question was put to a vote, and while many did not declare themselves, the only dissenting votes were cast by the three speakers already mentioned. So the committee was appointed and we now await results, which if any, will be given you from time to time.

I have not seen our Brother William Rennie since the meeting in question, so cannot give a definite reason for his action, but suppose it was on account of the encouragement given him at the [illegible] union meeting, but he has engaged [illegible] Hall at 175th St. and 3rd Ave., New York City, for Tuesday evenings for the purpose of delivering gospel lectures. He writes that he could not get the hall—the only one available—for Sundays till after the new year, and intimates that if his lectures are any way successful, a regular meeting may be established. I hope and trust that God's blessings will rest upon his every effort, and that our brother may be a power for good among the people who he hopes to reach, and that the name and love of God will be better known on the account of his efforts.

The Brooklyn church has re-established Thursday evening Bible classes, to meet at the residences of the members, each brother or sister to be leader in turn, the leader to give out the subject and take full charge of the meeting, this gives a greater variety of thought and action, and as we have no set rules—except to do every thing in decency and order—we have great hopes of good resulting.

The "Young Peoples class for Bible Study" has resumed its weekly sessions, and appearances point to a happy and profitable time. Some new faces are seen this year, who have never attended our church services, so who knows what the harvest will be? But let it be what it may, it is our part to plant the seed, then to carefully water it, the fruit lies in a higher and more powerful hand than ours, and if we do our duty we can safely leave the result to God.

But I must close, when I commence to write I never know when to stop, so sending the love of the Brooklyn church to all the RESTITUTION readers believe me awaiting to be sincerely your brother the return of our Lord.

ALEX. D. DONALDSON.

A Report.

Report of our Sunday school exhibition at the Church of God at Coolspring, [illegible] 4th Sunday in October, to the honor of our dear old Sister Elizabeth Updike will [illegible] and we hope that her old Sister Elizabeth Updike's birthday's service be rendered, the service redound to so spend the time in praise of the Lord, that it may redound to his glory, and our good. Our children like all others of our little folks were anxious to have a good time at our church home, and this old mother in Israel, being the grandma of many of these little ones, said, Let us have this on my birthday, and they were all delighted to have the pleasure of enjoying their grandma's 70th birthday (at their Sunday school) festival. Now, this dear old sister has been standing firm to the truth for 45 years, and as the result of her faithfulness [illegible] most of her children and her companion have taken upon them the name of Jesus. Too much cannot be said of her orderly walk, and meek and contrite spirit, which in the sight of God is of great price. Her house is ever open for the truth, and for those who labor in the vineyard of the Lord. For many years we did not have a house of worship, but by the help of her and her husband we have a comfortable house or church home, where we can meet and read and sing and pray, making melody in our hearts to the Lord, and we can say that when ever the church door is open this old sister and brother never fail to fill their seats. This is in accordance with Paul's instruction, who said, 'Let us not forsake the assembling of ourselves together." The wise man Solomon often spake of the worthy woman of his day. He said of a virtuous woman, the heart of her husband can safely trust in her. Eccl. xxxi. 11 She riseth also while it is yet night, and giveth meat to her household. Ver. 15. She stretcheth out her hands to the poor. Ver. 20. Her husband is known in the gates when he sitteth among the elders of the land, Ver. 23. She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness. Ver. 27. Her children arise up and call her blessed. Her husband also, and he praiseth her. Ver. 28. A woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised. Ver. 30.

Now, we would say to the little ones, all of you try to imitate grandma, by walking in all the laws of God, blameless, and if you are as successful in bringing us many into the fold, as she has, we will have to build a larger house, and we hope you will all take double interest in these things in the future, and bring your neighbors and their children with you, for the gospel feast is spread, and it is free for all, whosoever will let him take of the water of life freely. The apostle Paul told Timothy that he had known the holy Scriptures from a child, which would make him wise unto salvation. And David said concerning the law of God, Teach it to your children, and let them teach it to their children, that they may learn to set their hope in God.

After reading the above, Bro. B. F. Boyer addressed the congregation, citing many Scriptures applicable to the occasion, both to the aged and the young, much to the satisfaction of all. Then followed the recitations rendered by the juvenile class, which was performed with grace and modesty. After which Sister M. F. Cook, of Bentonville arose and recited the following in a zealous and devotional manner, which seemed to reach the heart of every true child of God.

OUR SPIRITUAL BLESSINGS IS CHRIST.

Our life in him can never be forfeited; our righteousness in him can never be tarnished; our pardon in him can never be reversed; or justification in him can never be cancelled; our acceptance in him can never be questioned; our peace in him can never be broken; our joy in him can never be diminished; our rest in him can never be disturbed; our hope in him can never be disappointed; our glory in him can never be clouded; our sun in him can never be darkened; our happiness in him can never be interrupted; our strength in him can never be enfeebled.

We then adjourned for refreshments, and while a bountiful repast was being spread in the church yard, the children marched in file, enjoying their good day, for which they had so long waited, after which they partook of all of the substantials and delicacies which had been prepared for them by willing hands, and then a social conversation was enjoyed by all until 3 o'clock p. m. Then Bro. Boyer spoke to us again, exhorting us all to stand firm to the truth, and press forward in the path of duty, and contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints, and for the union of the body, saying, let brotherly love continue. Yes, that cementing link called charity, which binds our hearts together in the sweet bonds of Christian union, to labor for the cause of Christ until he comes. Thus closed one of the most enjoyable days since the erection of our church home. Reported by order of the church.

Table Talk.

Brethren, table talk this morning is found in Psa. cxxi. 2, "My help cometh from the Lord who made heaven and earth." If the psalmist's, the king of Israel, help came from the Lord, surely we poor mortals ought to expect help from the same source, and most assuredly we will have the needed help, if we live up to the Lord's requirements. The safety of the go fly who trust in God's protection is in the help that cometh from the Lord who made heaven and earth. How very few stop even for a moment to consider from what their blessings and helps come. To them it is a natural consequence meted out from some source of which they take no notice. But we on the providence of God the grains of different kinds are put into the ground, and help comes from the Lord. According to his law of production, he causes them to spring up and bring forth more grain. Even the smallest of seeds that we might think of could not germinate, but he send the rain to moisten the ground and sunshine to warm it, and they bring forth. Surely that help is from the Lord who made heaven and earth. If men would only be as thoughtful as the psalmist and as thankful for their help that cometh from the Lord, for he is the only true helper, then the Lord would get the praise and thanks due to him. Our help, the household of faith, is in the Lord who made heaven and earth, and he will not suffer our foot to slip as he moved, he that keepeth thee will not slumber. O that we might be yet more thankful for the many ways that we are helped by a kind providence. We are very dependent creatures. We of ourselves can do nothing, all our help cometh from the Lord. If he would withhold the rain and sunshine from the land, how soon would mortal man find where his help comes from, he might see that he was but dust from which he was taken. So let us one and all be more thankful for help that cometh from the Lord who made heaven and earth.

Coffee on the Cars.

"Ten minutes for refreshments!" and what a scrambling ten minutes for passengers giving up their seats to rush from a train to, a lunch counter to bolt a sandwich, their eyes glued on the clock, uneasy that the train is leaving without them; coffee too hot to gulp down; every engine bell producing a nervous start; a feverish moment with the check, and a dash back to the train, ticket in one hand and pie in the other. This experience has given way to an innovation in travelling comforts on the Pennsylvania Lines between Chicago and Pittsburg. While it is but an incident in the greater railroad achievements of rock ballast, double tracks, steel rails, stone bridges and limited trains in which the Pennsylvania System sets the pace, this latest provision for comfort in travel appeals to all who relish breakfast or luncheon in the quiet comfort of their seats in the coach and may not choose to avail themselves of the luxuries of the dining cars. On fast express No. 9, the daylight train from Pittsburg to Chicago over the Ft. Wayne Route, and on train No. 6, from Chicago to Pittsburg over the Ft. Wayne, waiters from the dining cars pass through the coaches, serving coffee and sandwiches to passengers.

No wild scramble around a lunch counter. Passengers, without leaving their seats, have breakfast and luncheon brought to them at moderate prices. They dine leisurely and in comfort. Over a cup of the fragrant coffee for which the Pennsylvania dining cars are noted, the passenger may view the interesting pictures of Ohio and Indiana scenery. To women, who missed a cup of coffee rather than leave the car, this innovation is a boon.

The Chicago & North-Western is the only double track railway between Chicago and the Missouri River.

To the brethren of Kansas and Missouri:

I have left Ransom, Kan., and until further notice I will receive letters at Canton, Kan. My meeting at Prairie Point in north central Kansas was well attended, the house being full every night, with good attention. While there were no additions, yet the interest was so good that we have hopes that the seed sown may yet bring good results. We will visit that point again in December. Sister Cross of Clay Center assisted me very materially with her singing and the organ. In January we expect to be in northeast Kansas, and in February in Missouri. Let all who desire to correspond with me address me at Canton, Kan. for the present.

To the Called Out Ones.

I wish to say to the Household of Faith scattered throughout the Southern States, that I have now started on my Southern trip which I have had in mind for some time. I am now laboring in Southern Illinois, and will work south from that point. Many have responded, but there may still be others who would like to engage my services. If so, they can do so by addressing me at my Chicago home. The call is open to all Southern States.

There is great need of energy at this time, the time is so very short, when this Gentile age must cease. Are we all prepared? Address W. H. Wilson, 420 N. Willow Ave., Austin Station, Chicago, Ill.

To the brethren in Iowa:

Any desiring evangelistic work in their locality will please make application to the Conference board, so that the necessary arrangements can be made. Address Ft. Dodge, Ia.

Dear Restitution:

To the household of faith, believers in the gospel of the kingdom of God. Many of you know, through THE RESTITUTION, that on Sept. 15, I was elected State evangelist by the Ohio Conference held at Salem, O. I have been notified to begin a series of meetings lasting three weeks, one week at Tippecanoe City, Miami Co., and one week each at two other points in that county, beginning Saturday Nov. 21. I expect to leave home Friday, Nov. 13 for Mt. Vernon, at Bro. Robison's to stay over Sunday, Nov. 15, on the way to Tippecanoe city. My services are at the command of any in Ohio or elsewhere, to preach the simple truth to salvation. Brethren or sisters, if I can be of any use in your neighborhood let me know soon. A church building, a hall or a vacant store, wherever there is ordinary comfort, with or without seats, anywhere that the public can be reached will do. Address, 366 W. Main St., Salem, O.

Your brother waiting for Jesus.

Evangelist Notice.

In so much as the Conference of the Church of God of Central Washington has seen fit to elect us as evangelists for the ensuing Conference year, we wish to state that we stand ready to answer the call to duty. IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

The first prize each month, awarded for the most helpful suggestion, is $50 in cash, with a second prize of $25 in cash, and eighteen other prizes of sets of books, ranging in value from $32 down to $5, making in all $329 of value given in prizes each month. There are in addition, cumulative cash prizes, for those who win prizes in successive months, and a big cash prize of $1,000 for the most valuable suggestions during 1903.

For the convenience of intending contestants who can not be promptly supplied by newsdealers, all the copies of Collier's for the current month will be sent post paid, together with a handsome proof of a drawing by Charles Dana Gibson, upon receipt of 40 cents in stamps addressed to The Lion's Mouth, Collier's Weekly, 438 West 13th Street, New York.

The Love of God.

Like a cradle rocking, rocking,
Silent, peaceful, to and fro
Like a mother's sweet looks dropping
On the babe she watches below,
Hedged in 'tween earth's swinging, turning,
Justice, injustice, sale, and plow;
Feels the tide of God's love beating,
Bows and worships as below.

And as to Jesus those that suffer,
Turn and cry and will not rest,
As the ear the tender mother
Holds the closest, hears the best;
So when we are sick and wearied,
By our sins weighed down, distressed,
Then it is that God's great patience
Holds us closest, loves us best.

O great heart of God! whose loving Cannot kindred even wronged,
Will not weary, will not even
In our death itself be lost—
Love divine! of such great loving,
Only mothers know the cost—
Cost of love which, all love surpassing,
Gave a Son to save the lost.

Notes By the Way.

My last notes ended with the Southern Illinois Conference held at Moraih, Illinois. The Conference having closed, Bro. Brant and family conveyed me to Bro. and Sister Elliott's home, on the route to Martinsville, Ill., where I remained over night. The next morning Bro. Elliott took me in his carriage to Martinsville, where Bro. John Claypool met me, and conveyed me to his home on the Marshall route. At this point we have a congregation of believers, presided over by John Claypool. The congregation at this place own their own church building. It is much more comfortable when a church society own their own meeting house, and are not dependent upon others when a preacher visits their neighborhood. I was much pleased to find the members somewhat proficient in vocal music. I always find it quite an efficient aid in the preaching of the message of life. The glad tidings can reach the heart through song as well as oral preaching. It is a branch of the service of God which should be cultivated. Our young sister Miss Stella Claypool is the organist. Stella was baptized at the Southern Illinois Conference. May God bless Sister Stella, and may she let nothing stand in her way of becoming a crowned victor when Jesus comes to reign. She is a member of the young Bereans, she and young Sister Murphy, are active in the Berean work of this place. Sister Murphy is another lovely Christian young woman. When visiting in the homes of believers I can soon see what their walk in life is. While working with this church I visited in many homes, but specially with Bro. and Sister John Claypool, and Bro. and Sister Christian Murphy, and hold them in esteem for many kindnesses.

Services continued in this church over two Sundays, with fair congregations, and several times packed house, with evident interest. I have learned since leaving there, that Bro. Claypool is trying to hold up the interest. Our aged Bro. Hatch accompanied me to Marshall, and sang the gospel at each meeting. He also preached one night. God bless the dear old brother who has victoriously defended the one faith and hope of the gospel for these many years. Services being ended, Bro. Christian Murphy and daughter conveyed me to the depot at Martinsville, where I took the train for Waynesville, Ill., where Bro. Charles Graham lives. There are but two baptized believers at this place.

Bro. Graham secured the Christian church for a series of meetings. This church was very liberal, they not only gave the free use of their house, but attended to the building of fires, lighting up the house, and their choir led the singing, and their organist played the organ, and they also assisted Bro. Graham in paying my expenses, etc. This was exceedingly liberal when we take into consideration that my preaching was directly contrary to the received teachings of their denomination.

Meetings being ended here, Bro. Graham secured the Christian Church in the town of Waynesville. The furnace being out of repair in the church we could not use it, and accordingly held meetings in the houses of some people who had become partially instructed by reading some of the writings of Mr. Russell. Mr. Russell touches well on the life and death question, but on the gospel of the kingdom, he and the Bible are wide apart. Aside from the immortality question he is off the base. I am not sure that he is sound on that question either, he draws a distinction between the words immortality and eternal life. This we may call a distinction without a difference, which is no distinction at all. Much of his reasoning is specious, and not only so, but absolutely dangerous, and our readers would do well to be suspicious of them. The people at Waynesville, both in the country and in the town, manifested much interest in the Word spoken. Some took notes for future study. God grant that they may learn the way of the Lord more perfectly.

My next appointment was at Ripley, Brown Co., Ill. I arrived at Mt. Sterling on Saturday night. Ripley is about ten miles from Mt. Sterling, and is reached by means of carriage. Bro. Thomas Wilson came to meet me at Mt. Sterling, but we happened to miss meeting each other. I then went to the Wilson hotel and staid over night, and then hired a man to take me to Ripley on Sunday morning. Arrived at Ripley just as the people were assembling for Sunday school. I there met Bro. Charles Hogan and others. Bro. Hogan is in charge of the church of Ripley. They have a congregation at this place of about fifty members. They also own a church building of their own. They tell me that my respected Uncle Benjamin Wilson preached in their church forty years ago.

Right here I want to correct some infamous work that Josephites are trying to brand him with. A certain Seventh Day Adventist Josephite, whom many of you know, is circulating an article defending Josephitism, which is said to have been written by him for a Josephite paper in Pennsylvania. I want to say that before he died he denied having written the aforesaid article, for the aforesaid paper. Let this settle that matter. They must be hired up for some person of influence to support their damnable heresy. Pardon this digression, I considered this necessary seeing that he sweetly sleeps in Jesus and therefore cannot resent a mischievous use of his name to support a blasphemous heresy.

In resuming my report, I will say after Sunday school was over, I then addressed the congregation. In the evening there was a large attendance of the citizens. The meetings continued over three Sundays, good attendance and interest all the way through, sometimes there was not a single empty seat in the church.

On Friday afternoon our Sister Miss Jennie Cox accompanied me on a visit to

THE GRAVE OF BROTHER J. M. STEPHENSON, who is buried at Ripley. I have traveled extensively over this great country, and have frequently come across the results of this courageous soldier of Jesus Christ. These brethren and sisters all requested me to visit his resting place and see that it was respectfully cared for. I found that it was not. What I may say I don't want anyone to construe it as a reflection on the church at Ripley, it was as they say not intentionally, but a lack of a little forethought, and that is evidently the case, for when I called their attention to it, they immediately put it in good order.

The mound had sunk to the level of the earth, and was overgrown with rank grass, so that it was barely discernable that any one was buried there. The brethren have built it up in good shape.

Now many of those scattered abroad who have been benefited both by his writings and living voice, and a large number of those who have been buried with Christ in baptism by the hands now resting beneath the grassy mound, said they would be willing to contribute something toward purchasing a modest monument to respectfully mark the resting place of this dear saint, who wore out his mental faculties in the Master's service, and the failure of whose mental faculties was doubtless hastened by suffering extreme poverty in his last days on account of lack of support by those to whom he ministered in sacred things. We must all throw the mantel of charity about any indiscretion due to his brain failure.

"Speak not harshly—much of sin
Dwelleth every heart within;
In its closely covered cells
Many a wayward passion dwells:
By the many hours misspent,
By the gifts to error lent,
By the wrong thou didst not shun,
With a lenient spirit scan
The weakness of thy fellow man."

I looked at some monuments together with others at Ripley, and selected that which we thought would be modest and respectable. I want to raise fifty dollars for this purpose, and I have not the least doubt but what the generous hearts of God's dear people will supply the sum asked for immediately. Send to my address at Chicago. The receipt of the money will be promptly acknowledged, and strictly used for the purpose it is sent for. I have made arrangements for its erection by the brethren at Ripley when the money is received.

"Night falls, but soon the morning light
Its glories shall restore;
And thus the eyes that sleep in death
Shall wake to close no more."

The two weeks work at Ripley was satisfactory. Bro. Hogan is going to try and hold it up. Our church is the only live church at Ripley. They have a M. E. church, a Holiness church, and also a Christian church, but none of them can get an audience when our church has preaching services.

I had pleasant visits in the homes of Brother and Sister Hogan, Brother and Sister Lanning, Brother and Sister Wilson, and Sister Jennie Cox and mother, Bro. and Sister Patterson, and others. I have formed some pleasant acquaintances that I shall long remember.

I was very much interested in visiting the pottery run by brethren Woods and Patterson. They took interest in showing me how different kinds of pottery ware are made from the clay. It requires a great deal of skill without moulds for the potters to make perfect shapes by the hands alone. It made me think of the Scripture: "Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump, to make one vessel unto honor, and another unto dishonor." I there witnessed the power of the potter to thus skillfully form these vessels from the same lump of clay.

I rested one day after the meeting at the home of Bro. and Sister Thos. Wilson. The next day Bro. Wilson conveyed me to the depot at Mt. Sterling, where I took the train for my next appointment at Blush, Missouri. I left the train at Fredricktown, and was met at the train by Brethren Graham and Cooper.

Meetings are now in progress at Blush, Mo. I will report this later on.

I shall soon be in Arkansas. Get ready for it brethren and let us see if a great work cannot be accomplished for the Master.

Yours in the blessed hope.

W. H. WILSON.

Wisdom of Seirach.

CHAPTER 27.

1. Because of indifference many have sinned.

2. Between the joints of stones a wooden pin may be squeezed, and between selling and buying sin will be crushed in.

3. If one doth not control himself in a zealous way with fear of the Lord his house will be speedily overturned.

4. In shaking a sieve refuse remaineth; even so stubble remaineth in a man's reasoning.

5. A furnace testeth a potter's vessels, and a man's test is in his argumentative reasoning.

6. The fruit of a tree showeth its culture; even so a man's word his heart enthusiasm.

7. Do not praise a man of prominence before a reasonable test, for this is the test of men.

8. If thou pursue after the right (or justification) thou wilt overtake it, and clothe thyself with it as with a poderis (flowing-robe) of glory.

9. Flying-things rest with things like to them, and truth will lead up unto those who are doing it.

10. [illegible] wait for prey; even so sins that are working injustice.

11. The discourse of a truly-reverent man is wisdom constantly; but the man devoid of good sense changeth like a moon.

12. Watch to spend appropriate time in the midst of men of understanding; and in the midst of men who think things through be constantly.

13. The discourse of the savorless is a repulsive thing; and their laughter is in wantonness of sin.

14. A familiar use of much swearing will straighten one's hair; and their wrangling is an obstruction to one's ears.

15. The contention of the haughty is a shedding of blood and their interchange of abusive talk is a wearisome thing to hear.

16. He who revealeth mysteries hath destroyed faith, and he shall not find a friend for his soul.

17. Stay up a friend and keep faith with him; but if thou shouldst reveal his mysteries (secrets) do not pursue after him.

18. For even as a man hath destroyed his enemy hast thou destroyed the friendship of thy neighbor.

19. And as thou hast loosed a bird out of thy hand hast thou let thy neighbor go, and do not hunt for him.

20. Do not pursue after him because he hath stood far away, and hath fled like a gazelle from a snare.

21. Because it is possible to bind up a fracture and there is reconciliation for abusive talk, but the one who revealeth mysteries hath lost hope.

22. He who shunneth thine eye is devising evil things, and no one will escape him.

23. Before thine eyes he will make thy mouth sweet, and he will express admiration for thy words; and afterward he will pervert his mouth and with thy words will cause thee to stumble.

24. I have hated many things and have never met like to him, and the Lord will hate him.

25. He who casteth a stone on high is casting it upon his own head, and a deceitful blow openeth wounds.

26. He who diggeth a pit will fall into it, and he who setteth a snare will be taken in it.

27. He who doeth wicked things, they will have been returned to him, and he will not fully know whence they come to him.

28. The mocking and reproach of the haughty and requital like a lion will lie in wait for him.

29. Those who rejoice in the smitting of the truly-reverent will be taken in a snare and woe will lavishly waste them before their death.

30. Fury and wrath those things also are abominations, and an obdurate sinner will be subject to their control.

COMMENT.

There are a good many fundamental laws of Christian ethics brought out and emphasized in this chapter; and first the sin of indifference. The Christian life is nothing if not positive. See the Christ's own words, "Because ye are neither hot nor cold, but lukewarm, etc."

The Christian life is nothing if not "strenuous" and we all just now know what that means here in this part of the world. The emphasis also placed upon "control within" and zeal directed by the fear of the Lord for heads of households and leaders and directors of affairs generally, whether in the church or out of it well put in this chapter, and in perfect accord with apostolic teaching.

The importance of reason and reasoning as the test of the masculine portion of humanity in opposition to the feminine faculty of intuition or "face-taking" or judging from appearances so common now-a-days with the prevalence of the gambling spirit as a natural consequence of it—none too strongly stated here by old Seirach.

The pursuit of the right persevering unto ultimate justification, under the figure of the chief-priest's "poderra of glory" a beautiful and striking rhetorical trope.

Read the ninth verse thoughtfully and see how much more it means than our trite proverb of "Birds of a feather flock together," which is also true, but falls short of stating the whole truth here embodied.

The importance of choosing wise and good associations too in the 11 and 12 verses remind us of Paul's aphorism—bad associations corrupt good manners and vice versa.

What is said here of swearing comes with timely admonition to the young of this generation whose daily and hourly conversation is so interlarded with blasphemy that the hearing of it is enough to straighten the hair of any true saint, if not to blanch the pious parent's hair white.

"He who revealeth secrets" and what further is said in the verses 16 to 21 both inclusive with the stress placed upon fidelity as the basis of any true friendship and in fact the foundation of our whole civilized social structure, also a timely admonition now in view of so many and such widespread breaches of trust.

What is said too of the sinister eye and the flattering tongue just as applicable today as when old Seirach wrote it.

CHAS. GARDNER.

"Christ Died According to the Scriptures."

The above statement was made by the apostle Paul in 1 Cor. xv. 3. The entire chapter is filled with a masterly argument to prove the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead in Christ. He first proves the death and resurrection of Christ by more than five hundred witnesses. He then proves that our living again is based upon Christ's death and resurrection. If Christ be not raised, your faith is vain, ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. If we believed that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. 1 Cor. xv. 17, 18; 1 Thes. iv. 14. The above proof is sufficient and plain. We must believe in the death of Christ. What does the term "Christ died" mean? Isaiah says "He hath poured out his soul unto death." He suffered the penalty of the law, yielded up his life. It is not true that his body alone died. But Christ died. Modern day theology teaches that Christ's soul could not die, being immortal. This doctrine forces them to affirm that Christ is equal in existence with the Father. Think for one moment of a son being as old as the father. Nonsense! The first Adam failed and the second Adam was promised in the Seed of the woman. Later on the seed of Abraham. The Son of David. Again as the Son of Mary. A number of appellations are given to Christ by the prophets but the above are sufficient for my purpose. The angel said to Mary, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a Son and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest. The Son of God and of Mary. The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God. If Christ existed previous to the time herein spoken of, in what condition I ask. If at all it must have been as a person. If so what became of his person when the Holy Ghost overshadow the maiden and produced the child in its embryo state. Great is the mystery of godliness, I hear some say. This does not clear up the muddle at all, why not accept the simple statements made by Luke and rest there. If we believe that Christ is God we simply deny his death. For God only hath immortality and cannot die. If we believe that Christ had an immortal soul and that that soul was the real Christ we also deny the death of Christ. For an immortal soul can not die. Paul says Gal. iv. 4. When the fulness of the time was come, (not before) God sent forth his Son, made (born) of a woman, made (born) under the law. In this Scripture Macknight renders made born as I have put it. Christ's begettal was not according to the [illegible] flesh, human but of God. God breathed into Adam the breath of life, and he became a living soul. God overshadowed the maiden and the child was conceived in the mother's womb. Both were brought into existence by the same power, only under different circumstances. The first Adam by the law of creation. The second Adam or Christ by the law of generation. Let me ask, did this give Christ any greater power to live than it did Adam? Both were sons of God. Both were placed under the law of obedience. In what respect then was Christ superior to Adam? John calls him the only begotten of the Father full of grace and truth. His disposition from childhood was to learn his Father's will and do it.

Luke says, Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man. This is spoken of him during his childhood. To grow in favor with God is to be obedient to his will. From childhood Christ seemed to know that he was begotten of God and labored for the reward promised, which is the rulership of the world. Again we read Col. ii. 3, in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. Again he is declared the power of God and the wisdom of God. A remarkable person, at the age of ten we find him in the temple disputing with the learned men of the law. Follow him where you will you find him full of truth. He spake as never man spake. In point of Scriptural knowledge and a determination to do the Father's will he excelled all who went before or who have come after. God acknowledged him to be his Son on several occasions by his voice from heaven. This is my beloved Son, hear ye him. Does not this same voice reach us through the words which Christ has spoken. Have we not the same assurance that we are the sons of God if we remain faithful to the end? For as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he (Christ) also himself likewise took part of the same. If Christ possessed anything more than a flesh and blood life he certainly did not die according to the Scripture.

When God passed the sentence of death upon Adam it was in language like this, For dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return. No statement here that a part should return to dust and a part not. The whole man was dust. When the breath of life left him he became a dead soul or person. When Christ poured out his soul or life unto death the same would have taken place, but God said I will not leave his soul in the grave nor suffer thy holy one (Christ) to see corruption. This was spoken of Christ. He lay three days [illegible] heart of the earth, but saw no corruption. Did he not die as all the sons of Adam die? In Rev. we read, "I am he that liveth and was dead; and behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death." These are Christ's own words "was dead." I liveth and I was dead are opposite statements. One means consciousness, the other unconsciousness. The how that Christ died according to the Scripture is a very important doctrine as it assures us that we shall live again. If we reject it we reject the Christ of the Scripture. The doctrine of the "Holy Triuity" says, God the Father, God the Son, God the Holy Ghost. The Scripture says, the Father, Son and Holy Spirit. It is my desire that where God has spoken I wish to speak and where he has not spoken I desire to be silent. In conclusion I wish to state that to know the truth is very important, for it is the only insurance policy worth having. Your brother in the truth.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of this year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge [redacted] it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

FOR several years we have devoted some space for a Christmas and New Year "Love Feast." Request comes from several to again observe this feature. We are glad to give these letters of cheer and greeting, and ask that all who want a part in this "meeting" send in their letters so we can have them by Dec. 23. Write short and to the point, so that all may have a chance. The day of our Lord's coming hastens on. We are told to not forsake assembling ourselves together, and to be especially careful as the day of his coming approaches. Brothers and Sisters, this is in a sense a "meeting" where the isolated ones can have an equal chance with those more fortunately situated. Let all, young as well as old, take a part, and so get strength for the battles of life, and at the same time give aid and encouragement to others.

IF David, the man after God's own heart, be both dead and buried, and "is not ascended into the heaven" (Ac. ii. 29) is it likely that any others of the faithful have gone to heaven?

AFTER we have heard the voice of Jesus calling us through the gospel, we have something else to do besides merely believing the things which he taught. Concerning his sheep, Christ says, "They follow me." That is the most difficult part of the matter, but it is the test of our sincerity.

FOR T. H.—Yes; we most assuredly believe that the "wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God." Psa. ix. 17. But what hell? The hell described in the Scriptures. That great unseen, invisible state into which the wicked descend to be no more—to be as non-existent as before birth. The word turned in the above passage is in the word shub, a going back, a return. Dr. Young translates the passage thus: "The wicked do turn back to sheol, all nations forgetting God." Returning to an original state or condition surely is simply non-existence, and not the fiery pit of popular belief. We are not, however, very sure that that belief is very popular now.

"What Must I Do to Be Saved?"

The simplest answer is the one given by Paul to the Philippian jailor: "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved;" but as that command had to be amplified by the apostle speaking "unto him the Word of the Lord," instructing him what to believe, and how to act, Acts xvi. 30-34, so the same thing has to be done now. Faith is not the simple thing it is asserted to be at what are called

REVIVAL MEETINGS.

It "cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." Rom. x. 14-17. "It is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence or conviction of things not seen," but understood and believed in. One has to believe in the Anointed Jesus to be saved, for he came that "Whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life." John iii. 15, 16, 36. No one can believe in him before he understands something about him—about his person, about his work, about the gospel he preached; that gospel of the kingdom of God which he was anointed to proclaim to the poor, who are specially called to be heirs of the kingdom promised to them that love God, Luke iv. 18; James ii. 5.

When a person understands his own nature, and realizes his sinfulness, and repents of it, and perceives that death is the end of life without God,—when he understands the blessed gospel of the kingdom, and desires to enter into possession thereof, and perceives that eternal life is through his Son, and longs to stand accepted in his sight, then we have only to tell you about Jesus. He is the Savior. Neither is there salvation in any other. There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Acts iv. 12. It is necessary to be united in that all-saving name—to be covered by him. He is the propitiation for our sins. We cannot save ourselves. We are saved entirely by the grace or favor of God. He will allow no one to boast in his presence. No

THE GIFT OF GOD

WORK OF OUR OWN

can justify us in his sight. A man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law. Rom. iii. 28. "Salvation is of the Lord" absolutely and completely, and we are justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus; whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past through the to declare, I say, at this time, his righteousness; that he might be just and the justifier of him which believes in Jesus. Rom. iii. 24-26. Jesus lived a perfect, spotless life. In him was no sin, and God has just offered him unto us, and made him unto us who believe, "righteousness, sanctification, wisdom and redemption;" (1 Cor. i. 30) "He who made him to be sin (a sin offering) for us, who knew no sin, —that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." 2 Cor. v. 21.

FORBEARANCE OF GOD;

IN HIM.

We have to be in him; related to him, —united to him. We are in Adam by nature, and so stand related to death and corruption. Remember that it is only in Christ that all shall be made alive. How is this relationship established? How can one in Adam get into Christ? We can tell you what Peter said to the Jews at Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost when they cried out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" This was the divine answer by the apostle Peter,

"REPENT AND BE BAPTIZED

every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." If that was the way in apostolic times, it is the way now. It is still the way; and those who while knowing this to be so, treat it with contempt, do so at their peril. In this way, Paul says, we are baptized into the death of Christ. In this way we recognize the upon us,—and we yield up our bodies to its claims. In this way we recognize that there is life only through union with Jesus, and that salvation is through a resurrection from the dead, and so we are buried with him through baptism into death,—that like as Christ was raised from the dead, through the glory of the Father, so we also might walk in

CLAIM OF DEATH

NEWNESS OF LIFE.

For if we have become united with him by the likeness of his death, we shall be also by the likeness of his resurrection. Rom. vi. 2 6. Baptism is "the likeness of his death." By it we are united with him. In this way, figuratively and prospectively, we pass from death unto life. We die, we are buried, and we rise from the dead in Christ Jesus. We bury the old man and we rise new men, and "he that hath died is justified from sin." Rom. vi. 7. This is salvation in a figure. This is being saved symbolically. The reality comes when Christ comes who will confer the life prefigured thus upon all who keep the commandments of Jesus!!

NEW CREATURES

Scientific Side Lights.

The Duke of Argyll in Reign of Law ch. I. p. 31, says:—"Christianity demands no exceptions to law. Christ's work being a means to an end. Assuredly whatever may be the difficulties of Christianity, this is not one of them—that it calls on us to believe in any exception to the universal prevalence and power of law. Its leading facts and doctrines are directly connected with this belief, and directly suggestive of it. The divine mission of Christ on earth—does not this imply not only the use of means to an end, but some unscrutable necessity that certain means, and these only, should be employed in resisting and overcoming evil? What else is the import of so many passages of Scripture implying that certain conditions were required to bring the Savior of man into a given relation with the race he was sent to save? "It behooved him .....to make the Captain of our salvation perfect through suffering." "It behooved him in all things to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be," etc.—with the reason added: "For in that he himself hath suffered, being tempted." Whatever more there may be in those passages, they all imply the universal reign of law in the moral and spiritual, as well as in the material world; that those laws had to be—behooved to be—obeyed; and that the results to be obtained are brought about by the adaptation of means to an end, or, as it were, by way of natural consequences from the instrumentality employed. This, however, is an idea which systematic theology generally regards with intense suspicion, tho' in fact, all theo[redacted] and build upon it." [redacted] So Proctor in Expanse of Heaven, says, a cold and inert mass of matter would be able to do all that the sun does by his mere mass, and yet be utterly unfit to be, like him, the ruler of a scheme of circling worlds. The glory of the sun is not in his strength alone. As Sir John Herschel has well said, "Giant size and giant strength are ugly qualities without beneficence." But the sun is the Almoner of the Almighty, the delegated dispenser to us of light and warmth, as well as the center of attraction."

"The sun to rule the day." And God said, "Let there lights in the firmament of the heaven to divide the day from the night, and let them be for signs, and for seasons, and for days and for years. Gen. i. 14.

Tylor Anthropology, ch. 13, p. 388 says: "One part of the earliest astronomy, which was so sound as to have held its own ever since, was the measurement of time by the sun, moon and stars. The day and the month fix themselves at once. In a less exact way the seasons of the year, such as the rainy season, or the icy season, or the growing season, furnish a means of reckoning, as where a savage tells of his father's death having been three rains or three winters ago. Rude tribes, who observe the stars to find their way by, [redacted] also that the rising and setting of particular stars or constellations, mark the seasons. Thus the natives of South Australia call the constellation Lyra the loan-bird, for they notice that when it sets with the sun, the season for getting loan-bird's eggs has begun. It stands to reason that the great facts of the year's course, the change of the sun's height at noon, and the lengthening and shortening of the days would be noticed, so that even among people who have not as yet measured them with any accuracy, there exists, in a loose way, the notion of the year. Within the year, too, the successive moons or months come to be arranged with some regularity, as where the Ojibwas reckoned in order the wild-rice moon, the leaves falling moon, the ice moon, the snow-shoes moon, and so forth. But such lunar months have to be gotten into the year as best they may. Indeed, what distinguishes the uncivilized calendar is that while days, months and years are known the days are not yet fitted regularly into the months, nor is it settled how many months, much less how many days the year consists of."

God's Rightful Place.

The place that God occupies in the Scriptures, and for a long period occupied in the affairs of Israel, is a type of the universal place he will at last have in the recognition and regard of all nations upon earth, and all literature under the sun. At present God is an outcast from human affairs,—divorced from Israel, and a mere name in Gentile institutions. The Scriptures which bring us light and hope for the future of the earth only make more manifest the dreadfulness of the present dark night of man's government of himself. The light of human precept however, will at last be quenched and the din of human strife and folly hushed in the stillness of death; and the ascendancy of God joyful and everlasting.

THE British government seems to have awakened to the necessity of the hour, and is pushing an army into Thibet, with the apparent intention of permanent occupation. Meanwhile Russia and Japan are in a deadlock over negotiations concerning Corea and Manchuria, with a slight advantage on Japan's side.

Dear Restitution:

I think that the following copy of "The will of Peter the Great" will no doubt prove to be very interesting reading to most of the readers of THE RESTITUTION, especially as we are watching so closely the signs of the times, and the movements of the nations, particularly that most deceptive of all nations, Russia.

"Much has been said of Peter's last will. Since it is supposed to have a direct bearing on the Eastern question, our notice of this extraordinary personage would be very unsatisfactory without investigating the contents of that singular document. We take it for granted that the will is genuine, and consequently, that it reflects his peculiar modes of thought, and lays open his far reaching plans, and his imperial policy, relative to Russia's greatness and conquests. The following is said to be the will.

In the name of the Holy and Invisible Trinity, we, Peter the First, to all our descendants and successors to the throne and government of the Russian nation:

Having, by the great God of whom our existence, been also endowed with the gift of pre-science, we view the Russians as called, in the course of future events, to the general dominions of Europe. This opinion is founded on the fact, that the other European nations have reached a state of old age next to caducity towards which they are journeying with giant strides; hence it follows, that they should easily and undoubtedly be conquered by a people young and new, when it shall have acquired its strength and vigor. We view the invasion of the East and West countries by the North as periodical movement, decreed among the arcana of that Providence that regenerated the Roman people through the invasion of the barbarians.

The emigration of the polar men are like the flood of the Nile which comes at certain periods to fertilize the exhausted lands of Egypt. We found Russia a rivulet, and leave her converted into a river; and my successors will find it a sea, destined to fertilize impoverished Europe, and its waves will break down all opposing dykes, If my descendants have but the wisdom to direct the current. To this end I leave the following instructions, which are recommended to their attention, and constant observance.

1. To have the Russian nation constantly at war, that the soldiery may be always disciplined and ready for action. Allow the nation no rest, but for the replenishing of the treasury, re-organizing the armies, and choosing the opportune moment for attack; making in this manner, peace serve war, and war serve peace, in the interests aggrandizement and prosperity of Russia.

2. To attract, by all possible means, the most efficient and celebrated military officers in Europe, during war, and the highly educated, scientific men of all countries, in time of peace, that the Russians may enjoy the advantages of other countries, with out losing their own identity.

3. To take part, on all occasions, in the disputes, and contentions among the States of Europe, especially those of Germany, in which, as the nearest, we are the most directly interested.

4. To subdue Poland; foment their continued rivalries and disturbances; gain their nobles by bribery; influence their diets, and by intrigue, take action in the election of their kings; form partisan cliques, and for their protection, send them Muscovite troops, to remain in the country, until the moment of complete occupation. If the neighboring powers make opposition, quiet them at once, by dismembering the country, and give each a part.

5. To take what we can from Sweden, and make any attack by her a pretense of subjugation. To effect this, separate her from Denmark and likewise Denmark from Sweden, and foment with care all animosities and rivalries between them.

6. To select wives for the Russian princes among the princesses of Germany, for the multiplying of family alliances will conciliate interests, and by them unite Germany to our cause, and increase our influence in that country.

7. To attend assiduously to forming an alliance with England for our commerce; the assistance of that power we most need for the building up of our maritime force, and she will be of the greatest service in supplying us with her gold, in exchange for our lumber and other productions. Continual intercourse with her merchants and sailors will accustom ours to navigation and commerce.

8. Extend ourselves unceasingly towards the North, the whole length of the Baltic, and likewise to the south by the Black Sea.

9. To take every possible means of, gaining Constantinople and the Indies (for he who rules there will be the sovereign of the world); excite war continually in Turkey and Persia; establish fortresses in the Black Sea; get control of the sea by degrees, and also of the Baltic, which is a double point, necessary to the realization of our project: accelerate as much as possible the decay of Persia; penetrate to the Persian Gulf—re-establish, if possible by the way of Syria, the ancient commerce of the Levant; advance to the Indies, which are the great depot of the world. Once there we can do without the gold of England.

10. Obtain and carefully cultivate the alliance of Austria; support (apparently) her ideas of future dominion over Germany; excite animosities and rivalries among her princes—thus causing each party to claim the assistance of Russia, and exercise over his country a species of protection that will prepare for future dominion.

11. Interest the house of Austria in the expulsion of the Turks from Europe, and quiet their dissensions at the moment of conquest of Constantinople (having excited war among the old States of Europe), by giving to Austria a portion of the conquest, which afterwards will or can be reclaimed.

12. Unite within your borders all the disunited or schismatic Greeks now scattered in Hungary and Poland, making ourselves their center, establishing beforehand an independent church by a species of autocracy and sacerdotal supremacy.

13. Sweden dismembered, Persia subdued, and Turkey conquered, our armies united, and the Black and Baltic Seas guarded by our ships of war, it will be necessary to propose separately, and with the greatest secrecy to the court of Versailles, and afterwards to that of Vienna, to divide with them the empire of the universe. If one of the two accept this offer, so flattering to their ambition and self-love, let her serve to annihilate the other, commencing a contest, the issue of which cannot be doubtful; and Russia may take possession of all the East and a great part of Europe. If both nations should refuse the offer made by Russia (which is not at all probable) it will be necessary to excite quarrels among them, which will engage them in a war with each other. Then Russia improving the decisive movement, advances her troops (assembled beforehand) on France and Germany at the same time. Two squadrons proceed—one by the Axof, and the other by the port of Archangel—filled with Asiatic hordes, under the convoy of our armed ships in the Black Sea and the Baltic. Advance on to the Mediterranean and the ocean, inundate France on one side, while Germany is inundated on the other, and these two countries conquered, the rest of Europe will pass under the yoke without firing a gun. Thus may and should be effected the subjugation of Europe."

If Peter the Great had studied Ezekiel's prophecy he might better have named Asia instead of Europe as the dominion of Russia—as witness the present movements of that nation. Yet with all her gigantic schemes she shall finally come to her end, and none shall help her. See Dan. xi. 40-45. Read Ezek. xxxviii. and xxxix.—Selected by H. E. R.

Not Wasted.

Once there grew on an oak two acorns, side by side. When they had matured, they fell to the earth. One a squirrel found and ate; the other took root and became a great tree. Which of these acorns did the will of the great God that made both squirrel and oak? We say: "The acorn that was eaten failed; the one that grew was a success." Are we right? Rather, is it not true that, in the divine economy, the nourishing of the squirrel is just as important as the growth of the oak? Is it not likewise true that men who have failed to accomplish what the world expected—the man who would have made a great lawyer, but who stayed on the old farm to take care of father and mother; the girl who would have shone as a musican, but "wasted" her life on a crippled sister—is it not true that these lives were in accord with the will of the Father? Waste is sometimes wealth. The cross of to-day with its dying Victim is the crown of tomorrow on the brow of on immortal King. Has not the Master told us: "He that loseth his life for my sake shall find it?"—Zion's Herald.

ANOTHER OFFER.

There is a general waking up among our people everywhere. Our public speakers are all busy, and calls are in excess of their ability to attend them. Many places want preaching at the same time, but must wait their turn. This shows a decided interest, and a desire among our brethren to sound out the Word to the yet unsaved. All seem to realize that the night is far spent, that the time to work is short.

Brothers and Sisters, our work is not well done, and is not ready for acceptance of God, unless we have done all we can—our very utmost. We cannot admit that it is our duty to do anything at all for the advancement of the Master's cause, without conceding it is our duty to do all we can—to make a sacrifice even.

Preachers of other denominations as well as our own, know and say that the best workers in a community are those who take and read their Church paper, and keep informed as to what is being done in the various departments of the work, and are thus interested in pushing along the car of truth.

The Managers of THE RESTITUTION are endeavoring to so conduct the paper that it will be a fit aid to the Evangelist in his work. We are trying to keep it clear from that contention that leads to mischief and strife. This is done by having certain well-defined truths which are taught in God's Word plainly, as a basis of belief, and by publishing articles that accord with these declared principles. Other outside subjects might be "investigated" as long as life and pencil and paper lasts, and no decision ever be reached, but we do not consider this a profitable work to engage in, hence do not ask for contributions on such subjects, and do not want them. Such are usually but the "opinion" of a man, and are often based on a mere inference at best.

This paper aims to teach the truth of the Bible, and the same is declared and believed in by our Church. We therefore believe it is a fit missionary to be sent out to the unsaved and lost of the human family. In order to make it possible for our friends to do more of this missionary work than ever before, we make this offer:

Any one sending us $10.00 may select 13 names of those not now subscribers, to whom we will send the paper for the year 1904. This makes a trifle over one-half regular price if taken in lots of $10.00 worth. You and the office practically go halves in scattering the truth of the gospel to your neighbors and friends. You who have money think of this. For $100 you can preach to an audience of 130 people over 200 sermons the coming year. Can you do better with that amount of money? You have a minister come to your neighborhood perhaps once a month, giving you two or may be three discourses each time—possibly 30 a year. When he is coming you invite your neighbors in to hear him. Suppose those neighbors have had THE RESTITUTION in their homes each week when the preacher was not there, and have read the articles, and are interested to hear more. Does not this increase largely the chances of the preacher being able to speak the very words that will start your friend on the way to the kingdom? Did you ever think of this matter? Will you not take it under consideration? We feel sure if you do you will not hesitate to go half partner with us in this work.

Who will send $10, $20, $50, $100 for this work? The best time to start it is now. Select your names and send at once, so they will get the rest of this year and all of next.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Poetry.

In Perfect Peace.

"Thou will keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee," Isa. xxvi. 3.

Like strains of music, soft and low,
That break upon a troubled sleep,
I hear the promise old and new,
God will his faithful children keep
"In perfect peace."

From out the thoughtless, wreck-strewn past,
From unknown years that silent wait,
Amid earth's wild regret there comes
The promise with its precious freight,
"In perfect peace."

Above the clash of party strife,
The surge of life's unresting sea,
Through sobs of pain and songs of mirth,
Through hours of toil it floats to me,
"In perfect peace."

It stills the questionings and doubts,
The nameless fears that throng the soul,
It speaks of love, unchanging, sure,
And we count its echoes roll:
"In perfect peace."

"In perfect peace." O loving Christ!
When falls death's twilight gray and cold,
And flowers of earth shall droop and fade,
Keep thou thy children as of old,
"In perfect peace."

And through the glad, eternal years,
Beyond the blame and scorn of men,
The hearts that served Thee here may know
The rest that passeth human ken,
"Thy perfect peace."

Are We in the Kingdom Now?

It is said by some that the kingdom of God was established on the day of Pentecost, and that believers of the gospel are therefore in the kingdom now: by others that the kingdom is in the hearts of believers, basing their claim on the statement of Jesus to the Pharisees, "The kingdom of God is within you." (Margin, "Among you;" R. V., "In the midst of you.") Luke xvii: 21. Others still say that the kingdom is in heaven, because it is frequently termed "the kingdom of heaven" (17 times by Matthew). We differ with all these views, because they are not supported by Scripture evidence. First, because there is no Scripture to prove that the kingdom was established on the day of Pentecost; and if there were, it would contradict other statements which place the setting up of a kingdom by the God of heaven at a later time. Dan. ii: 44. Second, because there is no statement in the Bible that the kingdom is or will be in the hearts of believers or of any other class. Third, because there is no Bible proof that a kingdom was to be set up in heaven. The "kingdom" which "the God of heaven shall set up" will be as the stone in Nebuchadnezzar's dream which "smote the image and became a great mountain and filled the whole earth." Dan. ii: 25. When once it has been "set up," it "shall stand forever" (44) where it was set up: on the earth. It will not be in any part of "heaven," but "under the whole heaven." Dan. vii: 27. However, the particular thought to which I want to draw the reader's attention is this: The kingdom has been "promised to those who love God." Jas. 2: 5. Men must first believe in God (believe that he is. Heb. xi: 6) before they can believe God, as Abraham did. Rom. iv: 3. To thus "believe God" is to believe what he has said: to take him at his word. By his he acquaints us with his plan relating to our salvation. Faith comes by hearing, hearing comes from the word, and the word comes from God. Rom. x: 17. As we understand the word and become acquainted with God's benevolent intentions, we feel affection for him; "we love him, because he first loved us." 1. John iv: 19. Then we are exhorted to "walk in love." Eph. v. 2. And in this love we are to be "perfected." 1. John 4: 12, 17, 18. Love is to be "without dissimulation" or hypocrisy. Rom. xii: 9. The sinner, the man of the world, who does not appreciate the gospel and its meaning to the believer, can not love God. Hence the kingdom has not been promised, much less given, to him. We must first learn God's plan, and then he can learn to love him. Then the "promise" concerns him. Let us notice in particular, the apostle does not say that "God has given the kingdom to those who love him." He has "promised" to give it to those who love him. This love is sincere affection toward God; and includes all things in which he is interested: His word, his people, his service. It is not merely "in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth." 1 John iii: 18. To such is the promise of the kingdom. Promise is not possession, but awakens hope of possession. When the proper "time" comes for the "saints" to "possess the kingdom" (Dan. vii: 22), they will no longer "wait" and "suffer" for it (Mark xv: 43; 2. Thes. i: 5), for the promise will then be fulfilled.

At Lystra, Iconium, and Antioch Paul and Barnabas "were confirming the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God." Acts xiv: 21, 22. The persons whom these men were "confirming and exhorting" were "disciples." They were then and there "in the faith," and hence the propriety of being "exhorted" to "continue in the faith." They had become such disciples by hearing "the gospel" preached. v. 7. This they "believed." v. 1. But they were not as yet in "the kingdom of God:" they "must" still "enter into" it. And not only they, but also Paul and Barnabas had not yet entered into the kingdom, for they said, "we must enter." The manner of entering is indicated by the qualifying phrase, "Through much tribulation." As disciples they no doubt had a desire to enter into the kingdom, but the way into it would lead "through much tribulation." So disciples would have to pass "through" that "tribulation" in order to "enter into the kingdom." This tribulation "ariseth because of the word." Matth. xiii: 20, 21. The apostles and early proclaimers of the gospel did not leave the people without warning as to what they might expect on account of their acceptance of the gospel, "that no man should be moved by these afflictions. For yourselves know that we were appointed thereunto. For verily when we were with you we told you before that we should suffer tribulation; even as it came to pass, and ye know." 1. Thess. 3. 3. 4. They were exhorted to be "patient in tribulation." Rom. 12: 12. And Paul was even "exceeding joyful in all our tribulation." 2. Cor. 7: 4: He rejoiced "in hope of the glory of God. Any not only so, but we glory in tribulations also." Why? "Knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience experience; and experience hope: and hope maketh not ashamed." Rom. 5: 2-5. He also said, "For ye have need of patience, that after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise." Heb. x: 36. This promise is "the kingdom" (Jas. ii: 5), "the crown of life" (Jas. i: 12), "eternal life" (Titus i: 2; 1. John ii: 25); and before the promise can be received, "patience" must be exercised. "Tribulation worketh (such) patience." Patience is so necessary in "doing the will of God." And it is only "after ye have done the will of God ye shall recieve the promise." This pertains to all the saints in this entire dispensation, from the days of the apostles until the Lord shall come with the clouds of heaven in power and great glory.

"Persecutions and tribulations" that are patiently "endured" are a manifest token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which ye also suffer." 2. Thess i: 4,5. It is not said that "ye have been counted worthy of the kingdom," as if they had already entered into it; but "that ye may be counted worthy of it." The "suffering" is necessary to being "counted worthy," and this is essential to an entrance into the kingdom. The time of this suffering is "this present time." Rom. viii: 17. The "glory" has not yet been but "shall be revealed in us." This will be at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ from heaven, "when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe in that day." 2. Thess. i: 10.

But our attitude in "this present time" is not to be one merely of negative goodness and passive endurance, but there are to be found in us positive traits of character. We are to present ourselves to God as a consecrated and sanctified individuality. Peter was Peter after his conversion, with all the fire and impetuosity of his nature; but it was devoted to the service of his Master. Paul was the same man after his conversion that he had been before, but he consecrated his powerful personality to the Lord Jesus, and his efforts were directed in new channels. We are admonished to add to our faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, and charity. 2. Pet. i: 5-11. These are more than negative qualities: they are positive, and assert themselves wherever found. They do not simply endure, suffer; they do. They make their possessors fruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. v. 8. "If ye DO these things." They make their possessors Christ-like. They visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and keep self unspotted from the world. Jas. i: 27. Righteousness must be learned. Cease to do evil! Learn to to well," Isa. i. 16, 17. To "do well" must indeed be so acquired by "learning" the lessons of righteousness. God has instituted the gospel discipline for the perfecting of the saints, that when "the time comes," they may be ready to enter upon possession of the saints, that when "the time comes," they may be ready to enter upon possession of the promised kingdom. Dan. vii. 22. This they will not enter one by one as they die, but when "our gathering together unto him" shall take place (2. Thess. ii: 1) "at his appearing and kingdom." 2 Tim. iv: 1. May we be "found of him in peace, without spot and blameless." 2. Pet. iii: 14.

"The Sceptre Shall Not Depart From Judah."

GEN. XLIX. 10.

In looking over Bush's notes on Genesis, I find some very interesting comments on this much disputed [illegible] sage. As all who [illegible] ble study will be glad to have the new light thus given I transcribe them.

Hebrew, lo yasur shebet. Greek, A prince shall not fail from Judah, nor a captain out of his loins, until the things come that are laid up for him. Chaldee, One having principality shall not be taken from the house of Judah, nor a scribe from his children's children till the time when King Messiah shall come. Syriac, The sceptre shall not fail from Judah, nor an expounder from between his feet. Sam, The sceptre shall not be taken away from Judah, nor a leader from his banners until the Pacific shall come. Arabic, The rod shall not pass away from Judah, nor a law-giver from under his rule, until he come whose he is.

The Hebrew word for sceptre shebet is used with such latitude by the sacred writers, as to render its import here somewhat doubtful, though it will be perceived that the ancient versions, as now cited are very unanimous in affixing to it the sense of authority, jurisdiction, rule. It signifies primarily a rod or staff. Thus Ex. xxi. 20, If a man smite his servant with a rod. Prov. xxiii. 13, If thou beatest him (thy son) with the rod, he shall not die. Isa. xxviii. 27, But the fitches are beaten out with a staff and the cummin with a rod. In Lev. xxvii. 32, Whatsoever passeth under the rod—it is spoken of the long rod or staff which the herdman or shepherd carried in his hand, for the purpose of keeping his flock in order, and when covered with paint, for marking every tenth. As some kind of a rod or wand was anciently borne by magistrates as a badge of authority, the word at length by a usual figure of speech, came to be employed as indicative of official power or authority. Thus Amos i. 5, I will cut off him that holdeth the sceptre from the house of Edom, i. e. him that exercises jurisdiction; verse 8, And him that holdeth the sceptre from Ashkelon. Psa. xlv. 6, The sceptre of thy kingdom is a right sceptre. Hence by a natural transition, it was applied to the officers themselves, who were distinguished by this mark of distinction. Thus 1 Chron. xvii. 6, Spake I a word to any of the judges of Israel, saying, etc. This is rendered in the parallel passage, 2 Sam. vii. 7, Spake I a word with any of the tribes of Israel, saying, etc. (shibte yisrael).

This leads us to notice a third import of the term, more usual perhaps than any other, viz. that of tribe, usually rendered in the Greek, sceptre or tribe. Thus Num xviii. 2, Thy brethren also of the tribe, Matteh of Levi of the tribe of thy father. Ex xxiv. 4, And Moses builded an altar under the hill and twelve pillars according to the twelve tribes of Israel. Judges xx. 12, And the tribes of Israel sent men through all the tribe of Benjamin. The grounds of this application of the term are perhaps to be traced to the circumstances mentioned. Num. xvii. 2, 3, etc., Speak unto the children of Israel, and take of every one of them a rod, according to the house of their fathers, of all the princes according to the house of their fathers twelve rods, write thou every man's name upon his rod. These rods corresponding in number with the number of the tribes were laid up by Moses in the tabernacle, when it was discovered in the morning that Aaron's rod had budded. From this incident it is not unlikely that the 'tribes' were called from the Hebrew word for 'rods.' And this we consider on the whole the leading though not the exclusive sense of the term in the passage before us, which we take to be equivalent to tribeship, implying that the tribe, as a tribe, should continue, and continue in [illegible] of the vested tribal [illegible] till the coming of the Messiah. However the other ten tribes might be scattered by conquest or captivity. In this sense every tribe had a sceptre, and this promise to Judah that the sceptre should not depart, amounts to a declaration that the sceptres of the other tribes should depart. All the other tribes were to have a sceptre as well as Judah, but Judah's sceptre should continue longer with him than his brother's sceptres should with them. Accordingly we learn from history that Judah never lost his tribe, the greatest care having been exercised to preserve distinct this tribe and its families. Thus in the days of Saul the men of Judah were numbered apart. 1 Sam. xi. 8. The same was true in the days of David. 2 Sam. xxiv. 9. Prophets also were employed to record the genealogies of this tribe under the kings, 2 Chron. xii. 15 and xiii. 22 and the same seems to have been exercised during the captivity in Babylon, for [illegible] there was difficulty in making [illegible] genealogies of some of the [illegible] to this. Ex. ii. 62; Neh. vii. 64. And while in fact a large portion of the other tribes never returned to the land of their fathers, Judah with Benjamin its accessory, returned with its integrity unbroken and so remained until the birth of Christ, the whole nation, as well as the land itself receiving its denomination from Judah, the one being called 'Jews,' the other 'Judea.' Thus it was that the sceptre or the tribal constitution did not depart from Judah before the predicted era. It is abundantly evident, however, that both the sceptre, and what is called the lawgiver are long since lost in Judah, that the tribe of Judah has lost its genealogies. Either then the word of promise to Judah has failed forever more, or Shiloh is come and it is vain to look for another Messiah.

THE OVERCOMER. 1 JOHN v. 5.

Who is he that overcometh the world, or gaineth the victory?

When Jesus was preaching a certain ruler came unto him and saith, Good Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life? Jesus said unto him, Thou knowest the commandments? and he answered, All these have I kept from my youth up.

He had kept all the commandments, was he not an overcomer? No; for when Jesus told him to give up all earthly possessions and follow him, he could not and he went away sorrowful for he was very rich. He had kept all the commandments, yet his love of wealth was greater than his love of eternal life. He that forsaketh all for the kingdom of God, and hath faith in Jesus, shall gain eternal life. Seek not after things of this life; but lay up for yourself treasures in heaven; for where your treasures are, there will your heart be. This illustration of the young ruler shows that keeping the commandments without faith in the gospel of Jesus, and a perfect submission to do his will, even if it is the giving up of riches and friends cannot gain for us eternal life. The ruler could not be a follower of the lowly Jesus for he was very rich, and to be a follower of Jesus is to be an overcomer, for it means perfect submission to his will, perfect faith in his words. Jesus overcame the world by perfect submission to the will of his Father. A faith that works by love. In the world ye shall have tribulations; but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world. Yes; the riches and honors of the world had no attractions for Jesus. He came to do the will of the Father; but he overcame and is now set down on the right hand of God, and to the victor he promises that if they suffer with him they shall also rule with him, and this is the victory that overcometh the world. Even our faith in revelation, we have the fulfillment of his promise. To him that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations. To him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and I will write upon him my new name, and to him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me upon my throne. Will we strive to be an overcomer? Blessed is the man that endureth temptation, that gaineth the victory; for when he is tried he shall gain, or receive the crown of life, which the Lord has promised to them that love him. Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?

"Rise to Higher Things."

A great mass of people spurn Christianity simply because they prefer earthly things. Till the mind of man is converted and changed, he is much more affected by earthly glories than by the glories of God; he stands much more in awe of those immediate agencies that strike his senses, than of the Divine Omnipotence; he is much more actuated and excited by the beauties of creation, than he is attracted and excited by the beauties of redemption. Till new senses and feelings are produced in his heart by the influence of the spirit, he continually prefers carnal to spiritual; to attain to wealth is of much greater consequence in the average man's estimation than to obtain grace; to luxuriate in poetry, and in literature, in pleasure, passion and appetite, affords him much greater delight than to luxuriate in the fields of wisdom, religion and happiness. To escape some temporal catastrophe, some affliction, some impending ruin of a temporal nature, is of infinitely greater account in his estimation than to escape the wrath of [illegible] of men is of much more importance in his consideration than to rank among the friends of God, the brotherhood of saints, and to possess the title to everlasting glory. O man! O woman! leave this earth, and "rise to higher things." And youth! you will have in these last days of time great temptations to push aside the truths of the Bible, and to give ear to the philosophy of the age. It will teach you, It may be, trade, politics, law, the maxims of government; it can dwell upon these, but it can go no further. Christianity rises to the sublime, it teaches man the knowledge of God, of Christ, of eternal life, and of our salvation. One text of the Word of God, "He so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life," is worth all that man ever thought, that man ever taught, or that man ever can teach, to the restitution of all things.

Obituary.

The Church of God at Salem, O., lament the sudden death on Monday Nov. 30, at 1 P. M. of Sister Mary E. Knowles, age 66 years, known to the readers of THE RESTITUTION as M. Elizabeth Knowles. Her death was caused by hemorrhage. Exactly four weeks before one occurred from which she recovered, and on Sunday Nov. 29 seemed almost well, but from the second one she died in about three minutes. She leaves a husband and grown up children, three sons, three daughters, three brothers and one sister and other relatives; two of the daughters, the one sister and one brother are faithful and loved members of the church. Our sister was for 35 years a faithful believer of the gospel of the kingdom of God. A true wife, an affectionate mother, and kind neighbor, some of them bore witness to this at the home, and many more by the large gathering, from far and near, at the funeral. The services were conducted by the writer. We sorrow not as others who have no hope because we know, like Martha, that she will rise again in the resurrection at the last day. The Word of God, the hope of the gospel was the stay, the comfort, the cheer of our much beloved sister. She believed with Malachi that "They that feared the Lord spake often one to another, and the Lord hearkened and heard," etc. This she proved by her words and works, for she would often—when no other means of travel—walk in from the country, three miles, to meet with those of like precious faith, the church in Salem, to partake at the Lord's table in remembrance of him who died for her, and rose again, and who said, "Because I live ye shall live also." The entire family have sustained a great loss in the death of our sister, and they have our full sympathy, especially her daughter Ella, our sister in the Lord, who devoted her life to her mother. We laid her in Grand View cemetery with full hope that when the Lord descends from heaven with a shout she will hear and come forth to life eternal in the kingdom of God. Meantime we shall meet, but we shall miss her.

WANTED—FAITHFUL PERSON TO TRAVEL for well established house in a few counties, calling on retail merchants and agents. Local territory. Salary $20.00 per week with expenses additional, all payable in cash each week. Money for expenses advanced. Position permanent. Business successful and rushing. Standard House, 330 Dearborn St., Chicago—12.

As we go to press today there are on our list just 294 whose time is out now, and their renewals due. Some of these are owing from 1 to 5 years, and others only for the current year. If all would pay in what they should we would have in hand quite $591.00.

Now Brothers and Sisters, for some weeks past we have tried to explain our need, and urge action on your part. We are not complaining of the noble ones who always keep their subscription up and ahead, and wish to thank all such. We wish to thank also every one who is doing his very best to send as soon as he can. We wish to urge you to more earnest effort. If there are any who are careless and neglectful we wish to ask you kindly to rouse up and send us what is right.

If you could know and realize our situation we feel certain you would respond at once. It is a conviction with us that there is not a Brother or Sis[illegible] us but [illegible] the [illegible] carry the whole load. We are compelled to struggle on with the burden. Are you not also in duty bound to do your part? Please think of this very seriously, as before your God, and then act.

Another thing that makes this year hard for us is that our Helping Fund is now $99.50 below what it has been other years, and as we have kept the poor ones on our list so far we do not like the idea of cutting them off. Surely there are enough members of the Church of God in this land who have been blessed with abundance, who can spare this amount so that we shall not have to drop the name of a single worthy poor Brother or Sister.

Brethren, these are the plain figures. Will you give attention to these matters? We hope you will without more delay.

Excel the Alps and Rhine.

Travelers abroad and in America aver that the changing foliage of the Alps or along the Rhine does not compare with that of the Alleghenies. Those famous attractions of scenic America along the route of the Pennsylvania Lines are vast paintings by nature. On the ascent from the west, Johnstown, risen from the flood of 1889, is typically America. In Europe it would be ruins. Beyond Johnstown the train follows the Conemaugh to scenic splendor around the Pack Saddle; then crossing the summit of the Alleghenies at Cresson 2400 feet above the sea, the traveler looks from the brink upon the wild Allegrippus; then around the far-famed Horse Shoe Curve on the brink of another mighty chasm, through Altoona, the mountain workshop of the Pennsylvania railroad; along the banks of the Juniata, and over the Susquehanna on the greatest stone bridge in the world to Harrisburgh, Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia, New York, passing through thriving towns and a farming section famous for well tilled land.

Report of Lahey.

Our work in South Bend closed on Sunday evening, Nov. 29th. The Elder came here the 20th, I remaining in Plymouth, joining him in this work the following Monday. We gave the Plymouth brethren 18 days, including the four days of Conference. Six were baptized into the Anointed One, as the result of these meetings.

It was a great pleasure to us to work with these brethren once more. We found them the same earnest band of workers that we used to meet, but missing the many faces that have gone from there, some have laid down their burdens and are sleeping in Jesus. Many have moved to different parts of the country, and the work falls heavily on the remaining few; but we feel sure that those who have lately made the good confession will be a help to the Church and Sunday School, and pray God that they may be true and faithful until Jesus comes.

We leave the report of the South Bend work for Sister Railsback to give. We start for home tomorrow to work in Mich[illegible]

B. W. & M. A. Woodward.

The meeting held at South Bend by Brother and Sister Woodward was enjoyed very much by all. The attendance and interest was good throughout the entire meeting. Sister Woodward left us on Saturday to visit the Warren Co., Church; but the interest here did not lessen. We had the pleasure of welcoming one brother into the church on Sunday night, Brother A. F. Arnold was baptized Sunday afternoon. Others were interested and we trust the seed sown will in time bring forth other fruit.

On her return Sister Woodward reports that the church in Warren Co., is in good working order. The Bereans there are working nicely, each one taking his or her part readily and working with a will. A Sunday School has also been organized there.

We bid them God speed in this noble work.

Obituary.

Andrew S. Frederick was born Dec. 15, 1858, in Wayne Co., Ohio. When a year and a half of age his parents moved to Carroll Co., Ill., and this vicinity has been his home ever since.

Dec. 25, 1873, he was united in marriage to Mary E. Klitze. To them were born eleven children, ten of whom are now living—eight girls and two boys.

In 1878 he became a believer in the Abrahamic Faith and for over thirty years he has endeavored to follow the teachings of our Savior. He fell asleep Nov. 28th, 1903, strong in the hope of awakening in the morning of the resurrection with all others who love his appearing.

The writer read a chapter—1 Cor. xv.—which was the selection of Bro. Frederick, chosen before his death. We found additional words of comfort in the language of Paul recorded in 1 Thess. iv. and from Rev. i. 7.

May God sustain the family in their sad bereavement.

Dear Restitution:

To the household of faith, believers in the gospel of the kingdom of God. Many of you know, through The Restitution, that on Sept. 15, I was elected State evangelist by the Ohio Conference held at Salem, O. I have been notified to begin a series of meetings lasting three weeks, one week at Tippecanoe City, Miami Co., and one week each at two other points in that county, beginning Saturday Nov. 21. I expect to leave home Friday, Nov. 13 for Mt. Vernon, at Bro. Robison's to stay over Sunday, Nov. 15, on the way to Tippecanoe city. My services are at the command of any in Ohio or elsewhere, to preach the simple truth to salvation. Brethren or sisters, if I can be of any use in your neighborhood let me know soon. A church building, a hall or a vacant store, wherever there is ordinary comfort, with or without seats, anywhere that the public can be reached will do. Address, 366 W. Main St., Salem, O.

Your brother waiting for Jesus.

Evangelist Notice.

In so much as the Conference of the Church of God of Central Washington has seen fit to elect us as evangelists for the ensuing Conference year, we wish to state that we stand ready to answer the call to duty. Any one desiring work done in our line will please drop us a line at our address at Wenatchee, Wash. Yours for the work.

N. D. & Myrtle Titchenal.

To the Called Out Ones.

I wish to say to the Household of Faith scattered throughout the Southern States, that I have now started on my Southern trip which I have had in mind for some time. I am now laboring in Southern Illinois, and will work south from that point. Many have responded, but there may still be others who would like to engage my services. If so, they can do so by addressing me at my Chicago home. The call is open to all Southern States.

There is great need of energy at this time, the time is so very short, when this Gentile age must cease. Are we all prepared? Address W. H. Wilson, 420 N. Willow Ave., Austin Station, Chicago, Ill.

To the brethren in Iowa:

Any desiring evangelistic work in their locality will please make application to the Conference board, so that the necessary arrangements can be made. Address Ft. Dodge, Ia.

O. J. Allard, Pres.

To the brethren of Kansas and Missouri:

I have left Ransom, Kan., and until further notice I will receive letters at Canton, Kan. My meeting at Prairie Point in north central Kansas was well attended, the house being full every night, with good attention. While there were no additions, yet the interest was so good that we have hopes that the seed sown may yet bring good results. We will visit that point again in December. Sister Coons of Clay Center assisted me very materially with her singing and the organ. In January we expect to be in northeast Kansas, and in February in Missouri. Let all who desire to correspond with me address me at Canton, Kan. for the present.

A. W. Darby.

To the Brethren in Iowa.

Any locality desiring a meeting any time during the next year, please make application to the Conference Board, at once, stating time, desiring meeting. Address me at Sac City, Iowa.

Eva Stearns, Sec'y.

To brethren in Florida.

We are now living temporarily at Tampa, Florida. If there are any brethren living near I would like to form your acquaintance, and if practical to hold meetings, and ask you to write to me, addressing Box 254 Tampa, Florida.

Yours in the gospel work and hope.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Poetry.

Submission.

My God, my Father, while I stray
Far from my home on life's rough way,
O teach me from my heart to say,
Thy will be done.

Though dark my path, and sad my lot,
Let me be still and murmur not,
And breathe the prayer divinely taught,
Thy will be done.

What though in lonely grief I sigh
For friends beloved, that never die
Shall cross the flood, and weep with I,
Thy will be done.

Renew my will from day to day,
Blend it with thine, and take away
All that now makes it hard to say,
Thy will be done.

Let but my fainting heart be blest
With thy sweet Spirit for its guest,
My God, to thee I leave the rest;
Thy will be done.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

I am now at the time of the writing of this paper, in the pine woods, and am now preaching in what is called "the Pine Woods school house," at Bush, Missouri. This reminds me of the pine woods of Louisiana, where I wrote "Pine Woods Bible Class, some years ago.

I thought that I would like once more to call a special session of my old class to investigate the symbolism of the Image and the Beasts of Daniel.

Teacher. It is indeed a pleasure to again meet with my fellow students to engage in the study of these symbols.

I will ask Sister Arlon to tell us the name of a king who once had a dream which sorely troubled him, because he had forgotten his dream?

Arlon. Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon. Daniel ii. 1-6.

Q. To whom did the king seek to find out what he dreamed, and the meaning thereof?

A. The magicians, astrologers, the sorcerers, etc. Dan. ii. 1-5.

Q. Why did he call them?

A. Because by their various professions they claimed power to reveal secret things.

Q. Did they succeed?

A. No. They proved to be impostors. Dan. ii. 9-11.

Q. What then did the king do?

A. Ordered them put to death. Dan. ii. 12.

Q. Who saved them?

A. Daniel. Dan. ii. 15-18.

Q. Where did Daniel get his wisdom from?

A. God. Dan. ii. 19-23.

Q. What did Daniel reveal to him as his dream?

A. That he saw a great image, whose head was of gold, his breast and arms of silver, his belly of brass, his legs of iron, his feet part of iron, and part of clay. Dan. ii. 31-35.

Q. What did the dream mean?

A. He said that it meant that the different parts of the image represented by the several metals, meant that four universal empires should arise in the earth.

Teacher. I will ask Carrie to describe the make up of the feet of the image?

Carrie. It describes the broken up condition of the fourth empire. Daniel ii. 41-43.

Q. What will follow the broken condition represented by the feet?

A. "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." Dan. ii. 44.

Q. Is it a fact that all the kingdoms represented by the image have appeared?

A. They all have become historic facts, and the next change now due is God's kingdom.

Teacher. Let us examine the matter carefully, and see whether they have become historic facts, or not. I will ask Lud to show what power the head of gold represents?

Lud. It represents Babylon. Dan. ii. 37, 38. It has now become an unquestioned historic fact.

Q. How about the second part of the image?

A. The second part, the breast and arms were of silver (Dan. ii. 32) are represented by the allied forces of the Medes and Persians. Dan. ii. 28 It is now a well established historic fact that those allied forces conquered Babylon.

Q. Did the Medes and Perrians rule this conquered kingdom jointly?

A. [illegible] kingdom first; when he was about sixty-two years old, (Dan. v. 31) and reigned only two years, when he died. It is also an historic fact that Cyrus, king of Persia succeeded Darius and his dynasty held possession of the kingdom two hundred and fo ir years and nine months.

Q. Daniel dreamed about some beasts also. What about them?

A. See Dan. vii. 3-7:—"And four great beasts came up from the sea, diverse one from another. The first was like a lion, and had eagle's wings: I beheld till the wings thereof were plucked, and it was lifted up from the earth, and made stand upon the feet as a man, and a man's heart was given to it. And behold another beast, a second, like to a bear, and it raised up itself on one side, and it had three ribs in the mouth of it between the teeth of it; and they said thus unto it, Arise, devour much flesh. After this I beheld, and lo another, like a leopard, which had upon the back of it four wings of a fowl; the beast had also four heads; and dominion was given to it. After this I saw in the night visions, and behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth; it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it; and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it; and it had ten horns."

Q. What did the beasts signify?

A. See Dan. vii. 17, 18, for an answer. "These great beasts which are four, are four kings (or kingdoms) which shall arise out of the earth. But the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even forever and ever." They represent the same kingdoms which are represented by the several metals in the image.

Q. Why are two sets of symbols given to represent the same thing?

A. The beasts represent details in the history of the four kingdoms, not seen in the image. As for instance, we are now considering the second (silver) part of the image, we have seen that two nations (Medes and Persians) conquered Babylon, and that Darius the Median, took the kingdom first; now the bear represents the Medes and Persians, one side of the bear represents the Medes, and the other side the Persians, and but one side at a time came into power. See Dan. vii. 5: "It, the bear, raised itself up on one side," representing that the Median side of the bear was raised into power first.

Q. Does any other beast show the same thing?

A. Yes. See Dan. viii. 3: "There stood before the river a ram which had two horns * * * but one was higher than the other, and the higher came up last."

Q. Please tell us what the two horned ram means?

A. I will let the Bible answer. See Dan. viii. 20: "The ram which thou sawest having two horns are the kings of Media and Persia." Now this Media-Persian ram has two horns (powers) the one horn represents the Medes, and the other horn the Persians, and the bear has two sides, one is the Median side, and the other side is the Persian, and as we have already shown the Median side was first lifted up into power symbolized by the bear being "raised up on one side," (Dan. vii. 5) and so also the ram with two horns tells the same story. It had two horns (Dan. viii. 3) "one was higher than the other, and the higher came up last."

Q. Which power was the short horn?

A. We must notice first that "the higher one came up last," (Dan. viii. 3) therefore the short horn must of necessity come up first. The length of these horns represents the length of time each of these two powers (Medes and Persians) held the government. History shows that Darius the Median (short horn) only reigned two years when he died. After which, Cyrus the Persian (the higher horn) succeeded him, and his dynasty held the power two hundred and four years and nine months." The higher or longer—Persia, came up last. D. v. viii. 3.

Teacher. I will ask Albert to tell us something about the third (or brass) kingdom?

Albert. The brass kingdom we are told should succeed the silver kingdom. See Dan. ii. 39: After thee (the silver) shall arise another kingdom, inferior to thee (brass is inferior to silver) a third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth." History and the Bible show that the "brazen coated Greeks," attacked the "bear," which is further represented by an "he goat," Dan. viii. 5, and this "he goat," attacked the Media-Persian two horned ram, Dan. viii. 6, and broke the two horns off of the ram, Dan. viii. 6, 7, which means that the (Grecian) he goat conquered the (Media-Persian) two horned ram.

Teacher. Can you prove from the Bible that the "he goat" which broke the two horns of the Media-Persian "ram," is Greece?

Albert. Yes. See Dan. viii. 21: "And the rough goat is the king of Grecia: and the great horn is the first king."

Q. Now, who is this "first king?"

A. "The great horn that is between his eyes is (Alexander) the first king." Dan. viii. 21.

Q. What will happen when this "first king" shall die, or is "broken?"

A. See Dan. viii. 22: "Now that being broken, whereas four stood up for it, four kingdoms shall stand up out of the nation, (of Greece) but not in his power." This means that after the "first king's" death, "Grecia" would be divided into four kingdoms.

The above is also shown in Dan. xi. 3, 4: "He (king of Persia) shall stir up against all the realm of Grecia. And a mighty king (Alexander) shall stand up, that shall rule with great dominion, and do according to his will. And when he shall stand up his kingdom (Grecia) shall be broken, and shall be divided (into four kingdoms) towards the four winds of heaven."

Speaking of the leopard, the third beast representing Grecia, it is said, Dan. vii 6, "After this I beheld, and lo, another, like a leopard, which had upon the back of it four wings of a fowl, (four divisions of the empire) the beast had also four heads; (kings) and dominion was given to it." The divisions of Alexander's Grecian kingdom is now an historical fact. They were known as Greece, Thrace, Egypt and Persia.

These in turn were overrun by the iron kingdom of Rome. Then Rome in turn was divided into Eastern and Western Rome, answering to the two legs of the image.

Teacher. I will ask Lucy to give some thought about the feet of the image.

Lucy. The feet represent the broken up condition of the iron Roman Empire, being a clay and iron mixture.

Q. Does the clay and iron mixture represent the strength of iron alone?

A. No. It represents weakness. See Dan. ii. 42: "And as the toes of the feet were part of iron and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong, and partly broken."

Q. What is the clay?

A. That is indicated in verse 43. "And whereas thou sawest iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men, but they shall not cleave one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay."

Q. Where is the clay indicated in this verse?

A. It is found in the phrase: "Seed of men." Clay is a symbol of man. Man is as clay in the hands of the potter. Iron here symbolizes absolute monarchy. The mingling of "clay"—the "Seed of men," in iron or absolute monarchy indicates that the iron monarchies of old Rome have become constitutional governments, in which "the seed of men," or the people have a part.

Q. Can you name any government on the territory of old iron Rome in which the "clay," or "seed of men," are now mingled with the iron?

A. Yes. England is a sample. In the days of Henry VIII. or bloody Queen Mary, despotic iron held sway. It is now no longer the case. "The seed of [illegible] people have their voice in the government in the House of Commons. The House of Lords is iron. There is no more affinity between the House of Lords, and the House of Commons, or the common people, and the royal blooded Lords, than there is an affinity between iron and clay.

Teacher. I will ask George to tell us what is the next event due when we reach the iron and clay mixture in the feet of the image?

George. See Dan. ii. 44: "In the days of these kings (the iron and clay mixture) shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever."

We have now reached the iron and clay mixture, and the kingdom of God is the next event now due.

Yours in expectation.

W. H. WILSON.

"In Whom Ye Trusted." Eph. i: 13.

In this letter is expressed the intense affection of Paul for those belonging to Christ. He himself had announced to the Ephesians "the word of the truth, the gospel of their salvation," of which he wrote. He had received of the Lord Jesus a ministry, "to testify the gospel of the grace of God," and accordingly went among them "preaching the kingdom of God. In taking his leave of the elders of this church he commended them "to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among them which are sanctified." Acts xx: 24, 25, 32. In this "word" he set forth the Anointed Jesus, Acts xix: 4, in his relation to "the kingdom of God." And "when they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus." v. 5. This "word of the truth" which they heard, inspired confidence—"trust"—in them toward the Anointed. Confiding trust arises from a sense of trustworthiness. This trust resulted from the fact that they heard "the word of truth." This "word" told them "the truth" about their own mortal condition, and their need of the salvation which it set forth. It told them the truth about the Anointed Jesus as "the Author of eternal salvation to all them that obey him," Heb. v: 9; as the one who would save them from their sins, Matth. i: 21; the truth as to the privileges he would bestow on those who were united to him in the bond of the new covenant, Matth. xxvi: 28; Eph. ii: 19-22; Gal. iii: 16, 27-29; Rom. viii: 17; the truth about the resurrection from the dead of the Anointed one, Acts ii: 32; "now no more to return to corruption" Acts xiii: 34 37; that "death hath no more dominion over him," Rom. vi: 9; that he is "the firstborn from the dead." Col. i: 18; "the firstborn among many brethren," Rom. viii: 29, and "afterward at his coming" they that are "Christ's," Gal. iii: 29, shall be "raised incorruptible," and the living "changed" into a likeness of the glorious body of the Anointed. 1. Cor. xv: 52; Phil. iii: 20. It told them the truth that in this condition they could "inherit the kingdom of God," 1. Cor. xv: 50, having suffered in behalf of it before. 2. Thess. i: 5. Concerning all these things "the gospel of their salvation" told them "the truth." When they heard this truth they believed it. Such belief inspired confidence in the Anointed, so that it could be said, "In whom ye trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation." This confidence led them to be "baptized in, (Gr. eis, into) the name of the Lord Jesus." Acts xix: 5. By being baptized into Christ they put on Christ, in this way becoming Christ's own. "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Gal. iii: 27, 29. Whatever are the items of "the promise" made to Abraham and Christ, iii: 16, those who are "Christ's" are "heirs according to that promise," Heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ. Rom. viii: 17. If everlasting possession of the land of Canaan; if an everlasting kingdom; if a throne to all generations; if the privilege of bringing blessings to all nations, has been promised to Abraham and his seed, they that are "Christ's" will share in these promises. This promise could not but awaken a sincere affection toward the Anointed, and this affection would be shown by good works "which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them." Eph. ii. 10. "The gospel of the grace of God" which Paul had "testified" so earnestly among them, Acts xx: 24, exercised its corrective discipline upon them, as in Titus ii: 11, 12, so that they would "walk worthy of the vocation wherewith they were called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." Eph. iv: 1-3. After they believed they were also sealed with that holy Spirit of promise, which is the earnest (or pledge) of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession unto the praise of his glory." c. i: 13. As they were "filled with the Spirit," they would also engage in "speaking in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in their heart to the Lord, giving thanks always for all things unto God and the father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ." c. iv: 18 20. Thus "sanctified and cleansed with the washing of water by the word," Christ will present the Church to himself, "a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing:" 26, 27. In this "presentation" every member of the church will participate at "our gathering together unto him," 2. Thess. ii: 1, in "the general assembly and church of the first born," Heb. xii. 23. Thus we see that "the word of truth, the gospel of our salvation," is not an abstraction, but a living and active force which effectively worketh in them that believe. 1. Thess. ii: 13. It is God's "power." Rom. i: 16.

How is it with us today? We have heard the same word of truth which was preached to the brethren at Ephesus. Do we "trust Christ" since we heard it? Do we live in the attitude manifested by Paul when he wrote, "I am not ashamed: for I know whom I have believed (Marg. Trusted), and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." 2. Tim. i: 12. How firm his confidence, how serene his attitude. No doubtful uncertainty, no dark misgivings with him. "I will trust, and not be afraid: for the Lord Jehovah is my strength and my song; he also is become my salvation." Isa. xii: 2.

Wisdom of Seirach.

CHAPTER 28.

1. The one who seeketh requital from the Lord will find requital, and he who persists in keeping his sins will keep them sure.

2. Remit wrong-doing unto thy neighbor, and then, when thou hast besought, thy sins will be loosed.

3. Shall a man watch to hold wrath against a man, and seek healing from the Lord?

4. If he hath no mercy for a man like to him, shall he also beseech for his own sins?

5. If he who is flesh watcheth to maintain fury, who will consider his sins with favor?

7. Remember the last experiences, corruption and death, and cease hating, and abide in commandments.

7. Remember commandments and a covenant of the Most High, and be not furious toward thy neighbor, and overlook a sin of ignorance.

8. Refrain from fighting and thou wilt diminish sins; for a passionate man will flame out with fighting.

9. And an obdurate sinner will disquiet friends, and put slander between those who are at peace.

10. As is the kindling for a fire even so will it have flamed out; as is his strength will a man's passion be, and according to his riches will he exalt his wrath, and according to the persistence of the fight will it have flamed out.

11. Strife that hasteneth flameth out fire, and fighting that hasteneth sheddeth blood.

12. If thou blow a spark it will flame out, and if thou spit upon it, it will have been quenched, and both go their way out of thy mouth.

13. A whisperer and a double-tongued person are accursed; for they have destroyed many who were making peace.

14. A third tongue has caused many to slip, and hath overturned the households of great ones.

15. A third tongue hath cast out noble wives and deprived them of their pains-taking labors.

16. The one who heedeth it shall not find rest, nor pitch his tent in the midst of quietude.

17. The blow of a scourge causeth welts, but the blow of a tongue crusheth bones.

18. Many have fallen with the mouth of a sword, and they are not as many as those who have fallen because of a tongue.

19. Blessed-happy he who hath been shielded from it, who hath not gone through in its passion, who hath not dragged its yoke and been bound with its bonds.

20. For its yoke is an iron yoke and its bonds copper bonds.

21. Its death a bad death and its grave (hadees) an advantageous one.

22. It shall not control the truly-reverent and they will be burned with its flame.

23. Those who forsake the Lord will fall into it, and in them it will flame out and shall not be quenched. It will be sent out upon them like a lion and like a leopard will it ravish them.

24. See to it; hedge in thy acquisition with akanthai; tie up thy silver and thy gold.

25. And make a balance and a weight for thy words; (i. e. weigh them) and make a door and a bar for thy mouth.

26. Take heed lest somehow thou be destroyed by it lest thou fall down before it as it lieth in wait.

COMMENT.

In the whole range of the inspired Word I do not find the rationale of "requital," "back-biting and whispering" and the "scourge of the tongue" more clearly and concisely stated. There is nothing more emphatically imposed upon the Christian convert as "a katachumin" in the gospels than leaving requital with the Lord—"requital" translated however "revenge," as in "Revenge not yourselves, etc." "Judge not that ye be not judged." "Judge nothing before the appointed time." And there is nothing more difficult to do for the natural man or as we are naturally constituted. This however is an important part of "the patient endurance of the saints." Old Seirach bear in mind as a saint is speaking here from the standpoint of experience, himself in an age of violent persecution as well as a polemic and moral philosopher in all that he says of these three great topics, and the ear-mark of his teaching is very manifest in the later reasoning of Paul and Jakoob (James) and John and Peter. They were all no doubt close students of this old book. In this day of so much skim-milk talk and babbling theories about the higher life we will all do well to cultivate a ruaisance back to first principles and common sense reasoning of this sort. Read and reflect.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1903 all the papers for December of this year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel and the message is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

REMEMBER the call for Love Feast letters, and let us have a good "meeting" by this means.

THE key that locks up money from God can never unlock the treasuries of his promises. He who stifles benevolent impulses stifles the breath of prayer.

LET a man take the average goodness in the community, and measure his life by it, and it seems all right. But if he takes the law of God and measures his life by that, he finds a great deal of crookedness.

GOD says, "Repent." The sinner says, "I mean to." God says "Believe." The sinner says, "I intend to." God says, "Now is the accepted time." The sinner says, "No, not now." God says, "Today if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts." The sinner answers, "Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season I will call for thee." This is a fatal decision; but thus does God invite, beseech and command,—and thus do men hesitate, and delay, till all is lost.

READER, have you ever noticed that in the petition our Lord offered just before his hour of agony that the unity of the Body was the object of his most ardent desires? Five times in that last prayer he prayed for his disciples that they might be one. Must he not suffer because of the existing state of things? The contentions, divisions, names, and schisms which today afflicts the church, dishonor the Lord, and lie like stumbling-blocks in the path of a groping and misguided world."

DID you ever stop to think that the dollar you handed the preacher paid him for the very hours of time he spent in studying up the discourse which decided the mind of your next door neighbor, and started him toward the kingdom? If you had not given that dollar the preacher could not have accomplished his part of the work. Perhaps, yes, quite likely, the dollar you pay to send this paper to your friend, will be the means of starting him on the road to the saint's abode. If you could be positively assured that it would do so, would you hold back the money? It cannot be definitely guaranteed to you, but this can be assured—YOUR part was done. It is our—mine—your privilege to sow. The increase is in God's hand; but He holds us responsible for our share in the work. Will he count your part well done?

KNOWLEDGE still increases as long ago foretold. Owing to the uncertain supply of camphor chemists have long been trying to make this substance by chemical alteration of some allied natural product. But success has at last crowned their efforts. In the course of some experiments in the synthetic formation of one of the essential oils, a slight odor of camphor was detected. This hint was followed by the most persistent and painstaking care for nearly two years, with the result that camphor is now being made near New York by chemical synthesis. One atom of oxygen makes all the difference between turpentine and camphor. The yield of camphor is from 25 to 30 percent of turpentine used. This is timely, seeing that the Japanese have established a monopoly in Formosa, raising the price here from 48 to 60 a pound.

HASTINGS once said, "There is no accounting for the whims and caprices of appetite. Sheep love grass, bees love honey, donkeys love thistles, and buzzards love offal. Mental appetites are equally varied and unaccountable. Good, wholesome truth has little or no attraction for some people, but they take to a lie as naturally as a jackal does to a carcass. If there be false doctrine, they imbibe it; if there be an absurd theory, they swallow it; if there be an unscriptural system they adopt it; and if they can rake out something that smells fetid and rotten, and that will poison, they are in their element.

WE cannot offer a list of prizes and premiums, but we do present to you a good, clean paper. See from discord and contention which you can give to your friends and neighbors. We ask your co-operation in placing THE RESTITUTION in the home of every one in whom you are interested. If you have a friend who you wish to see interested in the gospel, present that home with the paper this year. Some one there will read it. It may possibly receive some attention, even as much preaching is apparently to no avail just where you want it to do its good work; but it is hardly possible to place THE RESTITUTION in a home every week for a year, and not some good be done thereby. We want to place this paper in the home of every friend you have, and so have made no effort to co-operate with you in this work. Read our offer in this issue, make a list of names, and send to us at once. No more timely Christmas or New Year present can be sent any one than this paper. Try it, and note results.

FOR several years we have devoted some space for a Christmas and New Year "Love Feast." Request come from several to again observe this feature. We are glad to give these letters of cheer and greeting, and ask that all who want a part in this "meeting" send in their letters so we can have them by Dec. 23. Write short and to the point, so that all may have a chance. The day of our Lord's coming hastens on. We are told to not forsake assembling ourselves together, and to be especially careful as the day of his coming approaches. Brothers and Sisters, this is in a sense a "meeting" where the isolated ones can have an equal chance with those more fortunately situated. Let all, young as well as old, take a part, and so get strength for the battles of life, and at the same time give aid and encouragement to others.

"A CHRISTIAN is one who is positive; that is, he is a fruit bearer. A merely moral man is a vine that does not bear fruit; but it bears everything else—good leaves, a good strong stock, a healthy root, everything that is good and nice in it, except the fruit. Yes, a Christian man is positive,—that is he develops graces into positives,—acts out of himself and upon others. A moral man tries to defend himself against evil,—and the matter rests there. He has his own ideas about what are evils to be avoided,—and, something like a well-corked empty bottle, pure within. Pure! What is the use of a bottle that is clean, empty and corked up? Properly speaking a man of that sort is a nobody, a negative. He does not swear, he does not steal, he does not murder, and he does not get drunk—his whole life is a NOT. He is governed by "Thou shalt not;" "Thou shalt not;" "Thou shalt not," —and there is no "Thou shalt" in him. There is so much in our book of discipline to condemn this that it is surprising that the negatively good do not stumble upon some of it."

A Corruptible Crown.

At the Grecian games the prize given to the conqueror was a garland of wild olive, or parsley; but this was valued as one of the grandest distinctions in life. To have his name proclaimed as victor before assembled thousands was an object of ambition with the richest and noblest of the Greeks. Such a person was considered to have conferred an everlasting glory upon his family and his country, and was rewarded by his fellow citizens with distinguished honors. His statue was generally erected on the Altis, or sacred grove of Jove, in Olympia; and on his return home, he entered the city in a triumphant procession, in which his praises were sung, frequently in the loftiest strains of poetry. He also received more substantial rewards. He was generally relieved from payment of taxes, and had a right to the front seat at all public games and spectacles. An Athenian victor in the Olympian games received five hundred drachmæ, and a right to a place at the table of the magistrates in the town hall; and a Spartan conqueror had the privilege of fighting on the field of battle near the king. In contrast with this Paul says we strive for an incorruptible crown. 1 Cor. ix. 25.

Baptism.

The converts on the day of Pentecost were baptized for remission of sins. Acts ii. 38. Paul was baptized "to wash away his sins." Acts xxii. 16. Cornelius the heathen convert was baptized after he had received the Holy Spirit. Acts x. 47. Apollos, who had been baptized with John's baptism, was afterwards baptized in the name of Jesus. Acts xviii. 25; xix. 5. "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ." Gal. iii. 27. "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death....."For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." Rom. vi. 3-5. "Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through [the faith] of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead." Col ii. 12. Peter speaking of the eight souls who were saved at the flood by water, says, "The like figure whereunto baptism doth also now save us." 1 Peter iii. 21.

May we be found with our names written in the Lamb's Book of Life, when the Lord Jesus returns to rule the world in righteousness."

The Triumphant Entry.

It was just before that Passover at which the Lord Jesus was put to death for the redemption of mankind, that what has been termed "The Triumphant Entry" into Jerusalem took place. Jerusalem was filled with those who had come to celebrate the feast, and Jesus with his disciples, drew near to the city. His entry therein is recorded by all four of the evangelists.

There are some points in connection with it which are worthy of special note. The Lord Jesus, we are told, rode upon the colt of an ass. Long before, the prophet Zechariah had sung to the children of Judah, "Rejoice, greatly, O daughter of Jerusalem; behold thy King cometh unto thee; he is just and having salvation; lowly and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass."

It was customary for great men to ride upon asses in those days. Then, as now, the horse was little used in those lands. Balaam rode upon an ass and so did Absalom, the son of David. And David's greater Son rode into the holy city upon the colt of an ass. And many spread their garments in the way. And others cut down branches from the trees and strewed them in the way. We are told by John that they were palm branches. The palm is an emblem of joy, of victory and peace. Truly this casting of palm branches in the pathway of the Lord may be looked upon as prophetic. For the greatest of all joy, is yet in store for the holy city. The greatest of the Lord's victories will be when all nations are made subject to his sway, and when every knee shall bow before him, and every tongue confess that he is Lord and Christ; and the cause for his being styled the Prince of Peace will be fully operative in the age to come.

"And they that went before and they that followed, cried, saying, Hosannah, blessed is he that cometh in the name of Jehovah; blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord, Hosanna in the Highest." The meaning of the word hosanna is "save now," and it is translated in Psalm cxviii. 23, "Save now, I beseech thee, O Lord." Beautiful thoughts are suggested by the palm branches and by the meaning of the word hosannah. Our minds are turned to the seventh chapter of Revelation, where we read, "And after this I beheld, and lo, a great multitude which no man can number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed in white robes, and palms in their hand; and cried with a loud voice saying, "Salvation to our God, which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb." Rev. vii. 9, 10.

This numerous throng of redeemed ones,—this multitude of those who have been ransomed from the world, are seen before the throne with palms in their hands; and the palms are emblems of joy, and of victory and of peace. Of joy because they are in the presence of their Lord, who has redeemed them; of victory because they have overcome the world, and by faith have gained the victory over sin, and in all things are more than conquerors through him that loved them; and of peace because it is the time of the Lord's reign of righteousness.

John afterwards heard another ascription of praise to God. It is recorded in the 19th chapter, "I heard a voice of much people in heaven, saying, Hallelujah! salvation and glory, and honor, and power unto the Lord our God.....and again they said Hallelujah! And the four and twenty elders and the four beasts said amen, Hallelujah. And a voice came out of the throne saying, Praise our God, all ye his servants, and ye that fear him both small and great. And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Hallelujah, for the Lord omnipotent reigneth.

We repeat the cry, "Hosanna, save now, O Lord," we wait the day when the Lord God omnipotent shall reign. And may we all then be found worthy to receive the white robes and the palms, which tell of righteousness and victory, of joy and peace.

Blessed are the Poor in Spirit.

In the fifth chapter of Matt. we have the word "blessed" used nine times. To each of these we find the Lord gave a very consoling promise. Webster defines blessed as those enjoying happiness or bliss, favored with blessings; happy; highly favored. To be poor in spirit does not mean poverty of the spirit, but free from self-assertion, not proud or arrogant. Poor in this world's goods cannot apply here, as our Savior had not where to lay his head. The poor in spirit. The Psalmist says, Psa. ix. 18, For the needy shall not always be forgotten; the expectation of the poor shall not perish for ever. What a beautiful thought we have in this promise. Yes, blessed are the poor in spirit; for their's is the kingdom of God. What a gracious promise this carries. The kingdom is theirs. This means that nothing shall harm in all my holy mountain. With our disappointments and discouragements here we have but to look to the future where Christ and his saints shall reign and their enemies shall lick the dust. Again in Psa. x. 14, The poor committeth himself unto thee; thou art the helper of the fatherless. We may be persecuted for his name's sake, yet we have the promise of a future inheritance reserved in heaven for us and in the last day will be revealed. It matters not what our cross may be, God in the end will wipe away all tears from our eyes. If our hope in Christ does not reach beyond this life we are of all men most miserable. God will deliver the poor and needy; he will rid them out of the hand of the wicked. I bless God's name for such rich promises. I will abundantly bless her provision; I will will satisfy her poor with bread. Psa cxxxii. 15.

For more than twenty years I have lived isolated from church privileges, yet I have never for one moment lost sight of the thought that I am a part of the body of which Christ is the head, and if I remain faithful to the end I shall receive a crown of life. Hearken my beloved brethren, Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him? James ii. 5. We should not think that because we have to struggle with poverty that our heavenly Father has taken no note of our condition. Our poverty here will enable us to enjoy the rich promises that he has given us. The riches of this world are transitory. Our riches are eternal. The apostle Paul puts it in better language than we can. 2 Cor. vi. 10, As sorrowful, yet always rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing and yet possessing all things. David would rather be a door keeper in the house of God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness. Psa. lxxxiv. 10. We should remember that God is taking out of the Gentiles a people for his name. We are placed on trial, and if we stand it will be "a survival of the fittest." Nothing less than this will do. Finally, brothers and sisters, "ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises (virtues) of him who hath called you out of darkness into the marvelous light. 1 Pet. ii. 9. May the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ preserve us unto his coming is my prayer.

Table Talk.

"DO ALL THINGS TO THE GLORY OF GOD."

This admonition was given because some of the Jews offered sacrifice to idols after Christ had been offered. They failed to recognize their whole duty. So he says, "Whether ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." 1 Cor. x. 31. In the sixteenth verse of this chapter we find this, "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break is it not the communion of the body of Christ, for we being many are one bread, one body. If we can bring our minds to fully realize that we are the numerical body of Christ, we can understand why we should do all things to the glory of God. We seem to get but a glimpse of the great things in store for us. "A body fashioned like unto his glorious body," lively stones of the temple. Precious stones of the city, in the light of which the nations of the earth shall walk. In view of all this shall we not do all things to his glory? Do we [illegible] eat and ride up to play. How is it with us? Do we sit down to eat, unmindful of the duties belonging to us? Unmindful that we are to be Christ-like? Many of us have been a long time learning this. I wish we could fully appreciate the cup of blessing, the communion of the blood of Christ. The bread which we break is it not the communion of the body of Christ * * * We are all partakers of that one bread. This teaches a oneness of purpose with Christ. Individually we each have our besetting sin. How shall we ever be able to search it out, and know what it is, unless we earnestly strive to do all things to the glory of God? It is an easy matter to devote two hours each first day, but to do all things to his glory each day of the week, each week of the year, is quite a different thing. When we go and come, we should ask, will I or some one else be spiritually benefited? James says, 'Go to now ye that say, Today or tomorrow we will go into a city, (or such a business) and continue there a year, and buy and gain. Whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow." Ye ought to say, if the Lord will, or if it will be to his glory. "Order my steps in thy Word: and let not any iniquity have dominion over me." If we offer ourselves a living sacrifice, by denying ourselves daily; by taking our cross and following the example of the meek and lowly Jesus, then we will do all things to the glory of God.

Faithful unto Death.

An elevator in a tall office building fell from the eigth story to the basement. Of the three passengers in the elevator when it fell, one was a child, a little girl about eight years old. The man in charge of the elevator, when he saw that the car was actually falling and utterly beyond control, turned quickly, caught up the little girl, and held her high above his head. The shock, when the elevator struck the solid floor of the basement was something terrific. The two adult passengers and the elevator man were instantly killed; but the child, held aloft in the arms of the latter, was saved, the shock being diminished for her by the interposition of her rescuer's body.

The man's last thought and last act were of the obligation resting upon him—his duty to preserve, as far as lay in his power, the lives that had been entrusted to him. He did what he could, in that moment of mortal extremity.

This is what is meant by faithfulness unto death—the swallowing up of the sense of self in the sense of obligation or devotion even when facing physical destruction. Devotion to Christ is a motive strong enough to conquer all selfish motive. If this hero in humble life felt such intense loyalty and devotion to his employers and his "job" that his only thought in time of deadly peril was of his passengers, we ought to be capable of a devotion equally supreme to him whom we serve with all the earnestness and self-surrender.—Brotherhood Star.

ANOTHER OFFER.

There is a general waking up among our people everywhere. Our public speakers are all busy, and calls are in excess of their ability to attend them. Many places want preaching at the same time, but must wait their turn. This shows a decided interest, and a desire among our brethren to sound out the Word to the yet unsaved. All seem to realize that the night is far spent, that the time to work is short.

Brothers and Sisters, our work is not well done, and is not ready for acceptance of God, unless we have done all we can—our very utmost. We cannot admit that it is our duty to do anything at all for the advancement of the Master's cause, without conceding it is our duty to do all we can—to make a sacrifice even.

Preachers of other denominations as well as our own, know and say that the best workers in a community are those who take and read their Church papal, and are informed as to what is being done in the various departments of the work, and are thus interested in pushing along the car of truth.

The Managers of THE RESTITUTION are endeavoring to so conduct the paper that it will be a fit aid to the Evangelist in his work. We are trying to keep it clear from that contention that leads to mischief and strife. This is done by having certain well-defined truths which are taught in God's Word plainly, as a basis of belief, and by publishing articles that accord with these declared principles. Other outside subjects might be "investigated" as long as life and pencil and paper lasts, and no decision ever be reached, but we do not consider this a profitable work to engage in, hence do not ask for contributions on such subjects, and do not want them. Such are usually but the "opinion" of a man, and are often based on a mere inference at best.

This paper aims to teach the truth of the Bible, and the same is declared and believed in by our Church. We therefore believe it is a Bible missionary to be sent out to the unsaved and lost of the human family. In order to make it possible for our friends to do more of this missionary work than ever before, we make this offer:

Any one sending us $10.00 may select 13 names of those not now subscribers, to whom we will send the paper for the year 1904. This makes a trifle over one-half regular price if taken in lots of $10.00 worth. You and the office practically go halves in scattering the truth of the gospel to your neighbors and friends. You who have money think of this. For $100 you can preach to an audience of 130 people over 200 sermons the coming year. Can you do better with that amount of money? You have a minister come to your neighborhood perhaps once a month, giving you two or may be three discourses each time—possibly 30 a year. When he is coming you invite your neighbors in to hear him. Suppose those neighbors have had THE RESTITUTION in their homes each week when the preacher was not there, and have read the articles, and are interested to hear more. Does not this increase largely the chances of the preacher being able to speak the very words that will start your friend on the way to the kingdom? Did you ever think of this matter? Will you not take it under consideration? We feel sure if you do you will not hesitate to go half-partner with us in this work.

Who will send $10, $20, $50, $100 for this work? The best time to start it is now. Select your names and send at once, so they will get the rest of this year and all of next.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Poetry.

Patient Waiting.

Not now, my child—a little more rough tossing;
A little longer on the billow's foam;
A few more journeyings in the desert darkness,
And then the sunshine of thy Father's home!

Not now; for I have watchers in the distance,
And them must call them in with patient love;
Not now; for I have sheep upon the mountains,
And them must follow them wherever they rove.

Not now; for I have lov'd ones sad and weary;
Will them not cheer them with a holy smile?
Sick ones, who need the tender touch of sorrow;
Will thou not tend them yet a little while?

Not now; for wounded hearts are near thy bleeding;
And thou must teach these widowed hearts to sing;
Not now; for orphans' tears are quickly falling;
They need the guidance of thy sheltering wing.

Go, with the warm sunbeams to the dying,
And speak but once to the lifeless ear;
Why should a human heart grow wearied
Cannst thou not watch with me one little hour?

One little hour, and then the glorious morning;
The golden harpstrings and the victor's palm,
One little hour, and then the bride-bright!
Eternity's long ages clasp'd in peace!

The Death of Christ.

What is the nature of Christ's death? Did he die a penal death as a substitute for man, or did he die as a sacrifice on account of man's sins? Not a penal death, because there is no virtue in such a death. The man that dies on account of his own crime, dies because the law prescribes death as the penalty; he gets the wages of his evil deeds. Our Lord did not die as a substitute for man, because if he did—man according to justice would not be called upon to die,—the death of Christ his substitute would free him from the penalty of the law. The offended party having accepted a substitute, the law would be powerless to condemn the one furnishing the accepted substitute. But in relation to death as a sacrifice the conditions are very different. The innocent and spotless paschal lamb whose blood was sprinkled on the door posts of the Israelites—to rescue them from the destroying angel that slew the first born of the Egyptians. In like manner Christ is our passover. The sacrifice life and death of our Lord procures for us the grace or favor of God, as it is written, "Being justified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus." Rom. iii. 22.

"For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of One shall many be made righteous." Rom. v. 19. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." 1 Cor. xv. 22. We may not in this life be able to perfectly understand the why and the wherefore, of the death of Christ, but we may rest assured that every item is according to exact justice. Being the work of him of whom it is written, 'Justice and judgment are the habitation of thy throne; mercy and truth shall go before thy face." When emphasizing God's justice we must not forget that it is written, "By grace are ye saved."

On page 52 of "Tabernacle Shadows" by Mr. Russell we read, "A man had sinned, and the penalty was death; and if our Lord would pay the penalty it was essential that he should be of the same nature (but undefiled, separate from sin and from the race of sinners), and die as Adam's substitute." The trouble with this theory is that it is not according to the inspired testimony. And thus it leaves no room for the grace of God, which is a positive proof, that it is not the truth. If he died a penal death, the law would hold him eternally in its power. If he died as our substitute, the law that would hold us forever in its embrace would hold him just the same. But as a sacrifice he died the just for the unjust. Therefore he could say, "Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment I received of my Father." John x. 17-18.

If his death was a penalty for sin, or as the sinner's substitute he would have no right to claim it again. As in Adam so in Christ. Adam was placed on probation as the federal head of the race, and he failed by his disobedience. Christ the second Adam was placed on probation, and he by obedience stood the test, and conquered sin and death. And now as the federal head of the race, is become the Author of eternal life to all that are in him. In Adam we became in bondage to death, by disobedience. In Christ by obedience we are delivered from death, and become heirs of eternal life.

Christ having no sin, after being tested even unto death, it was impossible according to justice for death to hold him. Therefore, he had, by the conditions of the everlasting covenant, "power to take it again (according to the commandment) of his Father." "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell nor suffer thine holy one to see corruption."

GEO. FRANCIS.

To the Household of Faith:

I wish to write of our interesting meeting so that all of the dear ones of like precious faith may rejoice with us. Bro. Zilmer came on the evening of November 21st, and began a series of meetings which are still in progress with a promise of a continuance over next Wednesday evening (Dec. 9). We are having a rich feast of Bible [illegible] present and which he makes so plain that all can understand who will but listen. The attendance has as a rule been gratifying. There are a number of us who live quite a distance and we can't always attend, yet we dislike to miss even one discourse. On Monday, Nov. 23rd Bro. Zilmer preached the funeral of Sister Martha J. Huffer, which fact I neglected to record in the obituary I wrote last week, trust I will be pardoned for my forgetfulness. The meeting has grown in interest continually and on Sunday night Nov. 29th two young men came forward. On Monday we went to the water when Bro. Zilmer immersed into the all-saving name of Jesus Christ Bro. Cripe and Bro. Huffer, whom we introduce to the household of faith. We trust there are more who will yet come forward, if they should not we feel that the time is not far distant when they will. Before coming here Bro. Zilmer preached in Kempton on Thursday and Friday nights, where we feel that some seed was sown that may yet germinate and grow to lasting obedience, good and glory. To God be all the praise. Your sister waiting the King in his beauty.

Editor Restitution:

I write to report the baptism of Sister Williams, one of our converts. She was buried with Christ in baptism on Nov. 22, at the Christian church, the minister understanding we were not of his faith. Now there are three of us. A little flock indeed, but we remember the Savior said where two or three were gathered in his name, he would be with them. We are doing all we can with the means we have to work with.

With Christian love, I am your Sister in Christ.

Selected.

The Need of Private Prayer.

An imperative need of the church of our time is a return to the closet. We say return, for it is evident that retirement into solitude for the purpose of meditation and prayer is not valued in our age, and is very generally neglected. It was not always so. Our fathers made much of it. It was their habit. They felt that the closet was as necessary for their spiritual life as the frequent showers and sunshine are for the life of the flowers. From the time of Abraham and Isaac who went out to meditate at eventide, down to the time of our Lord who spent whole nights in prayer, God's people felt that to get close to him they must be often alone. The apostles continued the practice in the Christian Church. Though sometimes it has been carried into extravagance and abuse, as in the monasticism of the Roman Church, yet devout men, until late years, have felt that they imperilled their souls if they neglected the command: "When thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut the door, pray unto thy Father which is in secret."

But we are living in a period of strong reaction in this particular. The spirit of our age is not devotion, but work—and the christian aim, partaking of the spirit, is no longer primarily to know God and attain his character, but to multiply schemes of activity. Not holiness, but usefulness is the watchword. The aspiration is not to be, but to do. The ideal Christian is not the prophet coming face to face from the Mount of God, but the armoured soldier on the gory field. The factory is taking the place of the altar. Organization is supplanting inspiration. There never was a time when enterprises of religious activity were so multiform as today. What we deplore is not the fact that these many forms of christian work exist. They all had their spring in the love of Christ, are helping to make the burden of life bearable, and even now open new channels down which the living waters may flow.

How often do we meet with christian workers who have no spirituality? We have heard clergymen openly disavow piety while they professed to be religious. In many places an intelligent morality is preferred to devout godliness. The saints of the olden time, whose hearts were afire with the holy flame from God's altar, do not crowd our sanctuaries. In many churches worship is a performance rather than a devotion.

A very hopeful feature of the times, however is the fact that great multitudes recognize this deplorable condition which we have described, and are anxiously inquiring for a remedy. The one essential of safety is to combine with our useful work the devotional spirit. We believe nothing is more helpful in securing this end than a return to the closet, where, in retirement from the rush and noise of the outer life, the spirit communes with God.—Zion's Watchman.

The Personal Advent of the Lord Jesus.

The personal return of the Son of God from heaven is the hope of the believer and of the church. This is the great event to which the Lord himself has directed the hearts of his people. It was for this that the saints of early days were looking. The church in her early love and beauty was waiting for her Lord, as the expectant bride with yearning heart waits for her bridegroom. To see the one who loved her, and who was loved by her, was her hope. But the mists of tradition soon arose, and "the hope" became obscured. Love waxed cold, and worldliness set in; then the desire for the speedy advent of the Lord declined, and soon the doctrine was conceived and spread that he would not and could not come for many generations. For century after century after this has held the field, and even now is believed and credited as truth by thousands who bear the christian name. Strange are the theories, and manifold the speculations, which have been conceived and propagated since the church's proximate and proper hope was hid to the eye of faith; some so crude and irrational that they have turned the subject into ridicule; others so ingeniously set with perverted Scripture, that even God's own saints have been mislead thereby. The conversion of the world; the universal spread of Christianity, the fulfilment of many prophecies, and death, have all been raised between the believer and the personal return of the Lord.

May he who walked with the two on the Emmaus road, and expounded to them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himself, causing their hearts to burn within them, draw near to us, and so speak, that our longing, yearning cry shall henceforth be, "Come, Lord Jesus!"—The Second Advent.

The Russo-Japanese Crisis.

Speaking of Russia's work in the far East, the Editor of The Faith, England says:

The situation is full of most appalling danger for China and for Europe; whilst for Japan it is absolutely a question of national life or death. We marvel at the apathy of Europe to the stealthy but onward march of Russia toward the absorption of China. Think of it, the addition of a large part of the continent of Asia, with a thrifty and prolific population of four hundred million. Let this be repeated, four hundred millions, and added to the present 110,000,000 of Russian subject races, making a total of 510,000,000; the government of which will be an autocracy.

The danger of Russian designs is admirably expressed in the following clipping:

"One cannot be indifferent to the spectacle of Japan, a nation of 45,000,000 of people defying Russia, with 110,000,000. War may be averted, but in view of the glacier-like movement of Russia it is safe to say that she will yield nothing of consequence for the sake of peace. Surely the stake for which Russia plays must be of supreme importance, to justify the cheating of which she has been guilty in the course of the game. Her diplomacy has been entirely discredited and disgraced, if judged from the standpoint of honor and good faith; but if judged by its success, so far attained, it is the greatest diplomacy in history.

If to get a position of advantage by false pretence and hold it by falsehood be great diplomacy, the Russian sort is great. If she come in conflict with Japan, the stake played for will be the complete mastery of Eastern Asia. If Russia win, she wins more than that, in prospect, for winning may easily give her the mastery of the world. Her victory will make her, by alliance and force, the dictator of China. In the Russians and the Tartars and Mongols runs common blood. In facing eastward again the Russian is only countermarching over ground that he trod as far back as the time of Alexander the Great. If put in control of China, which seems to be the end sought by Russia, it will be not control merely, but leadership, based upon a common orientalism, but infused with the spirit of the modern world. She will lead China to an awakening that will be Russian, and the 420,000,000 of Chinese will be added to the population and the fighting force of Russia in a stupendous combination that can dictate terms to every capital of Europe.

Given one empire, one Czar, one moving spirit from the Baltic to the China Sea, and how insignificant is the part of the world left to the rest of Europe! Persia, India and Burmah form but a narrow strip, a mere littoral, so certain of being overrun by the vast physical force of the New Russia that surrender of it without a struggle would seem like consulting prudence and humanity. Never in the history of man has such an empire been planned before. In its political geography it will be symmetrical, continental, and will have in comparison with its vast area a brief and very defensible coast-line. In its commercial geography it will include every production necessary to human existence, to comfort and to luxury. In its industrial possibilities it will hold the power to crush the combined commerce of the rest of Europe, Africa and our own hemisphere (the United States).

The vision of it all is so colossal as to be appalling. Even if won at the cost of a war with Japan, it will be the cheapest conquest and colonization and extension and expansion of national power ever accomplished. It will be the fruit of persistence and deceit on the part of Russia, of jealousy and division in the rest of Europe, and of recognition by China of kindred blood and common destiny. The prospect is more startling because Russia has been left out of the calculation in all schemes for expansion and empire exploited by the other nations. England has made costly conquests in Hindostan and Burmah and in Africa. The United States has stretched over some islands. But Russia has pushed her frontier persistently and patiently across a hemisphere, never leaving her continental footing, with no ambition to go beyond seas, with no hunger for islands.

This continental policy was no doubt in action when she gave up Alaska. We regard that territory as a prize and boast of its wealth and resources. But what is it compared with all Eastern Asia? If Russia owned it now, all its potentiality of wealth would be exhausted in defending it, if she have war first before she reaches what her ambition craves. If she reach it, it is the end of British empire and the abridgment of the commercial empire of the United States. Her position will be so strong that she can, and may have to, defy the world in arms.

This issue, of such interest to mankind, finds only little Japan playing David to the Northern Goliath. Nowhere around the horizon is there a word of support to the insular empire. The contest seems so unequal as to excite the world's pity. Otherwise there is no sign of emotion. Russia's volume of deceptions, her often broken faith, her multiplied duplicities, have not even excited the indignation of the governments she has deceived. It surely seems as if fate had come armed from the North to foreclose on the hopes of the world."

The above is a fair presentation of the case from the standpoint of the men of the world. It ought to open the eyes of politicians in Europe and America, and more especially for those who, like Britain and the United States, stand for Free Trade in China—the policy of what is known as the "Open Door." It will be a tremendous blow to both these nations, industrially, if Russia succeeds in building a tariff-wall round China, preventing Anglo-Saxons exporting goods to the "Celestial Empire," by high protective tariffs, as in Russia, where they are as high as 180 per cent on some goods.

Of course the writer, personally, does not believe that Russia will ever in the long run successfully contend with or destroy the British Empire, for that is in the hands of One who "ruleth in the heavens and on the earth," but meantime her ambition, if not successfully resisted, may cause our peoples serious commercial suffering and loss.—The Faith.

Indoor Sunshine.

As the sunny day is for joy, the gray day is for duty. When the sun will not shine we have need of all our courage and manliness. We gather our tools and go bravely to our work, as those who live earnest lives. The day's task must be accomplished whatever the sky may be. So we whistle or sing at our work because the day is gray, and we would keep up our spirits. Something we must do to make the day brighter for others. We must not leave the sick or the lonely to sad thoughts; we must make sunshine wherever we go, because "Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart."—Central Presbyterian.

Silence That Convinced.

A young man sat chatting with some girls. Among them was a sweet, quite young woman, known as a Christian. The young man, thinking to tease her, bantered her about her religion. The silly girls tittered; but the object of his mirth remained silent. Then, with the folly of youth, and recklessness of impiety, he uttered many infidel objections to Christianity. She did not smile, nor look at him, nor seem to notice him. Then he continued his harangue, hoping to force her to refute something. But she maintained the same sweet, dignified silence. A vision of his own stupidity broke over the young man. He said afterwards, telling the story, "That silence saved me."

A teacher said the other day, "Henry Stover is the only boy in school whom I can trust when my back is turned." Wasn't that a good word for Henry? A mother said once, "I can leave any letter that I write open upon my desk and if I am called away no matter for how long, I am certain that Mellie will never try to read a word of it." These things couldn't be said of every boy and girl. These children are honest. They do right not only when others are looking at them, but always, remembering that God's eye is upon them. They do right because it is right. That is what we should all and always do; Live as in God's presence, and do what will please him.—Children's Friend.

BROTHER Zilmer has closed his meetings at Scireleville, having immersed two young men.

Brother Neill closed his meetings at Piqua, Ohio, and has commenced a series of meetings at Troy.

Brother Austin is at work at Watson, Michigan, but will close this week and commence at Byron Center.

Brother Smith held a meeting at Ohio, Indiana, from Nov. 19 to 26th, with good interest, and promised to be there again the first of January.

Editor Restitution:

I would like to have some of our brethren who have been a long time in the way to give an exposition of the seven parables of our Lord contained in Matt. xiii. What is the significantion of the terms "kingdom of heaven," "leaven," "three measures of meal," "treasure," and "pearl," as found in the parables? Some may say these have been thoroughly discussed and decided upon. If they have, I have failed to hear the discussion or see it in print and do not know what the final decision is. I am asking simply for information and I know no other way of finding out.

Your brother in Christ.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

As we go to press today there are on our list just 284 whose time is out now, and their renewals due. Some of these are owing from 1 to 5 years, and others only for the current year. If all would pay in what they should we would have in hand quite $576.00.

Now Brothers and Sisters, for some weeks past we have tried to explain our need, and urge action on your part. We are not complaining of the noble ones who always keep their subscription up and ahead, and wish to thank all such. We wish to thank also every one who is doing his very best to send as soon as he can. We wish to urge you to more earnest effort. If there are any who are careless and neglectful we wish to ask you kindly to rouse up and send us what is right.

If you could know and realize our situation we feel certain you would respond at once. It is a conviction with us that there is not a Brother or Sister now owing us but who can get the amount they owe easier than we can carry the whole load. We are compelled to struggle on with the burden. Are you not also in duty bound to do your part? Please think of this very seriously, as before your God, and then act.

Another thing that makes this year hard for us is that our Helping Fund is now $97.50 below what it has been other years, and as we have kept the poor ones on our list so far we do not like the idea of cutting them off. Surely there are enough members of the Church of God in this land who have been blessed with abundance, who can spare this amount so that we shall not have to drop the name of a single worthy poor Brother or Sister.

Brethren, these are the plain figures. Will you give attention to these matters? We hope you will without more delay.

More Territory covered by Holiday Excursion Fares.

An open reduced fare will be in effect via Pennsylvania Lines for Christmas and New year holidays. Tickets will not be restricted to any distance, but will be sold Dec 24, 25, 31, and Jan 1, to any station on the Pennsylvania Lines. This takes in Cleveland, Toledo, Chicago, Columbus, Cincinnati, Dayton, Indianapolis, Louisville, St. Louis and intermediate stations in Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. The customary reduction on certificate plan for teachers and students will cover the same territory. Particulars may be ascertained by consulting Ticket agents.

Office Calendars.

A very serviceable calendar has been issued by the Chicago&North-Western Ry, for the year 1904. The figures are large and easily distinguished, the days of the month and the consecutive day of the year are both shown; and the publication is of that solid and creditable sort which makes it desirable for business men and manufacturers. Send four cents in postage to W. B. Kniskern, Passenger Traffic Manager, Chicago. Dec. 31.

The North-Western States.

Railway booklets and folders are usually interesting, and the various publications issued by the North-Western Line are perhaps notably so. Any one interested will do well to send to the Passenger Department of that Line at Chicago for a copy of the leaflet just issued, which contains a list of such publications.

"The pamphlets described in this leaflet," to quote from its title page, "contain a stock of information concerning the natural wealth, industrial activity, transportation facilities and unsurpassed scenic beauty of the Northwestern States, the world's greatest seat of human endeavor, calculated to make them valuable as disinterested books of reference."

The little leaflet is sent free to any address upon request.

Holiday Trips.

The Pennsylvania Lines will inaugurate a new feature in reduced fare tickets for holiday trips this year by selling excursion tickets to all stations on those lines, instead of restricting them to 150 miles. Excursion tickets will be sold December 24, 25, 31, 1903, and Jan 1, 1904, good returning until Jan 4. Consult J. H. Hanes, Agent, Plymouth.

Better Than Advice.

The other day when a horse drawing a cartful of coal got stalled on West street, the public was promptly on hand with advise:

"Put on the whip!" shouted the driver of an express wagon.

"Take him by the head!" added a truckman.

"If that was my hoss," said a man with a bundle of clothes under his arm, "I'd tie a cloth over his eyes. Ive seen it tried a hundred times, and it makes 'em pull their best."

"Don't believe it," said a man with a cane. "I've owned horses all my life, and I've had some bad ones among them. The only thing to do is to blow into his right ear."

"You mean the left," said a small man with a very thin voice.

"No, I don't! I mean the right ear. I've tried it often enough, I guess."

A crowd of fifty people had gathered, and now the driver got down and looked the ground over. One wheel was down in a rut. He stood looking at it, his hand on the horse's hip, and everybody around him tendering advice, when a couple of sailors came along and one of them called out:—

"Ahl mate, but here's a craft on a reef."

"Over with her, then."

Both seized a wheel for a lift, the driver clucked for the horse to go ahead, and away went the load as easy as you please. They were the only two of the whole crowd who had not advised the driver how to do it.—New York Sun.

Something New—Bible Studies.

Realizing the need of a more thorough distribution of good, wholesome literature, the Committee on Literature, appointed by the Indiana Conference, purpose to publish a series of four-page leaflets, to be known as "Bible Studies." They will contain expositions of Scripture by brethren W. H. Wilson, J. L. Wince, J. F. Wagoner, A. H. Zilmer, and other writers, and will be numbered consecutively. Number one appears in Oct. 7, issue of THE RESTITUTION under the heading, "The spirit shall return unto God who gave it." Others will follow later in the same way. We will offer them for sale as follows: 10 copies for 10 cents, 50 copies for 25 cents, 100 copies for 40 cents. Send money order or stamps to A. H. Zilmer, Plymouth, Ind.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 35 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Dear Restitution;

To the household of faith, believers in the gospel of the kingdom of God. Many of you know, through THE RESTITUTION, that on Sept. 15, I was elected State evangelist by the Ohio Conference held at Salem, O. I have been notified to begin a series of meetings lasting three weeks, one week at Tippecanoe City, Miami Co., and one week each at two other points in that county, beginning Saturday Nov. 21. I expect to leave home Friday, Nov. 13 for Mt. Vernon, at Bro. Robison's to stay over Sunday, Nov. 15, on the way to Tippecanoe city. My services are at the command of any in Ohio or elsewhere, to preach the simple truth to salvation. Brethren or sisters, if I can be of any use in your neighborhood let me know soon. A church building, a hall or a vacant store, wherever there is ordinary comfort, with or without seats, anywhere that the public can be reached will do. Address, 3366 W. Main St., Salem, O.

To the Called Out Ones.

I wish to say to the Household of Faith scattered throughout the Southern States, that I have now started on my Southern trip which I have had in mind for some time. I am now laboring in Southern Illinois, and will work south from that point. Many have responded, but there may still be others who would like to engage my services. If so, they can do so by addressing me at my Chicago home. The call is open to all Southern States.

There is great need of energy at this time, the time is so very short, when this Gentile age must cease. Are we all prepared? Address W. H. Wilson, 420 N. Willow Ave., Austin Station, Chicago, Ill.

To the brethren of Kansas and Missouri:

I have left Ransom, Kan., and until further notice I will receive letters at Canton, Kan. My meeting at Prairie Point in north central Kansas was well attended, the house being full every night, with good attention. While there were no additions, yet the interest was so good that we have hopes that the seed sown may yet bring good results. We will visit that point again in December. Sister Coons of Clay Center assisted me very materially with her singing and the organ. In January we expect to be in northeast Kansas, and in February in Missouri. Let all who desire to correspond with me address me at Canton, Kan. for the present.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

The Entrance of Truth.

"The entrance of thy Word giveth light."

Calm, peerless, in silence it lies
The cold and dewy earth,
Waiting the coming back of day
To give her still the birth.
The stars fade out—the sun is up—
His light streams up the skies;
Quick throbs her heart, her pulses thrill,
She flush her waking eyes.
Sleep ... gift ... her soul to take
... it ... gently ...
To ... warms ... worms and purifies,
... 's love conquers sin.

Still, cold, and dark the human heart
Lies bound in the toil
That error with her chilling hand
Has thrown about us all.
But strange, new truth breaks up the east,
And scatters night and cloud,
And warm and new life begins to stir
Within the cold heart's shroud.
'Tis work of to the soul—it wakes
To ... and to sing,
And in the brightness of its beams,
Grows free, and brave, and strong.

Communicated.

The Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. A request comes to me to have the class examine the subject of which is yet to stand up and oppose the Prince of princes. I will ask Arlon to state to the class what she considers an infidel to be?

THE ANTICHRIST,

A. A professed unbeliever in the Holy Scriptures.

Q. What is a deist?

A. One who is infidel to the Scriptures, but confesses a belief in the Supreme Being.

Q. What is an atheist?

A. An infidel who does not believe in the Supreme Being, and hence he denies both the Father and the Son.

Q. What is a Christian in the popular sense?

A. A confessed believer both in the Father and also of the Son.

Q. Which of these four positions will the coming antichrist assume?

A. The Bible answers this question. I will quote from that, because it is authority, and I am not. See 1 John ii. 22: "He is antichrist that denieth the Father and the Son," hence he is an atheist, and not a professed Christian of any sect.

Q. What does the word "anti" mean?

A. Opposed to.

Q. What would you call a person who is opposed to Christ?

A. Antichrist.

Q. Do we regard a professed Christian of any sect, or look upon such an one as being an open enemy or an avowed opponent of Christ?

A. No. We do not.

Teacher. I will ask George to tell us the number of kingdoms the Grecian Empire should be broken up into according to Scripture?

George. Four. Dan. viii. 22.

Q. In the latter time of these four kingdoms what kind of a king is it predicted shall arise out of them?

A. A king of fierce countenance understanding dark sentences. Dan. viii. 23.

Q. It says that he shall arise in the latter time of their kingdom. Can you say how late?

A. Yes. "When the transgressors are come to a full." Dan. viii. 23.

Q. Have transgressors already filled the measure of their iniquity?

A. I should say not, but the perilous times of the last days (2 Tim. iii. 1) are upon us, when "evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse," (2 Tim. iii. 13) we may now expect "transgressors to come to the full," at an early date, and then shall this opponent of the Prince of princes, manifest himself.

Q. Will this king be powerful?

A. Yes. "His power shall be mighty." Dan. viii. 24.

Q. Will he think himself powerful enough to oppose Christ?

A. Yes. "He shall also stand up against the Prince of princes." Dan. viii. 25.

Q. Will he be mistaken as to his power?

A. Yes. "He shall be broken without hand." Dan. viii. 25; 2 Thes. ii. 8.

Q. If he stands up as an opponent to Christ, what relationship will he sustain to Christ?

A. That of Antichrist.

Q. In what way did John say we should be enabled to recognize the coming antichrist?

A. "He is antichrist that denieth the Father and the Son," (1 John ii. 22. In other words he is antichristian.

Q. If this king who understands so much stands up against "the Prince of princes" he would be apt to "deny the Son, would he not?

Q. If he has no regard for the Son, would he not be just as likely to "deny the Father?"

A. Yes. "He shall speak marvelous things against the God of gods" Dan. xi. 36; 2 Thes. ii. 4.

Q. If he will not venerate the "God of gods," will he be apt to regard any god at all?

A. No. "Neither shall he regard the God of his fathers, nor the desire of women, nor regard any god: for he shall magnify himself above all." Dan. xi. 37; 2 Thes. ii. 4.

Q. Did you ever hear of any professed Christian sect which went so far as not to "regard any god?"

A. I never have: Catholics have more gods (patron saints to which they pray) than any other professed Christian sect.

Q. Then antichrist must be atheistical, and not professedly Christian at all?

A. From the above Scriptures we must pronounce him atheistical, he not regarding any god at all.

Teacher. I will ask Lucy if she does not think "the man of sin," "the son of perdition," and "that wicked" one, spoken of by Paul in Thessalonians is not also atheistical?

Lucy. Yes. It must be so, because he not only opposes the Father, but exalts himself above the Father. 2 Thes. ii. 4; Dan. xi. 37.

Q. If he "opposes" the Father he must of necessity deny the Father, would he not?

A. Of course, and John says "he is antichrist, that denieth the Father and the son," and no so-called Christian sect does this, although they may ignorantly worship the Father. To worship or adore the Father is not to "oppose" and "deny the Father," even if it is ignorant worship.

Teacher. I will ask Carrie to tell us in what gender the pronouns relating to antichrist, "man of sin," etc., are written in the Scriptures?

Carrie. The masculine always.

Q. When the false church is spoken of in Scripture what gender is used?

A. The feminine, always as in the figure of a woman, or a city, etc.

Q. Do you know of an instance where the word beast is used in the Scriptures as the symbol of the false church?

A. No. The figure of a woman which rides the beast is used. Rev. xvii. 3.

Q. Do you consider it a proper use of language to make the woman which rides on the beast, and the beast which she rides, the same thing?

A. No. The beast carries or supports the woman. That which carries another cannot possibly be the same as that which is carried. The beast is spoken of in the masculine gender, while the woman which rides upon this male beast is in the feminine gender. Two opposite genders cannot inhere in the same personality, neither can a beast be a woman, and a woman a beast.

Q. What does the beast, (not the woman, the false church) cause all to receive?

A. "He" (not she) causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads." This is a universal mark governing trade and commerce, and not the ecclesiastical mark of a cross.

Q. How do you know this to be the case?

A. See Rev. xiii. 17: "That no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, (which carried the woman—false church) or the number of his (not her) name." Rev. xvii. 7: "And the angel said unto me, wherefore didst thou marvel, I will tell the mystery of the woman (the false church) and of the beast (power or government) that carrieth her." Adventists who are careless about discerning between symbols which differ widely, wrongfully use the terms probably the symbolic ... man, and beast, as applicable to the same false church, while one symbol, the beast, is in the masculine gender, and the woman riding the beast, is in the feminine gender. The mark of the beast entitled people to engage in commerce, trade or craft, or business. Trade unions do not regard the Roman cross as a mark of their craft.

Teacher. I ask Lud to tell us in what sense the Bible uses the word "craft"?

Lud. See Acts xix. 24-28: A silversmith gathered together "workmen of like occupation," (a trade union) and makes a speech to the silversmith's union, and says, "Sirs, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth, * * * our craft is in danger," etc.

Q. Is not the beast which carries the woman which forbids commerce or craft without the mark, the antichrist who will stand up against "the Prince of princes," mentioned in Dan. viii. 25, and Rev. xiii. 15-17?

A. The forepart of verse 25, in Dan viii. indicates this: "He shall cause craft (of trade unions) to prosper." That kind of "policy" will make him exceedingly popular, and this popularity will carry him into power.

Teacher. The present dreadful agitation between capital and labor is fast developing a condition of things for antichrist to lay hold upon, when "through his policy also he shall cause craft (trade unions) to prosper in his hands," and he will demand of craftsmen a mark of the association which controls his craft before any one can follow his craft. Even now it is almost impossible for any ... to follow his craft, or trade unless he carries the mark of loyalty to the organization (which is developing the beast) that will govern his craft. It will be quite easy for a popular champion of the federation of labor to ride into power by means of the vote of trade unionists. Watch for important developments along this line.

Wisdom of Seirach.

CHAPTER 29.

1. He who is doing mercy, is lending to his neighbor, and he who is prevailing with his hand is watching to keep commandments.

2. Lend to thy neighbor in the time of his need and repay thy neighbor in due time.

3. Make thy word strong and be faithful toward him and thou wilt find thy need in every period.

4. Many have accounted a loan as a find, and they have furnished painful labor to those who have responded to their request for help.

5. Such an one until he shall take, will kiss his hand and will humble his voice for the utilities of his neighbor, and at the time for repayment he will ask for an extension of time and will give words of indifference and ask us to the due time.

6. If he be strong with difficulty will the half be realized, and one will account it like a find; and if not, he hath deprived him of his utilities and the latter hath acquired him as an enemy for naught; curses and abuse will he repay him, and instead of glory he will repay him dishonor.

7. Because of wickedness many have turned away; they have feared being deprived for naught.

8. However be forbearing toward a lowly one and do not procrastinate doing an act of mercy to him.

9. For the sake of a commandment intervene for a needy one, and according to his want send him not away empty.

10. Lose money for the sake of a brother and a friend, and let it not corrode beneath the stone unto loss.

11. Dispose thy treasure according to commandments of a Most High, and it will profit thee more than the gold.

12. Shut up thy act of mercy within thine inner chambers and it will deliver thee from every calamity.

13. More than a shield for control and a spear for strength against an enemy will it war for thee.

14. A good man will become surety for his neighbor, and the one who is lost shame will forsake him.

15. Do not ignore the favors of a ... man, for he hath given his soul ...

16. ... An obdurate sinner will pervert ... of a bondman,

17. ... thought in thought he will forsake a deliverer.

18. Becoming security hath destroyed many who were restoring to uprightness and shaken them like a wave of the sea; it hath banished able men and they have been lost among alien nations.

19. An obdurate-sinner should be fall into giving security and pursuing after contracts for work will fall into legal proceedings.

20. Intervene for thy neighbor according to thy ability and take heed to thyself lest thou fall.

21. A beginning of life is water and bread and outer-apparel and a house to cover shame.

22. Better is a poor man's way of living beneath the shelter of his roof than sumptuous deliceries in the houses of others.

23. In the presence of small and great be hath satisfaction.

24. A life from house to house is a bad one and wherever he may be sojourning he will not open his mouth.

25. Entertain and give drink unto an ungrateful person and in return for these things thou wilt hear bitter remarks.

26. Pass by sojourn, adorn a table, and if there be any thing in thy hand give me a morsel.

27. Get out, sojourn away from the face of glory; my brother hath come to be entertained, I have need of my ... the

28. The rebuke of a household and the reproach of a lender, these are burdensome things for a man who hath sense.

COMMENT.

In these days of modern sociology and the many crude sociological theories that are being heralded with brazen trumpets the fundamental ethical principles enunciated in this chapter are timely and salutary. They are practically the same as illustrated by Christ and formulated in the apostolic teaching. "The neighbor" of this chapter is identical with "the neighbor" of the Christ-parable, and the individual adoption and the social realization of these ethics would speedily solve all these contentions of labor and capital and oppressor and oppressed the world over. Caste and class legislation would soon be a thing of the past and religion would be tested by the life and not by ethical formulas and theological creeds. "Sound doctrine" would come to be understood as it really means "healthful teaching," and another result would be the differentiation of the "heralding" of the "good news" of the coming kingdom or the evangelical work of the church from the "teaching" and other covenanted gifts of the Spirit. The apostolic order of the work of the church of Christ, those who live long enough will ultimately find cannot be improved upon. "The Spirit of prophecy is the Spirit of the Christ" and all true prophets agree in their testimony moreover and their testimony is always up to date.

Our Crafty Foe.

The devil is a cunning deceiver. He baits his traps with tempting morsels of truth, but to catch unwary souls keeps the trap well covered from sight. He sprinkles the wheat about temptingly, while the snare is carefully hidden from view. He covers the poisonous pills of error with the sugar-coating of truth. He mixed truth with a lie when he deceived Eve, and quoted the promise of God when he tempted our Lord. Brethren, beware of his wiles! Be careful lest accepting some tempting morsel of truth offered you, you find when too late that a deadly hook was concealed therein.—J. Ridley.

Hope.

Hope carries the mind to thoughts of life and expectation. It is an old saying, "If it were not for hope the heart would break." Hope has been the great stimulatory principle that has inspired humanity in all ages. Hope, a hope or expectation of some future bliss beyond this life. The Egyptians, Greeks, the followers of Confucius, Budha and Mohamet each had a hope of some future life in some form, but entirely different from God's people Israel ... above named number who believed and worshiped the God of heaven. All who profess to believe God and his Word should be satisfied with the hope it gives. We hear in these days of a broader hope, a narrow hope, and the hope of the world, but the Bible presents just one hope, and this hope and inspiration of future good comes through the man Christ Jesus. "For there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." We read of a class who had no hope, being without Christ, "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world." Eph. ii. 12. How then can we overlook the necessity of understanding "the covenants of promise." How do we become heirs to this promise? By being in Christ. How can we get into Christ? Gal. iii. 27, 29, "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ, and if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." What will such obedient ones be heirs to? That he should be the heir of the world.....to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed. Rom. xiii. 10. Paul's hope was that the consummation of all this should be at Christ's coming, which he calls that blessed hope. Titus ii. 12-13; Phil. iii. 8-12; ... i. 17, 18, 19; ... xiii. 6; Rom. xv. 4; Col. i. 23. If ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel. Rom. i. 16. For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, to the Jew first, and also to the Gentile. The gospel is the only means that God has provided whereby poor mortals can be saved. Then let us earnestly contend for the gospel of the kingdom in its simplicity and purity. But though we or an angel from heaven should preach any other gospel unto you than that we have preached unto you let him be accursed. People are just as sincere and earnest in an error as in the truth. Let us look well to the foundation of our hope and not carry a counterfeit hope to the judgment with us. We cannot afford to lose eternal life.

The Old Man's Music.

A city missionary, visiting a crippled old man in a crowded tenement house, noticed that his door was ajar, and, thinking that this wasted the heat, asked him if she should not close it. To her surprise, he shook his head and said: "Maybe it is a little draughty, but if the door was shut I'd miss the music across the hall."

Surprised to hear that there was a musical instrument in that poor neighborhood, the missionary questioned him, and the old man explained his pretty fancy. It seemed that across the hall lived a young girl who did the house-work and cared for the younger children while the mother was away earning money for their support. The girl's voice was so pleasant and cheery that, to the lonely old man, it sounded like the sweetest music. "She never speaks up sharp and cross," he told his visitor. "She never does a mite o' scolding. Sometimes she sings, but it's all like singing to me. 'Tisn't often I can catch her words, but the voice she says 'em in is music enough. I'd rather listen to it than to a band."

Here is a suggestion for some of you girls. How many of you are cultivating voices which fall on the ears of listeners like sweet music?

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DEC. 23, 1903. NUMBER 48.

Walter Tomlinson
1626 Woodland av

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

ANOTHER OFFER.

There is a general waking up among our people everywhere. Our public speakers are all busy, and calls are in excess of their ability to attend them. Many places want preaching at the same time, but must wait their turn. This shows a decided interest, and a desire among our brethren to sound out the Word to the yet unsaved. All seem to realize that the night is far spent, that the time to work is short.

Brothers and Sisters, our work is not well done, and is not ready for acceptance of God, unless we have done all we can—our very utmost. We cannot admit that it is our duty to do anything at all for the advancement of the Master's cause, without conceding it is our duty to do all we can—to make a sacrifice even.

Preachers of other denominations as well as our own, know and say that the best workers in a community are those who take and read their Church paper, and keep informed as to what is being done in the various departments of the work, and are thus interested in pushing along the car of truth.

The Managers of THE RESTITUTION are endeavoring to so conduct the paper that it will be a fit aid to the Evangelist in his work. We are trying to keep it clear from that contention that leads to mischief and strife. This is done by having certain well-defined truths which are taught in God's Word plainly, as a basis of belief, and by publishing articles that accord with these declared principles. Other outside subjects might be "investigated ... and paper lauts, and no decision ever be reached, but we do not consider this a profitable work to engage in, hence do not ask for contributions on such subjects, and do not want them. Such are usually but the "opinion" of a man, and are often based on a mere inference at best.

This paper aims to teach the truth of the Bible, and the same is declared and believed in by our Church. We therefore believe it is a fit missionary, to be sent out to the unsaved and lost of the human family. In order to make it possible for our friends to do more of this missionary work than ever before, we make this offer:

Any one sending us $10.00 may select 13 names of those not now subscribers, to whom we will send the paper for the year 1904. This makes a trifle over one-half regular price if taken in lots of $10.00 worth. You and the office practically go halves in scattering the truth of the gospel to your neighbors and friends. You who have money think of this. For $100 you can preach to an audience of 180 people over 200 sermons the coming year. Can you do better with that amount of money? You have a minister come to your neighborhood perhaps once a month, giving you two or may be three discourses each time—possibly 30 a year. When he is coming you invite your neighbors in to hear him. Suppose those neighbors have had THE RESTITUTION in their homes each week when the preacher was not there, and have read the articles, and are interested to hear more. Does not this increase largely the chances of the preacher being able to speak the very words that will start your friend on the way to the kingdom? Did you ever think of this matter? Will you not take it under consideration? We feel sure if you do you will not hesitate to go half partner with us in this work.

Who will send $10, $20, $50, $100 for this work? The best time to start it is now. Select your names and send at once, so they will get the rest of this year and all of next.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of this year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

THIS issue of our paper completes Volume 52. We wish that you each may have a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Our next issue will contain the Love Feast letters.

JESUS says: "If a man love me, he will keep my words, and (then) my Father will love him, and we (Father and Son) will come unto him, and make our abode with him." John xiv. 23.

THERE is to be an age to which all the preceding have been tending,—indeed, by which alone they were at all—the age of the kingdom of God of prophetic expectation and hope,—this is the age to come of apostolic theology,—the age of all ages THE age.

AS life can only be obtained upon certain conditions,—nothing can be more certain than this; that immortality and incorruptibility cannot be attained until the conditions are complied with. It is because man feels himself capable of immortality that eternal death is so fearful.

FLINT says "the brain is not, strictly speaking the organ of the mind. This statement would imply that the mind exists as a force independent of the brain; but the mind is produced by the brain substance; and intellectual force, if we may term the intellect a force, can be produced only by the transmutation of a certain amount of matter. There can be no intelligence without brain substance."

IT is quite beyond our means to pay back the price which has been paid,—but we may, as it were, do something toward paying interest on the price, in the shape of loving, earnest, active service. Are we all doing this? If not why not? Let us remember that we may be called upon to answer that question, before long. Have we gone to our heavenly Father, and asked,—"Lord what wilt thou have me to do? If not, it is time we did.

"YE are bought with a price; be not ye the servants of men." 1 Cor. vii. 23. The reason is obvious: the people thus addressed were a party to the agreement that all claim to self-ownership should be renounced; hence it would be a violation of the most solemn engagement, to bargain away their services to others than their purchaser. They had not been purchased by men; men had no right to their services,—and those addressed would be defrauding their rightful owner.

DID you ever stop to think that the dollar you handed the preacher paid him for the very hours of time he spent in studying up the discourse which decided the mind of your next door neighbor, and started him toward the kingdom? If you had not given that dollar the preacher could not have accomplished his part of the work. Perhaps, yes, quite likely, the dollar you pay to send this paper to your friend, will be the means of starting him on the road to the saint's abode. If you could be positively assured that it would do so, would you hold back the money? It cannot be definitely guaranteed to you, but this can be assured—YOUR part was done. It is our—mine—your privilege to sow. The increase is in God's hand; but He holds us responsible for our share in the work. Will he count your part well done?

THE more busy we are in the Master's work the less danger is there of our getting astray. We shall not have time for that.

"WHEN Christ is formed in us, then the new man has an existence, and not till then. But he is purely a mental and moral being, and therefore is only for the present a being in thought. Anatomy and physiology does not help us to understand this new man, who is more fearfully and wonderfully made than the man of flesh and blood. Still he has an anatomy. His component parts are love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness and temperance." When the spirit germ of these qualities is received into the mind a new creature is conceived. When the good and honest heart has retained the germ and nourished it to perfection, the child is ready for birth; and when one is baptized into Christ, he is born—of water, a child of God by adoption.

WE cannot offer a lot of prizes and premiums, but we do present to your good, clean paper, free from discord and contention, which you can give to your friends and neighbors. We ask your co-operation in placing THE RESTITUTION in the home of every one in whom you are interested. If you have a friend who you wish to see interested in the gospel, present that home with the paper this year. Some one there will read it. It may possibly miss your expectation, even as much preaching is apparently to no effect just where you wish it to do its good work; but it is hardly possible to place THE RESTITUTION in a home every week for a year, and not some good be done thereby. We want to place this paper in the home of every friend you have, and so have made an offer to co-operate with you in this work. Read our offer in this issue, make a list of names, and send to us at once. No more timely Christmas or New Year present can be sent any one than this paper. Try it, and note results.

Judaism.

In the day of the Lord Jesus it was corrupt, cruel, narrow and sacerdotal. And yet in the analysis of Christ's life we find no resemblance to his parent stock,—no coloring of his thoughts by their influence. He was in every sense their antithesis; in every way transcendently above them. To Judaism, Jehovah had degenerated into a mere tribal God; arbitrarily interested in and anxious about the Jews; but with his face unutterably and indignantly set against all other families and races for destruction. Jehovah, to Jesus Christ was the creative Father of humanity; loving, tender, forbearing, forgiving and kind; and worship to Judaism was lost in ceremony, pomp and show.

To Jesus Christ, worship was a matter of the heart, with humility and filial love. While living among cruel bigotry and superstition, his life and thoughts were as pure as sunlight—as open and free as infinitude.

Without education, he gauges and modifies the advanced thought of all after ages. Judaism was not equal to the production of a being like Christ, and so he has no one that can be compared to him.

There is no explanation but that he came forth from God the Father, and his marvellous life would have been more marvellous still had he not demonstrated his power over the laws of nature, "Then why not miracles?"

The Bible.

The Bible is a marvel, when the manner of its compilation is considered. Composed of sixty-six books, written by over forty different writers, it touches from beginning to end the same grand truth, that God's purpose is to fill this earth with his glory. Num. xiv. 21. Not one of the writers contradicts another, and all unite in ascribing all glory and praise to God, and in testifying to the worthlessness and insignificance of men in the sight of their Creator. Extending over a period of sixteen hundred years, the Bible counts amongst its writers, kings (David and Solomon) Mordecai and Daniel, a royal attendant to a mighty Gentile king, (Nehemiah) also. The greatest Jewish law-giver was (Moses), a successful warrior, (Joshua), prophets of all grades and occupations, fishermen (Peter and John), a tax-gatherer (Matthew), a physician (Luke), and a converted Pharisee (Paul). These men wrote their books under many circumstances, some in prison and in sorrow; others in king's palaces, surrounded by all that can make life happy for the natural man; others in seclusion and banishment, with the precious Word of God as their only comfort and solace. Some portions of this wonderful book were written in Rome, other portions hundreds of miles to the East, in Babylon, and between these two mighty cities stood the future metropolis of the earth, where other portions of the sacred book have been penned. Nearly two thousand years have elapsed since it was completed, and nearly four thousand since it was commenced, and yet we have it today, preserved from the onslaughts of all its enemies, whether pagan, Romish or atheist. Is it not absurd to suppose that during all that period of sixteen centuries, a series of impostors in the different parts of the world, in different ages, of different dispositions and talents, succeeded in compiling a volume which has one grand theme running through all its pages? But as Napoleon the great wisely remarked,—"There are some men who are capable of believing anything—except ing the Bible."

Preach.

To preach is to announce, proclaim, herald. Jesus told his apostles to "go into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." Mark xvi: 15. They were to announce, proclaim, or herald the glad tidings—tidings which would make the hearers (if they believed) glad. These tidings have reference to the kingdom of God, see Luke viii: 1; ix: 2, 6; Matth. xxiv: 14, and the acceptance or rejection of this message has a direct bearing on the salvation of those who hear or refuse. Preaching is a very important factor in advancing the cause of God among men. We are told that when "in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." 1. Cor. i: 21. God wills to save men; He has instituted a plan with this end in view; this plan is to be preached, announced; they who "believe" and act in accordance with the precepts of the gospel, shall be saved according to this arrangement. To them who perish this preaching is foolishness, while to those who are saved it is the power of God: 1. Cor. i: 18.

Here the question arises. What shall be preached? It is plain that if God [illegible] definite must be proclaimed. Paul solemnly charged Timothy "before God and the Lord Jesus Christ who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom; Preach the word." 2. Tim. iv: 1, 2. Elsewhere this word is termed "the word of faith which we preach," Rom. x: 8; "the word of God," 1. Thess. ii: 13; "the word of the kingdom," Matth. xiii: 19; "the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation." Eph. i: 13; Col. i: 15. And Peter says, "This is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you." 1. Pet. i: 25. This is "the word" which Timothy was "charged" to "preach." The word needs to be preached today more than anything else. This is the word of which Jesus spoke when he said, "It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." John vi: 63. He did not speak those words of himself, but the Father gave him a commandment what he should say and what he should speak. "And," he adds, "I know that his commandment is life everlasting; whatsoever I speak there, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak." John xii: 44-50. How careful he was to deliver the message even as the Father said unto him. Everlasting life was here at stake; it might either be gained or lost according to the manner in which it was received. And since Jesus was so careful, how careful ought we to be to do likewise when we speak. This disposition was manifested by the apostle Paul. He wrote to the Thessalonian brethren; "But as we were allowed of God to be put in trust with the gospel, even so we speak; not as pleasing men, but God which trieth the hearts." 1. Thess. 2: 3. In thus speaking he would "please;" not men, however, "for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ." Gal. i: 10. But he endeavored to "please.....God, which trieth our hearts." He had the courage to say that if any man, or even an angel from heaven, should preach any other gospel than that which he had been preaching, that such an one should be "accursed." Gal. i: 6-8. God is particular in this matter. Eternal life is in question. It may be obtained by faith. It is offered to us in the word; therefore that word must be presented in its original purity, and men must put faith in it to obtain that blessing.

Why "preach the word?" Because that word is "the truth." John xvii: 17; Eph. i: 13; Jas. i: 18. It tells men the truth about their own condition and their need of salvation. That word is in exact accord with the facts: it makes no effort to deceive or conceal the facts as to man's true condition; no deception as to what God requires. It tells the truth about the "great salvation." Heb. ii: 3. It may therefore be confidently relied upon as a safeguide for sinful and needy man. Oh how much need there is in these days of deception and fraud, of falsehood and error, to preach "the word of the gospel." Col. i: 5. That word being true, it is not true that man has in himself, as an inherent quality of his being, the elements of endless existence. The power to live forever is a gift of favor which God will bestow upon those who place confidence in his word and do his will. Rom. vi: 23; 1. John ii: 17. Believing that every sinner is *immortal is surely not know*ing the Father, because it is contrary to his word.

"Preach the word" because of its enduring qualities. It not only "liveth," but also "abideth forever." 1. Pet. i: 23-25. It has in it the principles of incorruption. It can not be killed. Paul may be bound with a chain and cast into prison, but "the word of God is not bound." 2. Tim. ii: 8. "Preach the word," for it abides with the believer as nothing else will. "The flesh profiteth nothing," for it cannot of itself produce a single spiritual thought. That which is generated of flesh is flesh, and therefore fleshly. That which is generated of spirit is spirit, and therefore spiritual. The spiritual element must be introduced into man from without, and this is done by means of the words of Christ. Those words falling from his lips were pregnant with life. They express and carry with them the Spirit with which Jesus was both anointed, Matth. iii: 3; Luke iv: 18, and filled, John iii: 34. Those words were not empty and meaningless phrases, but full of God's power. They quicken man's mental powers into activity as nothing else can do; they awaken his moral sensibilities and exert a mighty influence over his entire life. No wonder Peter said, "Thou hast the words of eternal life." John vi: 68.

"Preach the word" because it is a discerner of the thoughts and intentions of the heart. Heb. iv: 12. It enters a man's house, so to speak, his holy of holies, the center and seat of his mental activities and discerns, criticises and judges "the thoughts and intentions of his heart," bringing into captivity, or perhaps better: captivating his mental faculties so that he will engage his thoughts with God and godly things instead of things sinful.

"Preach the word because of its converting efficacy. We often hear men speak of and pray for "converting power," when they neglect the very means by which God converts sinners. "The law (mar. doctrine) of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." Ps. xix: 7. Transgressors must be made acquainted with God's ways: which is done by means of teaching; and when this is done, "sinners shall be converted unto thee." Ps. 51: 13. Every sinner who has been truly converted to God has been so turned by understanding God's ways. And every sinner who has been taught in the ways of God and was not converted, remained unconverted because he did not turn from his own ways to God's ways. At Jerusalem the apostles gave themselves to the word of God and prayer, and the result was that the number of disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly, and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith. Acts vi: 7. I want to impress this one thought especially. In every case where men turned to God, it was the result of hearing the word of God preached. The design is to reach the understanding, and through this the life and conduct of the man. When a man is converted, to what is he converted? To convert is to turn. When anyone turns, he turns away from something, and at the same time he turns to something. When one turns to God, 1. Thess. i: 9, 10, he comes into a new relation with God. What causes him to turn? Something heard about God, and this hearing comes from the word of God. Rom. x: 17. In proportion as he believes that word it influences him and moves him to action: If he does not believe it; if he has no confidence in it, it has no power over him. The gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. Rom. i: 16. To the unbelieving it is not the power of God; not because there is no power in it, but because its power is neutralized by unbelief.

"Preach the word" because of its ability to build up the believer. Paul commended the Ephesian elders to God, and the word of his grace "which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified," Acts xx: 32. The same word by which men are called to the glory and kingdom of God, 1. Thess. ii: 12, is able to build up such a character in them that will entitle them to an entrance into that kingdom. The "sanctified" are to receive "an inheritance" in that kingdom, and the word is the means to sanctify them. John xvii: 17. To sanctify is to set apart, and embraces two phases: Separation from sin, and setting apart to God. The word believed is the instrument employed by God in this sanctification. It impels the believer to separate himself from sin, to devote himself to God and his service. See 1. Thess. i: 8-10. Therefore preach the word to the believer. Paul wrote to the Colossian brethren to let the word of Christ dwell in them richly in all wisdom: teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in their hearts to the Lord. Col. iii: 16. "He that hath a dream, let him tell a dream, but he that hath my word, let him speak my word faithfully." Jer. xxiii: 28. Do you want information as to the location of the kingdom of God? You can get it from the word. Dan. ii: 25, 44; 7: 27; Rev. v: 10. Who is to enter the kingdom? "None of the unrighteous," 1. Cor. vi: 9, but only they who "do" certain things pertaining to righteousness, 2. Pet. i: 5-11. How long will that kingdom endure? It "shall never be destroyed," and is "everlasting." What manner of conduct is required to enter into that kingdom? Walk worthy of God who hath called you unto (eis, for, with a view to) his glory and kingdom. 1. Thess. ii: 12. Suffer for the kingdom of God. 2. Thess. i: 5. If we suffer, we shall also reign with him. 2. Tim. ii: 12. That word of God is able to thoroughly furnish the man of God for every good work that may be required of him. 2. Tim. iii: 16, 17. That "word of the Lord" can impart enduring "comfort" to those who mourn on account of the death of loved ones. 1. Thess. iv: 13, 18. It inspires the believer with the gospel hope, Phil. i: 27, the hope of the eternal which the God that cannot lie promised before the time of the ages. So the Greek in Titus i: 2. See also 1. John ii. 25.

Preach the word: be instant in season, out of season. Reprove, rebuke, exhort with longsuffering and doctrine, for the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine. 2. Tim. iv: 1-4. Is the "time" upon us, or look we for it in the future? Let the reader peruse Church history for half a day, and then take a calm view of present conditions in the church and the world, and he will be convinced that we are in that time. But the fact that "they will not receive sound doctrine," should not deter us from preaching sound doctrine according to "the faithful word." Titus i: 9.

A. H. ZELMER.

Sadly True.

The church has relaxed in both her doctrine and practice. She occupies a lower and broader platform than is meet; and having laid aside as ultra and unnecessary much of what is forbidden to the carnal mind, she has enticed multitudes to join hands with her, whose hearts are not right with her Lord, and who would never have made a show of joining her had she adhered to the faithfulness of her Lord's truth and the believers of her Lord's example.—Hugh McNeile.

Cultivate the habit of truth. Let it become the very genius of your life. It will strike all hypocrisy out of your life, it will strike all compromise with evil out of your life, it will inspire in all men confidence in you when they come to know that at all times and under all circumstances you will be as your custom is—truthful.—J. F. Carson.

"Censure and criticism never hurt anybody. If false they can not hurt you unless you are wanting in manly character, and if true they show a man his weak points and forewarn him against failure and trouble."

Christ is food for the inner and clothing for the outer man; we have no time to sin.—Agnes Alford.

The young man who is ashamed to wear overalls is unworthy to wear broadcloth.

"Respectable sin is the most dangerous."

AS WE go to press today there are on our list just 284 whose time is out now, and their renewals due. Some of these are owing from 1 to 5 years, and others only for the current year. If all would pay in what they should we would have in hand quite $576.00.

Now Brothers and Sisters, for some weeks past we have tried to explain our need, and urge action on your part. We are not complaining of the noble ones who always keep their subscription up and ahead, and wish to thank all such. We wish to thank also every one who is doing his very best to send as soon as he can. We wish to urge you to more earnest effort. If there are any who are careless and neglectful we wish to ask you kindly to rouse up and send us what is right.

If you could know and realize our situation we feel certain you would re[illegible] with us that there is not a Brother or Sister now owing us but who can pay the amount they owe easier than we can carry the whole load. We are compelled to struggle on with the burden. Are you not also in duty bound to do your part? Please think of this very seriously, as before your God, and then act.

Another thing that makes this your hard for us is that our Helping Fund is now $97.50 below what it has been other years, and as we have kept the poor ones on our list so far we do not like the idea of cutting them off. Surely there are enough members of the Church of God in this h[illegible] to have been blessed with all and over, who can spare this amount so that we shall not have to drop the name of a single worthy poor Brother or Sister.

Brethren, these are the plain figures. Will you give attention to these matters? We hope you will without more delay.

In (God) Dependent.

The most independent person in the world is the little child that is absolutely and confidently dependent upon its father for everything. It has no care and knows no fear and is under no obligations to anybody. It has everything it wants, and has it as its own by right. Even so it is with the man who knows and implicitly trusts his Heavenly Father. The man most completely independent of this world and all in it, is the man who is consciously the most helplessly dependent on God.

First at World's Fair.

The United States Government has placed the first exhibit at the World's Fair in St. Louis. It consists of a magnificent Post Office Car, built in the Altoona Shops of the Pennsylvania Railroad System. The United States Government's plans for the World's Fair contemplate an extensive display of the inner workings of the Post Office Department, of which the Railway Post Office service is an important part. To properly demonstrate that feature a Post Office Car similar to those operated on the Pennsylvania System was selected by the Government as representing the most advanced ideas in devices in devices for the expeditious handling of United States mail. The Pennsylvania System, therefore, has the distinction of not only building and operating Post Office Cars for the United States Government, but those built in its shops are recognized by the Government as the ideal type. The one placed in the United States Government Building at St. Louis, is No. 6542. It is as massive as a Pullman car, and runs on twelve wheels. A noteworthy feature of its solid construction is the vestibule attachment characteristic of cars used on the Pennsylvania System.

When the new Post Office Car was placed in the Government Building at St. Louis recently, it was photographed under the immense arches of steel, which compose the frame work of that exhibit palace, the only steel-framed structure on the World's Fair grounds. The handsomely finished sides of the car are covered with heavy canvas to protect it until the opening of the Exposition, April 30th, when visitors to the World's Fair will be privileged to witness postal clerks at work in the car, showing how the mails are distributed and handled on fast trains of the Pennsylvania System in eleven States.

Poetry.

Go Labor On.

Go, labor on!
Why do you stand idle on the harvest plain,
While all around you hear the golden grain?
What does the Master say,
Go, work to-day!

Go labor on!
While the high-sailing angels overhead—Love,
Envy—are speeding all the gospel tidings bear;
While on the fleeting hours too swiftly fly;
To-day draws nigh.

Go labor on!
While [illegible] wide,
[illegible]
[illegible]
Ere all be filled their ranks supply;
[illegible] near at home,
Lo, call it, Come!

Go labor on!
While it is watching, night and day,
[illegible]
While Satan sleeps—nobody sees—he's not,
He slumbers not.

Go labor on!
[illegible] thoughts and faithless fears,
[illegible]
You may [illegible] here;
[illegible]
His righteousness will.

A Slaughtered Truth.

Purity is most desirable, charity is chief of the graces; but even these must not be obtained with the blood of a slaughtered truth or they cease to be acceptable before God." Late C. H. Spurgeon, 1890.

"A slaughtered truth" is a strong metaphor, but is doubtless strictly true. We read of "slaughtered squadrons" and of "sheep for the slaughter;" and we know that the real matter of fact in such cases is physical death or destruction. But a truth cannot be destroyed in reality, and some resemblance between the slaughter of an army, and the destruction of a truth has to be found. It is in the results that a true analogy is seen. When a squadron of cavalry has been actually slaughtered, or has been isolated, or made prisoners of war, it has been rendered useless for the purpose for which it was brought into existence. So where the truth has been supplanted by an error, or has had substituted for it some truth of a different kind, or of less definite import or has been obscured by some [illegible] device of man; it ceases to [illegible] and may thus be said by a strong figure of speech to be destroyed. If its power consisted in its being known, accepted, believed and obeyed it may become of none effect as really as a military squadron may be put hors de combat on the field of battle.

It is worthy of note that error as well as truth may be destroyed; and that where either is concerned whether as regards advocacy or demolition, the agencies employed must be of the intellectual order, corresponding to the nature of the object aimed at. It is knowledge or ignorance, belief or unbelief, which figure in the contest. Here the varied experience of the Apostle Paul may help to illustrate this matter. His prime mission was to spread the knowledge of the gospel concerning the kingdom of God. In doing this he had to destroy error by displacing it. He writes, "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds. Casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ." The "pulling down" and casting down here are figures of speech drawn from military operations equivalent to slaughter where lives of combatants are concerned. This was not effected, however, by the arm of flesh but by "the sword of the Spirit which is the Word of God." In Paul's work there was much of the intellectual and the moral as well as the spiritual, all weapons of the uncarnal order. He gives an account of the commission he received as follows: "To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified, by faith that is in me." Again, he says, "If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost. In whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them." The expressions "forgiveness of sins," "inheritance through faith that is in me," "our gospel," "the gospel of the glory of Christ" (R. V.) shows that Paul was simply carrying out his mission in preaching the "gospel of the kingdom of God," when he spoke of "strongholds," "imaginations," and "high things" to be demolished. In his letter to the Ephesians he makes reference to the same subject, "This I say therefore, and testify in the Lord, that ye henceforth walk, in the vanity of their mind, having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart."

In writing to the Romans Paul makes special reference to the phase of error in the Gentile world "Who changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshiped and served the creature more than the Creator, who is blessed for ever." That is, they put an idol in the place of the true God. And although Paul says, "We know that an idol is nothing [illegible] the world"—the worship of even a nonentity is practically nothing of none effect the truth concerning the great Creator as the supreme object of faith and worship. The Apostle describes this class of persons as "professing themselves to be wise they became fools." We read, "The fool hath said in his heart, 'there is no God.' Is not the fool's heart a prolific source of error? Hence his "thought" and his "imagination." This was doubtless at the bottom of much of the evil in the antediluvian world. "God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually." This was before the flood was threatened.

With his unnatural or spiritual weapons Paul had to do battle with the various errors which have their source in the human heart. His mission lay heavy upon him. He said. "I am debtor both to the Greeks: and to the Barbarians"... ...And so he plied the gospel message as opportunity offered. Where necessary as at Athens he employed the more general truth concerning the Creator of heaven and earth, in his making of one blood all nations of men, the great sustainer of all things.

The occasion of Mr. Spurgeon's using the remarkable expression "a slaughtered truth" was the following. A curate of the church of England (A. E. Clarke) being on his marriage tour in Scotland some fourteen years ago happened to meet with a volume of sermons by Mr. Spurgeon. He was so much impressed with the author's exposure of "Baptismal Regeneration" that he was led to resign his connection with the Church. He was afterward recommended by Mr. Spurgeon to a pastorate in a Baptist church in Scotland. This he retained for some five years certain principles he came to hold not allowing him to continue his pastorate. The reference to a "slaughtered truth" by Mr. Spurgeon occurred in some remarks expressing sympathy with Mr. Clarke in his uncompromising fidelity to his convictions. The "truth" referred to by Mr. Spurgeon, although not named, was obviously believers' immersion. This act as prescribed by our Lord was indissolubly conjoined with the antecedent belief of the gospel, that is, the gospel concerning the kingdom of God. In the Episcopal practice of "Baptismal Regeneration" in which a babe is sprinkled with a few drops of water on the proxy faith of sanctified God parents the water is exalted into a position of supremacy where the subject of the ceremony possesses neither faith nor the ability to exercise it. In so-called Baptist churches where immersion in water is the practice, the belief of the gospel preached by our Lord whatever faith may be exercised in his sacrificial death and in his resurrection, is as truly absent as in the case of the babe. This, so far as is known to the writer of this, was the fact as regards Mr. Spurgeon and his followers. It needs no argument to show that, according to our Lord's express prescription the act of immersion with its antecedent belief in the gospel of the kingdom of God, with the subsequent facts of his death and resurrection, constitute the "obedience of faith" repeatedly spoken of by the Apostles. There cannot be a doubt that for the greater part of 1900 years this is a truth which in the expressive language quoted has been "slaughtered" by thousands of professed followers of him who commissioned his apostles to "go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth AND is baptized shall be saved, BUT he that believeth not shall be condemned!"

This commission was carried out by the Apostles in its integrity—Peter on Pentecost—"Repent and be baptized." There was no faltering as to the sequence of the requirements. So Philip at Samaria—"When they believed..... they were baptized." Faith was the prime element in discipleship. "Ye are all the children by faith in the Anointed Jesus; for As many as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." This constituted the "obedience of faith" spoken of by the Apostles. No faith no disobedience, and hence no discipleship, was the practical outcome of the commission as fulfilled by the Apostles. Truth was kept entire without "slaughtering" of any kind of degree.

Redemption and Substitution.

"Let the wicked forsake his way and the unrighteous man his thoughts and let him return unto the Lord and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God and he will abundantly pardon."—Isa. lv. 7.

I am glad to see that the God dishonoring doctrine of "substitution" is receiving some attention at the hands of several writers in THE RESTITUTION occasionally. There can be no doubt but it is a seed error that produces a multitudinous variety of other errors. The very idea of a deal" is so foreign to the Bible, especially the Old Testament, in regard to God's conduct toward the human race, that it is really strange how it has developed under the light of modern thought. The magnificent conception of the Heavenly Father of Moses and the prophets leaves no room for "dickering" because he is alone "there is none other" to "deal" with. Through the dark ages the popular conception of God was changed by the ignorance of the priest-craft to a sort of almighty ogre who thirsted for human blood and had to be satiated by the death of his Son our Lord, and so the words and phrases of the New Testament such as "redemption" and "ransom" were made to signify the settlement of God's claim in the human family and the release from his mortgage, as it were. Now among intelligent Scripture students of all grades and shades of thought this idea is rapidly passing away owing to the fact that the revelation of the character and attitude of the Father are being more clearly discerned, but still the idea of a "trade" seems so woven into the warp and woof of the human mind that some well-meaning people still hold on to it and apply it in a sort of reverse way to the medieval style and instead of God being the holder of the mortgage on us it seems to be, as far as I can learn from their writing and conversation, the devil or some personification of death that the Father and Maker of all for some reason or other is bound to satisfy the claim of before sin could be pardoned and the judicial "ransom" of every son of Adam on the judicial ground that the claim has been settled and the debt paid. It must be conceded there are many passages in Paul's writing that can be made to assume this aspect when you start out with the "judicial" salvation premise. So also there are many passages that the immortal-soul theory can be read into when you start out with it as a postulate. But the primary idea of salvation, both of the Old and New Testament is the "grace of God," that is the favor the election or selection by the discrimination of the Lord of all. The Son himself is subject to that calling and election. "All that the Father giveth me" is his limit and we all are the Fathers to give. He has no antagonist to cope with his everlasting arm. There is no enemy to frustrate his power. Then what are we ransomed from? Why are we bought? What is redemption? The answer is "He bought us from our sins with his own blood." The efficacies of Christ's sacrifice is the application to humanity of the Christ spirit. The Holy Spirit, the Spirit of truth it is called. this is what bringeth salvation, if I read my Bible right. The mysterious "begetting again." The sympathy with the divine. It is not a question of having the debt God had against us settled. God was anxious to carry that out himself, "I will forgive them freely," he says. It is not a question of having the debt that the devil had against us settled, for we would not get his forgiveness anyway, according to all accounts he is a beast of the first order, and so then after all we have to return to first principles. "Return unto me and I will return unto you." He forgiveth iniquity, transgression and sin, and will by no means clear the guilty, not even "judicially." To that man will I look that is of a broken and contrite spirit, and that trembleth at my Word. This is the simple solution of the whole question. The question of who are and who are not of God's kingdom is God's to settle. The multiplication of instances and questions of how much he or she knows does not seem to me of much account compared with the all important one, how much of the sweetness and gentleness of Christ is developing in us. This is the test of the "blood applied," the first test, after that "they that do his will will know the doctrine."

Report.

Quarterly Conference convened at Keltner, Illinois, Dec. 1, and the meetings continued every evening for one week. Many days of anxiety and hard work were spent before the brethren were sure that the new church would be ready for occupancy on the above date, hence the notice was short; however on Sunday morning the church was well filled, and all the available chairs and benches from the school house near by, were brought into service. The new building was to be dedicated this beautiful morning, and the people came for miles around. After a short session of Sunday school, Bro. J. J. Delany delivered an able address in which he advised that the building be duly dedicated to the service of God, and used for that purpose only; that nothing of a nature that would debar the very poorest from being present, be allowed.

At the call for aid the people responded quite liberally, but there is still a heavy debt hanging over the church, so those who have pledged themselves to assist, and are ready to do so, send in your donation to the treasurer, M. M. Mitchell, at Lanark, Illinois.

There are a great many young people at this place, and a class of sixteen was secured to take up the Berean work. We verily believe that the sheaves are almost ripe, that there will be a bountiful harvest in the near future.

Bro. Jas Wilson had charge of the communion service, and also occupied the pulpit Sunday evening, his subject was "The resurrection." Good interest was manifested throughout, there being about one hundred present at the last meeting.

Table Talk.

PSALM L. 1.

The mighty God, even the Lord hath spoken, hear, O my people, and I will speak; O Israel, every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills. I know all the fowls of the mountains; and the wild beasts of the fields are mine. If I were hungry I would not tell thee; for the world is mine and the fulness thereof. And because of this he says, "Offer unto God thanksgiving; and pay thy vows unto the Most High." These are a few of the many grand expressions of David the poetical and musical king of Israel, of whom Paul testifies that God said of him, "I have found David the son of Jesse, a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfil all my will," and thus God says of David, he is mine. What an honor, what an exaltation, how grand an acknowledgement from God. The shepherd had sanctified the God of Israel in his heart, and God called him from the sheep cote. David obeyed the call and all the commands of God. God made him a great king, and said of him, he has walked in my ways with a whole heart, he is mine. Jesus said, "All things that the Father hath are mine. All thine are mine, and mine are thine, and of them and to them he says, This is eternal life that they might know thee, the only true God and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent, and again I have given them the words that thou gavest me, the Word of the kingdom, the Word of God, and of all that I believe and obey from the heart that Word, Jesus can say and does say and will say, They are mine. And the apostle Peter says, For ye were not redeemed with corruptible things as silver and gold, but with the precious blood of Christ, by the Word of God, which liveth and abideth forever, and this is the Word which by the gospel is preached unto you, and you are mine. Of Paul Jesus said, he is mine, he is a chosen vessel unto me to bear my name before the Gentiles and kings, and the children of Israel. And they that feared the Lord spake often one to another, and the Lord hearkened and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of Hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels.

Cast Your Burdens on Christ.

It is the grand feature of the religion of Jesus, to communicate comfort to the heavy laden soul. "Light is sown for the righteous and gladness for the upright in heart." All the promises, all the precepts, all the invitations, all the doctrines, all the institutions of the gospel, are full of consolation and delight to the children of Zion. Let every gloomy thought, every irksome desire, every troublesome passion, be banished from the breast for ever. Let not your countenance be downcast, but remember your position, redeemed by the blood of Christ; remember the dignity of your character, a child of God, think of the nobility of your relation, joint-heirs with Christ; the possession that awaits you, a home in the earth made new; the diadem that shall encircle your brow, a crown of glory. Think on this, and bid farewell to your temporary sorrows. Look to the Savior who died for you, who has promised his Spirit to comfort you, who has promised his grace to help you. Oh, that it may please our heavenly Father to comfort every mourning heart, to console every dejected spirit, to cheer every downcast soul, that reads this article! Wherefore, believer, shouldst thou weep, or be disconsolate? Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee. Be not anxious, but be persuaded, be induced to trust thyself, thy cares, and all thy concerns in the hands of infinite wisdom, power, and love. "I will never leave thee, never forsake thee, saith the Lord." "Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? Yea, she may forget, yet will I not forget thee. Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands." Though thou walkest in the midst of trouble the Lord shall revive thee. Forget, then, reader, your pains, think no more of your sorrows, of your fears; but think of the glorious crown that awaits you, the certain victory which you shall achieve, and the eternal peace, joy, and bliss, of the restitution earth. O, turn away your eyes from the troubles of this short scene, and remember no more the cares, the anxieties, or the world. Fix them on your hidden Savior, for he shall return soon to take his servants home!

Afflictions.

"For our light affliction which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." 2 Cor. iv. 17. If Paul with all his trials and persecutions could call them light, how insignificant ours should be in comparison. He was not only subject to all the bodily ills that we are heir to on account of sin, but he was surely oppressed and persecuted, not so much by the Roman government as by his own people, the Jews, who of all others, ought to have rejoiced at the news he proclaimed, or rather ought to have rejoiced at the advent of the Savior whom Paul preached. They were looking for the coming of a Messiah who would redeem them from the Roman rule and "restore again the kingdom to Israel," but as he did not come in the manner, and display the power and glory that they expected (which he did possess) they rejected, persecuted and caused him to be put to death, and persecuted all who would proclaim him as "King of the Jews," as the Messiah and Savior of the world. Our afflictions, O how light they are as compared with Paul's and the Apostles and early disciples of Jesus. Yes, and of the faithful ones of the "dark ages" and even of our own time in countries not so favored as our own; we truly are a fortunate and favored people, living in a land of freedom and under a government whose laws protect us in our worship, though our doctrine may not be popular, yet it is respected and protected: no persecution from that source, and they who so persecuted Jesus, and his apostles cannot persecute us. We however do have trials and persecution; "yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." 2 Tim. iii. 12. The same arch deceiver of Christ and Paul's day is still running at large, manifesting himself in many ways, and like a shrewd general, seeking out and attacking us in our weakest points; to me he comes in one form and to you in another. To the timid and those not yet "strong in the Lord" he comes as a ridiculer and scoffer, making light of the worship of God and so on, but does them. To the lovers of pleasure, who would like to divide [illegible] between the service of God and of the world, he would make believe there is no harm in the dance, the card party or and social amusements of various sorts, no you can neglect your church and Sunday school and go just when it is convenient and you feel like it. To the covetous he would say, there is no harm in driving a sharp bargain occasionally, or of keeping the truth back a little to gain your point. And so through all the walks of life the deceiver comes in one form or another to tempt us, try us and persecute us. Hence we should pay heed to the comforting words of James, "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for when he is tried he shall receive the crown of life which the Lord hath promised to them that love him." Jas. i. 12. The whole chapter of James is an excellent lesson in this connection. We also hear the Revelator say, "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. ii. 10. The "crown of life" promised to all the faithful ones when Jesus comes is worth vastly more than all the pleasures of this life.

Editor Restitution:

I would like to have some of our brethren, who have been a long time in the way, to give an exposition of Mark ii. 27, 28. Some may say, these verses have been thoroughly discussed and decided upon. If they have, I have failed to hear the discussion or see it in print, and do not know what the final decision is. I am asking to bring out thought and also to gain information, and I believe this is a good way to do it.

Joy in Old Age.

Dr. A. J. Gordon met an old man one day going to the place of prayer. "Aged friend," said he, "why should an old man be so merry and cheerful?"

"All are not," said he.

"Well: then, why should you be merry?"

"Because I belong to the Lord."

"Are none others happy at your time of life?"

"No, not one, my friendly questioner," said he, and his form straightened into the stature of his younger days, and something of inspiration glowed upon his countenance. "Listen, please, to the truth from one who knows; then wing it round the world, and no man of three score and ten shall be found to gainsay it: The devil has no happy old men."

Announcement.

The Quarterly Conference of the Church of God of Central Washington will meet at the church house of the Church of God at Wenatchee, Wash., on Friday evening Jan. 1st at 7:30 P. M., and continue over the following Sunday. A good programme will be provided. Every one is urged to attend. Let us not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, but gather together for strength and mutual encouragement as we see the day approaching.

A. L. Corbaley, Pres.
Myrtle Titchenal, Sec.

For several years we have devoted some space for a Christmas and New Year "Love Feast." Request comes from several to again observe this feature. We are glad to give these letters of cheer and greeting, and ask that all who want a part in this "meeting" send in their letters so we can have them by Dec. 23. Write short and to the point, so that all may have a chance. The day of our Lord's coming hastens on. We are told to not forsake assembling ourselves together, and to be especially aware as the day of his coming approaches. Brothers and Sisters, this is in a sense a "meeting" where the isolated ones can have an equal chance with those more fortunately situated. Let all, young as well as old, take a part, and so get strength for the battles of life, and at the same time give aid and encouragement to others.

To the Brethren in Iowa.

Any locality desiring a meeting any time during the next year, please make application to the Conference Board, at once, stating time, desiring meeting. Address me at Sac City, Iowa.

Dear Restitution;

To the household of faith, believers in the gospel of the kingdom of God. I have been notified to begin a series of meetings lasting three weeks, one week at Tippecanoe City, Miami Co., and one week each at two other points in that county, beginning Saturday Nov. 21. I expect to leave home Friday, Nov. 13 for Mt. Vernon, at Bro. Robison's to stay over Sunday, Nov. 15, on the way to Tippecanoe city. My services are at the command of any in Ohio or elsewhere, to preach the simple truth to salvation. Brethren or sisters, if I can be of any use in your neighborhood let me know soon. A church building, a hall or a vacant store, wherever there is ordinary comfort, with or without seats, anywhere that the public can be reached will do. Address, 366 W. Main St., Salem, O.

To the Called Out Ones.

I wish to say to the Household of Faith scattered throughout the Southern States, that I have now started on my Southern trip which I have had in mind for some time. I am now laboring in Southern Illinois, and will work south from that point. Many have responded, but there may still be others who would like to engage my services. If so, they can do so by addressing me at my Chicago home. The call is open to all Southern States.

There is great need of energy at this time, the time is so very short, when this Gentile age must cease. Are we all prepared? Address W. H. Wilson, 420 N. Willow Ave., Austin Station, Chicago, Ill.

To the brethren of Kansas and Missouri:

I have left Ransom, Kan., and until further notice I will receive letters at Canton, Kan. My meeting at Prairie Point in north central Kansas was well attended, the house being full every night, with good attention. While there were no additions, yet the interest was so good that we have hopes that the seed sown may yet bring good results. We will visit that point again in December. Sister Coons of Clay Center assisted me very materially with her singing and the organ. In January we expect to be in northeast Kansas, and in February in Missouri. Let all who desire to correspond with me address me at Canton, Kan. for the present.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price, is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

How Much they Tell to Me.

O previous Christmas hours, how much they tell to me.
Of babe born long ago in Bethlehem o'er the sea!
So small and lowly-born, yet by his Father sent
To grow to man's estate, teach truth, then die most direct:
And rising, leave the world with soldiers weak and new,
To conquer all its storied hosts—this humble, feeble Jew!
[illegible] and sin
And he ago down and idols fall, he battles but to win;
And near and nearer draws the time when all the earth his own
He'll take his rightful place as King on David's storied throne.
And this is what the Christmas hours, so joyful tell to me,
Of babe born long ago in Bethlehem o'er the sea!

S. ROXANA WEEK.

The Old Year.

What is the old year? 'Tis a book
On which we backward sadly look,
Not willing quite to see it close,
For leaves of violet and rose
Within its heart are thickly strewn,
Marking love's dawn and golden noon;
And turned down pages, noting days
Dimly recalled through memory's haze;
And tear-stained pages, too, that tell
Of starless nights and mournful knell
Of bells tolling through trouble's air
The De Profundis of despair—
The laugh, the tear, the shine, the shade,
All 'twixt the covers gently laid;
No unread leaves, no page unscanned;
Close it and lay it in God's hand.

Annual Love Feast Letters.

Dear Restitution:

Another year is almost gone, and our Lord is still absent. Sickness and death are still abroad in the land—but we are one year nearer home. E'er another year shall pass, perhaps our Savior may come, but if not we know that the promise is sure, and at the time appointed he will come to resurrect the righteous dead, and give life, eternal life, to his faithful ones.

A short time ago a lady said to me, "We don't know where we go to when we die, but I think it will be a better place than this." Those who read and believe God's Word do know that when a person dies they return to the earth, in that very day their thoughts perish. Job said "If I wait the grave is my house." Yes, we know where we go at death, and what is best of all we know that our Savior holds the keys of death and the grave in his hand, that he is coming to open the prison, and release the captives.

Yours in hope.

NANNIE OSBORNE.

Dear brothers and sisters:

It thrills my heart with joy that I once more have the privilege of joining with the people who are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people, in not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, and exhorting one another to follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness, and fight the good fight of faith, and lay hold on eternal life, being kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love, [illegible] other, and exhorting one another in obedience to the commandment. Jesus says he that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me; and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him and will manifest myself to him. What a rest to our minds when we think how little is required of us to enjoy the blessings and promises in this life, and by living up to the requirements of God's law we are sure of immortal life, and so an entrance will be ministered unto us abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, which is righteousness and peace and joy, for he that serveth Christ is acceptable to God, and approved of men.

Let us then follow after the things which make for peace by adding the Christian graces, which will make us worthy of an inheritance among all them which are sanctified, and gain an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for us, and our lives are hid with Christ in God, and when Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall we appear with him in glory, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Even so, come Lord Jesus.

Brothers and sisters:

I see by our dear old paper that it is time for our Christmas greeting again. I enjoy reading these letters, [illegible] most of them are strangers to me personally, but are brethren and sisters in Christ. May we each strive to live so that we may be worthy of eternal life when our adorable Redeemer comes. To the isolated ones I would say, be of good cheer, for our redemption draweth nigh, and may the time soon come, is my prayer.

I am glad to see Bro. Wilson's Pine Wood Bible Class commence again. I can gain much information from it. I will close wishing all a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

New Years Day may be called the milestone in life's journey, and as we reach another of these anniversary landmarks today, dear readers, permit me to congratulate you on having traveled thus far, and to wish you with all my heart, many similar opportunities of receiving the good will of your Heavenly Father. That your future years may glide happily away, without spot and blemish, is my heartfelt prayer.

To the Scattered Ones:

As I see a request for all to write a few words, will say I am still trying to be an overcomer though I am all alone, but I hope one day to meet you all. Yours waiting.

MRS. CHAS. HARRIS.

Illinois.

Dear Restitution:

Another year is in the past and our Lord still tarries. When the Nobleman left us near 1900 years ago he said, "Occupy till I come." Now what have we accomplished during the year that has just passed? Have we been faithful in the little things of life? Have we spoken the kind words and performed the little acts? Have we dropped the tear of sympathy with those that need our sympathy? Have we rejoiced with those that do rejoice, and wept with those that weep? Have we humbled ourselves under the mighty hand of God as he laid it upon us in affliction? If we have done all this and much more, then as we see the fig tree budding, the signs of the approach of the Goodman of the house, we can rejoice even though we have done no mighty works, yet we feel assured of the approbation of the Master, and an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. My prayer is that every saint might take fresh courage and go forward with renewed zeal, a zeal according to knowledge and fight the good fight of faith, [illegible] each one may lay hold of eternal life and not one be missing. Let us be faithful as the signs thicken.

WALKER PERRINE.

Washington.

Dear Brother Underwood:

As my time will expire the first of next month, will have to renew, it is best to attend to it in time. Another year has passed by and is now with the past years of our lives, and has brought us one year nearer the kingdom, and as the time for our Christmas love feast is near at hand will pen a few lines to renew old acquaintances, help to build one another up in the most holy faith. But it is wonderful what changes have taken place within the past year, it brings to our minds the passage of Scripture, "In the last days perilous times shall come," and these certainly are perilous times, so many accidents of different kinds and murders and suicides innumerable. It certainly is a time to make us think that the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. But there is one subject that claims my attention while writing this letter to the Christmas feast, and that is in regard to Brother Underwood having to make so many urgent appeals to the brethren to pay up their dues. If you who are in the delinquent list cannot pay at the time, I think you ought to send a note or card stating your case, when you think you can, if at all. It is not right for him to carry all the burden, when most any one can get together $1.50 or the half at a time. [illegible] the Church of God look at the matter in its true light. We ought to do to others as we would be done by, and most assuredly there are few of us that would like to carry the amount that Bro. Underwood has had to for some time past.

Your brother in the faith.

W. D. TOWNSEND.

Ohio.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I see the call has been made for letters for our lovefeast and try in our feeble way to write. How kind of our editor to give space for the lovefeast letters, how we enjoy reading the good letters from all the brethren and sisters so far apart, and yet so near together in the faith. The old year is waning, it will soon be numbered with the past, let each and all try to live better in the future than we have in the past so when the years of our life are waning we can look back on a life well spent in the service of our Lord and Master. And that knowing the time that now it is high time to wake out of sleep for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. Rom. xiii. 11. And now brothers and sisters pray for us that we may be faithful to the end, and may we like Paul say we have fought the good fight, we have kept the faith.

J. F. & C. B. CARPENTER.

Kentucky.

Dear Restitution:

What a happy thought to be assured by the Master, that if we believe his Word and obey his commands we shall ever live amid all the glories of the coming age, when this mortal shall have put on immortality and this corruptible shall have put on incorruption. Then our bodies of humiliation shall be fashioned like unto his most glorious body. We shall see Jesus and be like him. The Word also says, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man the things God hath prepared for them that love him. Do we love him in deed and in truth? If so, we will be loyal to his commands and wait for that coming when poor groaning creation shall cease and a more perfect day of equality and oneness, a day when all things shall be made new is ushered in—happy day. We want to be there with all the faithful and help in that grand restoration age. Yours in hope.

W. A. & M. MOORE.

Dear ones of the household of faith:

We are happy to take a part once more in the love feast. We are still striving to serve our Master in our daily walk and conversation, [illegible] dropping a word when ever we have an opportunity to those that will listen and seem interested in the Word of God. Pray for us that we may hold out faithful unto the end.

Your brother and sister in the one faith,

MR. & MRS. L. E. FLARER.

Iowa.

Dear brethren and sisters:

I am glad that we are to have another love feast that all can take part in. I am very thankful for such a dear and good paper as THE RESTITUTION, and how thankful I am to know as many good working brethren, living epistles for the truth sake. I do hope to be able to help the truth to enter some homes in the new year. It makes my heart rejoice to read pieces one after another in the good old paper from the good brethren that sacrifice all of their time in the Lord's service. I ask the prayers of all of the faithful for all of my family to become Christians. It would be a joy to me forever. Isa. lxv. 11, "But let all those that put their trust in thee rejoice, let them ever shout for joy, because thou defendest them. Let them also that love thy name be joyful in thee."

Dear [illegible] and sisters in Christ:

[illegible] we are still firm in the faith once delivered to the saints and trying to let our light shine as fast as we can, though we find very few that are willing to hear or to read. Pray for us that we be not overcome of evil, but may overcome evil with good and be found ready when the Master comes.

Yours in faith and hope.

Dear brothers and sisters scattered abroad greeting:

I wish to join with you in this love feast, and cast my mite in on the Lord's side. My hope centers in the coming of our Lord Jesus and our gathering unto him a resurrection unto eternal life and a home in his everlasting kingdom, which he will establish on the earth. Then justice and equity will be meted out to man. Oh happy day, may it soon come. Jesus tells us to occupy till he does come. We are charged to not forsake the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is, but to exhort one another and so much the more as we see the day approaching. Dear ones, that day is nearing, let us watch and be sober just a little while and he that is to come will come and will not tarry, "Behold I come quickly, said Jesus, and my reward is with me to give to every man as his work shall be." Are we ready to welcome back the King? "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest, take my yoke upon you and learn of me for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest to your souls, for my yoke is easy and my burden light." It is written, Then they that feared the Lord spake often to each other, and the Lord hearkened and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord and that thought upon his name, and they shall be mine saith the Lord of hosts in that day when I make up my jewels, and I will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serveth him, then shall ye return and discern between the righteous and the wicked, for that serveth God and him that serveth him not. For behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven and all the proud (don't let us be proud) and they that do wickedly shall be stubble, and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you that fear my name shall the Son of righteousness arise with healing in his wings, and ye shall go forth and grow up as calves of the stall. Jesus [illegible] as foretold by himself, also [illegible] and prophets. Then he would again the tabernacle of David which is fallen down, and will build again the ruins thereof and will set it up, that the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles upon whom his name is called. As the angel said to Mary the Lord God will give unto him the throne of his father David, and shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever and of his kingdom there shall be no end. The kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him. O glorious promise. may we all be accounted worthy and hear the welcome applaudit. O dear ones, let our lives be pure, lay a fast hold on the precious promises, that we may be made partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world. For many years I have been isolated from church privileges, and can sympathize with those so situated. Stand firmly on the promises, dear ones. I wish you all a happy new year. Remember me in your devotions, that my faith fail not, that I may be accounted worthy of a place in the coming kingdom. Yours waiting until Jesus comes.

[illegible] and sisters.

[illegible] our invitation to our yearly love [illegible] one feel it a privilege to talk with my brothers and sisters, and tell them I still am trying with the help of God to serve him. We all have our trials and tribulations to live down, but we know that God will have a tried people, and what are ours to those of our Savior when on earth, or to those of Peter or Paul, or the other apostles. Paul called them light afflictions, said they were but for a moment, working out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. I am glad and thankful to my heavenly Father for all his kind care through the past year. We cannot count his goodness and blessings we receive from his hands, we take them as a matter of course with hardly a thank you. Let us try to count our blessings, why we soon get lost in the enumeration. We are apt to promise our Lord and Master a better record for the coming year than in the past. Why is this? It is because we see so many mistakes in our lives that we want to improve and live a more perfect life. And so we can, because we read in the Word, to grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. We read in the Word of God, that we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and love one another as he gave us commandment. And he that keepeth this commandment dwelleth in him and he in him. And hereby we know that he abideth in us by the Spirit which he hath given us. I would like to see all of your faces and have a good talk with each of you. I love to read the kind letters of Bro. and Sister Woodward. I wish they would appear oftener. Let us all try and help our paper along the coming year, if all would do a little it would be a great help. Brother Prosser says, God bless THE RESTITUTION. He wishes there was more of it. Hunt up your pen and ink Bro. Prosser and help make more of it.

Yours with love for the Master.

Dear household of like precious faith:

We are one year nearer the realization of our hope. The return of our blessed Jesus is one year nearer. Does the new year find us better fitted to a place in the Lord's kingdom? Are we and have we all the year been on the watch tower? We believe that you like us have tried to live soberly and righteously this past year as a true servant of Jesus should. We trust you will pray for us as we pray for you, that though this life may contain sorrows or blessings we may all live worthy of an inheritance of eternal life.

We wish you all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year until the Lord comes.

Your brother and sister in Christ.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

We are commanded to not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, but to speak often to one another, exhorting one another unto love and good works, and so much more as we see the day approaching, and being isolated from the ones of like precious faith, it gives me much pleasure to take a part in the love feast. Those letters of cheer and encouragement give us strength for the battles of life; and we feel more determined to press on toward the work for the prize of the high calling of God. And dear ones, let us lay aside every weight and the sins that doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race set before us, ever looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith, and make our calling and election sure. We are alone in the faith in a stronghold of sectarianism and need the prayers of the faithful and the help of the Lord, that we may be bold in making known the unsearchable riches of Christ to our neighbors and friends of this vicinity. Now may the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Wishing you a merry Christmas and a home with Jesus when he comes, and health, peace and patience during the waiting time, I am your sister in the hope of the gospel.

Household of the One Faith:

I am still striving by the grace of God helping me, to so live that when the Master shall have come, that I may be acceptable in his sight, trying to improve the talent left in my keeping, that when he comes he may have his own with usury. The signs are that he will soon come to claim his own. The world is filled with violence of all discription, but thanks be to God who giveth us the victory, there are a few faithful ones who have not bowed the knee to Baliai, who are still striving to uphold and spread the gospel of the kingdom of God.

Pray for me that I may be ever found walking in the straight and narrow way, and continually watching. Your Brother in Christ.

Dear brothers and sisters:

The dear Lord has been very gracious to us through the past year. I have some good news to tell you. My aged husband, past 75 years old, has been added to the fold of the Christ. There was no one in this place to put him in the watery grave, and although he was feeble in health he went to the Church of God in the city of Newark, N. J., and Elder Deitz baptized him in the all saving name of Christ. I know all of like precious faith will rejoice with us. Now we can study the holy Word together, and the dear RESTITUTION that is always a welcome visitor. Brothers and sisters, pray for us that we may continue faithful, and have our part in the first resurrection, upon which the second death has no power. Yours in hope.

Dear brothers and sisters:

How grand it is that we are again permitted to take part in this, our annual love feast, yet scattered far over the land, so that we cannot speak face to face with each other, yet how glorious that we can express our hopes in this way. As time is rolling by we can readily see prophecy fulfilling and our hopes growing brighter, for the end of this age and the coming of the Master, who says, "In my Father's house are many mansions." We should yet be patient and establish ourselves unto the coming of the Lord. Paul tells us that the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers having itching ears, and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables. But we should be patient in all things, even unto afflictions. Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works. What precious promises we have in God's Word, let us live in the light and not in darkness, that that day should overtake us as a thief. Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God, even our Father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation and hope through grace, comfort your hearts, and stablish you in every good word and work.

ATTENTION.

We call the attention of those who were placed on our list a year ago as trial subscribers at a reduced rate. Your time is now out, and your paper will be stopped unless you direct it to be continued. We would like to retain your name on our list, but cannot do so unless we hear from you at once. Please give this attention NOW as this notice will not be repeated.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of last year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

A Jewish Rabbi of Philadelphia has started a scheme, to be worldwide, which will move all Jews from the land of the Czar, to any country they may select.

Russia and Japan are both ready, and it seems as if neither will back down and that they must fight before long. No one can tell what will happen, and we can only watch.

Did you ever stop to think that the dollar you handed the preacher paid him for the very hours of time he spent in studying up the discourse which decided the mind of your next door neighbor, and started him toward the kingdom? If you had not given that dollar the preacher could not have accomplished his part of the work. Perhaps, yes, quite likely, the dollar you pay to send this paper to your friend, will be the means of starting him on the road to the saint's abode. If you could be positively assured that it would do so, would you hold back the money? It cannot be definitely guaranteed to you, but this can be assured—YOUR part was done. It is our—mine—your privilege to sow. The increase is in God's hand; but He holds us responsible for our share in the work. Will he count your part well done?

A Bit of History.

Sometimes the writing of history is a good thing. By it we are kept posted of what is going on in the world. In the Bible Advocate of Stanberry, Mo. (a Seventh Day Sabbath journal) dated Jan. 6, 1903, there is a double column portrait of "Elder" G. M. Myers, with quite a write up of his life, wherein it is stated that he "is now a confirmed Sabbath keeper, and a strong advocate of God's ancient day of rest," and advising those desiring meetings to arrange to have him visit them.

A communication dated Sept. 25, 1903, over the signature of G. M. Myers says in speaking of his present church membership, that "in December, 1902, I placed my membership with the 'Restitutionists—Church of God'—in Stanberry, Missouri, which church, as I do, holds to, and observes the Sabbath."

Inasmuch as our Church of God does not hold to the above named doctrine, and inasmuch as our Church of God never had an organization in Stanberry, Mo., it is evident that this man connected himself with a church organization other than our kind. As it is impossible for an honest man to be a member of two different churches at the same time, (we wish to give the man credit for honesty) it must be patent to all that his connection with our Church was severed of his own accord. During the year just past, the above named paper has contained articles and reports from his pen, and to all appearances he has been recognized by them as one of their number.

In Dec. 1903, this "Church of God" to which Myers belonged, held a "General" Conference at Stanberry, Mo. During this meeting a list of names was submitted by a previously appointed committee, with recommendation that minister's credentials be given them. The list did not contain the name of G. M. Myers. At the same time a resolution was presented and adopted setting forth that the church had suffered from the "intrusion" of certain men who were "abusing the confidence imposed in them, by stirring up division among the churches, and distrust among the members," and refusing to grant credentials to such in future. Of course no names were given, and we can only draw an inference, which may or may not be correct. However, later in the conference the proceedings show that "G. M. Myers appeared in the conference and asked that his name be erased from the roll. The request was granted."

An editorial in the same issue that contains the report of the Conference (Dec. 29, 1903) reads as follows:

"Elder G. M. Myers came among us about one year ago of his own free will, and has left us of his own free will, and that is the end of a very short chapter."

From the foregoing our readers can see that "Elder" G. M. Myers is not now a member of the "Restitutionists—Church of God—of Stanberry, Mo." It is not to be supposed that he would be allowed to so soon re-connect himself with our Church of God again, so he must be floating about on the sea somewhere, unless he has gone back to the Christian Church where he belonged before he came among us "of his own free will." Or perhaps he may have followed the leadership of Dowie and such as he, and formed a church of his own. We do not know as to this, but the above history can be supported by the documents, and is correct. Our reason for giving it is not to find fault with him or his Stanberry brethren, but to let our people know what has happened, and they will of course be governed accordingly.

Communicated.

Christmas.

The day regarded throughout the civilized world as the anniversary of the birth of our Savior is nearly here. Co-extensive with the belief that Jesus was born on the 25th of December will be the merry making, the good cheer, and the giving and receiving of gifts.

The nabobs of wealth will give costly dinners, inviting their rich neighbors to share with them in their festivities, mirth, wit, and wine. The well-to-do will spread a less costly board, but one to which they would not be ashamed to invite a king. The poor, out of their very limited means, will set something apart in honor of the day that gave to the world a Redeemer. And the children, from the boy and girl just entering their teens down to the wee prattler at mamma's knee, are all expectant of gifts from older hands and hearts. The tots of tender years will hang up stockings, and dream through the night of the many little inexpensive gifts with which they will find them filled when Christmas morning dawns. Older children will look for a glad surprise in the shape of something, they know not what, brought from its hiding place in the closet or some place where kindly hands had concealed it with the thought of making the young heart bound with joy; and of sharing the joy themselves.

Just now I begin to wonder whether any great sin or crime was ever committed on the day made memorable by so many tokens of good will and when merry-making is so much in play. I have no statistics at hand giving the date and day of crime committed; but I will venture to give it as my judgment that fewer crimes are committed on this day than on other days less hallowed by joy and gladness. Moods of mind have something to do with crime.

How many of all the millions, who bestow or receive gifts think seriously of the one great Gift of the Father's love—the gift of his Son? Comparatively few. Children glibly speak the name of the Christ-child of lowly birth; the giddy and gay youth scarcely think of it at all, there being too much of the grave and solemn associated with his life character and mission to harmonize with their hilarity. Others are thoughtless enough, and rude enough to pronounce that sacred name in jest or utter it in profanity. Who pauses amid the festivities, the mirth and the profusion of gifts to meditate on the many titles expressive of his work, and mission of love to a race [illegible] wicked works, and doomed [illegible] by the decree of the Almighty [illegible] reign of the universe? The Savior, the Redeemer, the Light and Life, the Way and the Truth, the Mighty Counsellor, the Prince of Peace, and the Lord of lords and the King of kings. All these are no empty titles but are full of meaning.

How many of the countless millions who by the force of a time-honored custom celebrate the day of his birth would welcome his coming in power and glory? Many who accept the fact of his advent as the babe in the manger, and the "man of sorrows, acquainted with grief," reject the doctrine of his second coming to manifest his mighty power; to punish his open and avowed enemies and to carry to completion the plan of the ages. Others though yielding assent to the promise of his coming are no sufficiently interested in it to embrace it as the blessed hope, and to earnestly pray for its consummation, and many professing his name have substituted for it another hope, a false one, and have by so doing robbed themselves of its precious [illegible] here. But there is a company of watchers who, loving this blessed hope purify themselves even as he is pure. 1 John iii. 3. These are striving to bear the moral image of the lowly Nazarene in order that they may bear the physical and heavenly image of this same lowly one, who had been raised after the power of an endless life. It is one thing to believe the fact of his coming as a mere theory but quite another to ardently desire and pray for his coming as the one event to satisfy the heartfelt longings for the things so sorely needed. Are we crying out of hearts that feel the depths of our needs: "Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly, as the echo of his own words sent back to his waiting church?

The Christ Life.

The life of Christ manifested in the true believer will never cast a shade that will darken the pathway of others, but on the contrary they will radiate a pure life born from above, which cheers and encourages their fellow travelers as they journey amidst the darkness of midnight, to meet the coming King.

These precious jewels, good Samaritan like feels for others sorrows, and love to administer an healing balm to every wounded heart. They greet the sad and afflicted with a face radiant with holy joy. Their presence in the chamber of sadness, is like the cheery sunshine. Love, kind acts, and words of consolation distill from their lips like the gentle dew-drops. The atmosphere feels purer by reason of their presence.

If the Christ life dwells within, it will act as a guiding star to others besides ourselves, and will tide us over many a difficulty of life, and enable us to safely land upon the evergreen shore, the home of the blessed and the pure. Take courage. The King is coming.

Yours in Christ.

Revelation and Science.

The six days of creation have been always a trouble to some earnest seekers after the truth of God. I remember well how, before my conversion, I was prejudiced against the Word of God, because of the apparent impossibility of reconciling it with current science. I therefore sympathise deeply with any lover of [illegible] in his difficulties; and I [illegible] submit some thoughts that [illegible] ful to me.

In considering the history of Science, and especially of those sciences that are supposed to clash with Revelation, it is noteworthy that very little that was considered true in one age was thought to be true in another; yet from the time of Thales (600 B.C.), down to the present day, there have always been intellectual and confident thinkers giving us theories of the Universe, some of which have lasted for centuries and swayed the greatest of minds.

Origen apologised for the Bible in the 3rd century, but to what purpose! The Science of Celsus, who had so successfully opposed the Bible, has long passed away into the region of curious philosophical fancies, but Nature, which he professed to explain, remains unaltered.

The Bible remains the same also, though the creeds and interpretations of theologians change just as science changes.

Let us remember, Science has not yet uttered its last word in interpreting Nature, and Theology has not said its last word in interpreting Scripture.

We cannot afford to despise Science, it has its domain, and a very useful one too. It has important problems to solve, which Revelation does not solve. As we can thank God for those senses which most of us happily possess, so we can thank him also for the scientific minds who have given us the steam engine, the electric telegraph, the telescope, the use of anæsthetics, and a host of things which God had intended man should possess when he blessed him and told him to "replenish the earth and subdue it." These scientific benefactors have most frequently been earnest believers in the Word of God.

But let us not trespass, i.e., let us not use Science in the field of Revelation. The Greek schools wasted a thousand years in such trespassing, using some of the highest intellects of Europe to sow the wind and to reap [illegible]

Why has God given us a revelation at all, what necessity for it, if he merely tells us something which he has already made us capable of finding out for ourselves?

The watchmaker must know best exactly what the beautiful piece of mechanism he has constructed is capable of doing; he would be the last to touch it up, to super-add something after he had pronounced it "very good." What then is the purpose of a revelation? Obviously it must be to repair some injury; to give us back something we have lost; to tell us something, which, without that revelation we could never know.

I do not study the Bible to find out how to navigate a ship from here to New Zealand. To do that I must know something of the figure of the earth. Science has taught us that, and we reach the antipodes in safety, praising God for thus enabling us to subdue the earth.

But can Science tell us how our guilty consciences can obtain peace?

Can it tell us who made us, or the Universe, and what his character is?

When we are brought under a deep conviction of sin, it is then we find out why God has given us a revelation, and its preciousness.

To me it matters little whether the Bible is supposed to say the earth is flat, or round; or whether it was made in ten seconds or ten million years, so long as it gives me a new energy whereby I can overcome sin.

Can Science turn a bad man into a good one? Nay, with all the discoveries of Science, with all our modern civilization, the problem of human depravity is untouched except by the Gospel.

Of all the apologies of Origen for Christianity, only one was worth anything, but that one outweighed a million-fold all the scientific objections of Celsus. Roman Society at that time was a hotbed of vice and immorality. The Philosophers might reason with the people, they could not stem the tide of corruption; but Origen could point out that into whatever household the teaching of the despised Nazarene entered, there vice and immorality were bound to depart.—Vide Froude's Short Studies.

Then there is the life beyond the grave. All the world over, and as long as the world has stood, the human being has sighed for a hope of life beyond the grave, and has invented many fanciful theories to satisfy that craving; fancies to which he will cling as tenaciously as a drowning man to a straw.

But God gives us a clear revelation; Jesus declares in no uncertain terms, "I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth on me, though he die, yet shall he live, and he that liveth and believeth on me shall never die." And he proves his proposition by experiment, just as any other scientific teacher would prove to his class some chemical or electrical theory. He brings to life a man who has been dead four days, about whose death there could be no question; but best of all by the unanswerable fact of his own resurrection.

Where can Science give us such a hope of life from the dead as this? A hope worth any sacrifice, a hope for which men will sacrifice all they have "not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection." Here is the domain of Revelation.

Sin brought misery and death, and for six thousand years both Revelation and History has recorded the bitter wail of the human race;—and have we no hope, no respite, no deliverance? The answer of Science in all ages, and more emphatically in this, is the bitter wail of the Agnostic. No hope. No knowledge. All dark. Only the mockery of a deluded imagination, which tries to perpetuate the fancy of the ancient Greeks—that wisdom which was foolishness with God. But let us praise God that where Science is silent, there God in his love and mercy steps in with a Revelation!

Christ comes and gives us an invincible hope, which all the efforts of the powers of darkness, so relentlessly brought to bear against it through 19 centuries, to shatter it, has been all unavailing.

"Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." So far the words of the Divine Nazarene have come true, but the science of his age, which scorned his teaching, is almost forgotten.

If the Bible be made to agree with the science of this age, that science may be wrong in the next.

There always has been, and there is always bound to be, friction on the borderland between the domains of Science and Revelation. Let us remember that the lofty and all important truths of Revelation [illegible] beyond the pale of Science. Equally the valuable and most necessary truths of Science are outside of Revelation, but Trespassers Beware!—E. W. Browne, in The Faith.

Worthy of Friends.

In speaking of friendship recently a thoughtful woman, whose life has never lacked love, said: "I learned long ago to pray, 'Make me worthy of friendship and give me friends.'"

How few ever think of a prayer like that, especially of its first petition! Too often friends are considered a natural right, and the lack of them a wrong and injustice for which humanity is to be berated and providence complained of. Yet friendship is one of God's choicest gifts, and it is worth while to pray to be made worthy of it—to be brave, loyal, honest, unselfish; to be true when interests clash, and faithful when faithfulness costs.

There is, indeed, much that calls itself friendship which does not deserve the name, and many a life basks in sincere and earnest love of which it is not worthy, but one who appreciates affection at its real value may well pray humbly to be made worthy of it. For the office of true friendship is a high calling; it uplifts both in its giving and receiving.—The Wellspring.

Value of Small Gifts.

When they laughed at St. Theresa who wanted to build a great orphanage and had but three shillings to begin with, she answered: "With three shillings Theresa can do nothing, but with God and her three shillings there is nothing which Theresa cannot do."

South America is but little known to the people of the United States. Common interests should unite the bonds of friendship between those of the North and of the South. The first step toward closer ties is a knowledge of the evolution and building up of the South American states. But aside from this fact, the story of the overthrow of the wonderful Inca Empire by Pizarro and his little band of desperadoes in all history. "The Dramatic History of South America," by Cyrus Townsend Brady, in the January Cosmopolitan, proves over again the old law that "They that take the sword shall perish by the sword."

ANOTHER OFFER.

There is a general waking up among our people everywhere. Our public speakers are all busy, and calls are in excess of their ability to attend them. Many places want preaching at the same time, but must wait their turn. This shows a decided interest, and a desire among our brethren to sound out the Word to the yet unsaved. All seem to realize that the night is far spent, that the time to work is short.

Brothers and Sisters, our work is not well done, and is not ready for acceptance of God, unless we have done all we can—our very utmost. We cannot admit that it is our duty to do anything at all for the advancement of the Master's cause, without conceding it is our duty to do all we can—to make a sacrifice even.

Preachers of other denominations as well as our own, know and say that the best workers in a community are those who take and read their Church [illegible] is being done in the various departments of the work, and are thus interested in pushing along the car of truth.

The Managers of The Restitution are endeavoring to so conduct the paper that it will be a fit aid to the Evangelist in his work. We are trying to keep it clear from that contention that leads to mischief and strife. This is done by having certain well-defined truths which are taught in God's Word plainly, as a basis of belief, and by publishing articles that accord with these declared principles. Other outside subjects might be "investigated" as long as life and pencil and paper lasts, and no decision ever be reached, but we do not consider this a profitable work to engage in, hence do not ask for contributions on such subjects, and do not want them. Such are usually but the "opinion" of a man, and are often based on a mere inference at best.

This paper aims to teach the truth of the Bible, and the same is declared and believed in by our Church. We therefore believe it is a fit missionary to be sent out to the unsaved and lost of the human family. In order to make it possible for our friends to do more of this missionary work than ever before, we make this offer:

Any one sending us $10.00 may select 13 names of those not now subscribers, to whom we will send the paper for the year 1904. This makes a trifle over one-half regular price if taken in lots of $10.00 worth. You and the office practically go halves in scattering the truth of the gospel to your neighbors and friends. You who have money think of this. For $100 you can preach to an audience of 130 people over 200 sermons the coming year. Can you do better with that amount of money? You have a minister come to your neighborhood perhaps once a month, giving you two or may be three discourses each time—possibly 30 a year. When he is coming you invite your neighbors in to hear him. Suppose those neighbors have had The Restitution in their homes each week when the preacher was not there, and have read the articles, and are interested to hear more. Does not this increase largely the chances of the preacher being able to speak the very words that will start your friend on the way to the kingdom? Did you ever think of this matter? [illegible] you do you will not hesitate to go half partner with us in this work.

Who will send $10, $20, $50, $100 for this work? The best time to start it is now. Select your names and send at once, so they will get the rest of this year and all of next.

Begin Right.

A new year should begin in an act of consecration and sacrifice. When old father Abraham, whom Gentiles as well as Jews love, was about to start out on a journey, the first thing which he seems to have habitually done was to build an altar. Abraham's way is the only right method. All true works begin in worship. "In the beginning, God"—that was the way the physical creation began. Life to-day in so far as it is good and gainful derives and develops from the same great theistic premise.—Zion's Herald.

An Old Story.

O long have they sung of the Judean plain,
Where shepherds were watching their flock by night,
Though the story is old I will tell it again,
How the shepherds astonished, beheld with affright
An angel of God who came down from above
With a message to them. 'Twas a message of love.

The shepherds amazed with wonder profound,
Saw the glory of God, which was shining around,
Heard the angel proclaiming in accents most clear
That he was a servant of God, they had nothing to fear.
They then listened calmly with wondrous delight,
To the angel who stood there in a halo of light.

Then he told the glad news which astonished them more,
It was that which the prophets had told long before,
That a Savior should come, in the fullness of time,
That a child should be born of David's own line,
And this is the sign that he gave to them then
That they would know when they saw the

The heavenly babe in a stable you'll find,
With Mary his mother, along with the kine,
In the city of David, in Bethlehem town.
In long swathing bands the Savior'll be found.
So go to him there and your Savior adore,
'Tis he whom the prophets foretold long before.

Hark! as he spoke o'er the Judean plain
Floated music celestial in melodious strain.
Glad angels were coming and singing this song:
All glory to God in the highest below
Then all the bright angels joined in the refrain,
It was Peace upon earth and good will to men.

Annual Love Feast Letters.

Editor Restitution:

It is almost Christmas, and as the brethren and sisters of the Household of Faith are requested to write a word of encouragement for each other, in my poor way I thought I would say a few words.

We are living in a grand and awful time, when the signs indicate the return of the Nobleman from the far country to set up his kingdom, raise the dead and reward his children of all ages. The question is—Are we ready, and worthy of a place in that kingdom? Shall we hear the welcome applaudit of Well done, or will we hear the King say Depart?

Brethren and sisters, let us double our diligence to make our calling and election sure. Let us live as we shall wish we had when the Lord shall reward us all according to our works. Let us be workers of righteousness and true holiness, taking up our cross daily, following in the steps of the Master. Let us so live that neither death nor life, nor angels nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Soon the joyful news will come, child your Father calls, come home.

Editor Restitution:

Since the invitation has been so kindly extended to one and all to partake of this yearly love feast, let us gather around the table of the Lord, and partake of the good things pertaining to lifeeternal. Life, how much that small word implies, life for the asking. Dear ones, let us work in unity of the Spirit, that the light which the Father hath given us may shine out and around our every effort. God grant that all who have taken upon themselves the name of Christ may prove worthy to inherit that life.

Yours waiting in hope.

Editor Restitution;

Christmas greeting to all household of faith. I think the Lord is soon coming to reign on the earth, that now is the time for his people to rejoice, for their redemption draweth nigh. Who are his people? All those who love his appearing. Watch therefore, for in such an hour as ye think not our Lord doth come.

Dear brethren and sisters:

I am thankful we are favored with another blessed opportunity of making known our thoughts through The Restitution, our dear old friend. It comes to us laden with the good things of the kingdom from week to week, and still we are hungry and thirsty for more. They that feared [illegible] one to another, and the Lord hearkened and heard, and bless the Lord he hears us still, when we call upon him in faith, believing that he will answer our petitions in his own good time and way. Nearly all of you are strangers to me, but God knows our hearts, that we are in Christ Jesus, and have that fervent love for one another that Christ had when he gave his life for us. I am rejoicing in the blessed hope of his coming and kingdom, anxious to see the King in his beauty. Let us be faithful to the end, having on the wedding garment, ready at the sound of the trumpet to go out to meet him in the air, so shall we ever be with the Lord. Come Lord Jesus and come quickly. Amen. Your sister in Christ.

Brothers and sisters:

As we have been requested to write a few lines for the love feast, I too want to join in with the loved ones and take part in the feast and speak a word for my Lord and Master, who is soon to come. Let us ask ourselves, Are we ready for Christ to come? If we truly love him we love his appearing. I am still strong in the one faith, and I am trying to press forward in the good cause to make my calling and election sure. I love to read the good letters of The Restitution and want to be at the love feast even though a little late. Dear ones, let us be watchful and fit ourselves for the kingdom is my prayer. Your sister waiting for the soon coming of our Savior.

Dear ones in Christ:

As the socalled holidays approach, and our editor has kindly asked us to share in the annual love feast, there is a thought that weighs heavily on my mind, and to which I call the attention of the household of faith. The 25th day of December as we now count time by general consent is observed as the birthday of Jesus of Nazareth. We are not quite sure that he was born on that day, yet that day has been selected, and it is well to observe it. Its celebration reminds us of how much we owe to his birth, his life and to his teachings. It is sad however to reflect that by papal cunning and intrigue the truth expressing word "birthday" has been twisted and changed into "mass day." Think of changing "Christ's birthday" into "Christ-mass-day." How would it sound in speaking of Washington's birthday to call it "Washington-mas day." The Catholic church has sought to fasten on the world (and has accomplished it) through this day a form of her religion—the saying of mass—missa. If the mass represented the eucharist, and the emblems are the real body of Christ offered in a bloodless sacrifice, even then it would be difficult to understand how the death of Christ could apply to his birth day. Jesus did not die on Dec. 25, why then say Christmas, why not say birthday. We are even following the Catholics into deeper folly. Why, we are even making a X (cross) and adding mass to that. We write Christ's birthday with a cross X and a mass—Xmas. Brethren in the Christ, let us drop this foolishness of Catholicism, and when we speak of the holy day we are to celebrate in honor of his birth, let us write it "Christ's birthday," and speak of it as his birthday, instead of a mass with a cross before it. Let us cut loose from this chain of bondage, and be free men and women in Christ Jesus.

John, the beloved disciple of Jesus, seemed to drink in the Master's Spirit of love more deeply than the rest. As we read in the third chapter of 1st John: "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God; therefore, the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not. Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in himself purifieth himself, even as he is pure." How positive John was, "we know," he says, "that when he appears we shall be like him." What a comfort, what a hope to stimulate us to action! A man that hath this knowledge will indeed purify himself. John says in another place, "We know we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." That love is manifested in its operation in the [illegible] 1st Corinthians. Brother and [illegible] especially you at Plum River, won't you read it prayerfully? As every [illegible] homes at new year takes inventory, to see how their account stands, [illegible] should we do in our Christian life, as James says, "He that looks in the perfect law of liberty, continueth therein." He is not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the Word. Instead of judging one another in meat or in drink, or on a Sabbath day, let us judge this rather that we do not put a stumbling block in the way of any. How sad it is, dear ones, to hear the young people say, that they would not be baptized if they could not live better than some who are members in the church. How can we expect them to lay hold on eternal life, if our lives do not reflect the truth? Paul says, "Let him that nameth the name of the Lord depart from iniquity." Rotherham puts it still stronger, "Let him stand aloof." It is one thing, dear ones, to suffer for Christ's sake, it is quite another to suffer on account of my disobedience to God. The Father does not want us to suffer because of disobedience, but if we [illegible] along with the Christ, we can [illegible] rejoice. My letter is getting longer than I expected. I wish you all a happy new year, and may you be found of him in peace when he comes.

Your brother.

Dear brethren in Christ:

Another Christmas will soon be here. Time hastens on, the night is far spent and the day of deliverance is at hand. Now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. Soon, if faithful, we will hear Jesus say, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." And then will we enter upon that life that will never end. May we not forget that this is a life of toil and suffering but the promise is, "If we suffer with him we shall also reign with him." Paul exhorts us, To fight the fight of faith and lay hold on everlasting life. The promises will be fulfilled, because he is faithful who has promised. The Bible reveals to us a blessed hope for the Christian, a hope which serves as an anchor for the soul both sure and steadfast, and enters into that within the vail, whither Jesus our forerunner has for us entered, there to act as high priest having obtained eternal redemption for us, and will soon appear the second time without a sin offering, to the salvation of all who are looking for him and who love his appearing. It will be a blessed thing to receive that crown of glory that will not fade away. Let us remember it is for them who overcome. Seeing we are looking for that blessed hope, let us be diligent that we may be found of him in peace without spot and blameless, ever looking unto Jesus, who is the author and finisher of our faith and who for the joy placed before him endured the cross, despising the shame and overcame, and is set down with the Father in his throne, and the promise is if we overcome we will be permitted to sit with him in his throne, when he comes to reign in justice and righteousness in the earth. May we all try to overcome.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

I still am looking, earnestly desiring, the appearing of the dear Savior, and praying every day Thy kingdom come. Although rather isolated and afflicted, yet I am rich in faith. I love to read The Restitution, and see what is said relating to the return of the Master. I am 83 years old.

Yours in the gospel hope.

Dear brothers and sisters:

If you want the best things to feast on, not limited, and the best investment plan ever offered, endorsed to you as a partner, and profits are immense and no money wanted, see him at once. He said, "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." Therefore sanctify the Lord God in your hearts, for a feast in hope of glory; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. Fear not little flock; keep your lights trimmed and burning yet a little while, he will come and save you, be ye therefore ready. No heathen mythology, capital and labor antagonism, or monopolies in coal, oil, or other fields of the industrial kingdom of Christ. Then one will plant and not another do the eating, all tears will be abolished. Faith works by love in which Christ offers us absolute freedom. All that soweth to the [illegible] corrupting and no- [illegible] ownership of all the [illegible] the rivers to the ends of [illegible]. O cheer up feeble ones, [illegible] in heart shall see God. The [illegible] shall inherit the earth, and [illegible] delight themselves in the abundance of peace and their inheritance shall be forever. Dear ones feast in humility, so that in his own pleasure all faithful ones will be exalted by favor to inherit the kingdom (this earth) prepared like the garden of Eden. Christ's kingdom will abide forever; Let us rejoice evermore. Pray without ceasing and in every thing give thanks; for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus, concerning you.

Editor Restitution:

I would like to say to the loved ones of like precious faith, that as the time for our love feast is at hand, I hope that all will speak a few words of cheer. Although my few lines may not encourage any one, yet I feel that I improve this opportunity and [illegible] year is almost [illegible] a new year will soon be here, [illegible] uncertain and death claims its victims, we may never have another chance to write a few lines for our loved paper. How anxious we are every week for it to come, and we find so much to encourage us to press on until the Savior comes. Dear brothers and sisters are we all watching and waiting for him? I can say, for one, that I am longing for him to come, for then we will have righteous rule and sin and wickedness will be no more. Righteousness will cover the earth as the waters cover the face of the mighty deep, and none shall say, Know ye the Lord, for all shall know him. Then sickness, sorrow pain and death will be felt and feared no more. My health is very poor and often when lying on my bed and can not sleep, I think of the passage in Matt. xi. 28, "Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give rest." We can rest now on the promises, but when the Savior comes, if we are found with the wedding garment on, we will enjoy the everlasting rest which is prepared for those that love his appearing. May God grant that each one of us who has named the name of Christ may be prepared to meet in that kingdom where there will be no more parting.

Wishing you all a Happy New Year, I am your Sister in Christ.

To the Household of Faith:

As it is again time for us to enjoy our love feast, let us not be backward in giving in our testimony, as children of one family, and all having the same hope, and all built on the same sure Word of promise recorded in the Book divine. This makes our hope both sure and steadfast, and as another year has rolled around since our love feast table was so bountifully spread, I hope we will again be feasted with the bread which cometh down from heaven, which if we eat thereof we shall never die. I will say that as a church we have much to be thankful for; and nothing strange has happened us more than is common among men, and we are glad to say that we have been visited by several of our able speakers during the past year, and their labor of love has proved very edifying to us as students of the Word of life, and as we have not a regular pastor we are very thankful that the Lord has put it in the hearts of his ministers to visit us and hold forth the Word of life, which teaches us to lay ourselves of all ungodliness and worldly lusts, and to lay aside every [illegible] sin, and the sin which doth so [illegible] run the race that [illegible] looking unto Jesus, who is the author and finisher of our faith. Brethren and sisters, let us all so run that we may obtain a crown of life that fadeth not away, which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give at that day, to them who by patient continuance in well doing, hold out faithful to the end of the Christian race. May we all contribute our best Christmas gifts to the King of kings and Lord of lords. Let us present our bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is our reasonable service. Household of the One Faith:

The time for our annual greeting is here. Last year about this time we had the same privilege, and now the unknown is known. Day by day the year 1903 passed by, and we are about to begin another. Looking back over the year my heart is lifted up in thanksgiving, for the blessings which have followed the efforts of our little band in Salem. We began the year determined to spread the good news of the kingdom, and life only in Christ. There were many obstacles, every inch of ground has been contended for, but we have been strengthened and built up in our most holy faith, adding the much needed courage. The Conference we all know resulted in our earnest, able Brother Neill being kept in the field, and his amiable wife ably and successfully occupying the pulpit here. We gladly recommend Brother and Sister Neill to the brethren scattered abroad as valuable workers in the cause of our blessed Master. Our little band has again been visited by the grim monster death. Our dear Sister Knowles, strong faith and courage surmounted every obstacle. She could truly say with the apostle, "I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." The vacancy in our household is filled by this blessed hope, and may each of us endure to the end, and obtain with her that "crown lawfully won," that glorious inheritance in that land where none of the inhabitants shall say, "I am sick." Glad day may it soon come.

Hindrances.

There are ever hindrances in the way of the work of God, and if we are to do that work we must be prepared to meet with obstacles on every hand. And as Satan is wise to hinder the work of the Lord, we must be wise to carry it forward. There is constant need of patient, persistent planning, contriving, and laboring, to accomplish the things God has given us to do. If we are easily rebuffed, if we are faint-hearted, if we are discouraged, then we may be sure that Satan will spare no pains to interrupt the work; but if we are strong in faith, unwearied in effort, and constant in our patient labor, we shall find ourselves more than conquerors.

Success is a duty; we are commanded to "be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." If one way is blocked we must take another; if one path is closed we must turn and look toward that which is open; if the stream is dammed it must turn aside from the obstruction and find a channel round it; and so day by day taking fresh courage and gaining fresh expedience, we must finish that which God has given us to do.

Our time for working here is short and if we allow ourselves to be baffled and defeated, if we abandon our work because of obstacles or allow it to be perverted and demoralized by compromises, then our lives will be failures and our labor will be in vain. But if we push forward, and use all skill and energy and effort to accomplish that which God has given us to do, he will give us greater wisdom than our adversaries possess, he will stand by us to accomplish the work that he has set before us. (God help us to be workers together with him, "steadfast, unmovable, abounding in the work of the Lord."—H. L. H.

Signs of Life.

Men carry unconscious signs of their life about them. Those that come from the forge, and those from the lime and mortar, and those from the humid soil, and those from dusty travel, bear signs of being workmen and of their work. One need not see a merry face or a sad one whether it had come forth from joy or grief. Tears and laughter tell their own story. Should one come home with fruit, we say, "Thou art from the orchard;" if with hand fulls of wild flowers, "Thou are from the fields;" if one's garment smell of mingled odors we say, "Thou hast walked in a garden." But now much more, if one hath seen God, hath had converse of hope and love, and hath walked in the heavenly way, should he carry in his eye, his words and his perfumed raiment the sacred tokens of Divine intercourse!—Parish Visitor.

WILL YOU TRY IT?

The Power of a "No."

The most tremendous word in the English language is the short yet mighty word No. It has been the pivot on which innumerable destinies have turned for this world and the next. Spoken at the right moment, it has saved multitudes from disgrace, from ruin. The splendid career of Joseph turned on the prompt "no," spoken at the very nick of time. Had he stopped to parley with that wanton woman (as too many young men stop to talk with a bright-eyed temptress in the street), he would have been lost. "How can I do this great wickedness and sin against God?" saved him from the dizzy edge of the precipice. Daniel might easily have said to himself, "Oh, everybody about the court here drinks wine and lives high on the king's meat. I do not want to be thought queer or Puritanical." He dared to be singular. At the end of two weeks he had a cleaner countenance and a sweeter breath than any of the fast livers in the palace. "So did not I," was the motto of this sturdy young teetotaler. If he had yielded to the current of temptation, and drifted with it, we never should have heard of such a man as Daniel. All the people who make a marked success in life and who achieve any good work for God are the people who are not ashamed to be thought singular. The man who runs with the crowd counts for nothing. It is when he turns about and faces the multitude who are rushing on to do evil, that he commands every eye. Then by bold protest he may "put a thousand to flight." So the young monk, Luther, turned about and faced the hosts of the Papacy. His heroic "No," nailed up on the church door of Wittenberg, aroused Europe from its delusive and deadly dreams. Standing alone, he was reinforced by the Almighty.—T. L. Cuyler.

Good Interest.

"My son," said a banker to his son, "I want to give you a lesson in business. Here is a half dollar. Now, if you can find any boy whom you can trust, who will take this money and pay you interest for it; you may lend it to him; and if you invest this wisely I'll increase your capital." When night came the banker said, "My son, how did you invest your money to-day?" "Well, father," replied the little fellow, "I saw a boy on the street without any shoes, and he had no dinner; so I gave him my fifty cents to buy something to eat with." "You'll never make a business man in the world," said the banker; "business is business. But I will try you once more. Now, here is a dollar to invest; see how well you can do it." The boy laughed aloud and then explained: "My Sunday-school teacher said giving to the poor was the lending to the Lord; and she said he would return to us double; but I did not think he would do it so quick."—James R. White.

A Paying Institution.

Among all of Uncle Sam's projects, there is no department which is, proportionately, as great a source of income as the Patent Office, and yet, at the same time, no branch of the Government owes its origin to a more beneficent purpose. In the earliest days of the colonies the now proverbial Yankee proclivity for invention was recognized as a possibly important factor in the improvement of conditions in the New World, and when the colonists had secured the right to enact laws for their own government this question was one of the first to be considered. President Washington, in his first address to Congress, 1790, called attention to the matter and urged the expediency of giving effectual encouragement to the exertions of skill and genius in the production of new and useful inventions, and from this suggestion came the present American patent system, which, as one writer on international law has said, "is generally recognized by the most profound students of our institutions, both at home and abroad, to have contributed more than any other one thing to the pre-eminence of this country in the industrial arts and in manufactures." It is only within the archives of the Patent Office that one is able to obtain anything like a correct idea of the wide range of the inventive ingenuity of the American people; for up to the present time nearly seven hundred thousand patents have been issued, while the receipts of the department are so much greater than its expenditures that the balance in the Treasury on account of the patent fund now exceeds five million dollars. —Collier's Weekly.

A Christmas Gift.

"What would you like for a Christmas gift, mother dear?"
Said my only boy C——. Then at heart I drew near,
And answered, "I would like one that will last 'Till memory and years are all in the past."

You wonder, you say, what this gift shall be?
Well, wait till I write, thus you ever can see.
A boy—ay, a man—with face true and serene,
So nothing, save right and love can within that heart teem,
With true manly courage, who never would dare
Do a deed unbecoming, whenever or where.

A boy, obedient and thoughtful, good-natured and pure,
Who can all the day long just praises secure.
One thankful for mercies, not forgetting man's man's fall,
Or that the heavenly Father sent salvation for all.

In the hearts of all mothers who their boys truly love,
Will this gift, realized, be as treasures above.
Such boys are worth millions of gifts, so to say,
Since each deed is a blessing in the home, every day.

Personal Effort.

This is the age of associations; individual effort is in a large manner superseded by corporated action. We do nearly all our good by Committees and Societies. Many, feeling unable altogether to escape from the responsibility of doing something for the cause of Christ, pay others to act as their substitutes; and thus organizations are necessitated to accomplish mechanically, as it were, what can only be done effectually by individual effort. Such organizations no doubt accomplish a vast amount of good, and it is not easy to see how, in the present state of society, they could safely be abolished; but it must be acknowledged by all who thought deeply on the subject, that Christian work has been too exclusively directed into this channel, and that it would be well if, along with this concerted action, there were more of spontaneous and intelligent individual exertion. What the world needs more than anything else—more than the gifts of money, rules, speeches, theories, organizations—is the revival of personal agency; the touch of a hand, the glance of an eye, the tone of a voice, the sympathy of warm, loving hearts, charged with all healing influences, to sow the desolate wilderness thickly with the good seed of the kingdom. We wish the sower to go forth alone, and, by individual contact with the evil of the world, to remedy it by the influence of personal faith any living love. Like Elijah, we want the servant of Christ to lay his own living body, through sympathy, upon the dead body of suffering and sin; and thus, by imparting warmth to it, prepare it for restoration to spiritual life. Like a greater than Elijah, who identified himself with the outcasts of society, and said, "Zaccheus, come down, for to-day I must abide at thy house," we want every Christian, who is a debtor to all men, to go home with the poor and the ignorant, and make their trials his own, that thus he may truly relieve and bless them. It is required that there should be a real crucifixion of the flesh in the blessed labors of the cross. Such sowing would do far more good than any other agency. He that sows and he that reaps, in such a case, would rejoice together in the harvest. 1 Cor. iii. 8; xv. 58; xii. 7-11.

There are always those who wrap their talent for service in the napkin of not-worth-while. They feel that they could not do much because their ability is so small, and, therefore, they do not try to do anything. They suppose that they are practicing the much-praised virtue of humility, while really they are evading duty and responsibility and thus incurring blame and guilt. The truth is, no one however small his ability, need live uselessly. God bestows no talents which he means to be wrapped up in napkins of any kind. Of course, we cannot give what we have not. But we should give always what we have. We are never to say, "There is no use in my giving, for I have so little. In can do no one any good." We have nothing to do with the matter of larger or smaller. We are responsible for only what we have. If it is but one little talent, one little talent is all we shall have to answer for. But we must answer for that, and if we fail to use it we shall not only lose it in the end, but also shall incur the penalty of uselessness. —J. R. Miller D. D.

Please do not forget our financial needs.

Chasing Lies.

A lie is a bad thing to run at large. It damages, ravages and devours. More poisonous than a serpent, it often ruins not only health but reputation and usefulness. Every lie should be stopped. But whose business is it to chase a lie? Who let it loose? The man who let it loose is bound to catch it again; but a man of truth is under no obligation to chase and catch other people's lies. Suppose some man or a dozen men send forth a falsehood about me, am I obliged to spend my days and years chasing it and contradicting it? By no means. Let those that made it attend to their own work or meet the responsibility of it in the reckoning day. Every man concerned in sending forth a false statement must purge himself of it or give account to God for what he has done. God holds men to very strict accountability in these respects, and every man who thinks to dwell in God's tabernacle must look well to his words and "refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile."

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Indiana at St. Louis.

Near the great outdoor mining exhibit at the World's Fair, the handsome Indiana building will soon receive its finishing touches. This $40,000 structure in French renaissance is but part of Indiana's $200,000 representation at the greatest Exposition of the age. September 15th will be Indiana's Day at the World's Fair.

Many cities and towns on the Pennsylvania-Vandalia Lines in Indiana are within a few hours of the big Fair, which opens at St. Louis next April 30th. Forty-five of the ninety-two counties of Indiana are traversed by this railway system. A striking feature of the preparations for the Universal Exposition is the extension of St. Louis train service on the Pennsylvania-Vandalia. A recent addition is the World's Fair Express which leaves Richmond at 10.10 p. m., Indianapolis at midnight, reaching St. Louis in the morning. Other fast express trains for St. Louis leave Richmond at 4.45 a. m., 10.15 a. m., 1.25 p. m., and 10.10 p. m.; Indianapolis at 7 o'clock a. m., 12.15 noon, 3.30 p. m., and 15.25 at night. During the Exposition season from April to December, this service will be increased as occasions warrant.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Vandalia Line Plans.

Preliminary matters for the satisfactory transportation of World's Fair visitors to St. Louis within a few months and new passenger conveniences were arranged at the recent conference of General Passenger Agent E. A. Ford, with officials of the Passenger and Operating Department of the Vandalia-Pennsylvania Lines. The provisions made for the World's Fair thousands insure the most [illegible] service. The transportation facilities meet the problem of traffic requirements and make the Vandalia-Pennsylvania masters of the situation. There will be no traffic congestion on the Vandalia-Pennsylvania system. It is a period of extraordinary expenditure in making the Vandalia-Pennsylvania the straighest as well as the shortest route between the East and the West. The sum to be expended on further improvements equals the military and naval expenditures of the United States immediately before the war with Spain.

In time for the holiday traffic before the close of the year and four months in advance of the St. Louis Exposition the increased track facilities of the Vandalia-Pennsylvania Lines will be completed. Recently much new work was reviewed on the Pennsylvania Lines west of Pittsburgh, including the Vandalia. Much ballasting has been done to raise the different divisions to the high standard of roadbed required by the Pennsylvania System.

In addition to arranging the most satisfactory train service, the Vandalia-Pennsylvania officials decided upon innovations looking to the still greater convenience of the traveling public.

The standard vestibule coaches of the Pennsylvania System, which are in such great favor with the traveling public, are now in service on express trains Nos. 7 and 14 between St. Louis and New York. These coaches are electrically lighted and have comfortable, high-backed seats.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John C. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

Lend a Hand.

Are you sitting idle? still there's work to do;
In the Master's vineyard there's a place for you.
Be a faithful servant ever ready stand,
Where the Master calls you—lend a helping hand!

Is your voice now silent? there are songs to sing;
Praise and extol the storms, make his praises ring!
Till the plains are watered over sea and land,
Reaching up to heaven—lend a helping hand!

Are your prayers no longer reach the throne of grace,
Asking that some wanderer might his steps retrace?
Earnest prayer may keep him from the sinking sand,
Yours today may save him—lend a helping hand.

Lord of the Sabbath.

Bro. Eychaner requests some "who have been long in the way" to give an exposition of Mark ii. 27, 28, "And he said unto them, The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath; therefore the Son of Man is Lord also of the Sabbath."

I respond to the request, not being unaware that others could do it more satisfactorily, but simply because I "have been long in the way"—50 years.

This quotation is part of the answer of Jesus to the criticism of the Scribes and Pharisees. He ate with the publicans and sinners (v. 16). His disciples did not fast (v. 18). He replied, It would not do to put new wine into old bottles i. e. put the new dispensation into the old law. His disciples going with him through the fields on the Sabbath day plucked the ears of corn (v. 23) whereupon the Pharisees accused him of breaking the law. The quotation under consideration (vs. 27 and 28) is the main point in his answer to the accusation. Let us then consider how or in what way his answer contains a vindication of himself touching the law of the Sabbath. "The Sabbath was made for man." How could this statement prove a vindication of his action? That depends upon what man is indicated, for (on account of) whom it was made. I suppose that Brother Eychaner as well as most others is fully aware that the Common Version omits the definite article the, preceding the word man, as given in the original (see Diaglott). Hence if the man indicated was the first Adam (generic his posterity), then there would be not even a show of vindication for his action, but quite a justification of his accusers. But if the man indicated was the man Christ Jesus, then the vindication is complete, because he was not made for the Sabbath (day of rest) but the rest day for (on account of) him. Therefore he was Lord of that day. He is its Lord, Governor and Controler. It belongs to him. It is the Lord's day. It belongs to the Son Man. The first Adam was not the Son of Man, not even a Son of Man. Sabbath means rest, cessation from work previously done. The 27th verse lays down the proposition. For man it was made (ordered). From this premise, Jesus says, v. 28. Therefore the Son of Man is Lord also of the Sabbath. Is not the conclusion from the premise clearly logical, as well as truthful in every way? Only to the mind having no fuller conception of the purpose of God in ordaining a rest day (Sabbath) for his people, than to think he simply blessed—sanctified—one day out of every week to cease from work and keep holy for all time, would it be possible not to see the logic of his conclusion. But as soon as that one should learn the fact, that the 7th day Sabbath was only a type—shadow—leading to something far greater in Christ, then he would not fail to see the sublime logic of Christ's conclusion. If the seventh day was a type or shadow, then when the antetype of that typified has been reached, there is no more use for the type. When we follow the shadow to find the substance that cast it, we find that substance when we arrive at the end of the shadow, then we no longer follow the shadow. But do you ask, Was the seventh day Sabbath only a shadow of which Christ is the substance? So saith the Word, see Col. ii. 14-17 where we are told that certain ordinances are blotted out, taken out of the way—nailed to the cross—their life ended. Enumerating them—as in meat, drink, holy day, new moon, or of the Sabbath (days supplied). Why taken out of the way? Why come to an end? Answer, which (things) are a shadow of things to come; but the body (substance) is of Christ. There was a vail over the mind of those under the law, they could not see the end of the law, not perceiving that Christ was the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." Rom. x. Not seeing the foreshadowed rest was in and through Christ, notwithstanding the gospel—glad tidings of this rest in Christ was preached to them (Heb. iv. 2) as well as unto us. It did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it. Therefore (verse 6) it remains that some must enter therein, (or the promise would fail) who then will enter into his rest? 3rd verse, For we which have believed do enter into rest, as he said.....4th ver., For he spake.....of the seventh day on this wise, and God did rest the seventh day from all his works and in this place again, if they shall enter into my rest. 9th verse, There remaineth therefore a rest (or keeping of a Sabbath—margin) to the people of God. Why? 10th verse, For he is entered into his rest, he also hath ceased from his own works as God did from his. God did not cease from all work on the seventh day, but from all his work which God created and made, or perhaps more literal as the margin, created, to make. Gen. ii. 3. Jesus said, My Father worketh hitherto and I work (Jno. v. 17) so those coming into the rest in Christ through faith, cease from their works, and do the work of Christ assigned them. They take his yoke upon them, learn of him who is meek and lowly of heart and find rest to their souls (selves) (Matt. xi. 29) and thus resting in him who is the way, will be led by him onward to the fulness of the glad day of promised rest, when the meek shall inherit the earth and delight themselves in the abundance of peace, when God's will shall be done in earth as it is now done in heaven. "Arise, O Lord, into thy rest." Psa. cxxxii. 8.

Like Bro. Eychaner I do not remember of hearing these verses discussed or decided upon in any way, yet I feel pretty confident, from converse with brethren along the way, that the foregoing exposition (at least in the main) is expressive of the general understanding. If this be notso, it is at least expressive of my own understanding of the matter. May we all through our leader safely reach the final day of promised rest. Let us strive to enter therein.

D. T. HALSTEAD.

Peace on Earth and Good Will to Men.

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." Lu. ii. 14. Such is the declaration of the heavenly host that accompanied the angel, that made known to the shepherds the birth of Israel's future King, the knowledge of whose coming as the Seed of the woman to bruise the head of the serpent—has cheered the faithful, from the days of righteous Abel to the present time. By the reading of the writings of the prophets comes to us the knowledge, that it is God's purpose that through this man—his Anointed—shall come like a flowing stream, his choicest blessings to not only his saints, but to all the inhabitants of the earth. Therefore the rejoicing, and the giving of presents every Christmas in commemoration of God's great gift to mankind. He who is rich in mercy hath raised up his saints to sit in heavenly places in Christ Jesus, "That in the ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his grace in kindness toward us, through Christ Jesus." Eph. ii. 7. To us as the associates of his Son, in blessing the nations of the earth, in causing them to cease from the selfish ambition that is wasting their resources, and causing the misery and the poverty of the present and the anxious uncertainty of those in the heavenlies. His kindnesses toward the nations will be manifest when he causes the stone cut out of the mountain to overturn the present rulers. When he shall speak peace to the nations, and shall cause righteousness to be exalted to the place of power in all the earth. Then shall come to pass the good things that are written. "He shall judge thy people with righteousness, and thy poor with judgment. The mountains shall bring peace to the people, and the little hills by righteousness." Psa. lxxii. 2-3, "And the effect of righteousness shall be peace and assurance forever." Courage brethren, not one of the good things promised has failed, and as sure as God lives never will. And it seems safe to say, that we are living in the last half of the last century of Gentile times. Therefore rejoice for the coming of the Master is near.

GEO. FRANCIS.

Annual Love Feast Letters.

New Year's greeting to those of like faith:

We have reached the end of another year. Looking back upon the closing book, can we as God's stewards recall from its pages any acts of love characterized by thoughtful kindness, words fitly spoken to the weak or erring, strength given to the faltering, food to the hungry, clothes to the needy? Have we by God's help started a soul upon the road of life, have we been honest in the payment of all debts, (our subscription to THE RESTITUTION included) are we ready to forgive every real or imaginary wrong done and to make our transgressions to others right? Can we bury self and be willing by so doing to present our bodies a living sacrifice? God has committed great things to our care and will hold us responsible for our opportunities. Our true calling is to persuade people to accept Christ. We have no time to waste with uncertain questions, which gender to strife and bring discord among brethren, keep the main track and let side issues alone. These questions which have been under discussion for forty or fifty years, and as far as we can see are no nearer a settlement than they were then, and never been the means of bringing one sinner to Christ or making one soul wiser or better. The gospel still remains as of old. "The power of God unto salvation." Let us preach it in its simplicity, and God will give the increase. God wants workers not idlers, which will we be?

Editor Restitution:

I see my time has expired, so send a draft for another year, $1.50. I could not do without it, it is so much help, as I am away from church and only three of us to talk of our hope and of the same belief. Others will not listen to the Bible as it reads. I am very lonely this winter, I buried my husband a few weeks ago and am living entirely alone and I get comfort and help from the dear RESTITUTION. My prayer is that it may alway be a visitor at my home. I am making progress in the truth and hope to more in the year to come. Hope to be able to do more for the spread of the Word, wishing you much success and a happy new year.

Yours in the one faith and hope and baptism.

Dear Restitution:

I thought I must write a few lines to let all the dear brothers and sisters know my whereabouts. I live in Vernon County, Missouri, nine miles south of Nevada. I still preach the same gospel of the kingdom that all the prophets and Jesus and the apostles did preach, the gospel of the kingdom. Its location is near the center of the earth, Jerusalem is the place that Jesus' feet will touch when he comes the second time. Dear ones, my race is nearly run, 73 years of my life is in the past. I am still preaching some. Gentile times are nearly to a close. Go on, dear ones, you have the one gospel faith, a few more trials and the crown is ours.

C. W. HERRON.

Dear brothers and sisters:

The time for our love feast is nearly here, so I will hasten to let all know that husband and I are still serving the Lord and living closer to the commandments every day we live. We ask an interest in all your prayers, that we will live faithful till death, and the crown will be ours. So I will close, wishing you all a happy Christmas and new years.

Your sister in Christ.

Brothers and sisters:

I will write some verses for THE RESTITUTION, Col. i. and ii., "We give thanks to God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, praying always for you, that ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work of God, giving thanks unto the Father which hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light, who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son. If ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature which is under heaven whereof I Paul am made a minister." Chapter ii., "For though I be absent in flesh, yet am I with you in the Spirit, joying and beholding your order and steadfastness of your faith in Christ, buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead.

Thessalonians iv., "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not even as others which have no hope, for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him, for this we say unto you by the Word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep, for the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord, wherefore comfort one another with these words."

We ask the brothers and sisters to pray for us that we may prove faithful unto the end. Your sister in Christ.

Dear ones.

The greetings of Christians should not be yearly, but one continuous flow to one another in thankfulness and love to Jesus that we are nearing the border land of Canaan, another year nearer home. The gleams from the morning Star are softly falling across Judea's plains and the Rose of Sharon is putting forth, which tell us that eternal spring with its buds of joy and blossoms of peace will soon bedeck the hills and vales that so long in waste have lain. And the fountains that so long been dried up will burst forth and bubble over with eternal delight and sparkle in the sun light of the King of kings. Israel's leaves of prophetic fulfilment are putting forth and soon all the trees will unfold in the forest of God's truth; truly we are nearing the land where tries and sorrows will give place to joy and everlasting delight. Would we were there when the loved of all ages would meet in Canaan, blest Canaan. And while we tarry and wait for the coming of the Savior, let our greetings flow continuously in love and blessings to one another, sharing the sorrows and trials, and praying "Come Jesus and come quickly."

Dear Restitution:

The Church in Salem, gladly report that during Brother Neill's absence the cause here did not suffer, as his wife [illegible] successfully filled his place with the exception of two services, the 5th and the 27th, their son, our Brother George Neill, spoke for us much to the satisfaction of all present. Our Church in Salem unite in saying, God bless the dear, young brother who has the courage to speak the truth as it is in Jesus. We say to him and all young men of like precious faith, add to your faith, virtue, (courage.)

Our young Brother and many others with him should be encouraged to work for our Master. Urge our young men to speak and thus improve their talents. It is necessary to add all the Christian graces, and then the much needed courage. No doubt there are talents buried for want of opportunities. All who publicly proclaim the truth have their first sermon to preach.

To the household we say, encourage our young men to actual service, and charge them as Paul did Timothy, "Before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom. Preach the Word." And with him say, "Let no man despise thy youth, but be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity." This means much and can not be done without much effort. The apostle knew this and was very explicit saying, "Exercise thyself unto godliness," "We will now obtain it without the most diligent exercise. Bodily exercise profiteth little, but godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." And now may the "God of peace make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ."

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

After some delay I will write a few lines for the grand feast we have been enjoying about this time and later on. I am glad to hear so many testifying to the things concerning the kingdom and name of the Christ. It appears to me that the truth is much brighter and plainer as I read the blessed Bible and the sermons we get through THE RESTITUTION. We need godliness to stand firm and defend the truth, never tiring till the victory is won. Brothers and Sisters pray for me that I may attain to the resurrection of life.

Your Sister, hoping to meet you all in the kingdom.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I am stronger than ever in the truth of the gospel of the kingdom, for it is powerful and plainly written in the word of God; too plain to be misunderstood; and it reveals to us a hope that this world of mankind knows nothing about in their darkness concerning the teaching of Christ and the apostles; for darkness has covered the earth and gross darkness the people; and yet, the light of God's Word is before them. O how my soul is pained to see and hear the blindness of the people concerning the hope the gospel has given us, and yet how can it be otherwise, when they never hear it preached or spoken by their blind guides. But God's people have a hope pointed out in the gospel of the kingdom, that is soul-cheering, and lifts us above the things of this world, and it is something tangible so that we may comprehend it. Thus, when we read, "God will wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, nor sorrow, nor crying, neither will there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away and he that sat upon the throne said,

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIII. Read PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JAN. 13, 1904. NUMBER 2.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Behold I make all things new," who is this sitting on the throne? It is none other but the Lord Jesus; he is now come with the mansions all prepared. Now he says with authority, Behold, I make all things new. He is not a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, but a King on his throne. Thus the hope of God's people is not a mysterious hope. Can we imagine anything more glorious than to be like Jesus when he reigns in righteousness, and [illegible] ment. Isa. xxxii. 1. Then the knowledge of the Lord will cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. Isa. xi. 9. Then the inhabitants will not say I am sick. Isa. xxxiii. 24. Paul says, I know in part; but then shall I know even as I am known. What a consolation this is, to know all the blessed in the kingdom; all the blood-washed throug; all that we read of in the Word of God; such as Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and all the prophets. Have we not a blessed hope? God help us to be ready when the Lord comes.

Baptism.

With rejoicing I announce the addition of another member to our Dixon, Illinois household in the person of Sister Maude C. Blackburn. She only recently came in contact with the truth through the instrumentality of Sister Lily Filson, and has been an unceasing student of the Word. On Saturday evening, Dec. 19, she made application to the writer for baptism in the name of Jesus Christ. The request was for baptism at the earliest opportunity. Her faith was so strong and her determination so great that the cold weather and ice to the depth of eight inches on the river had no terror for her. Accordingly on Monday following another trip was made to Dixon and shortly after the noon hour we made our way to the river, and after making the necessary opening in the ice, we buried her there, to rise to walk in newness of life. Sister Blackburn is young and full of spirit and zeal. She will have her trials and she will need your prayers, brethren, to sustain her. May God bless her and help to remain faithful until the time of the crown giving.

Married.

On Christmas eve at the home of the bride's parents Brother and Sister Wm. Finney one half mile north of Scircleville, Ind., occurred the marriage of their daughter Orpha Le to Hugh Huffer. The ceremony was performed by J. S. Hatch in the presence of the near relatives of the bride and groom. On New Year's day guests numbering forty-five assembled at the home of the groom's parents in Scircleville, where a banquet was held in honor of the bride and groom who will shortly go to house keeping on a farm one and three-fourths miles north of Hillsburg, where they will be "at home" to their many friends. Hugh and Orpha are members of the one faith and are highly esteemed by all who know them. We feel assured that their implicit faith in and love for the cause they represent will carry them safely over the rough places in their life's journey. Our best wishes go with them in their journey, where we trust but few thorns will be found.

We are conscious that our relation to Christ is not provisional and transient. Apart from him we can do nothing in the world; apart from him we are sure that we should be able to do nothing in the world to come. To whatever transcendent wisdom, strength, righteousness and blessedness we may rise, in the endless ages beyond death, all our perfection will be the manifestation of the infinite resources of Christ.—*R. No man is so greatly deceived as the man who is self-deceived. It is far easier to resist the sophistries of others than the sophistries of himself.

Latest dispatches indicate that we may expect hostilities to begin in the far east at anytime. Russia's reply to Japan does not satisfy, and there seems to be no way out but to try conclusions with the sword.

O that my ways were directed to keep thy statutes! Then shall I not be ashamed, when I have respect unto ALL THY COMMANDMENTS." Psa. cxix. 5, 6. Clearly it is not safe to depend upon only strict obedience to commandments which are to our taste or liking, because they involve little or no suffering. They must be taken as they come; the bitter with the sweet. Obedience to one command gives no license to disobey another. We must not imagine that the Lord derives profit from obedience to his commands. It is due to him,—and even if we obey all his commands we are not profitable servants.

From the Franklin Grove, Ill., Reporter, we learn that Mrs. C. M. Secrist and her youngest daughter, June, aged eight years, were victims of the Iroquois fire at Chicago, Dec. 30, when nearly 600 people were killed. Mrs. Secrist was the daughter of our Sister, Mrs. Israel Zug, of Franklin Grove, and lived at Ravenwood, a suburb of Chicago, her husband being an employee of the Union Pacific R. R. This disaster has taken distress and mourning into many homes, and it is to be hoped that it will result in safeguards being made so that a repetition of it will not occur.

Brother P. Neill and wife are conducting a meeting at the Church at Salem, endeavoring to interest the people in the things that make for salvation. Brother Zilmer is holding meetings in the City of Chicago, at 274 Augusta St. Brother Austin is at work in a protracted effort at Argos, Ind., and Brother and Sister Woodward will continue the meeting that Brother Austin had started at Byron Center, Mich. We trust each of these meetings will prove of lasting benefit to many hearers. Sowing the seed is the work of men, and we are responsible for our part of it. The increase is in the hands of the Father, and we need not fear for results.

Did you ever stop to think that the dollar you handed the preacher paid him for the very hours of time he spent in studying up the discourse which decided the mind of your next door neighbor, and started him toward the kingdom? If you had not given that dollar the preacher could not have accomplished the part of the work. Perhaps, yes, quite likely, the dollar you pay to send this paper to your friend, will be the means of starting him on the road to the saint's abode. If you could be positively assured that it would do so, would you hold back the money? It cannot be definitely guaranteed to you, but this can be assured—YOUR part was done. It is our—mine—your privilege to sow. The increase is in God's hand; but He holds us responsible for our share in the work. Will he count your part well done?

"Take care of your disagreeable duties. Attend to these first. Never select the things that you want to do. Wherever you are, choose the disagreeable things. You will get your pay in manhood or womanhood. You can grow in no other way so fast. You may be angry with some shiftless one who is willing to put on you work that he or she ought to do; and you may feel that there is injustice in it; but you cannot afford to be unfaithful because some one else is.

Is Baptism Essential?

"To any one who has doubts as to the above question, we commend the following from an address by Mr. D. W. Jenkins, the pastor of a Glasgow congregation. Mr. Jenkins said, "No one had a right to ask if baptism was essential to salvation. The question meant that if baptism is essential to salvation, then I have to obey; but if it be not essential to salvation, I will please myself and not obey. ... shows a very poor and meagre idea of Christian obligation ... faith ... a cold and feeble love. He said he had now and again met men professing to love Jesus Christ, and who did really love and believe in him, uttering words like these. Their Christianity rested on self interest. They would simply obey this command or the other command so far as it would save them. The fundamental idea of the salvation of Jesus Christ was the consultation of the divine will, and the fundamental practice was full obedience to that will. If we were to follow Jesus Christ we have no right to ask what was essential to salvation, but what was the will of Jesus Christ. And Jesus Christ had commanded baptism."

Generally speaking, Mr. Jenkins takes safe ground, but there are two things that need correction. Mr. Jenkin's first words imply that a man can be a Christian before he has settled the point as to the essentiality of baptism. To this we demur. And secondly, he fails to show that baptism is only enjoined upon those who believe the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, as illustrated practically in Acts viii. 12, and the reason why may be learned in Acts ii. 38, viz., remission of sins.

Editor Restitution:

It seems that the year of 1903 has passed off quickly, our record for the year is made, and it seems that I, for one, have done but little. My wife and I are alone here now. My son and his wife have moved ten miles away, and they were both good singers. We miss them very much in our meetings. We had a good church here at White Cloud, Kansas, a few years ago, but they have all moved away, and now we are alone, but we still keep our meetings once a month. We still have a good audience. The young people assist very kindly in the singing. The result is left with our blessed Master. Other places are asking us to come over and help them. May we be able to do more the coming year. The times are truly wonderful. May you and I be ready for the great change dear brother and sister, when it comes. I love to read the many cheering words in the paper from week to week from those of like precious faith. May we all so live as to meet our dear Savior in peace. Wishing the paper and all its readers a happy New Year. Yours in hope.

Dear brethren and sisters:

We that hold to the one true faith and hope of the gospel are scattered people. It was so in the apostles' times, so we that are scattered, isolated from the body of the one true faith of God's believing children, let us hold up our heads, for redemption draweth near. Let us at the beginning of the new year arm ourselves with the Sword of the Spirit, the Word of God that liveth and abideth for ever. Let us go forward as bold soldiers of the cross, we have a mighty foe to face, the same foe the Lord and apostles had to face. Let us be faithful, trust in the mighty God of Israel, he will carry us through and give us the victory as he gave it to the believing children of Israel. Let us begin anew at the beginning of the year, let us take courage and fight the good fight of faith, and if we live to see this year pass out, that we can look back and say we have fought a good fight. I often think what is this professed world with all its divisions, man-made churches and man-made creeds. We are commanded to progress in the light and knowledge of the truth. When we examine these creeds we can see they have not made one step toward the light and knowledge of God's Word that is given to guide into truth. We are right in the last times of the going out of the present world, and the ushering of that world to come, wherein dwelleth righteousness. When that world is ushered in then that rest that Paul tells of, that yet remains for the people of God will be reached. The Lord said to the unbelieving, "Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures, for they that are worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead, they neither marry nor are given in marriage, they are equal to the angels in heaven but the false teachers tell us they are equal with the angels when they die. All the faiths that have been predicted that would be taught in the last times as now being taught by this sectarian world. If there was no false doctrine ... it would make them ... false. Paul says, "If a man has ... ed of the good Word of God and the power of the world to come, if he should fall away or go back it is impossible to renew him again. O how many professors have no knowledge of that world to come, and the peace and reign of our Lord Jesus Christ on the earth. That peace and reign will commence when the prophet Isaiah's prediction will be fulfilled, Unto us a child is born a Son is given. That part of this prophecy was fulfilled when the Lord was born at Bethlehem. The remainder of that prophecy must yet be fulfilled, And the government shall be upon his shoulders, and his name shall be called wonderful counsellor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of peace, of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth, even forever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this when the Lord Jesus is seated upon his father David's throne at Mount Zion and Jerusalem. Then he will roar out of Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem. Then that peace that yet remains for God's believing children will be reached. Bless God for the hope of a righteous Ruler to be seated upon Zion to rule this earth in righteousness. Then the kingdoms of this world will become the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ, then he will show his kingly authority and the soul that will not hear him he will destroy from among the people. Then God's faithful children will be changed from mortal to immortal. Are we ready for the change? Let us at the beginning of the new year start out with renewed energy to show to a dying and perishing world that we have but the faith and hope that was once delivered to the saints that have been lost by the vain traditions of men, that we may live nearer to our God, that we may have eternal life hid with our God in Christ and when Christ who is our Savior shall appear, then is the promise to appear with him in glory. Not a promise this side of his coming to appear with him in glory. The Lord told his disciples to lay up a treasure in heaven, where rust and moth doth not corrupt. This treasure is eternal life laid up in Christ, and when Christ who is life appears then we will receive the treasure eternal life in Christ. Brothers and sisters, my desire is to start in with the new year with renewed energy. We have all got to appear before him who is coming to judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom. Now I will close this as the Editor requested short letters. O that we may be faithful as children of our God. Darkness is now covering the earth and gross darkness the people. O that God would be with us that we may be prepared when he comes to proclaim, Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him, he will own and bless.

Dear brethren:

Through reading The Restitution we become acquainted with the different churches and with many of the brethren, and as we hear of them through the love feast it seems like a family reunion. I hope we may have a hearty response this year. I watch with interest the events now impending—the immediate outcome no one can tell, but knowing as we do that the end of the age is nearing its close we can say with the poet, "We are living, we are dwelling in a grand and awful time. In an age on ages telling—when to be living is sublime." My hope is bright and I am seeking to be one of the overcomers. As I learn more about God—of his goodness and mercy—of his absolute justice—the more I love him and the dearer to me becomes the hope of a home in the kingdom. How we should treasure our hope and how careful we should be to do that which is pleasing in the sight of God. Let us be zealous, dear brethren, and watch. Yours in hope.

Dear Brother Underwood:

I crave a little space in your paper to let the dear brothers and sisters know that myself and aged wife are still living and poor in this world's goods but rich in faith. It is not our fault that we are so poor, we have been stolen out and robbed of most of our property when we were too old to work for more, and have lived up what was left. We hold no malice against those that broke us up. When we leave this world we will take as much ... We are not on sufferance, we have five children that are housekeepers that keep us shelter and bed. We have been able to keep our own medicine that we have to take all the time. This is the third year I have read the paper at some one else's expense. I will remit for the next year in January. I must close by asking some of our five talented brothers or sisters to get up a pamphlet painting the beauties of the new earth and the holy city as the inheritance of the saints, that may enlighten some outsider. In order not to expose my ignorance further I will close with love to the faithful, especially the isolated like myself.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

What is the record, when the bells toll out the closing hours of the dying year? We will have finished another chapter in our life's history. Our fellow-man is reading our history as we make it, and comparing our deeds with the high standard of him who hath called us to purity; and when the books in heaven are opened we will find the recording angel has been true and faithful in recording our deed whether known or unknown to our fellow man. As we look back over the pages we find many spots and stains that we would fain blot out, but that is beyond our power. The record is sealed and placed beyond our reach. The blessed Savior alone can cover up those filthy stains and sins against our fellow creatures, which are an abhorance to God. He gives rules by which the blackest stains may be blotted out. If we would have him to intercede for us we must strictly comply with his commands. Though it comes like refiner's fire or fuller's soap. If it costs a hand or an eye it must go, or we are not worthy to bear his holy name, and we have taken his name in vain. It will never do for the Christian to compare his record with that of the worldling. He is striving for nothing more than the pleasures of sin for a season, and tomorrow? he receives his just wages, which is death. We are striving for immortal life and an everlasting crown. "Except our righteousness exceeds that of the Pharisees we shall in no wise enter the kingdom of heaven." Why is it the world seems to recognize the awfulness of the sins of murder, theft, drunkenness and perjury, and yet pass lightly over the sin which God declares defiles his holy temple, and the offender "Will God destroy." How can there be so much idle and foolish jesting on a subject which is abominable to God, and he warns us that the gates of hell are at the end of the way, but "like as a Father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him. He remembereth that we are dust." He says, "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him and to our God for he will abundantly pardon."

Edit or Restitution:

In Dec. 23rd number of your paper, Brother Eychaner asks an exposition of Mark ii. 27, 28, to continually remind the believer and carry the mind to the eternal day of rest. The same as our memorial services every first day. "Do this until I come again." In the hurry and rush of life, one day out of seven to call a halt, and let the mind rest and go out to those promises of things not seen. The Son of Man will be Lord of that Sabbath, eternal day of rest.

The Russo-Japanese Crisis.

The man who judges things by weight, bulk and dollars may well wonder at Japanese temerity. To Japan, with her 147,000 square miles, the annexation of Korea with her 82,000 square miles means what the annexation of Mexico would to the United States. To Russia, with 8,666,000 square miles, it means less than Southern California to us.

Though Japan has only one-third the population of her rival, she publishes as many books every year; and, despite the concentration of her population, which permits of the wide circulation of her dailies, she publishes as many newspapers. The percentage of her people who can read and write is about equal to that of our own New England States. In schools and colleges she has 5,000,000 pupils and students, or one in every nine of the population, where Russia has only one in every thirty-five. In fact, Japan, with her 44,000,000 people, probably has more subjects who can read and write than Russia with her 140,000,000. The Russians have given nothing to mechanical progress, but have used its products, the railroad and the rifle, to carry them almost to the doorway of Peking. The reformation awakened in Japan the spirit of "benevolent assimilation," and a realization that she must have more room for her growing population or perish. In '94 and '95, thanks to modern methods, Japan occupied Korea and the Liaotung Peninsula, and had Pekin at her mercy, when Russia, France, and Germany stayed her hand.

Both nations, then, are borrowers. Their artillery, their men-of-war and their field telegraphs are no more a part of their own development than the Creusot guns, which pounded the British in South Africa, were of Boer civilization. Not since the Turks carved their way as far as the walls of Vienna, has an Oriental race presumed to meet a northern race on its own ground. Every bizarre element that appeals either to the ear or to the eye enters into those negotiations upon which depends the momentous question of whether the Pacific shall be a slav lake or not.—Collier's Weekly.

In the Orient.

Whatever happens in Asia, the Western world's attention must be bent upon that continent until its fate is settled. Every nation will want strong men henceforth as ambassadors in China and Japan, for, even since the cable and the newspaper have shorn the ambassador of power, his influence in crises is often vast. When Japan, after defeating China, was warned away from Korea by Russia, France, and Germany, she appealed, as a last hope, to England's Minister. Had he been a man of force, the course of Eastern history might have changed. He communicated with London, Lord Rosebury fell in with the other powers, and Japan's heart was broken. Had such a man as Mr. Chamberlain been either ambassador or prime minister, the outcome would hardly have been the same. Were Mr. Chamberlain prime minister today, England's position would probably have been more unmistakable from the first. His influence has apparently been felt, however indirectly, through his friend Mr. Balfour, who naturally inherited the hopeless Chinese policy of his uncle, but has undoubtedly received some stiffening from association with Mr. Chamberlain. The German emperor is in sympathy with his brother in divinity, the Czar. France occupies a hard position, allied to Russia and nourishing an entente with England. Our sympathies are unmistakable, and, although neutrality must be our initial policy, accident might bring us into participation in a general war at any moment. Meantime poor China, the general prize, looks on blankly, helpless, for the present, in outgrown modes. What the future holds for her we shall be long in knowing. Recent accounts tell of the gradual decay of Confucianism among the educated, due to the dawning sense that the Confucian classics are of small value from the commercial standpoint, and commerce today rules civilization, as well as war and peace. Nations fight for money gains, but they refrain from fighting because of the money cost; and education and industry become allies. Let China once begin to awake, as Japan has awakened, to the modern spirit, and the whole face of Asia may be changed. Today it is Russia against Japan. Yet a little while and the pieces of glass may make another picture in the swiftly changing Orient.—Collier's Weekly.

A Cut in Wages.

It is one of the hardest things an employer can do to reduce the wages of the employees. Often a business does not pay a profit, and in many instances he continues to pay wages until he is bankrupt, rather than discharge help, or encounter the dissatisfaction and complaining that would result from a reduction. He hopes, of course, that the tide may turn, and often hopes on until his fortunes are wrecked, and his business proves a failure.

On the other hand there are wealthy, grasping, greedy employers and corporations which screw down the employee to the lowest possible wages, that they may increase dividends and pile up wealth. Such persons need to learn the rough, hard ways of life and get acquainted with the realities of honest toil. A story ... of the family of Stollberg which ... important mines in the Hartz Mountains. Toward the end of the ... century the director of the mines ... paid a visit to the reigning count ... informed him that the income ... mines might be considerably augmented if the wages of the workmen were reduced—a reduction they could well submit to. The count there upon asked the director if he had ever performed similar work to these people, and the latter replying in the negative, the count said:

"Neither have I; therefore we will both of us try it."

"The count took up a wheelbarrow, the director a second, and both set to work and wheeled load after load for the space of an hour, the perspiration pouring from them in streams during the operation. At the end of the hour, Count Stollberg set his barrow down, and turning to the director asked what he thought of the affair now. Could they venture, after their experience, to reduce the men's wages? The director admitted that he had certainly no idea the work was so heavy, and accordingly it was decided to allow the men's wages to remain as before."—H. L. H.

Gathering Sunlight.

The test of our sunlight Christianity is adversity. It is a comparatively easy matter to smile when prosperity is smiling on us, but when the night comes upon us of some bitter loss, or the prison-house of some disappointed hope, then is the test of the shining qualities of our confidence and hope in God. I remember when in the clock business we had for sale what was called an illuminated clock. The dial to this clock was covered with a phosphorescent preparation, so that as it was left to stand in the sunlight during the day it would gather unto itself sufficient light to enable it to shine with an illuminated dial during the night. This is the secret of sunlight Christianity. If we would shine in the darkness of adversity, we must endure as seeing Him who is invisible. In much prayer and communion with God we must climb the mount of our transfiguration.—H. F. Huse.

Poetry.

Even So, Come, Lord Jesus.

Thou who from Olive's brow didst rise
In glorious triumph to the skies,
Before the rapt disciples' eyes,—
Lord Jesus, quickly come.
For thy appearing all things pray;
All nature sighs at thy delay;
Thy people cry, "No longer stay,
Lord Jesus, quickly come!"

Hear thou the whole creation's groan,
The burdened creature's plaintive moan,
The cry of deserts wild and lone;
"Lord Jesus, quickly come."
See signals of distress unfurled
By states on stormy billows hurled:
Thou Pole-star of a shipwrecked world,
Lord Jesus, quickly come.

Hark the fierce blast of war's alarms;
The battle's toll, the clash of arms;
Because Love's dearest charms,—
Lord Jesus, quickly come.
With once again up on the free
Its rest—and earth's tempestuous seas,
And all the waves, O Prince of Peace!
Lord Jesus, quickly come.

[illegible] by sin-Bind with garments torn,
[illegible] celestial radiance shorn,
[illegible] see now with watching worn,—
Lord Jesus, quickly come.
[illegible] pilgrims rest,
[illegible] struggles, fears, and agonies
[illegible] to thy deep sympathies:
Lord Jesus, quickly come.

[illegible] tides and sorrows only proved,
[illegible] beleaguered and oppressed,
How the strong pleas of her unrest,
Lord Jesus, quickly come,
Hope of the blood-bought, blood-washed host
Their only glory, joy, and boast,
Without thy advent all is lost;
Lord Jesus, quickly come.

WHAT IS GOD'S BEST GIFT TO MAN?

First, what do we prize the most? We would all say life. This life we have now we got through Adam, and is so short and full of troubles, which comes from sin, is hardly worth prizing, but the eternal life which is without sin, is the life we should prize and be ever striving for. We read in 1 John v. 10, 11, He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself; he that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave his Son. And this is the record that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. Then if life is what we prize most of all, and through God's Son Jesus Christ comes this life, surely his Son was God's best gift to man. In Romans vi. 23 is written, "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." To whom promised? Jesus says in John v. 24, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my Word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." How to obtain this life. First, by believing that Christ died for us and through him we get eternal life and after believing, putting on Christ by baptism, as reads in Gal. iii. 27, "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." Condition before putting on Christ, Rom. vi. 6, 17, "Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin. But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you. Condition after putting on Christ, Rom. vi. 12, 13, "Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof. Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin; but yield yourself unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God." 2 Peter i. 5-8. "And beside this giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to your virtue knowledge; and to your knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." The reward for obedience, Rom. viii. 17, "And if children, then heirs, heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together." Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift.

RUTH L. SMITH.

In response to Sister Whitehead's question as to why there is joy in every land at Christmas time, can only say a few words as space is limited. We celebrate Dec. 25th as our Lord's birthday, the day on which we were given a King, "A light to lighten the Gentiles and the glory of thy people Israel,"—a King who gave up his life that we through him might have eternal life and a place in the kingdom—a man who by his perfect example shows us clearly the way by which we can inherit the promises. A King, who arose on the third day after his burial, thereby giving us a resurrection from the dead. "For if the dead rise not, then is Christ not raised, and if we be not raised, then our faith is vain, and we are yet in our sins." A Man who is now a Mediator for us at the right hand of the Father. Had there not ought to be joy on the birthday of such a Man? And praise him, praise his holy name.

BROTHER ALLARD.

A SAVIOR WHICH IS CHRIST THE LORD.

While the shepherds were keeping watch over their flock by night an angel of the Lord came unto them and the glory of the Lord shone round about them, which caused them much fear. But the angel said unto them, "Fear not, for behold I bring thee glad tidings of great joy, which shall be unto all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." These certainly were glad tidings of great joy, for that same Jesus afterwards saved his people from their sins. If it had not been for his birth we would still be in our sins, for he died on the cross in order to save us from our sins. How much he must have loved us to die for us. In him only can we obtain salvation, "Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Acts iv. 12. God exalted him to be a Savior in order to give repentance and forgiveness of sins and through him only can we obtain such. The name Christ signifies "King." Christ's mission as a Savior has been fulfilled but he is yet to be our King, which shall not come to pass until he comes to reign upon the earth.

MAUDE BUTTON.

PEACE ON EARTH.

While the shepherds were keeping watch over their flock by night an angel told them of Christ's birth and a multitude of the heavenly host stood with him, praising God and saying, Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will toward men. Luke ii. 14. Christ was sent as a Savior to bring peace on the earth and save the people from their sins, but he was not accepted, and therefore there was no peace, but we must not think that there will be no peace, for if we read his Word we will find, that when he comes again with all his holy angels with him, he will then bring peace. Micah iv. 3. And he shall judge among many people and rebuke strong nations afar off. They shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. And so shall peace reign forever on the earth.

ANNA ASLAKSEN.

GOOD WILL TOWARD MEN.

In the same country with Mary and Joseph were shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And, lo! the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone upon them. And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." Christ was born and he lay in a manger in swaddling clothes. He was to establish peace on earth if the people would accept him for their King. There would also be good will toward men which means, treating men as you would have them treat you.

RUTH ASLAKSEN.

"And she shall bring forth a Son and thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins." Matt. i. 21. Christmas time has come again, and with it the usual talk of giving presents to one another, and the thought of pleasure with it. But think of the one great Gift of our heavenly Father and no doubt the pleasure with it, to cause a Son to be born, that he may have the gift of power to "save his people from their sins." "And thou shalt call his name Jesus." The name Jesus means Savior. "Whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through him might be saved." Here we see again God's great love in giving the life of his only begotten Son, that the world through him might live. "Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel and forgiveness of sins." We look for him coming for his saints and when his feet shall stand on the Mount of Olives. What a happy meeting that will be. A merry Christmas to you all. Your Sister in Christ.

JESSIE M. WILSON.

THE WISE MEN.

The wise men came from the east to Jerusalem to see Jesus which was born King of the Jews. In those days there was a very wicked king whose name was Herod, and wanted very badly to kill Jesus. And Herod called the wise men to him, and told them to go and see Jesus who was King of the Jews, and when they had found him, came and told him so he could go and worship him, but Herod only wanted to kill Jesus. And being warned in a dream by God the wise men turned aside and did not go back and tell Herod, but departed into their own country. As the wise men were traveling to Jerusalem to see Jesus there was a very bright star which directed their way. When they came into the house where Jesus was and his mother they fell down and worshiped him and presented their gift of gold and frankincense and myrrh. God told Joseph to take Mary and Jesus into Egypt, and so Joseph did what God told him, because Herod was killing all the children under two years old. When Herod was dead God told Joseph to bring them back into Judea and so they came back. When they came into Judea Herod's son was ruling, and still Joseph was afraid because he would kill Jesus to. So Joseph took Mary and Jesus and went into Egypt to stay.

THERESA BAKER.

THE STORY OF THE SHEPHERDS.

There were in the same country shepherds staying in the field watching over their flock at night. When an angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of God shone around them and they were afraid. The angel said, Fear not for I bring thee great joy and good tidings, which shall be to all the people. For unto us this day is born in the city of David a child, which is the Lord Jesus Christ. This shall be a sign to you. You will find this babe dressed in long clothes, lying in a manger. Suddenly there was a multitude of angels in the heavens, people praising the Lord, and saying, Glory to God in the highest and peace, good will toward men. And when the angels were going away from them to the heavens the shepherds said to one another, Now, let us go to Bethlehem and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord has made known to us. They came with great haste and found Mary and Joseph and the babe lying in the manger. When they had seen it they had made it known abroad and saying what was told them about the child. Every body that heard it thought about those things that were told them by the shepherds.

World's Eyes on Far East.

In the Chicago Tribune for Jan. 10, appears the following:

All the civilized world realizes that underlying the diplomatic fencing bout is a far greater matter than the mere safeguarding of Russian interests in Corea or of Japanese interests in Manchuria. It is the universal recognition of this fact that makes every nation on earth follow the struggle with breathless attention. All feel instinctively that Japan is but the supernumerary in the drama. All divine that behind the scenes stands a far greater actor, stands the real protagonist, awaiting the right moment to step into the center of the stage.

No doubt exists as to the identity of that actor. It is England. The real issue, in fact, is not shall Russia or Japan dominate Corea, but this one: Shall England or Russia rule supreme in the far east?

Great Britain's policy of diplomatic opposition to Russian development has failed, and the time has come, apparently, when more energetic means are to be tried.

This decision on the part of England can cause no surprise to any one who has watched the steady advance Pacificwards of Russia and the extension of her influence in the far east. Little more remains for her to accomplish before she can enter upon the work of realizing her ambition to predominate in China—an ambition which England also nourishes. One or the other must fail. There is not room for both.

Once that step is successfully taken, the absorption of Corea will be Russia's sphere of control, and she has won the game. Her position is impregnable. Pekin is under her thumb and the whole of China lies at her mercy.

What effective opposition could England bring to bear against the designs upon the Chinese empire of a power firmly established in Corea, controling Manchuria, in possession of lines of communication that drain an immensely rich expanse of territory with unlimited resources to hand in the shape of a hardy, frugal, warlike population to aid with the prestige of victory that is an irresistible moral force with all Asiatics.

England could do nothing. It is her realization of the fact that makes one fear for the maintenance of peace. The success of Russia in the diplomatic negotiations now pending means more than triumph over Japan. It means immediate defeat of British aspiration in the far east.

When this fact is recognized it becomes easy to account for the provocative tone of the English press, which is in such curiously pronounced contrast to the "correct" attitude of the British government. It becomes easy to explain the hints that Great Britain cannot and will not allow her ally, Japan, to be crushed.

Either the quarrel is Japan's or it is England's. If it is Japan's and she chooses to go to war to settle the matter why should she not be "crushed" if Russia is more powerful? The fact is, England has far more at stake than Japan. Either the territorial expansion of Russia must be arrested definitely or England's aspirations after commercial supremacy in the far east must remain an unfulfilled dream.

Under the guise of a Russo-Japanese dispute, in short, the lion and the bear are preparing to grapple in a life or death struggle, and it is the dim perception of this that forces the world to follow the preliminary phases of the duel with such passionate interest.

England and Japan.

The treaty which England has with Japan provides, that if Japan is attacked by two enemies, England will come to its assistance, and it is said that this qualification enters into the treaty of alliance that France has made with Russia. Concerning this latter statement considerable doubt exists, for the reason that the terms of the alliance have never been made public, hence the conditions contained in it must be altogether subjects of conjecture. It does not appear probable, under any conceivable circumstances, that conditions will arise on the east coast of Asia which would bring England and France into war with each other. Their interests in each other are more natural and lively than the interest that either has in the well-being of its ally. While it may be said that a war between Japan and Russia might involve a point of national honor, and hence would be something lying outside of the range of the recent treaty of arbitration which the French and English governments have made with each other, it would be too much an instance of giving the word of promise to the ear and breaking it to the hope to have, through entangling alliances, a war break out between these two great powers almost before the ink had dried upon the agreement for arbitration signed by the two governments. More than this, the interest which France has in assisting Russia in its efforts at territorial extension is certainly remote. In the main the cause of France is much the same as our own—that is the desire must exist in France that the largest and freest opportunities for trade in China should be extended to all of the nations of the world, and for the immediate present this end would be better served by the maintenance of the Chinese empire than to have China become simply an appanage of Russia, or have a large part of the territory of that empire directly under Russian control.—Boston Herald.

The Sin of Exaggeration.

One of our exchanges has a long article on lying, and enumerates about every kind, except the lie of exaggeration.

To exaggerate is to make more out of a thing than is in it. This deceives, and hence is falsehood. So apparent is this that the oath required in our courts of justice is not only "to tell the truth, the whole truth," but also, "nothing but the truth."

There are two methods of this kind of lying. One is to overstate your own deeds and goodness, and the other is to understate facts concerning others whom you do not like. Some people always do wonderful things. So they say. They have meetings where "lightning-bolts flash from heaven," tornadoes of glory devastate the country." "The oldest inhabitant says he never saw such a revival before." Everything they do is wreathed in a cloud of glory. All workers who went before them were nothing, and the difference is that power will never be so manifest again. It is very difficult for them to see any good in anyone else. They look through the magnifying end of the telescope when they describe their own virtues, and the other end when they speak of the virtues of others. If there is any flaw in the other fellow, in any way, shape or manner, they take out the big microscope and show that he is straight on the road to hell. They magnify the virtues which they are sure they possess, and the faults they are sure other people possess.

Many people who mean to be good fall into this habit. Nevertheless, it is lying. To state the position of other people unfairly and declare that it is the truth, is lying. God help the man who wants to reform others to get the beam of exaggeration out of his own eye.—Christian Witness.

Obituary.

Pearl Mains died at Millbrook, Dec. 15, 1903, of rheumatism from which he had been a great sufferer for many months. Here he was born and reared and leaves not one stain behind. Pearl would have been 18 years old at his next birthday. He was the youngest son of Sister Mains, who lost her husband about a year ago. She and Pearl were preparing to go to Washington State, where two sons and a daughter reside, but pain and death came and stopped the proposed reunion of the family. In Pearl's death Sister Main has lost a very kind, dutiful and obedient son, her pride and stay. May the God of all peace who is able to comfort all hearts, be her support through these very hard places in life. Elder B. W. Woodward was summoned to preach the funeral sermon, using these pitiful words of Job for his text, "Have pity upon me, have pity upon me, O my friends, for the hand of God hath touched me."

M. A. WOODWARD.

George W. Kenyon, born April 15, 1835; died Dec. 13, 1903. Age 68 years, 7 months and 28 days. The writer officiated at this funeral.

M. A. WOODWARD.

George Augustus Kearney was born in Houlton Center, Ontario, April 26, 1850, and died at his home in Millbrook, Mecosta county, Michigan, December 15, 1903, aged 53 years 7 months and 19 days.

He was the son of Amos and Harriet Kearney, and was the sixth child of a family of ten children. At the age of six years he removed with his parents, brothers and sisters to Ottawa county, Michigan. His early life was spent on his father's farm, and during those years of the nation's civil strife, when his elder brother was in the field, fighting for the flag, he remained at home, and though only a young boy, he was the mainstay of the family, as the father was ill.

On April 3, 1872, he was united in marriage with Miss Jane Decker, of Millbrook, Michigan. To this union were born two sons, Loren and Bertie. His early married life was spent on his farm in Polkton township this county. In 1883 with his family, he removed to his beautiful farm home in Millbrook, Mecosta county, where he has since resided.

At the age of four years his younger son, Bertie, was removed from the home circle by the hand of death, and one year later his beloved and devoted wife, Jane, was called to her eternal rest, stricken by that dread disease consumption.

April 8, 1888, he and Miss Mary Decker, of Millbrook, were united in marriage. She has been a faithful and true companion to him, and with his son Loren have devotedly cared for him during his long and painful illness, assisted by relatives and friends.

In his young manhood he united with the church of the Seventh Day Adventists to which faith he ever strictly adhered.

One year ago he was afflicted with muscular rheumatism and he suffered the most intense agony. During all this time he endured his suffering with a degree of patience and Christian fortitude worthy of imitation.

His whole life has been shaped by industry, frugality, integrity and a strict adherence to moral and Christian principles. He was a noble son, a loving brother, a devoted husband, a kind father, a true friend, a good neighbor and beloved and respected by all who knew him.

His wife, son, three brothers, two sisters and a large circle of relatives and friends are left to mourn their great loss.

The funeral service was conducted Friday, December 18th, by B. W. Woodward, of Dutton.

ANOTHER OFFER.

There is a general waking up among our people everywhere. Our public speakers are all busy, and calls are in excess of their ability to attend them. Many places want preaching at the same time, but must wait their turn. This shows a decided interest, and a desire among our brethren to sound out the Word to the yet unsaved. All seem to realize that the night is far spent, that the time to work is short.

Brothers and Sisters, our work is not well done, and is not ready for acceptance of God, unless we have done all we can—our very utmost. We can not admit that it is our duty to do anything at all for the advancement of the Master's cause, without conceding it is our duty to do all we can—to make a sacrifice even.

Preachers of other denominations as well as our own, know and say that the best workers in a community are those who take and read their Church paper, and keep informed as to what is being done in the various departments of the work, and are thus interested in pushing along the car of truth.

The Managers of THE RESTITUTION are endeavoring to so conduct the paper that it will be a fit aid to the Evangelist in his work. We are trying to keep it clear from that contention that leads to mischief and strife. This is done by having certain well-defined truths which are taught in God's Word plainly, as a basis of belief, and by publishing articles that accord with these declared principles. Other outside subjects might be "investigated" as long as life and pencil and paper lasts, and no decision ever be reached, but we do not consider this a profitable work to engage in, hence do not ask for contributions on such subjects, and do not want them. Such are usually but the "opinion" of a man, and are often based on a mere inference at best.

This paper aims to teach the truth of the Bible, and the same is declared and believed in by our Church. We therefore believe it is a fit missionary to be sent out to the unsaved and lost of the human family. In order to make it possible for our friends to do more of this missionary work than ever before, we make this offer:

Any one sending us $10.00 may select 18 names of those not now subscribers, to whom we will send the paper for the year 1904. This makes a trifle over one-half regular price if taken in lots of $10.00 worth. You and the office practically go halves in scattering the truth of the gospel to your neighbors and friends. You who have money think of this. For $100 you can preach to an audience of 180 people over 200 sermons the coming year. Can you do better with that amount of money? You have a minister come to your neighborhood perhaps once a month, giving you two or may be three discourses each time—possibly 30 a year. When he is coming you invite your neighbors in to hear him. Suppose those neighbors have had THE RESTITUTION in their homes each week when the preacher was not there, and have read the articles, and are interested to hear more. Does not this increase largely the chances of the preacher being able to speak the very words that will start your friend on the way to the kingdom? Did you ever think of this matter? Will you not take it under consideration? We feel sure if you do you will not hesitate to go half partner with us in this work.

Who will send $10, $20, $50, $100 for this work? The best time to start it is now. Select your names and send at once, so they will get the rest of this year and all of next.

A Moslem Declaration of War on Christianity.

The growing influence exerted by Western nations in the Mohammedan lands of the Orient has not unnaturally awakened strong animosities against European religions. Probably the most pronounced and militant expression of such feelings is that which has recently come from Sheik Abdul Hagk, of Bagdad, the head of a "Holy Islamic League," organized throughout the Moslem nations for the purpose of guarding the highest interests of the Mohammedan religion and culture. The document was authorized by the League and is entitled "Islam's Last word to Europe." It was originally written in elegant French, and has appeared in the Paris "Figaro." We give the following condensation of this fiery declaration:—

"Christian Peoples! It is time that we should be heard. The hatred entertained by the people of Islam for Christianity is irreconcilable. After centuries of hard work spent in the attempt to make us friendly toward you, the only result has been that we now despise you more than was ever the case in the annals of history. O ye wise men of Europe, ye must learn this, that a Christian by the single fact that he is such, is in our eyes a blind man who has lost all the dignity and the worth of a man. We know exactly what we are, and it is absolutely necessary for you to understand this fundamental fact that the whole structure of Mohammedan faith is based on the doctrine of the unity of the one God, who is absolute, without limitations or restrictions, eternal, who has never been begotten and who has begotten none other. This article of our faith is in direct opposition to Christian teaching. Through this article the Christian dogma of a trinity becomes the sworn enemy of the God of Islam. The absolute hostility of these two fundamental doctrines is a cruel trial to the patience of every Mohammedan. Ye Christians, educated as you are from your youth in the doctrines of your church, can have no conception of the terror and disgust that overcomes our souls at the very mention of the word trinity. To this we must add a second indisputable point: Between our faith and yours there is an impassable and eternal gulf fixed, on account of your concept of the divinity of Christ. Know that as we are filled with an overwhelming awe of our doctrine of the oneness of the true God, it is absolutely impossible for us to permit or excuse anything that would in the least conflict with the unity of the one invisible God. Then, too, we have not forgotten the Crusades. These are being continued in a hundred accursed forms even now. You have contended against us and humiliated us with all your power. You have forced back the boundaries of Islam in all the corners of the globe; but what is left of the Mohammedan nations you are seeking to disintegrate through your diplomats and your missionaries! Your scheme has been systematically devised. You make no concealment of your intention to annihilate Islam. Instead of excusing yourselves for your aggressive and hostile policy, you boldly declare that we are rebels against your civilization. Yes, we are rebels, and we will remain rebels until death. But you and you alone are to be blamed for this. No, ye diplomats, we have paid too dearly for the confidence we put in you and your work. We know only too well that your civilization is indissolubly bound up with your religion, and that the purpose of both is the utter destruction of Islam. There is no doubt that in India, in Africa, in Central Asia, you have brought us great material benefits; but, by the eternal greatness of the God of Islam, it is not possible that we should even for a second submit to the rule of a God who was crucified, of a God who represents a humiliation of the Almighty Lord of the world.

Ye Christian conquerors, know well that no skill or science, no money or treasure, no miracle, will ever reconcile us to such a godless supremacy. Know ye that the very sight of your flags flying in our lands is torment for the soul of a Moslem. Your boasted good deeds are just so many stains of dishonor that have befouled our consciences, and our most urgent prayer is that the great day may soon come when we can wipe out the last traces of your accursed rule. And yet through your very enormities we have derived benefit. They have taught us how to know ourselves better. We know that we are three hundred million strong. We have needed organization and concentration, and you have forced us to take these steps. Islamic unity is now becoming a reality from one end of the earth to the other, and a holy zeal is uniting us to our inevitable destiny. We do not fear your threats or your arms. What do we care for the things of this world? Victory or defeat are in the hands of God alone. It is our duty to die right-fully, and the world has learned during the past thirteen centuries that the Moslem knows how to die."—Translation made for The Literary Digest.

Why Not?

Why is it that people cannot see that "the wages of sin is death?" "The soul that sinneth it shall die." "Sin when it is finished bringeth forth death." Why is it, when God has told us in fifty-two or more places in his word that he will destroy the wicked, that men will read over these passages or never notice them; and yet can always see the parable of the rich man and Lazarus? Why is it that men will contend for the immortality of the soul when they cannot find one passage in God's Word that tells it is so? Why is it that in all of the instances where people were raised from the dead, there was not one who said a word about the beauties of heaven or the horrors of hell? Look at Lazarus and the widow's son, and the "many," as it reads, who came out of their graves after Christ's resurrection, See Matt. xxvii: 50, 52, 53. Why is it that people strain out a gnat and swallow a camel?

Well there are a number of reasons for these things. Orthodoxy is built upon the dogma of the immortality of the soul; this is the first principle reason; and this causes them to handle the Word deceitfully. I believe that some do this willingly, and some ignorantly. God has said, "In vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." The fact is, there is more time spent in studying to make God's Word teach what it does not teach and never was intended to teach, than there is in trying to find out the plain truth. If we really desire to know what becomes of the wicked, we can read 2 Pet. ii: 9; 2 Pet. iii: 0, 7, and we have it in a nutshell.

The Lower Lights.

"I don't believe I'll go to church today," said Ruth one Sunday morning at the breakfast table. "Somehow I don't feel like it, and nobody will ever know the difference whether I'm there or not."

"My dear," said Aunt Margaret, "I've often heard you singing, 'Let the Lower Lights be Burning.' I wonder if you know the story that suggested it?"

"No," answered Ruth, "I never so much as heard that there was one."

"Some years ago a steamer in a terrific gale was trying to make the harbor of Cleveland, Ohio. There were two lights at the entrance of the harbor, one the upper light on the bluffs of the shore, the other the lower light on a bar at the other side of the entrance. The pilot peered out anxiously to catch a glimpse of the friendly lights, and presently caught sight of the upper one. But that alone was not sufficient; he must also see the other to know just where to go. But for some reason it was not lighted on time. Beaten by wind and wave, the steamer staggered on as best she could, while the hearts of all on board trembled with fear. It also missed the entrance there was little hope of her escaping the the rocks. Suddenly the lower light appeared, but, alas! it was too late—the steamer had missed the entrance, and in the attempt to turn about went down with all on board."

"I suppose," said Ruth, with a laugh, "you mean that even if I am the most insignificent member of our church, and sit in the very back seat, it is my duty to be there in my place?"

"You remember George Eliot's poem of the violin maker, who said that if he did not make the very best violin possible for him to make, God would miss the music? If we are not each one of us faithfully doing our duty, be it small or great, there is silence or discord where there might have been music. More than that that, our lives are bound together—we must needs lift up those about us or drag them down. We are bidden to sow our seed at all times, for we know not whether shall prosper either this or that, or whether both shall be alike good. The cobbler, as I once heard a minister say, could not paint a picture, but he could tell Apelles that the shoe tie was not right, and so might help towards making the beautiful picture perfect."—Zion's Herald.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JAN. 20, 1904. NUMBER 3.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Our Duty.

Have ye carried the living water
To the parched and thirsty soul?
Have ye said to the sick and wounded,
"Christ Jesus waiteth thee whole?"
Have ye told my fainting children
Of the strength of the Father's hand?
Have ye guided the tottering footsteps
To the shore of the "golden land?"

Have ye stood by the sad and weary
To smooth the pillow of death,
To comfort the sorrow stricken
And strengthen the feeble faith?
And have ye felt, when the glory
Has streamed through the open door,
And flitted across the shadows,
That there I had been before?

Have you wept with the broken-hearted
In their agony of woe?—
Ye might hear me whispering beside you
"'Tis the pathway I often go!"
My brethren, my friend, my disciples,
Can ye dare to follow me?
Then, wherever the Master dwelleth,
There shall thy servant be?

Notes By the Way.

Services being concluded at Ripley, Illinois, Bro. Thomas Wilson, conveyed me to Mt. Sterling, where I took the train for my next appointment at Blush, Missouri, 101 miles south of St. Louis. Arriving at St. Louis, at about 7 o'clock, P. M., I found I could not get a train until 8 o'clock A. M., the next morning. I then went to a hotel where the saints charged me $1.25 for the use of a bed over night.

In the morning I took the train on the Belmont branch of the Iron Mountain R. R. for Fredericktown, Missouri, and arrived at that place at about 2 o'clock P. M., and found Brethren Cooper and Graham, waiting for me at the depot, with a conveyance to take me to Blush, about six and a half miles distant. I stopped off at Bro. Cooper's, and took supper with Bro. and Sister Cooper and family, after which they conveyed me to the place of meeting in the Pine Woods school house, situated on Pine Creek. The sight of the pine woods, and the name of the school house, brought to my mind Hammond, Louisiana, where I wrote "Pine Woods Bible Class," and I could not forbear summoning again my old familiar class.

I found a hungry band of believers at Blush, craving spiritual food from God's Word. They had concluded to hold two services each day. I should have been glad to have done so, but I told them my physical strength would not be equal to more than one service each day. When a person is continually engaged in holding protracted services, day by day, without rest, it is a severe tax upon the nervous system.

After preaching I went home with Bro. and Sister Graham, where I made my home while at Blush.

The school house I found located in the midst of a thick timber. I just wondered where the people all came from, which packed in that school house. I could see but few houses any where, and yet, sometimes, at least one-third of the people could not be seated. I was told that some walked from eight to ten miles to hear me preach the Word.

Brother John Foore had held protracted meetings in that neighborhood, some three weeks previous to my arrival, and had awakened some interest. Interest continued in these meetings up to the last. At the last service the house was literally packed with people.

The brethren at this place are contemplating building a church house of their own, and would like to have myself and Brother Foore to conduct dedicatory services in it, on my return trip from the South, at which time I expect to hold services at Cadarville, and Morse Mill, Missouri, and also at any other place in Missouri, which may make application before my return.

We have an earnest little band at Blush, who are living in joyful anticipation of soon meeting the coming King. I shall long remember my pleasant visit at Blush. May God be with them, and bless them. Bro. Cooper conveyed me to Fredericktown, where I took the train on the Belmont Branch, for Bismarck, and there changed on to the main line of the Iron Mountain R. R. for Center Ridge, Arkansas. I arrived at Little Rock, Arkansas at 3:20 A. M., and sat around the depot until 7:20 A. M., and then took the Ft. Smith R. R., for Plummerville, arriving there at about 9:30 A. M., where I took Uncle Sam's long eared mail train for Center Ridge, some twenty-miles distant, which took five hours to make the trip. On arriving at the Center Ridge post office, the son of our Bro. Dr. Snowden, met me at that place. He then escorted me to his home, where I was heartily welcomed by Bro. Snowden and wife. I found Dr. Snowden to be an able minister of the gospel, and a zealous defender of the faith once delivered unto the saints. He is determined to hold no compromise with Adventists, Campbellites, or any other of the "ists," "ites" or "isms," which undermine the old gospel of the kingdom. He has had many debates with them, and they have learned to be careful how they tackle him. Bro. Snowden was formerly a Campbellite preacher.

Services began Sunday night in the Christian church. At the close of one of the services, I was introduced to a Christian church preacher, and he charged me with being an Adventist. I said, "No, sir, I am not." He said that if he preached Adventist doctrine he would take the name of Adventist. I took occasion the next night, to show the difference which exists between the teaching of the denomination called A. C. Adventists, and the Bible. A wide difference exists between the two. A. C. Adventists teach the destruction of the material world, and all that is thereon, except the few that are in the ark, Christ Jesus, at his second coming; while God said: "Neither will I again smite any more every living thing as I have done." They teach that this destruction will take place at the second coming of Jesus, while the Bible teaches, "He shall send Jesus Christ, (the second time) whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Hence, as the Bible and A. C. Adventists are so wide apart, I could not carry the name of A. C. Adventist.

The Word has taken effect in this place, several Campbellites were almost persuaded to obey. I trust to hear before long that full conviction will lead them to obey, because they will find "almost" a long ways off, if it should go no further.

Almost persuaded, harvest is past,
Almost persuaded, doom comes at last.
Almost cannot avail,
Almost is but to fail;
Sad, sad, that bitter wail—
Almost—but lost.

There are but a few members at Center Ridge, but Bro. Snowden thinks the series of meetings held there must do good.

Bro. Snowden is a soldier who has enlisted for the war, and he means to keep up the fight until the King comes, if the Lord shall spare him that long.

The meetings being concluded at Center Ridge, Bro. Jacobs and wife living four miles from Scotland, Ark., came for me to take me to their place, to conduct a series of meetings. We drove for fifteen miles through one unbroken forest, without one single natural opening. Here and there you might see smoke rising up over the tree tops, indicating that a little log cabin lay nestled among the trees near by. Here I am in one dense forest, covering hundreds of miles of territory. The country is very rough, not one single piece of level country to be seen. The whole landscape is composed of hills and mountains, where roam wolves, catamounts, wild cats, bear and deer. A drove of wolves recently attacked Bro. Jacob's sheep, and killed three, and wounded a fourth. Yet right here in these wild woods is a congregation of believers contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. It is quite a revelation to me to find the amount of believers there are scattered over the State of Arkansas. God has got a larger number of witnesses for the gospel of the kingdom than we are aware of. They are also scattered further west, over Indian Territory and Oklahoma, where I expect to go before I return home.

Meetings are now in progress in these woods, and I trust the seed sown will find lodgment in honest hearts.

I enjoyed a trip with Bro. Jacobs over the Spur of the mountain, and stood upon a great flat rock, and viewed the mighty chasm below. The scene was romantic, indeed. It is also said to abound with wild ravenous beasts.

On Christmas eve, quite a large company of brethren, sisters and friends met in the log cabin home of Bro. and Sister McAlister, to meet Bro. Waddle, of Texas, who had removed from this place some thirteen years ago. Bro. Waddle is one of those genial, kind hearted old gentlemen, whom every one seems to love. They gave the aged brother a hearty reception.

The scene was very interesting to me, as I sat that night with these hospitable southern people about the great old-fashioned fire place, piled up with logs almost to the top. About it were probably not less than thirty people enjoying its genial warmth, and the cheerful light radiating out from the great fire place, which seems to have a soothing, mellowing effect upon the mind, that no other light can produce. These people though simple in their habits, and know but little of what constitutes city life, and are not surrounded with what city people call comforts, still they are a happy and a contented people. They have no worry and fret about making a living, they have hogs, and in fact, and also need but little money, but they all have the necessities of life in abundance. At this place, they are located some thirty-seven miles from a railroad. They do not pretend to market much of anything except cotton, and that furnishes them with what little money they actually need. They produce fruits, vegetables, butter, eggs and meats, merely for the family consumption. I have seen considerable of the production of cotton in this country, I have seen the fields literally white for the harvest, and the pickers at work picking the cotton out of the open balls. I have seen it carted in wagons to the gin mills, I have also seen the gin mill at work, separating the seeds from the cotton, which come out of one end of the mill, while at the other end, cotton rolls out in sheets, like sheet wadding. The cotton is then pitched into a bale press, and made up into bales weighing some five or six hundred pounds per bale.

There is much of interest and romance in the wild southwest. Government claims are still being taken up.

To me it is of great interest to know that God has got a goodly number of able defenders of the old gospel of the kingdom right here, and I expect to find many more, as I go further west into Indian Territory, and Oklahoma. A. C. Adventists have been somewhat of a trouble to the household of faith in Arkansas, but the brethren have cut clean loose from them. The State Conference in Arkansas will have no fellowship with them.

Right here, while I think of it, I wish to say that a certain Josephite Seventh Day Adventist preacher, has been begging for an appointment at Blush, Mo., even agreeing to keep quiet about his heresies, if they would only let him come in among them, and preach, but they had grit enough to give him to understand that he was not wanted. That is right. Brethren every where should have nothing to do with the advocates of the above heresies, no matter who he is that proclaims them.

In my travels I find the outlook is encouraging, the work is progressing, people are giving an attentive ear to the proclamation of the grand old gospel of the kingdom. The King is coming, dear ones in Christ. Get ready. My next appointment is at Magazine, Arkansas, care of Dr. Daniels. Yours in Christ.

CHAPTER 30.

CONCERNING CHILDREN.

1. The one who loveth his son will scourge him continuously (not continually) that he may rejoice in his last experience.

2. The one who chasteneth his son [illegible] in him, and in the midst of those who know him will [illegible] boast of him.

3. The one who teacheth his son will provoke his enemy to envy and in the presence of friends will be be glad in him.

4. His father hath come to his end and it is as though he had not died; for he hath left behind him one like to him.

5. In his life time he saw and rejoiced, and in his approaching end he did not sorrow.

6. In the sight of enemies he left a requiter and one to repay favor to friends.

7. One who cools off toward his son will bind up his wounds, at every cry his tender feelings will have been moved.

8. An untamed horse goeth away hard to handle and an unrestrained son goeth out headlong.

9. Foster a child and he will be in awe of thee; sport with him and he will cause thee sorrow.

10. Do not laugh along with him that thou mayest not suffer woe along with him and finally have thy teeth set on edge.

11. Do not give him official-power in his youth.

12. Bruise his ribs when he is a child lest when he has become hard he disobey thee.

13. Chasten thy son and work with him that he may not stumble with age for thee, and do not disregard his sins of ignorance;

14. Bow his neck in his youth.

CONCERNING HEALTH.

14. Better is a healthy and strong beggar in his being than a rich man scourged in his body.

15. Health and well-being are better than any gold, and a robust body than unmeasured prosperity (worldly goods being the measure of it).

16. There is no wealth better (more efficient) than health of body, and there is no rejoicing more than joy of heart.

17. Better death than a bitter life and abiding debility.

18. Good things poured out upon a body that is shut in are offerings of food lying upon a grave.

19. What doth a fruit-offering-service profit an idol? For it will neither be eaten nor smelled. In this wise is the one pursued away by the Lord.

20. Looking with his eyes and sighing like a eunuch who embraceth a virgin and sigheth.

21. Do not give thy soul sorrow and do not cause thyself tribulation with thy counsel.

22. Rejoicing of heart is a man's life, and a noble man's gladness is [illegible] of days.

23. Console thy soul and comfort thy heart and stand sorrow far away from thee; for sorrow hath slain many and there is no profit in it.

24. Jealousy and anger diminish days and induce over-anxiety (worry) before the due time of old age.

25. Like one gleaning after vintners have I arrived in a blessing of the Lord; and like a vintner have I filled a wine vat.

26. Contemplate carefully because I have not toiled for myself alone, but for all those who seek chastening instruction.

27. May ye have hearkened unto me ye great ones of a laity and ye leaders of a church may ye have hearkened me well.

28. Do not give official-power over thee to son or wife or brother or friend in thy life time and do not give thy possessions to another, that thou mayest not repent and beseech for them.

29. As long as thou livest and there is breath in thee do not exchange thyself for any flesh.

30. For it is better for children to beseech thee than for thee to look to the hands of thy sons.

31. In all thy deeds become one who excelleth; do not give cause for blame to thy glory.

32. In a day of the consummation of the days of thy life, and the period of thine end divide an inheritance.

CONCERNING BOND-SERVANTS.

33. Fodder and a rod and little burdens for an ass, bread and chastening and work for a [illegible]

34. Give employment to a servant and thou wilt find rest; loose his hands and he will seek freedom.

35. A yoke and a thong will bow a neck, and racks and extreme measures are for a house-servant who is an evil-doer.

36. Put him to work that he may not be idle.

37. For much evil hath idleness taught.

38. Set him at such employments as befit him, and if he do not submit, make his fetters heavy, and do not be over exacting toward any flesh, and without judgment do nothing.

39. If he be thy house-servant (born in thy house) let him be as thou art, because thou didst not acquire him with blood; if he be thy house-servant lead him as thyself, because as thy soul shalt thou entreat for him.

40. If thou ill-treat him and he take up and run away, on what highway wilt thou seek him?

COMMENT.

This chapter teaches clearly the difference in those days both of moral and legal obligation and relation existing between lord or master and slave or servant. In general there were two classes of servants, namely those who served for stipulated wages as now and bond-servants who for the time being at least belonged to their lords or masters; and the bond-servants as a whole were divided into those born in the households of their lords of concubines or semi-wives, and those acquired as prisoners of war or who had voluntarily mortgaged and sold themselves to their lords. This law and custom differentiated the general term "Doulos" or bond-servant into "pais" and "oiketes"—the last two terms applicable only to those born in the household and the last applicable only to the "pais" who had availed himself of his legal rights and waived his liberty when he might have taken it under the seven or fifty year of manumission, preferring to stay and inherit with the other children although not on an equality with them and holding a semi-servile position. For example see Agar in her relation to Sarra her lady and the "oiketes" of Habraam who negotiated the marriage between Isaac and Hrebekka. A clear understanding of this subject and these terms is absolutely necessary to a right apprehension of later Scripture and prophetic teaching involving these terms. The teaching under the other two heads "Concerning children" and concerning health speak for themselves and are full of wisdom which is just as timely now as then and it could well be made a handbook of the present day.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Mark II. 27, 28.

The above Scripture in connection with the context suggests the following:

1. The Jews accused Jesus of breaking the Sabbath.

2. The accusation is not denied, but rather admitted.

3. The grounds on which he justified himself in breaking the Sabbath.

It is proper to do well on the Sabbath. "The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath," therefore the Sabbath does not stand in the way of doing whatsoever would minister to the comfort or well being of man. The case of David and his company unlawfully eating bread to satisfy hunger is cited as a precedent; also the priests circumcising children on the Sabbath. Thus far he meets the Sabbath sticklers on their own ground, and fully justified his conduct in healing the sick, and going to the fields for food to eat, on the Sabbath day. But as yet he had not touched the utmost point desired, hence proceeds to announce that a greater than the temple is here, and that the "Son of Man is Lord of the Sabbath." To be Lord of the Sabbath was equivalent to saying that he was under no obligation to observe it, which was in his case absolutely true. Jesus like all other Jews was under the law, until he was baptized of John, and doubtless observed the [illegible]. After his baptism and anointing with Holy Spirit he was no longer under the law, but was greater and higher than the law, the temple and Sabbath day, even supplanting Moses, and therefore Lord over all, his conduct or course of action was no doubt for the purpose of showing that one greater than Moses is Lord and Master over all, hear ye him. The Son of God, the Lord's anointed is here, the prophet like unto Moses, but greater than Moses is among you. This is the lesson taught.

In conclusion I suggest that Bro. Eychaner write a series of articles on the following topics:

1. What is the law of sin and death?
2. What is the "law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus?"
3. What is the law of Moses?
4. How are these laws related to each other, and to all of Adam's posterity, who by knowledge come into covenant relationship to Abraham's God.

Sift these questions carefully, be critical, be thorough in citing the testimony. I am inclined to think it may do for him what his fellowmen cannot do, viz., deliver him from that ever present, but distressing shadow of uncertainty, shall I or shall I not keep the Sabbath? It may be that ultimately it will be clearly seen that Sabbath keeping availeth nothing or non-Sabbath keeping, but a new creature or new creation in Christ Jesus.

Obituary.

Fell asleep in Jesus, on Jan. 3, 1904, at Chanute, Kansas, Sister Maggie Sweet, wife of James M. Sweet, deceased, to whom she was married on April, 8, 1860. At the time of her death she was 64 yrs, 2 mo. and 8 days old. Her maiden name was Hutchinson. In the fall of 1870 they moved from Illinois to Neosho Co., Kansas. Brother Sweet died Jan. 18, 1891, leaving his wife and one son and one daughter to mourn his loss. The son's wife died a few years ago, leaving three children, who, with their father lived with Sister Sweet.

About 28 years ago Brother and Sister Sweet were baptized into the all-saving name of Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God. Since that time both the children, their companions, and one grand daughter have obeyed. Sister Sweet was an exemplary woman, liked by all who knew her. She was a great sufferer, but bore it all patiently. On the 29th of December I received word that she was not expected to live and asked [illegible] to see me. I went and found her in a critical condition. She knew me, and was glad to see me, and thanked me for my kindness towards them. I sang a number of her favorite hymns and had secret prayer and bade her farewell. Her funeral was held on the afternoon of Jan. 4. I preached the sermon, using for my subject, "An enemy hath done this." Sister Sweet is at rest and is awaiting the summons from the Master who said: "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold I am alive forevermore, and have the keys of hell and death." It will only be a question of time when we must all go, as the ranks are thinning very fast. Who will be the next to follow Sister Sweet? My prayer is that we may all so live in this life that whether awake or asleep we may be among the chosen ones, and meet where death never comes.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of last year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with the word and works with them.

Urge some one nearby to try it a year. Send in [illegible] interested in. Use your influence to spread the truth of the gospel and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

The Way of Life!

By imbibing the lie of the Serpent man has become alienated from God. He has become Serpentized, so to speak; hence Jesus said to the Jews, "Ye are of your father, the devil, (accuser) and the lusts of your father ye will do; he was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth." John viii. 44. Such is the condition into which sin has brought the human race. But happily, God has interposed on man's behalf! He has uttered his voice in mercy, and has made known his

PLAN OF REDEMPTION,—

that plan is so fraught with compassion for fallen man that it reaches his affections, and begets love in his heart for God. It was necessary to do something for man in order to reach his affections. Had there been no hope for him beyond death, to which he was doomed, he would have had no incentive to return to the obedience of God's holy law, which from the deterioration of his nature or disposition through sin, is more difficult to keep than it was in the days of innocence. Therefore it is described as a

"CRUCIFYING OF THE FLESH

with its affections and lusts." Paul says, "I feel a law in my members warring against the law of my mind." Rom. vii. 23. God has given the necessary incentive to love and obedience, in his "still small voice" of mercy.

The revelation of the way of life seems at first sight a little obscure, but it gradually opens up, as time rolls on, like the morning light, waxing brighter and brighter until the sun reaches the meridian. God's gracious plan of mercy shines clearer as each prophet appears, until God's Sun (Son) of righteousness arose on the earth as the "world's light." No sooner was of Adam and his wife fixed, than the merciful Judge appointed them a covering for their persons, which shadowed forth the more important covering which he had provided for their sins. God instituted a system of worship, and appointed sacrificial offerings of slain animals. It was the skins of animals that for a covering, thus showing that the death of the animal was necessary in order to obtain that covering. The typical teaching of those sacrifices was that sin was the cause of death; that in order to be an accepted worshiper, man must approach God by sacrifice; that the sacrifice, or death of the "Lamb of God," Jesus the Christ, was necessary to redeem man from death. We see, then, that before the sinners were expelled from Paradise, God uttered

GOD GAVE ADAM

WORDS OF CONSOLATION

and hope. He intimated that the Serpent's seed would bruise the heel of the woman's seed, but ultimately the seed of the woman would bruise the head of the Serpent,—thus showing that the Son of God would be victorious over sin. We are not to suppose that it is the literal progeny of the Serpent that is here meant. It is the greater portion of the human family who have been ever since sin was introduced into the world. Cain, Eve's first-born, was a striking illustration of this. He was a murderer, and it is evident Jesus referred to him when he said to the Jews, "Ye are of your father the devil; he was a murderer from the beginning." Jesus also called the wicked Jews "serpents," and "a generation of vipers." Matt. xxiii. 33. The above testimonies show that the human family is divided into two classes, respectively termed "the seed of the woman," and the "seed of the serpent." Error, as first taught by

SERPENTIZED

THE SERPENT,

was the cause of alienation from God; and it is a belief of the truth of God and obedience to the same, that constitutes man the seed of the woman. Truth and error in respect to God's revelation form the respective characters of the two classes. Abel was the first of the woman's seed, and also a type of the emphatic seed; and all who believe and obey God's Word of salvation, return to him and are adopted as sons; hence we read of

"THE SONS OF GOD and the daughters of Men." The seed of the woman is a distinct class from the [illegible] may mention Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, etc. The enmity that God put between them and the wicked has always manifested itself. The truth spoken by God has ever been rejected and despised by the greater portion of the race; and consequently those who have believed and loved it, have always been hated and persecuted as the result of the enmity.

As it was a departure from God's truth that originated sin, so it is by believing his truth and obeying it that men "receive power to become sons of God." John i. 12. God revealed his plan of salvation, and he instituted sacrifices as a means of instruction concerning his way of life. We learn this from the offerings of Cain and Abel, as also from the fact that the Lord God placed Cherubim at the east of the garden. The flaming sword was placed there "to keep the way of that is, to prevent the expelled sinners returning to the tree of life. Had they again got access to its life,—fruit—they would have gone on eating of it and lived for ever, and thereby escaped the death to which they were doomed. But God's Word cannot be broken. His plan is not to prevent them from dying, but to

THE TREE OF LIFE;"

RESTORE THE DEAD

ones to life again by the exercise of his mercy. It has been suggested "that the cherubic faces were appointed to represent the presence of God, and that the place where they were stationed was the place where his worshipers presented their offerings,—showing that while death was certain through being shut out from the tree, there was a way of return to the shores of life through sacrifice, even the sacrifice of the woman's emphatic seed! which was the

GREAT SACRIFICE

which the slaying and offering of animals shadowed forth; and that it might have been the cherubic faces referred to that Cain was expelled from when he said, "My punishment is greater than I can bear. Behold thou hast driven me out this day from the face of the earth; and from thy face shall I be hid." Gen. iv. 13, 14. However this may be, it is recorded at the 16th verse, "And Cain went out from the presence of the Lord."

The God of all grace has arranged a merciful plan by which he will deliver from death those who will accept such deliverance in his way: and in Eden we see the plan put in motion by which he will accomplish his stupendous work. The means employed are his revealed purpose and exceeding great and precious promises, together with the condition of their inheritance, and a system of worship, and rules of life to train men for his higher destiny.

Scientific Side Lights for Bible Students.

"The sunbeam does what our wisest chemistry cannot do; it takes the burned-out ashes and makes them anew into green wood; it takes the close and breathed-out air and makes it sweet and fit to breath by means of the plant, whose food is the same as our poison. With the aid of sunlight a lily would thrive on the deadly atmosphere of the "black hole of Calcutta;" for this bane to us, we repeat, is vital air to the plant, which breathes it through all its pores, brings it into contact with the chlorophyl, its green blood, which is to it what the red blood is to us; doing almost everything, however, by means of the sunray, for if this be lacking, the oxygen is no longer set free on the [illegible] tained, and the plant dies. [illegible] brief statement must answer [illegible] of a fuller description of how [illegible] energy builds up the vegetable [illegible]"—Langley's New Astronomy, [illegible], p. 73.

Why a man should not simply grow better and better until in his own right he enter the kingdom of God is what thousands honestly and seriously fail to understand. Philosophy cannot help us here. Her arguments are, if anything, against us. But science answers to the appeal at once. If it be simply pointed out that this is the same absurdity as to ask why a stone should not grow more and more living till it enters the organic world, the point is clear in an instant." Natural Law in Spiritual World, p. 71.

"The floating smoke though so long unnoticed by man, was not overlooked by the Author of nature. It is a part of his grand and beneficent design in the scheme of organic nature. No sooner do the products of [illegible] wood burning on the hearth [illegible] into the free expanse of [illegible] than a new cycle of changes [illegible]. The carbonic dioxide and the aqueous vapor, after roving at liberty for a time, are absorbed by the leaves of some wide-spreading tree, smiling in the sunshine, and in the tiny laboratory of their green cells are worked up by those wonderful agents, the sunrays, into new wood, absorbing from the sun a fresh supply of power, which is destined perhaps, to shed light and warmth around the fireside of a future generation." Cooke's Religion and Chemistry, ch. 3, p. 80.

Truth, like nature's gifts, has to be worked for. Nature never provides for man's wants in any direction, bodily, mental, or spiritual, in such a form as that he can simply accept her gifts automatically. She puts all the mechanical powers at his disposal—but he must make his lever. She gives him corn, but he must grind it. She elaborates coal, but he must dig for it. Corn is perfect; all the products of nature are perfect, but he has everything to do to them before he can use them. So with truth; it is perfect,—infallible. But he must think, analyse, absorb, digest.—Nat. Law, p. 826.

REGARDING the situation in the far east little definite can be written. There is a feeling that Russia is to blame, that Japan must stand or fall, or be overthrown. As this would clear the way for Russian domination in that part of the world, and at the same settle the question of Chinese open ports, and as this point touches alike England, France, Germany, and our own United States, all these nations must perforce sympathize with Japan, and really must in the event of defeat by the Russians, lead to intervention by them, so as to save their own interests. This feeling is the strongest peace element in the whole affair. Russia, if she goes to war, faces not alone Japan, but the whole world of civilized nations, and cannot even count on her ally France to help her. Losing the support of France, she is not quite certain she could count on Germany coming to her side. Another factor that makes Russia hesitate before striking Japan, is that England is very busy making advances in Thibet and Persia, pushing her outposts further to the front while Russia is busy with Japan. Of course Russia recognizes that Japan, but England, is her real enemy, and she dare not waste herself by war with Japan. The clash may come in a few days, but it is quite likely that the Czar will play for further time.

BROTHER Zilmer closed his meeting at Chicago after giving them [illegible] discourses. A report from [illegible] that some of our own people remarked that they "never before heard such sermons." We trust the brethren of Chicago will not let this be the end of their efforts in this direction. Brother Neill this week holds his meetings at a place called Center School, having held some interesting meetings in the Salem Church last week. He feels quite encouraged, and we hope he will see results of the efforts made to spread the good news.

Dear Restitution:

In THE RESTITUTION for Dec. 28, I notice a query from Brother Eychaner. He asks for an exposition of Mark ii, 27, 28. He asks for other's sake surely, for he himself must understand the passage as well as any one. For myself, I see no difficulty in it. I take it to mean just what it says. It reads thus, "And he (Jesus) said unto them, [illegible] Pharisees) the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath; therefore the Son of Man is Lord also of the Sabbath." The occasion of it was Jesus and his disciples were passing through the corn fields, and being hungry, the disciples began to pluck some ears and eat. This displeased the Pharisees, who were always ready to strain at a gnat and swallow a camel. They thought it an awful thing for the disciples to do so on the Sabbath! And so they ask Jesus, why they did so unlawful a thing? Jesus, as was his custom, answered their question by asking them a question, "Have you never read what David did when he had need, and was a hungered, he and they that were with him? How he went into the house of God, and did eat the shew bread, which is not lawful to eat but for the priests, and gave also to them who were with him?" But they don't seem to have made any reply, and so Jesus adds, "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath; therefore the Son of Man is Lord also of the Sabbath." Matthew gives another item, Matt. xii. 5, 6, "Have you not read in the law, how that on the Sabbath days the priests in the temple profane the Sabbath, and are blameless? but I say unto you, that in this place it is one greater than the temple." If he thought a thing necessary for the good or needs of man, he may do it, he being Lord, Master, greater, above or higher than the Sabbath. He was greater than Moses by whom the law came. The authority of Jesus is above that of Moses. What Jesus did the Father would approve of, for he came to do the will of the Father. And the Pharisee hypocrites were wrong in condemning innocent. I add a little more on the Sabbath, that Jesus says was made for man, of course it was made for women too, whether bond or free; also the ox, the ass, etc., and not for just one man, but for all to whom it was given. Now then:

1. To whom was it given? Ans. To Israel, to Israel as a nation, as we see Ex. xx, 1, "I am the Lord thy God, who brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage, etc. Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy, six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work, etc. The Sabbath had been introduced some days before, (Ex. xvi.) but it was new to them, they had not learned all about it. But here in chapter 20, it is given in connection with other [illegible] to the house or nation of Israel. I know of no instance of the law being given to any other people or nation beside Israel. This is true of the law as a whole, but I am speaking mostly as to the law of the Sabbath.

2. But why was the Sabbath given to Israel, and to no other people? Because they had been slaves, etc. Deut. v. 15, Remember that thou wast a servant (slave) in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand and by an outstretched arm. Therefore note, therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day. In Egypt they had been slaves and worked most to death, no rest days or let up, therefore God pitied them and gave them the Sabbath or rest day, as Jesus said the Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath.

3. But why did God choose the seventh day for the Sabbath (or rest) day? I answer, because in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day; wherefore for that reason the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it. Now we will see Gen. ii. 2, 3, bearing in mind that this was written some time after, or subsequent to the giving of the law. Ex. xx. Now we read, And he (God) rested on the seventh day from all his works which he had made. And God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it (set it apart), because that in it he had rested from all his work, which he created and made. So far as any account is given God had been resting 2500 years when the Sabbath was first given for man, or made known to Israel. Neh. ix. 14.

4th, The Sabbath was given to Israel for a sign, etc. Ezek. xx. 12, "Moreover also I gave them my Sabbaths, to be a sign between me and them, that they might know I am the Lord that sanctifies them." Now if God had given the Sabbath to other nations, as well as to Israel, it would not be any sign that he had sanctified or set them apart from other nations! 40 or 50 years ago it was a sign or a mark that distinguished the Jew from the Gentile in the city of Cleveland, Ohio, for on the seventh day (Saturday) the Jews' stores were closed. I am sorry to say there are but few Jews that do it now. There is but little difference on that point now between many of the Jews and the Gentiles. A few remain faithful to their law. Perhaps I have said enough.

Japan's Defiance.

Seldom does a nation which invites war with such open defiance as Japan gain such widespread sympathy. This sympathy is partly selfish, Russia standing for a check to trade, but it is more the generous impulse of the world, which goes out to the smaller and more honest combatant. The preliminaries have been carried on with the eloquence of a prize-fighter by Japan, and with a sort of sullen reticence by her huge opponent, and yet the world has swung, during the elaborate interchange of defis, distinctly nearer in feeling to Japan. The universal sense of justice has been touched, since the belief is so general that Japan's fight is for her life, and therefore inevitable and just. A sort of straightforward integrity has also won friends. In contrast to Russian wiles and blinds and bluffs, Japan has said, as one man, that she meant to have one particular thing, if the effort cost her life. On such grounds the sympathy of statesmen may not be given, but the sympathy of peoples is, and in diplomacy leaders are often driven by the bulk of sentiment in the masses behind. Experts are now busy contradicting one another about the relative abilities of the rival powers, and statesmen are busy studying the interests of their own countries, but the people all over the world observe the situation with disinterested emotion and cheer for the nation which they think has the fairer cause. If actual warfare comes, this moral sympathy may mean little, or it may mean everything. Chance is a mighty power in war and peace, and Japan has at least prepared herself admirably to take whatever favorable chances the future may unfold. A little nation which is backward and deceitful, like the Boers, gains sympathy merely from her littleness. A little nation like Japan, which is remarkable for character and progress, arouses a widespread kindliness which may at any moment find an opening for decisive expression. Certainly, if Japan had enjoyed the repute in 1895 which is hers today, the powers of Europe would never have forbidden her to take what she deemed hers from China.—Collier's Weekly.

DID you ever stop to think that the dollar you handed the preacher paid him for the very hours of time he spent in studying up the discourse which decided the mind of your next door neighbor, and started him toward the kingdom? If you had not given that dollar the preacher could not have accomplished his part of the work. Perhaps, yes, quite likely, the dollar you pay to send this paper to your friend, will be the means of starting him on the road to the saint's abode. If you could be positively assured that it would do so, would you hold back the money? It cannot be definitely guaranteed to you, but this can be assured—YOUR part was done. It is our—mine—your privilege to sow. The increase is in God's hand; but He holds us responsible for our share in the work. Will he count your part well done?

Christ is as food for the inner and clothing for the outer man; we have no time to sin.

It won't help your own garden any to sit on the fence and count the weeds in your neighbor's truck patch.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones; This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

A Blow to Evolution.

By "evolution" we mean that theory regarding the origin of things, and man in particular, which dispenses with the creative act of God, and attributes all to the "fortuitous concourse of atoms." There are kinds of evolution which are legitimate, but not this one, and the truly God-fearing, Bible-loving, religious world felt much indebted to Lord Kelvin for his recent utterance on this subject, because, as one of the most noted scientists of the day, he can speak with an authority beyond the most.

Referring to the origin of life, Lord Kelvin said: 'He could not say that... science neither affirmed nor denied creative power. Science positively affirmed creative power. Science made every one feel a miracle in himself. It was not in dead matter that they lived and moved and had their being, but in the creative and directive power which science compelled them to accept as an article of belief. They could not escape from that when they studied the physics and dynamics of living and dead matter all around. Modern biologists were coming once more to a firm acceptance of something, and that was a vital principle...They only knew God [as scientists] in his works, but they were absolutely forced by science to admit and to believe with absolute confidence in a directive power—in an influence other than physical, dynamical, electrical forces.....Was there, he asked, anything so absurd as to believe that a number of atoms by falling together of their own accord could make.....a microbe, a living animal? People thought that, given millions of years, these might come to pass, but they could not think that a million of millions of millions of years could give them unaided a beautiful world like ours."

In a subsequent letter Lord Kelvin added these words: "I desire to point out that, while 'fortuitous concourse of atoms' is not an inappropriate description of a crystal, it is utterly absurd in respect to the coming into existence, or the growth, or the continuation of the molecular combinations presented in the bodies of living things. Here scientific thought is compelled to accept the idea of Creative Power. Forty years ago I asked Liebig, walking some where in the country, if he believed that the grass and flowers which we saw around us grew by mere chemical forces. He answered: 'No: no more than I could believe that a book or botany describing them could grow by mere chemical forces.' Every action of human free-will is a miracle to physical and chemical and mathematical science."

Lord Kelvin has been very much criticised for these observations, but we are grateful for them, recognizing in them the true ring of a man of faith.—Messenger.

Prayers for the Dead.

This question is ever and anon coming to the front in some form or another. In a Glasgow church recently a popular preacher made it the subject of his Sunday evening discourse, and at the close the congregation was startled by the unusual circumstance of one in the audience rising and protesting against the misleading tenor of the preacher's remarks that prayers for the dead were not unscriptural. The speaker sat down when requested, and afterwards the preacher explained his position to be:—"Nowhere did the letter of the Bible forbid such prayers, but, unless he misinterpreted the Scriptures, their whole spirit was opposed to them." Assuming that it is true that the letter of the Bible did not forbid prayers, would there not be a very good reason for such a silence? Prayers for dead people every one would recognize to be quite useless did they really believe that those they call 'dead' were dead indeed. It is only the belief in Longfellow's popular phrase,—"There is no death"—which gives prayers for the dead any force at all. Now the Scriptures teach that "the dead know not anything," and everywhere recognize this truth. What need, therefore, to forbid a practice which every Hebrew would recognize to be valueless, if he ever thought of it?—Messenger.

Poetry.

Memory of Mary E. Knowles.

Dear Sister, you have fought the fight to a finish;
That noble faith you have nourished so long
Is good for eternity, and will not diminish
When you jo'n that immortal throng.

Your words of kindness first of all
Came quietly from your gentle mind,
With saddened hearts our tears do fall
To miss you mother, so true and kind.

Dear brother, she said the last time we met,
We shall meet some time to part no more.
Oh, dear sister, may the time be set,
When we shall join on that beautiful shore.

Oh, blessed Savior, hasten the time,
When no sickness, sorrow, death nor pain,
And God's elect from every clime,
An immortal gift for that wide domain.

Death cannot hold you, dear loved one,
Your works were earnest and in reality,
Your faith did reach beyond the tomb
To life and immortality.

Communicated.

Dear Restitution:

A short account of evangelist work in Ohio may be of some interest to your readers.

On the 19th of Nov. I began at the home of Bro. D. C. Robison, Mt. Vernon. He had been promised the School house near by, but later was refused. Nothing daunted our brother went round among his neighbors and we had two very interesting and pleasant meetings. A few questions were asked by one of the visitors and the answers seemed to satisfy.

There are few more able to proclaim the good news of the kingdom than Bro. Robison, but throat trouble prevents him making much effort. I found him ever ready and willing to talk of the things pertaining to salvation. His family united in efforts for my comfort. I bade him good by on Saturday morning, Nov. 21, and was soon rapidly riding toward Brush Creek. After a mistake by a railroad official, which kept me over night in Arcanum, I arrived at Keesler Sunday morning, Nov. 22, and was met by Bro. Geo. T. Knife After kindly greetings by Sister Knife and family, we started for the meeting at Brush Creek, where we found a goodly number of the church gathered. After a hearty welcome, I gave a short address, then Bro. John Lehman took charge and we partook of bread and wine in faith as the body and blood of him who died for us, and rose again, and we were spiritually refreshed and strengthened. Sunday evening we had a good meeting, the attendance and attention increased each evening until Friday when sitting room was becoming scarce. This might be on account of the weather which was fine and finer each day and night until Saturday it was somewhat stormy winter, but even then a fair meeting. Sunday morning I spoke directly to the household, commending and exhorting to more and more diligence as the weeks pass. Brother Rufus Curtis took charge and we again broke bread in remembrance of our Lord who gave himself for us. This meeting was deeply impressive. We parted after singing "God be With you till we Meet Again."

During my stay there I was made comfortable at the houses of Brother and Sister Curtis, Sister Deborah Pearson and husband, Brother and Sister John Lehman, even the children of the families from eldest to youngest showed me kindness, and if convenient I would mention them by name. I parted from the brethren at Brush Creek with some reluctance as I was not as well acquainted with all as I wished to be.

I will state that I had much interesting talk in the homes where I was, on salvation topics, not usually discussed in meetings, and I am certain good resulted to all, and I trust the conclusions reached will not be forgotten. I cannot well close concerning Brush Creek without mentioning by name Bros. Clyde and Howard Pearson who were faithful in attendance and helpful in playing the organ and leading in song, something near and dear to my heart when the words are in praise of Jehovah and our Lord, or in expression of our blessed hope. There were others who helped sing, but I cannot remember names. After dinner at Sister Macey's, Bro. Esta Macey took me to the Union School in the Piqua district, a drive of 18 miles. We arrived in time for evening service. Here I met Brother and Sister N. S. Westfall, Sister Eidemiller and husband, Sister Emma Nelsley of Pleasant Hill. We had a fair audience and good attention. People have to come there for miles to meeting, same as at Brush Creek. Bro. Westfall had secured the school for one week. He and Sister Westfall welcomed me warmly to their home. On Monday afternoon I was called home to one of the saddest duties, the funeral of our Sister M. E. Knowles. On consultation with Brother and Sister Westfall, it was not thought worth while to come back to the Union School as we had depended more on the first part of the week, the latter part being taken up preparing the school for a Christmas festival. With sad hearts we said good-day.

On Sunday Eve, Dec. 6th, I arrived at Troy, was met by Bro. Westfall, a drive of some five miles brought us to the Peterson school, in the Piqua district, where I again met the brethren I had met at the Union School three miles distant. I also met our young Brother Stanley Sanford of Cleveland, my once home city. It was refreshing to meet him. I had seen him grow up from childhood. We had about ten minutes to transact some business and we had concluded that I would go home, for the present, at the end of the week, when Mr. Eidemiller said he had secured the meeting house in Troy for one week. It was at once agreed that I [illegible] also. Sanford then bade me good by as he had to leave for Cleveland, and I to begin meeting. We had there a week of fair to good meetings, attention of the best, had several kindly invitations to visit at the homes around. No meeting Saturday evening, Dec. 12, on account of severe weather, high wind and dashing rain.

Sunday morning, Dec. 13, began the weeks meetings in Troy, four and one-half miles from the Eidemiller home. The meetings were held in the meeting-house of the Progressive Brethren, secured by W. H. Eidemiller husband of Sister Eidemiller. He is a most willing worker, and the meetings were well advertized by him, but being the week just before Christmas, the stores open everings, full of attractive goods, and people busy, our meetings were not all full; but we did have three or four good meetings, one especially good every way. The seed was sown and the result that "some believed the things spoken and some believed not." Another effort among the same people might induce some to obey. During my stay of two weeks at the home of Sister Eidemiller and husband, we had the company of Sister Emma Nelsley, and part of the time Edna Lehman (neice of Brother John Lehman.) We had many earnest and interesting talks about actions in life consistent with a knowledge of the gospel and we were indeed much benefitted, and when it came time to say good by, we were loath to part. Sister Eidemiller has not hid her light. The neighbors all round have had THE RESTITUTION and good tracts handed them for several years, and while none seem just ready to obey some are quite favorable to the gospel of the kingdom. A church meeting or meetings continued for awhile might help; but Sister Eidemiller is alone, Brother and Sister Westfall some miles distant. Bro. Westfall had the Union School for Sunday, Dec. 20. We drove over and found a few people gathered, being stormy winter weather; but in the evening notwithstanding the weather, we had a good meeting, a listening audience, and I was delighted to point out from the great Book of God, the story of the earth under King Jesus. At the close one man invited me to his home, then or any other time. Another wanted to know if I was coming back soon? I said I was not altogether a creature of circumstance but the conference committee had some control of my actions. He said if I came back he would do all he could to get the School or some place for me to speak and if there was any money needed, to call on him. Thus ended my work in Miami Co., and pray that God may find some ground on which he can give the increase to his own glory, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Brother and Sister Westfall have the cause of their own and their neighbors salvation at heart, and it is a pleasure to meet with such. On Monday morning Dec. 21, we said good by to all at Bro. Westfalls. He took me to Piqua, saw me on board the train for Salem, where I arrived at 1 A. M. Tuesday and found all well.

Annual Love Feast Letters

Dear brethren and sisters:

I feel like I want to enjoy the [illegible] feast with you all. I am thankful that our Father in heaven has spared our lives so far, and while it is a happy privilege to enjoy this feast together, may we all be strengthened while we are being fed on the sincere milk of the Word. I am now visiting my old childhood home at Browntown, Va., and this is also my church home. I am surely enjoying the society of my relatives, both spiritual and natural. O how pleasant it is for one who is isolated from those of like precious faith to have the opportunity of mingling with those who have dug deep and built their house upon the Rock, Christ Jesus. Truly I have been made to rejoice in conversing on the subjects pertaining to the kingdom with the old soldiers here at Browntown, who were in Christ before I was. They have traveled the road for many years and have seen many waymarks on their journey that we younger ones have not seen. We are glad to grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth as [illegible] believed, and we are persuaded that he is able to keep what we have committed to him; for the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, the Lord knoweth them that are his. Brothers and Sisters, this is a very consoling thought, and should inspire us all to press forward to the mark of the prize or high calling which is in Christ Jesus. Then let us still labor on for we know that in due time we shall reap if we faint not. I ask an interest in your prayers that I may hold out faithful and receive a crown of life in the kingdom of God.

Brothers and sisters:

It is with pleasure that I read your testimonies of faith in the kingdom of God and his dear Son, and almost all speak of the hope of soon seeing him. Yes, each anniversary of our Master brings the coming nearer. How our hearts rejoice when we think that the glory of the Lord will soon cover the earth as the waters cover the deep, and sin and sorrow be no more.

Your Sister in the hope of eternal life.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

The angel told Daniel the prophet, that at the time of the end many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased. Dan. xii. 4. Never in the history of the world was there so much traveling to and fro as at this time. All means of travel are employed with increased speed,—steam and electric cars, automobiles, bicycles and steamships. Some are not satisfied with these and are inventing flying machines. Traveling is a means of obtaining knowledge quickly. We must be in the last days according to this sign. We are admonished to discern the signs of the times, and watch lest the day of the Lord come upon us unawares, finding us bound up with tares. Matt. xvi. 3; xvii. 36-48. We should be the salt of the earth and the light of the world. Matt. v. 13, 14. We should not fear to let our light shine and warn the people of their danger. Ezek. xxxiii. 1-7. The Lord will gather his people to a place of safety. Isa. xl. 11. He will also gather the nations and punish them. Isa. lxvi. 15-18; Joel iii. 1, 2. Notice what enormous preparations the nations are making. They say they are preparing for war in order to maintain peace. "They shall say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction shall come upon them." 1 Thess. v. 1-6; Joel iii. 9-14. Jesus Christ the Prince of Peace is the only Prince who can give real, lasting peace and safety. Let us put our trust in him always. Isa. ix. 6, 7. Jesus said, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." Matt. xxiv. 14. We are told that Thibit is the last country to receive the gospel, and that it is now being opened up by England, to civilization and Christianity. Is not this one of the bright signs of the near approach of the day of the Lord? 1 Thes. v. 2, 4; 2 Pet. iii. 10. In view of all these things, what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness. 2 Pet. iii. 11, 12. Should we not at least be living object lessons to the world by bringing forth the fruits of the spirit,—"love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." Gal. v. 22, 23. These are the peaceable fruits of righteousness.

Although we are scattered widely [illegible] knowledge of the truth, as [illegible] and watching for the day when [illegible] sorrow and sighing shall flee away, and all made new by him that said, I am the life and the resurrection, behold I make all things new. We are surrounded by all the evils of the world, all kinds of amusements to satisfy the minds of the lovers of pleasure. I hope that none of the one faith will be drawn away from duties we owe to the Captain of our salvation. Whatsoever we do let us do to the glory of the Lord, for his sheep know his voice and follow him whither so ever he goes. In the sad hours of my afflictions, it is a great pleasure to me to receive the good old RESTITUTION, it and my Bible are all my joy and good council I have. I am still firm in the belief of a Redeemer that was begotten by the Holy Spirit, born of the Virgin Mary, and not the son of Joseph, but the Son of God, and he and he alone is the one that is to redeem and restore all things. I have no pleasure in the Josephite doctrine, I think it is one of the false doctrines of the last days. Do not let us be led about by the cunning craftiness of men. We are warned of false teachers and false doctrines [illegible] every wind of doctrine. Some think it makes no difference whether we believe Christ to be the Son of God or the son of Joseph, so we believe he is our Redeemer. I believe it makes all the difference in the world, just as well say it makes no difference whether we go to heaven or dwell on the earth, just so we are saved, or that the soul sleeps or don't sleep, so we are ready when Christ comes. Does it not make a difference in these things, if so it seems to me it would in the other. I feel happy to say my faith is strong in the record in Matt. i. 18, to the end of the chapter. I am not ashamed to own my Lord nor defend his cause, maintain the honors of his Word, the glories of his cross. Come let us join in sweetest songs of him who died for us, who will raise us from our dusty beds to dwell with him in love. Let us always keep our eyes Zionward and our heart placed on heavenly things, from whence our Redeemer will come to reign and his people will come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy. Wishing you all a happy new year, hoping to meet you all in the sweet by and by. In love to all, I remain your brother in Christ.

Dear Restitution:

The Editor will find post office money order for THE RESTITUTION for one year. We want the paper for the good sermons it contains. We hear no preaching out here. There are some brethren in this part of the State but none that preach the gospel that we like to hear. THE RESTITUTION at all times has something refreshing to us. We will keep the paper while we live. We pay for the year 1904. Yours in hope of the good things prophesied by the prophets, apostles and Jesus Christ.

JAMES H. & ANNIE TROTTER.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I am rejoiced to again read so many testimonials for the blessed Jesus; yes and all speaking in the same stirring confidence of his glorious coming. We are as usual fighting for the faith once delivered to the saints; yet the nearer and nearer the time for his second coming the more I see his prophecy being fulfilled. Luke xviii. 8, "Nevertheless when the Son of Man cometh shall he find faith on the earth." The blessed Master knew what he was talking about. But dear dear ones do not be cast down; go and read Acts xv. 13-18. Here you will find that there are not many going to be in the first resurrection, only taking out such as have decision of character sufficient to come out of Babylon, and they are to be co-rulers with the Christ for the blessing of all the families of the earth (who will be blessed.) So let us still contend for the faith and above all things dont, for the love of Jesus dont compromise the gospel of the kingdom to please any one, however dear to you. Yes, brothers and sisters, do as Paul the undaunted soldier admonished Timothy to do. 2 Tim. xiv. 1-4. Listen to his ringing words: "I charge thee, therefore, before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, who will judge the quick (living) and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom. Preach the Word." Yes, the Word. Why Paul? He says, "For the time will (yes and has) come when they (the people) will not endure sound doctrine, but will be turned away to fables." Yes, and he also said, "The spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter time some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrine of devils." 1 Tim. iv. 1. Dear ones do we not see all this being fulfilled in our day? Yes, in this very issue of our much prized paper is a man of ability who has departed from the faith, and is carried away by the seductive doctrine of 7th day ism, also Josephiteism, and let me say there are other folks walking in his wake and at the same time are availing themselves of the use of our paper and the kind courtesy of Brother Underwood to forward their apostate doctrine of Josephiteism and 7th day ism.

Now brethren, don't you see the enemy is trying to steal the livery of the Church of God to further their ends; calling themselves the Church of God in order to palm their preacher off on the true Church of God.

Another thing brethren, I did several years since ask you all to let our church be known as the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith, then we will not be imposed upon by those wolves in sheep's garb. I have suffered to much ostracism from the socalled Christians to have much leniency for [illegible] the devil on the other. Brethren, when you invite a man to come and preach for you, first find out if he is your brother in hope of eternal life (which God who cannot lie) promised before the ages began. Titus i. 2. Now, let us be determined to preach the Word, and let nothing or any one deceive us with their lame. THE RESTITUTION will instruct us, as a supplement to the Word of God. We need not err. Then be diligent, be watchful, be prayerful, and the Lord bless us all is the sincere wish of your brother and sister.

Obituary.

Died at the home of her parents Mrs. Carrie E. Stephens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Norris, wife of A. C. Stephens. She with her husband, father and mother and two brothers moved from near Marshall, Clark Co., Ill., in Feb., 1902. Carrie fell asleep in Jesus, Wednesday, Jan. 6, at 10:30 A. M., after an illness of but a few days. She died as she had lived in the faith once delivered to the saints. She was buried with Christ in baptism by the hands of Bro. Wm Brant, of Mt. Morlah, Ill., in Dec., 1902. Since that time she has lived a faithful Christian, putting behind all worldly amusements. She was a musician, but would never play any music after she had put on Christ, except to the glory of God. The last few hours of life she was calling her dear friends and telling of the beautiful scenes. "See the beautiful willows blooming," she would say. She was ready to go down in death for a little while, she had just finished reading her Bible through. She knew the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, for she had been raised and brought up in the knowledge of the Scriptures by Christian parents. We laid her away for a little while in the little grave yard, a beautiful spot called the Quaker cemetery. She leaves two little children, a girl 20 months and an infant boy 10 days old, who she named while she was dying. She leaves a father, mother, two brothers, two sisters and husband, and a large number of friends to mourn her death. May the God of peace help me to live closer to Christ, that I may enter in through the gates and clasp glad hands with her again, is the prayer of a broken hearted husband. Pray for me brother and sister.

A. C. STEPHENS.

Died near Morrill, Brown Co., Kansas, on Dec. 27th, 1903, Ethel Grace Howard, aged 11 years, 2 months and 9 days, daughter of Brother and Sister T. S. Howard. She showed symptoms of diabetis in July and the disease made steady headway against all efforts to head it off, till it overcame her on the above date. Ethel was a bright little girl, the pride of parents, her aged grand parents, and many relatives and friends. But they grieve not as others who have no hope for no doubt but the faithful parents will receive their "dead to life again." Heb. xi. 35; 1 Kings xvii. 23; 2 Kings iv. 34. A funeral discourse was delivered at the home to a large audience of neighbors, when we laid her away like Job till her change comes. May the time soon come when there will be no more death.

Long and Short Sermons.

The longest sermon on record was preached by Rev. Isaac Barrow, a Puritan preacher of the seventeenth century, who once delivered a sermon in Westminster Abbey lasting three hours and a half; and the shortest sermon ever preached was, perhaps, the sermon which Dr. Whewell was fond of repeating from the text, "Man is born unto trouble as the sparks fly upwards." The sermon occupied a minute in delivery. The following is a verbatim report.—

"I shall divide the discourse into three heads: (1) Man's ingress into the world; (2) his progress through the world; (3) his egress out of the world.

"Firstly, his ingress into the world is naked and bare.

"Secondly, his progress through the world is trouble and care.

"Thirdly, his egress out of the world is nobody knows where.

"To conclude:—

"If we live well here, we shall live well there.

"Amen. [All said Amen.] Next Sunday, the same hour, the same place, next year."

Then he gave the benediction.

This sermon, however, is not as short as the famous charity sermon of Dean Swift. His text was:—

"He that hath pity upon the poor, lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given, he will pay him again."

His sermon was:—

"If you are satisfied with the security, down with the dust."—Baltimore Methodist.

Saturday Night Sermons.

There is only one thing that I dread more than self-important learning, and that is self-important ignorance. I dread the minister to whom preaching is easy. I hate, with religious and even holy hatred, the sermons that are shaken out of the coat sleeve on a Saturday night. We do not want such men in the ministry of the gospel. Preaching should be a shedding of blood. Preaching is not a trick in plans, in cunning outlines, in shapely sculpture. There is a cant phrase now in vogue which I dislike. We say of such and such a man: "He is the greatest sermon-builder in the modern pulpit." Preaching is not sermon-building; it is sermon-growing; it is the eloquence of a redeemed and grateful soul; it is the glow and the radiance of a wise exposition confirmed by a holy and satisfying experience.—Joseph Parker.

Social not Frivolous.

A minister must be social, but he must also be exemplary. When he allows his social spirit to sink into the commonplace by telling extravagant yarns and questionable anecdotes, with a view of making himself agreeable, he may make himself amusing, but he is also making himself sufficiently common to lose his influence for good. A man need not be stilted and stiff in his manner to maintain a proper ministerial dignity, but he cannot be a buffoon and retain his usefullness in his congregation.—Methodist Protestant.

To be glad of life because it gives you the chance to love, and to work, and to play, and to look up at the stars; to be satisfied with your possessions, but not content with yourself until you have made the best of them; to despise nothing in the world except falseness and meanness, and to fear nothing except cowardice; to be governed by your admirations rather than by your disgusts; to covet nothing that is your neighbor's except his kindness of heart and gentleness of manners; to think seldom of your enemies, often of your friends, and every day of Christ, and to spend as much time as you can with body and spirit in God's out-of-doors—these are the little guide-posts on the foot-path to peace.—Henry Van Dyke.

When Pompeii was destroyed there were very many buried in the ruins who were afterwards found in very different situations. There were some found who were in the streets as if they had been attempting to escape. There were some found in deep vaults, as if they had gone there for security. There were some found in lofty chambers. But where did they find the Roman sentinel? They found him standing at the city gate, where he had been placed by the captain, with his hands still grasping his weapon. There, while the heavens threatened him; there, while the flood of ashes and cinders overwhelmed him, he had stood at his post; and there, after a thousand years, he was found. So let Christians stand to their duty, in the post at which their Captain has placed them.

ANOTHER OFFER.

There is a general waking up among our people everywhere. Our public speakers are all busy, and calls are in excess of their ability to attend them. Many places want preaching at the same time, but must wait their turn. This shows a decided interest, and a desire among our brethren to sound out the Word to the yet unsaved. All seem to realize that the night is far spent, that the time to work is short.

Brothers and Sisters, our work is not well done, and is not ready for acceptance of God, unless we have done all we can—our very utmost. We cannot admit that it is our duty to do anything at all for the advancement of the Master's cause, without conceding it is our duty to do all we can—to make a sacrifice even.

Preachers of other denominations as well as our own, know and say that the best workers in a community are those who take and read their Church paper. Much of what is being done in the various departments of the work, and are thus interested in pushing along the car of truth.

The Managers of THE RESTITUTION are endeavoring to so conduct the paper that it will be a fit aid to the Evangelist in his work. We are trying to keep it clear from that contention that leads to mischief and strife. This is done by having certain well-defined truths which are taught in God's Word plainly, as a basis of belief, and by publishing articles that accord with these declared principles. Other outside subjects might be "investigated" as long as life and pencil and paper lasts, and no decision ever be reached, but we do not consider this a profitable work to engage in, hence do not ask for contributions on such subjects, and do not want them. Such are usually but the "opinion" of a man, and are often based on a mere inference at best.

This paper aims to teach the truth of the Bible, and the same is declared and believed in by our Church. We therefore believe it is a fit missionary to be sent out to the unsaved and lost of the human family. In order to make it possible for our friends to do more of this missionary work than ever before, we make this offer:

Any one sending us $10.00 may select 13 names of those not now subscribers, to whom we will send the paper for the year 1904. This makes a trifle over one-half regular price if taken in lots of $10.00 worth. You and the office practically go halves in scattering the truth of the gospel to your neighbors and friends. You who have money think of this. For $100 you can preach to an audience of 130 people over 200 sermons the coming year. Can you do better with that amount of money? You have a minister come to your neighborhood perhaps once a month, giving you two or may be three discourses each time—possibly 30 a year. When he is coming you invite your neighbors in to hear him. Suppose those neighbors have had THE RESTITUTION in their homes each week when the preacher was not there, and have read the articles, and are interested to hear more. Does not this increase largely the chances of the preacher being able to speak the very words that will start your friend on the way to the kingdom? Did you ever think of this matter? Will you not take it under consideration? We feel sure if you do you will not hesitate to go half partner with us in this work.

Who will send $10, $20, $50, $100 for this work? The best time to start it is now. Select your names and send at once, so they will get the rest of this year and all of next.

Came and Will Come.

At this season all hearts are turned to the coming of Christ to reveal God and to die for men. But just as sure as God did once interfere by sending his Son to suffer shame and death for our redemption from the guilt of sin, so sure will he send him again to deliver us from the presence of sin. He has come, he has gone, and he will come again. The body of which he is the head is a living and perennial body. Every true believer is a living part of that living body; and the coming again of the Lord is a precious hope to every member of the body as well as to the whole. At [illegible] on some day, he will come, no matter how long the delay, there will be some alive to lift up their heads and hail his appearing with joy, and to mount up by divine power to meet him in the air. Be patient, he will quickly come.—Watchword and Truth.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk; money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

The Sowers.

Moist earth, and sunlit skies, and spring!
And a glad sower went one day
Forward and back across the land,
And good seed cast away.
The furrows buried it from sight.
The harrowed field lay brown and bare;
But the wise sower knew that time
Would bring a harvest there.

Soft grass, and smiling skies, and spring!
And sad hearts slowly went their way
[illegible]
This dear love there to lay.
The brown earth covered it from sight—
The precious seed an sweet, no fair—
But some time, some time, the dear God
Will reap his harvest there.

Wisdom of Seirach.

CHAPTER 31, (34TH IN APOCRYPHA).

1. Vain and false hopes hath a man without understanding, and dreams furnish wings to thoughts without good sense.

2. Like one grasping for a shadow and chasing the wind, even so is he who heedeth dreams.

3. This compared with that is the seeing of dream-visions (i. e. true-dreams); over against a face a likeness of a face.

4. From uncleanness what will have been cleansed; and from a lie what truth will be elicited?

5. Enchantments and divinations from bird-auguries and dreams are vain things; and like the heart of a woman with birth-pangs do they seem.

6. If they be not sent from a Most High in the way of a visitation, do not give thy heart unto them.

7. Dreams have led many astray, and they have fallen out by hoping in them.

8. Without falsehood law will have been consummated, and wisdom is a way to make perfect in a trustworthy mouth.

9. A man who hath been chastened knoweth many things and a man who hath been tried much will discourse in an understanding way.

10. He who hath not been tried knoweth little.

11. But he who hath been led astray getteth full of subtilty.

12. I have found many things in my wanderings and my understanding is more than words.

13. Many a time unto death have I incurred danger, and been saved because of these things.

14. The spirit of those who fear the Lord will live.

15. For their hope is in him who saveth them.

16. The one who feareth the Lord shall not be made really afraid and he shall not show cowardice, because he is his hope.

17. Blessed-happy is the soul of him who feareth the Lord.

18. On whom doth he rely? And who is his stay?

19. The eyes of the Lord are upon those who love him; theirs is the protection of able-rule and the stay of a strong one, shelter from a scorching wind and shelter from the midday heat, guardianship from stumbling, and responsive-help from smiting.

20. He it is who lifted up a soul and enlighteneth eyes, who giveth healing, life and blessing.

21. The one who sacrificeth from iniquity, his offering is a mockery.

22. And the mockeries of transgressors are not satisfactory.

23. The Most High is not satisfied with the mockeries of the irreverent nor on account of a multitude of sacrifice will he expiate sins.

24. Sacrificing a son in the presence of his father is he who is offering a sacrifice from the possessions of the needy.

25. Bread of bondage is the life of beggars; the one who withholdeth it is a man of blood.

26. Murdering his neighbor is he who taketh away his joint-livlihood.

27. And shedding blood is he who withholdeth the wages of a hireling.

28. The one who buildeth and the one who teareth down what profit have they afforded more than toilsome labor?

29. There is one who offereth votive-prayer and one who curseth; whose voice will the sole Lord hearken unto?

30. He who hath been baptized from a dead person and toucheth him again, what hath his bath profited him?

COMMENT.

What is said here of ordinary dreams and of the true "dream-vision way" of revelation is instructive and especially timely now to those who are trying to look into these things as philosophers and positive scientists. The seeing and interpretation of something revealed from God in a dream is here distinctly stated to be according to the old and well defined pathway of analogy and comparison. One reading the interpretations of Pharao's dreams by Joseeph will clearly apprehend this fact I think.

What is said here in regard to falsehood in relation to law and the assertion of it is opportune in view of this age of legal chicanery and technical quirks and quibbles in the legal machinery of the vast vested interests involving capital and labor the world over, national and international.

All true wisdom in a word is trustworthy. Again the value placed herein on experience whether under the Lord's special chastening hand or in the ordinary walks and affairs of life falls in with the best enlightened reasoning of the day.

Then the definition here given of "fear of the Lord" and the difference between ordinary fear and this kind of fear, and the differentiation of both from "cowardice" is well worthy of careful consideration.

Again there could not be a better homily than here given on "sacrifice" and "altruism" in their relation to the higher moral law.

The answer to Christ's query, "Who is my neighbor" and what I owe him in the ordinary relations of life also enlightening to say the least.

Read too what is said of "fasting" and Levitical "cleansing" including "the baptismal rite," when merely formal ceremonies in their observance. For it answers the query—are any formal ordinances "saving-ordinances"—"baptism" for instance or "extreme unction" as now administered?

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. The topic for investigation today, is indeed a very important one, and one which I fear is imperfectly understood by many who profess to be students of the sacred oracles. Let us then very carefully study the subject of

THE SEAL.

I will request Lucy to inform the class as to the use of a seal.

Lucy. To make sure that to which the seal is attached. We have an instance recorded in Matt. xxvii. 66: "They went and made the sepulchre sure, (how?) sealing the stone, and setting the watch." See also Dan. vi. 17. "A stone was brought and laid upon the mouth of the den; and the king sealed it with his own signet, and with the signet of his lords; that the purpose might not be changed."

Q. What was the use of the sign of circumcision?

A. That of a seal. Rom. iv. 11.

Q. A seal of what?

A. "Seal of the righteousness of the faith," (Rom. iv. 11) that those things comprehended [illegible] the faith," "might not be changed."

Q. Was the seal affixed prior to, or after the reception of "the faith?"

A. "A seal of the righteousness of the faith which he (Abraham) had being yet uncircumcised." Rom. iv. 11.

Q. What was the object?

A. That he might be the father of all them that believe," (Rom. iv. 11,) and a father, we must recollect, is the first cause, the originator.

Q. To whom is he the father?

A. To those "who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham, which he had being yet uncircumcised." "But to that also which is of the faith of Abraham; who is the father of us all," providing we "walk in steps of that faith." Rom. iv. 12, 16.

Teacher. I will request George to inform us as to what did Abraham's faith attach itself?

George. To a certain covenant made between God as the party of the first [illegible] second part, "I (God) will establish (make sure) my covenant between me and thee."

Q. What covenant?

A. "All the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession, etc." Gen. xvii. 7.

Q. How did he "establish" his covenant as the party of the first part?

A. By an oath. "Confirmed it by an oath." Gal. iii. 17.

Q. How did Abraham "establish" the covenant, as the party of the second part?

A. By a seal. "The sign of circumcision a seal of the righteousness of the faith." Rom. iv. 11.

Q. Supposing a descendant of Abraham should fail to personally attach the above seal, as party of the second part, could he have any interest in the above covenant?

A. No. "That soul shall be cut off from his people; he hath broken my covenant." Gen. xvii. 14.

Q. What blessing followed Abraham's reception and sealing of the covenant?

A. "Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness." Rom. iv. 3. Abraham was thus counted righteous, in other words, he stood in a right relationship with the Father.

Q. Can any unpardoned sinner be counted righteous before God?

A. No. "Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin." Rom. iv. 8.

Q. "Cometh this blessedness (of freedom from sin) upon the circumcision only, or upon the uncircumcision also?" Rom. iv. 9.

A. "Therefore it is of faith, to the end the promise may be sure to all the seed, not to that only which is of the law, but also which is of the faith of Abraham; who is the father of us all," both of the circumcision and also of the uncircumcised, "that righteousness might be imputed unto them also."

Teacher. Will Arloa inform us as to what faith brings the righteousness, to whom the Lord will not impute sin?

A. "Those who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham." No other faith will bring the above much desired blessing.

Q. What is that Abrahamic faith otherwise called by which we may detect the faith of Abraham,

A. The gospel. See Gal. iii. 8, 9: "And the Scripture foreseeing that God would justify the heathen (Gentile nations) through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, in thee shall all nations be blessed. So then they which be of faith (the faith of Abraham) are blessed with faithful Abraham." No other faith is the gospel faith, and none but a straight gospel (Abrahamic) faith will bring the promised blessing.

Q. Did Abraham have this faith previous to the attachment of the seal to the covenant by which he made it sure?

A. Yes. See Rom. iv. 11.

Q. Are believers at this day required to have the true gospel faith prior to the attachment of the seal?

A. Yes. See Eph. i. 13: "In whom ye also trusted after that ye heard the Word of truth, the gospel of your salvation; in whom also after that ye believed, (not before) ye were sealed with the holy Spirit of promise, (just like our father Abraham) which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession." There can be no sealing of the covenant prior to hearing and believing "the words of truth, the gospel of your salvation," which is in itself the covenant.

Q. Will this sealed faith insure the approval of the Father?

A. Yes, providing we have stability of character enough to stand by the conditions of the covenant, and live it out. See Col. i. 22, 23: "To present you holy and unblameable and unreprovable in his sight; if ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard," pro[illegible] in "the covenants of promise."

[illegible] Albert, kindly inform us as to whether circumcision is still required as the seal by those who shall enter into the "bonds of the covenant," as being the party of the second part?

Albert. Yes, it is. Without the seal, the covenant is of no effect.

Q. Who does God recognize as his circumcised, or sealed people?

A. See Phil. iii. 3: "For we are the circumcision, which worship God in the Spirit, and rejoice in Jesus Christ."

Q. Then the circumcision of the flesh is no longer requisite?

A. No.

Q. What circumcision is required?

A. "The circumcision of Christ? Col. ii. 11.

Q. Is this circumcision "in" or out of Christ?

A. In Christ. "In whom ye are also circumcised, with the circumcision made without hands." Col. ii. 11.

Q. If we circumcision is "in Christ," and that being the seal of the covenant (Rom. iv. 10, 11) then the sealing must also be "in Christ" must it not?

A. Yes. "In whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed," etc.

Q. If we "worship God in the Spirit," and we place ourselves in harmony with the words and teachings of the Spirit, will that Spirit so operate, as to make sure, or in other words, make the seal effective unto the coming day of redemption?

A. Yes. See Eph. iv. 30: "Grieve not the holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption."

Teacher. Now, Carrie by what means can we be relieved of the "sins of the flesh?"

A. By the circumcision "of" or "in" Christ. See Col. ii. 11, 12: "In whom ye are also circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ: buried with him in baptism, * * * and you, being dead in the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses."

Q. How do we get rid of "the sins of the flesh?"

A. "By the circumcision of Christ: buried with him in baptism." Col. ii. 11, 12: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." Acts ii. 38. Hence we learn that baptism is the seal of the covenant, and to all such thus "circumcised" or "sealed," "cometh this blessedness," "to whom the Lord will not impute sin." Rom. iv. 7-11.

Q. Will this "circumcision of Christ," or "seal," "make sure," to those "who walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham," the covenant made with Abraham and his seed?

A. Yes. See Gal. iii. 27-29: "For as many of you as have been baptized in to Christ (are "circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, and) have put on Christ. * * * And if ye be Christ's (sealed ones) then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise," made to Abraham and his seed.

Q. Supposing a person fails to "walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham," and neglects to affix the seal—"the circumcision of Christ, made without hands," what is he?

A. "A stranger from the covenants of promise." Gal. ii. 12.

Q. Are "strangers from the covenants of promise," in a hopeful condition?

A. No. "Strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world." Eph. ii. 11, 12.

Yours, "sealed with the holy Spirit of promise," as contained in "the covenants of promise."

W. H. WILSON.

Dear Restitution:

In answer to Bro. Eychaner's request I will try and give a Bible exposition of Mark ii. 27-28. This is the main text on which our Sabbath friends rely for their strongest proof in support of the Sabbath, even claiming that Adam was subject to the Sabbath law. If they can prove this they are certainly entitled to all they claim. In the passage of Scripture above stated the noun man might apply to one man, or any number of men. Lu. xii. 14, "And he said unto him, Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you? Luke ii. 52, "And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man." It is undoubtedly true, that the noun man refers to the Jews, for Jesus grew up among them. It is plain then, that it does not determine number. Therefore, we cannot possibly go back of the thunderings of Sinai for the law, and right there we find that the Sabbath was made for the Jewish man, and not for all men. The decalogue was the national constitution of the Hebrews. It was the foundation of all other laws. It was the basis of a system of types and shadows, that pointed down to the Christ. Even the decalogue itself was shadowy. The Sabbath was made for man, and the Sabbath rest pointed forward to the true rest in Christ. Then it is certainly plain that the Sabbath was made for the Jewish man, to help shadow forth and develop the plan that God himself devised for the redemption of the human family. The oracles of God were committed to the Jews. The Sabbath was given to them. They were the instrumentalities through which salvation came. The Sabbath was made for the Jewish man and not the Jewish man for the Sabbath. Therefore the Jewish man stood on the other side of the Sabbath.

Sin preceded the law Rom. v. 12, "For until the law, sin was in the world." Then the law stood this side of sin; therefore the law could not have been given to Adam in his Eden home. Again, Adam could not have kept the law, as he did not know good and evil; until after the transgression. Then if evil was prohibited in the law, then Adam did not know it, and if there was good in the law he did not know it. Then all talk about Adam keeping the Sabbath is worse than foolishness. Paul says, Rom. viii. 2, "For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made us free from the law of sin and death." Also John i. 17, "For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ." Acts xx. 27, Paul said, "For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the council of God." And yet not one word about Sabbath keeping. Therefore no man has any authority for keeping it. It is not once commanded in the new law, or covenant, but to the very contrary. Jesus Christ himself did not keep the Sabbath; and when the Sabbatarian fanatics denounced Christ for breaking the Sabbath by healing on it, he in turn denounced them as a set of hypocrites. Luke xiii. 15.

On another occasion when they had entered a complaint against his disciples for violating the Sabbath, which was unlawful, and in return he told them, Matt. xii. 5, how the priests in the temple had profaned the Sabbath, and were blameless. They were blameless because the works of the law that shadowed forth the perfect system, was much a greater work than keeping the old Jewish Sabbath. He told them that he was greater than the temple, which comprized the whole Jewish institution. 7 verse, "But if ye had known what this meaneth, I will have mercy and not sacrifice, ye would not have condemned the guiltless." Jesus spoke these words to inform them that the temple service was a greater work than keeping the Sabbath, which service pointed to him, and he would not require them to offer sacrifices, as his law was one of mercy and not sacrifice; that the law required the Sabbath to be set aside, and give place to the daily sacrifice, as it was of more importance than the Sabbath. And as Jesus was greater than the temple, where sacrifice was offered, and as the sacrifice was greater than the Sabbath; and as the law set the Sabbath aside, and as Jesus was there now himself, he set aside both sacrifice and Sabbath. That is just exactly what he meant, for he was greater than the temple, greater than the whole legal dispensation of which the Sabbath was a part, he was even Lord of the Sabbath, and could do as he pleased on the Sabbath, for the sacrifice that pointed to him, set the Sabbath aside. Therefore they had no right to condemn the disciples for breaking the Sabbath. And Jesus said, "Had they known what this meaneth, they would not have condemned the guiltless." Jesus did not keep the old Jewish Sabbath, and he gave them to understand that it was through their ignorance of his mission, that they condemned the guiltless. Again, when the Jews persecuted Jesus for breaking the Sabbath, or working on that day; he answered them: "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." He was greater than the temple; greater than the law governing the service of the temple; he had the right and power to set it aside, for he was greater than the whole Jewish institution, which fully proves his rights and his authority.

Your brother in Christ.

The Joy of the Gospel.

"Behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." Luke ii. 10.

The common gladness of the Christmas season is a natural and in some measure instinctive expression of a profound spiritual fact which lies back of all intelligent joy of man.

1. The coming of Christ brings light into hearts before dark with sin and despondency. Suicide was common and honored among cultivated Romans, but the gospel showed a life worth living.

2. It brings a glad answer to the earnest longings and inquiries of hearts diligently seeking the right way. There were ancient "seekers after God." and Christ showed them the way.

3. It brings order and hope into the efforts of men trying to be saved and to save others.

4. Different national traditions lead men into different ways of thinking and working, but all people have conscience and some thoughts of God, and Christ stands a light where their best inquries become one.

5. The intercourse of nations is hostile in war and selfish in commerce, but Christ makes it loving and joyful in justice and Christian benevolence.

6. The larger hopes of the world, and the grandest efforts of good men, find in Christ their most sympathising and helpful answer. He works, as good men have always worked, for the world, and shows them how to win true success in his salvation.—Homiletic Review.

The Date Line of the Ages.

The birth-date of that Jewish babe has been the epochal date of human chronology, history, and civilization. Why does not the world reckon time from the birthday of Confucius, or Buddha, or Socrates, or Homer, or Julius Cæsar, or Constantine, or Mahomet, or Bonaparte, or Voltaire? Why?—because there is but one name in this universe that is strong enough to balance the ages upon itself without breaking down under the load! Why?—because there is no name but the name of Jesus that can gather all definite data of man, philosophy, and nations, and crystallize them into symmetry and logical significance about itself! Why?—because "God has highly exalted Jesus and given him a name which is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things on the earth, and things under the earth, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." Surely this divine purpose has had its literal fulfillment in the facts that I have already named. The name of Jesus is above every name. Its memorial is set in the sun, and in the stars, and in the seasons. Things have gone on so far no change is possible. Strauss, and Renan, and Parker, and Emerson, and Frothingham must keep step, living or dying to the time and tune of the Lordship of Jesus Christ.—Dr. Ira O. Bidwell.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of last year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

The situation in the Far East is little changed from last week. Japan remains firm, Russia is still endeavoring to hold her position. No one can tell what turn will be taken. There is a report that Japan has already landed a large body of troops in Corea under the guise of workmen building a railroad to the capital. Another report is that the Emperor of Japan has issued an imperial edict to the effect that all railroads in his kingdom will be taken charge by the government for the transport of troops and munitions of war. Another report is that Russia cannot use the troops she now has in Manchuria owing to a peculiar disease that has broken out, hundreds dying with it.

The Genealogy of Christ.

A request that we would write something that will help others to understand the genealogies of Jesus in Matt. and Luke lies before us. We are not sure that we can do that. What is satisfactory to us may be very unsatisfactory to others, especially if they have a bias in another direction. We know but little about it; but the enquirer and all others are welcome to that little. Our intention is to stop when we have told what we know. And

1. We know that the line of descent in the first chapter of Matthew is that of Joseph through Solomon. Proof, verse 16.

2. We know that the line of descent in the 3rd chapter of Luke is that of Mary through Nathan. Proof Luke iii. 31.

(a) Because Joseph could not have descended from both Solomon and Nathan.

(b) Because if Mary had not been a descendant of David Jesus would have had no claim to his throne.

(c) Because Jesus had no man for his father. Proof, Matt. i. 18-22.

3. We know that Jesus born of Mary was the Son of the Highest: by miraculous conception. Proof, Luke i. 35, and Matt. i. 20.

(a) Because the Spirit in Paul testifies that God sent forth HIS SON, not Joseph's. And then, in harmony with the foregoing declarations, explains that HIS SON was made of a woman. The woman had been pointed out before. If made of a woman, he was not made of a woman and a man. If Matthew and Luke are false, then Paul in Galatians, is false. They stand or fall together. Proof, Gal. iv. 4.

(b) Because we are positively told in Gal. iv. 29 that the Son of God sent forth made of a woman, was born of the Spirit as declared by the angel to Mary, he should be.

(c) Because Jehovah more than a thousand years before, said to David respecting that Son of his who was to occupy his throne for ever, "I will be his father, and he shall be my Son." 2 Sam. vii. 10. Again in Psa.

(d) Because Luke i. 35 proves that it was because of the overshadowing power of the Highest that the child born of Mary was called the Son of God. And nothing could make it clearer that the prophecy of Is. xlv. 1 was fulfilled in the birth of Jesus. Isaiah says:—"Jehovah hath called me from the womb; from the bowels of my mother hath he made mention of my name." Therefore he did not become the Son of God at his baptism nor at his resurrection, but at his birth. The 5th verse confirms this, for it says,—"And now, saith Jehovah that formed me from the womb to be his servant to bring Jacob again to him," etc.

It is objected here, that Mary does not appear by name either in Matthew or Luke's account.

We reply: Matthew says Jacob begat Joseph, the husband of Mary. That being true, we may be very sure that no other man did beget him; and yet we read in Luke iii. 23, that Joseph was of Heli.

We believe God's grand old Book even when we do not fully understand all it says. And we think it best to enquire what sort of a father Heli could have been to Joseph, when the real father who begat him was Jacob?

We read in Matt. i. 16, that Joseph was the husband of Mary; and we think it reasonable to conclude that Heli was FATHER-IN-LAW to Joseph.

It might be asked, perhaps, why Joseph's genealogy was given at all, if he was not the real father of Jesus, as was naturally supposed by those not knowing any better?

As he was the husband of Mary; and as in the eyes of the law husband and wife were one, there would have been legal confusion on this account, in Christ's relation to David, if the husband of his mother had not also been of Davidic extraction.

Joseph in his own right, as a descendant of Solomon, could have imparted to a son, the legal title to David's throne.

But what about the Lamb without blemish, the holy, harmless undefiled one? He who was separate from sinners, and with blood precious for cleansing purposes—yes,—where would an acceptable sacrifice for sin have been found, if Joseph had been the father of Jesus? Does not like beget like?

This case was exceptional and peculiar in its bearings,—and the difficulties and necessities of it were beautifully harmonized in Joseph and Mary being independently related to David through different lines,—Joseph through Solomon, and Mary through Nathan, thus uniting in themselves the royal rights of David's house, which passed by law and blood to their wonderful Son.

We started out to tell only what we know; and some of our readers may think we have been advancing things we do not know, but

Athly, we know things were written aforetime for our learning, and it is from them we have deduced what we have been offering without proof as yet.

5. We know from Num. xxvii. that a law was given which decreed that if the father of a family had no sons, but daughters, the inheritance was given to the daughters. It was given when the daughters of Zelophad came to Moses with this plea:—

"Our father died in the wilderness, and he was not in the company of Korah, but died in his own sin. Why should the name of our father be done away from among his family because he had no son? Give unto US, therefore, a possession among the brethren of our father."

Moses brought the case before the Lord, and the Lord said,—"If a man die, and have no son, then ye shall cause his inheritance to pass unto his daughters." Num. xxvii.

6. We know that the promised land was to be divided by lot to the children of Israel. Each tribe was to have a certain portion, and each family again their portion. If, therefore, a daughter became the heiress, and married into another tribe, the one tribe would lose a portion, whilst the other would gain it.

7. We know that another law was enacted to correct this state of things. See Numbers xxxvi. 6-12, in part it reads as follows:—

"This is the thing which the Lord doth command concerning the daughters of Zelophehad, saying 'Let them marry to whom they think best,—only to the family of the tribe of their father shall they marry."

8. We know from Num. xxvii. 4 that the object of these laws was, that Zelophehad's name should not be done away from among his family or tribe; so that the estate was the estate of Zelophehad even after the girls married. It did not go in the names of their husbands, but in the name of their own father. This made it necessary for the husbands of these heiresses to take the name of their father-in-law in addition to their own, and henceforth they had two family names.

9. We know, from 1 Chron. ii. 21-23 that these laws were not dead letters. They were in full force. We read that Hezron married the daughter of Machir, the father of Gilead, and she bare Segub, and Segub begat Jair, who had three and twenty cities in the land of Gilead, and he took Geshur and Aram with the towns of Jair from them, with Kenath, and the towns thereof, even three score cities. All these belonged to the sons of Machir, the father of Gilead."

Here is positive evidence that they were the sons of Hezron, and grandsons of Machir.

10. We know, too, by Nehemiah vii. that this law was still in force a thousand years after its enactment. It is where the genealogy of those who first came out of Babylon is given. From the 63rd verse it appears that the priests the children of Habaiah, the children of Koz, the children of Barzillai which took of the daughters of Barzillai the Gileadite to wife, and was called after their name.

These sought their register among those that were reckoned by genealogy, but it was not found; therefore were they, as polluted, put from the priesthood. This expulsion from the priesthood was the result of taking the names of their wives' fathers dropped from their own genealogical record.

We think the things above which we have divinely proven, should help all intelligent and honest people to understand

(a) That Jacob was the father of Joseph.

(b) That Eli was the father of Mary.

(c) That Mary was an heiress.

(d) That her property was in Bethlehem.

(e) That being of the tribe of Judah and family of David she must be taxed there.

(f) That Joseph (according to the above law) was of the same tribe and family, and called the son of Heli, though the latter was only his father-in-law.

(g) That only for the property in her father's name, she was obliged to report at Bethlehem in her critical condition.

We of course have paid no attention to the attacks made by certain against the authenticity of the first chapters of Matthew and Luke. But if the Lord will, we will have something to say on that subject in another article.

Attendance and Dependence.

These are the very essence both of the safety and happiness of a Christian. Dependence on God woman's only true liberty, as attendance on him is his only true consolation. The suitor for human favor is liable to continual disappointment; if he knock at the door of his patron, there is probably a general order not to admit him. In the higher case, there is a special promise, that "to him that knocks it shall be opened." The human patron hates importunity; the heavenly Patron invites it. The one receives his applicant according to his humor, or refuses his admission from the caprice of the moment. With the other there is "no variableness, nor shadow of turning." "Come unto me," is his uniform invitation. The Almighty donor never puts off his humble petition to a more convenient season. His court of requests is always open. He receives the petition as soon as it is offered,—and if according to his will he grants it as soon as it is made. To every fresh application he promises fresh support. He will still be solicited, but it is in order that he may still bestow. Repeated gifts do not exhaust his bounty, nor lessen his power of fulfilment. Repeated solicitation, so far from wearing out his patience, is an additional call for his favor. Nor is the frequency of the petition any bar to its acceptance. He likes it to be early, but rejects it not though it be late.

And, as past mercies on God's part, so, to the praise of his name be it said, that past offences are no hindrance to the application of hearty repentance, or the answer of fervent prayer.

The man in power has many claimants for his favor, and comparatively few to bestow. The God of heaven has all power, and an inexhaustible supply of all things needful for us; and only blames the solicitor for coming so seldom, or coming so late, or staying so short a time. He only wishes that his best gifts were more earnestly sought.

When we solicit an earthly benefactor, it is often upon the strength of some claim upon his favor,—such as the hope of some reward for past services; even if we can produce little claim, we insinuate something like merit. But when we approach our heavenly Benefactor, so far from having anything like claim, or anything like merit, to produce, our only acceptable plea is, our utter want both of claim and merit,—the want of all that can recommend us; yet we are encouraged to ask favor when we deserve only rejection—encouraged to plead the privileges of children though we have little besides disobedience to offer.

The petitioner to human power who may have formerly offended his benefactor, contrives to soften down his displeasure by representing his offence as a little one. The devout petitioner to God uses no such subterfuge. In the boldness of faith, and the humility of repentance, he cries, "Pardon my iniquity, for it is great."

The Tibetan Puzzle.

From the Chicago Tribune of Jan. 25, we clip the following which will be of interest to our readers:

In the Contemporary Review for January appears a most interesting article on the "Tibetan Puzzle," written by Alexander Ular, a man who seems to be well acquainted with central Asian politics. How just he is in view of the situation we cannot say. But most of what he says is so entirely new and novel as to be worth summarizing.

First of all he says the Dalai-Lama is the Buddhist pope, that his authority over all the Buddhist people is similar to that of the pope of Rome over Catholics, and that Lhassa is the Buddhist Rome.

The Dalai-Lama has insignificant military power, but in his own state of Tibet his priesthood have the commercial monopoly. In order to retain this monopoly undisturbed by outside aggression or domestic violence the Lama takes a protector. For many years this protector has been the emperor of China. The emperor has warned other powers out of Tibet and in return the Lama has ordered his clergy in China to exercise their authority in favor of the throne. But in 1893 England concluded the Sikkim treaty with Tibet—against that country's wish—which gave India some insignificant trade privileges with the forbidden land. The privileges amounted to nothing, but the mere conclusion of the treaty was considered to violate Tibetan integrity. Accordingly the Lama warned China that it had not protected him and that thereafter he would not consider it his "protector." But the defence was kept secret by Tibet in order that troublesome questioners could still be referred to Pekin, and maintain its prestige. The Chinese envoys still went to Lhassa, but from being administrators became ambassadors.

Then, about 1898, in stepped Russia. Through some of her Buriat subjects—Buddhist monks—she arranged to take the vacant place of protector of the Lama. This arrangement, too, was kept secret, and the western world still considers China as the suzerain of Tibet. Finally the arrangement between Russia and the Dalai-Lama was consummated. The machinery of the Buddhist church was set in motion. Its head instructed his representative in Mongolia—another Chinese province—to favor the proclamation of Muscovite supremacy. Russia still protests she has not occupied Mongolia, but Mr. Ular says he himself was present when the proclamation in that distant province was read.

Just at this point, says Mr. Ular, Russia made its grand diplomatic blunder. It failed to tell the world officially that Russia was the protector of Tibet. If it had made public announcement of the fact, what country would have gone to war about it? None other than England and China could reach Tibet with troops. China wouldn't, and England wouldn't. English public opinion wouldn't permit a war over barren Tibet, to which England had never made the vaguest claim.

But since Russia didn't proclaim her protectorate over Tibet, she could not protest when England decided to send an expedition into that country to "negotiate" a commercial treaty. The sending of the expedition violates Tibet's integrity just as the Sikkim treaty did before. Russia doesn't protect Tibet against the invader any more than China did. What will be the effect? Mr. Ular argues that the expedition will diminish the Muscovite prestige in the Lama's eyes just as much as the Sikkim treaty damaged Chinese prestige. The present expedition, like that treaty, will make it clear to the Lama that neither the Czar of Russia nor the emperor of China is able to protect him against the mighty king of England when that monarch chooses to violate Tibetan integrity.

What will be the consequence? Mr. Ular argues that now the Buddhist pope will turn for his protection to the power which has proved itself stronger than either of his other neighbors—to the British empire—and that England will have all the great machinery of Buddhism in its hands. He adds that Lord Curzon has consummated a masterpiece in diplomacy in choosing just this moment to invade Tibet, before Russia had laid open claim to the territory and therefore before it could protest against England's action.

Mr. Ular says that in playing politics with orientals one must use oriental methods, and that Lord Curzon is the "most Asiatic gentleman who has ever been intrusted with the government of England's Asiatic empire."

Keep up Your End.

"When I was a boy in the lumbering region," said the old doctor, "the fellow who would not hold up his end of the log, but let the weight sag on the others, was looked upon with contempt by all the camp. Wherever I go now I think I see logs carried—one end held up by hearty, willing hands, and the other dropping out of lazy, selfish ones.

When I see an old father toiling to give his son the education that is to help him through life, and the boy yawning over his books, tricking his teachers, smoking cigarettes and swearing, I feel like calling out: For the sake of your own soul, boy, grip the end of the log and hold it up!

Sometimes I see the man working hard all day, and too tired to rest at night, while his wife and daughters read novels, embroider and gossip with women as useless in the world as themselves. Do they keep up their end of the log?

Or, quite as often, it is the wife who stints and saves until her life is barren and bare as a dusty road at noonday, while the husband spends his time at saloons and pool rooms.

Or, I see one bright, courageous member of a family—usually a woman—working, joking, hopeful, while the others crawl along, groaning, complaining, dropping every day and hour their burden of poverty, disease, toothache, or bad weather on her shoulders. She has all the log to carry.

Again, it is a human being for whom God has done much in birth, rank, education, friends, who for the love of a glass of liquor or pack of cards, allows his life to drop into the slough. Paul bids him 'work out his own salvation; and I feel like telling him to hold up his own end of the log."

What does our reader think of the doctor's homely lesson? What is his burden in life? Somebody shares it with him; no man bears his load alone. Does he carry his part with a hearty good will, or does he drop it on weak and willing shoulders?—Christian Commonwealth.

What is Our Hope?

It strikes the thoughtful observer that the coming of the Lord Jesus is far more the hope of the Church than any remedial processes, or evolutions, or progresses among mankind.

Under some aspects, the world grows better, but in the deepest and most solemn sense, evil men and seducers wax worse and worse. Growingly do we see the weakness of the flesh, and the need of a Divine interposition. It is ours to plod on as if all depended upon us; but it is still more ours to look up and believe that our redemption draweth nigh, and that, not from our endeavors, but from the appearing of the Son of God. His day will blaze with his own glory; He alone shall be glorified in his saints, and admired in all them that believe. "The Lord alone shall be exalted in that day." Oh, that it would soon dawn! In hopeful expectation we look no more upon the flying scud, and the boiling waters, but fix our eye upon the Pole Star which abideth and shineth forever.—C. H. Spurgeon.

Doing Better than the Best of Our Race.

Trying to do as well as the best of our fellows about us are doing, or have ever done, is deemed commendable, and trying to do as well as has ever been done by the best of our race is taught to be even more commendable; but better yet is the faith-filled endeavor to attain to the highest conceivable standard for men, even if none of our fellows whom we have known or have known of have yet attempted to reach such a goal. Why should we look behind us, for a standard toward which to strive? Why not be the first of our race to look ever forward and upward for the goal of our endeavors? As Lord Bacon says, "Set it down to thyself, as well to create good precedents as to follow them.

Souls do not go to Heaven at Death.

Nowhere in all the Bible, is it said that any human being has an immortal soul to inherit heaven! The word "immortal" is found but once in the entire Bible; and this is in 1 Tim 1:17: "Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honor and glory forever. Amen." The word "immortality" is found only five times.

In the first place we are told who has immortality.—1 Tim. vi: 13, 16: "I give thee charge in the sight of God, who quickeneth all things all things, and before Christ Jesus, who before Pontius Pilate witnessed a good confession; that thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ: which in his time he shall show, who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords; who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see; to whom be honor and power everlasting. Amen."

Second, we are told how immortality was brought to light.—2 Tim. i: 10: "But it is now made manifest by the appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel."

Third, we are instructed how we are to "seek" for immortality.—Rom. ii: 6, 7: "God will render to every man according to his deeds: to them who, by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory, and honor, and immortality, eternal life."

Fourth, we are assured as to the time when, and how we shall put on immortality. 1 Cor. xv: 53, 54: "For this corruptible must put on incorruption and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory."

Here the apostle says that the "Lord Jesus Christ.....only hath immortality," "dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see."

Now if the great apostle to the Gentiles is right, then those who preach that Christians go to heaven at death, are wrong! But the apostle agrees with Jesus, in John iii. 13, "And no man hath ascended up to heaven." Also John xiii. 33, "Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me; and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go ye cannot come; so now I say to you."

O how rich and full are the promises which our Heavenly Father has made to his children. Proof, James ii. 5. "Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom, which he hath promised to them that love him?" See also Dan. vii. 27: "And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."

Note this—not a kingdom for immortal souls above the heavens! but a kingdom for "the saints of the Most High," "under the whole heavens!"—T. M. Preble in Messiah's Advocate.

So live with men as considering always that God sees thee; so pray to God as if every man heard thee. Do nothing that thou wouldst not have God see done.

What God Requires.

What asks our Father of his children, save
Justice and mercy and humility?
A reasonable service of good deeds,
Pure living, tenderness of human needs;
Reverence and trust and prayer for light to see
The Master's footsteps in our daily ways?
No knotted scourge or sacrificial knife,
But the calm beauty of an ordered life.
Whose very breathing is unworded praise—
A life that stands as all true lives have stood,
Fast rooted in the faith that God is good

"In My Father's House."

A brother in Wisconsin desires an exposition of John xiv. 1-3. It is quite generally assumed that the term "my Father's house" means heaven; that Jesus meant to say that he was going to prepare a place for the disciples in heaven; that death is the "coming again" here mentioned; that when good people die their immortal souls are taken to heaven, and thus "where I (Christ) am, there ye may be also." In taking this view, two fundamental errors are committed. First, men lose sight of the general tenor of Christ's teaching as to the kingdom of God; and second, they fail to notice the import of his teaching on the life and death question. The Lord spoke with authority as the mouth piece of God. See John xii. 48-50; Heb. i. 1, 2. He spoke by the Spirit of God because he was anointed with that Spirit. Luke iv. 18; John iii. 34. "Eternal life" and a "great salvation" attach to the things spoken by him. John vi. 63, 68; Heb. ii. 3. The burden of his teaching was "the gospel of the kingdom." Matt. iv. 23; ix. 35; Mark i. 14, 15; Luke iv. 18; viii. 1; Matt. xxiv. 14. That "kingdom" is the one of which the angel said to Mary, "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke i. 30-33. This "kingdom" is never said to be in heaven. It is the "kingdom of heaven;" heaven's kingdom; the same as the "kingdom of God" stands for God's kingdom. Were the location of this kingdom in heaven, Jesus would have said in his memorable sermon on the mount, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit heaven." On the contrary he said, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." Matt. v. 5. This he did in confirmation of a number of statements to the same effect in the Old Testament writings. See Psa. xxxvii. 9, 11, 18, 22, 29, 34; Prov. ii. 21; x. 30; xi. 31. If "the righteous shall never be removed," but "inherit the land and dwell therein forever," this passage surely does not teach that the Lord will remove them from the earth, to heaven. Besides, let us consider that the Speaker, Jesus, said he would "GO to prepare a place." The same person who would "go," will also "come again." To "go" indicates movement from those addressed, while "come again" indicates return movement toward them. He was "seen" to "go into heaven," and "this same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts i. 11. When the Lord comes he will come "from heaven," as a number of texts specifically declare. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven." 1 Thes. iv. 16. "When the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven." 2 Thes. i. 7. Since he has left word that he "will come again," we "look for him from heaven." Phil. iii. 20; 1 Thes. i. 10. Of two things in the text we must not lose sight, namely: 1. The Lord "will come again" to the same place from which he would "go." 2. After his coming again he will "receive unto himself" those who are his own. This "receiving" takes place after he comes again; otherwise his coming again would be purposeless. He himself taught this doctrine with great clearness. "They shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." Matt. xxiv. 30, 31. The same truth was understood by Paul when he wrote on this wise: "Now, we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ (mentioned in 1 Thes. iv. 13-18), and our gathering together unto him," etc. 2 Thes. ii. 1. But the question may arise, Where have Christ's own been all this time, if their "gathering together unto him" is deferred until his "coming?" They have either "fallen asleep," or they are "alive and remain unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Thes. iv. 15. If they have fallen asleep, they will be brought forth even "as Jesus died and rose again;" and if living, they will be changed from mortal to immortality (1 Cor. xv. 51-54), without ever having to die. As Jesus also said, "He that liveth and believeth in me (at the time of the resurrection) shall never die." John xi. 25, 26.

What a notable "gathering together" that will be when all the saints are summoned in one great assembly in the presence of him who shall rule the world in righteousness, when they shall "ever be with the Lord." But what about the "Father's house?" If the reader had never heard the teaching that the immortal souls of good men go to heaven at death, would he have imagined this passage to teach such a thing? I dare say, No! The Greek word translated "house" is oikia, and according to Dr. Young means, "House, household, family, retainers." In Phil. iv. 22 the same term is translated "household," and refers to a plurality of persons.

We read of "the household of faith" (Gal. vi. 10), and "the household of God" (Eph. ii. 19), though in these two cases the original is oikeios, "belonging to a house." We are told that "every house is builded by some man; but he that built all things is God." Heb. iii. 4. God is engaged in building a great house to himself, called "the Lord's house," or "house of the Lord." See Isa. ii. 2, 3; Micah iv. 1-3. This "house" is the kingdom of God in its completed form. Men are the material which shall enter into this house. It will be a house with many mansions (Gr. monee, better abodes or abiding places). Christ has gone, as the nobleman (Luke xix. 11-27), to receive for himself, and those belonging to him, a kingdom, and then he will return, or "come again." When he returns he will assign to each of his faithful ones "a place" in that "house." Then, as the house built unto the Lord by Solomon (1 Kings vi. 7), each "lively stone" (1 Peter ii. 5) will have its proper "place" in the building. The "preparation" will then be in the past, the materials ready. There will be "many abiding places" (positions) in that great structure, and the saints of the present dispensation will sit down with the saints and worthies of all ages. See Matt. viii. 11. "They without us should not be made perfect." Heb. xi. 40. To be placed into this "house," we need to "hold the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end." Heb. iii. 6. We are only Christ's "house" on condition we do this; if not, we are not his house. If we suffer for the kingdom of God, we shall reign along with him, on the earth. 2 Thes. i. 5; 2 Tim. ii. 12; Rev. v. 10; Matt. v. 5. If we "do" certain "things" we shall never fall, "for SO an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." 2 Peter i. 5-11.

Annual Love Feast Letters.

Dear household of like precious faith:

Just a word for my Savior. God Almighty is my Heavenly Father, and his glorified Son, Jesus, is my Savior and Elder Brother. I am a joint-heir with him in the promises made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, to be fulfilled through Jesus Christ our Lord. I am struggling along in these last days trying to do my duty, but being weak in the flesh and not perfected yet, am liable to mistakes. As the time is getting nearer each year, so it is with me. I turn over a new leaf and am struggling in the world alone, trying to be better. Pray for me.

Editor Restitution:

Now another year has come and gone, and we are still among the living, for which we thank our Heavenly Father. We still hope for life by the resurrection from the dead, and have tried to do what was right between God and man the past year. God only knows how far we have failed, but we pray to be clothed in our right minds and obtain grace, and have a home in his kingdom.

Yours in the faith,

Dear brethren and sisters:

These are stirring times in which we are living, and require the most earnest watchfulness from those who are expecting the King, he who has gone into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and return. We who desire to be associated with him in his great work at his return must keep ourselves unspotted from the world (and this means a great deal) in this present evil time, and keep our lamps trimmed and burning, and full of the life-giving oil, so that we may be constantly diffusing the light of the gospel of the kingdom to all who will hear.

If we cannot preach we can send out tracts, books, and THE RESTITUTION, and aid those financially who are able to preach the truth as it is in Jesus. Our paper should be much better sustained by every believer of its messages. This is no time for sleeping. There is much need of hearty, intelligent work. Two or three of us at this place have for several years been holding weekly Bible studies, which at a future time I may tell you more of.

The King is coming, let us all be ready.

Dear brothers and sisters in Christ:

We are glad to report a few meetings held in Byron Center once again. We had the pleasure of having Bro. T. J. Anstin with us a few evenings, he coming Sunday morning December 27 and staying until the following Friday. All were sorry that he could not continue the meetings longer, but his church duties at Argos, Indiana, called him there.

During these meetings he gave us food for thought for many days to come. One thought he presented was To live godly, is to live as God lives. We now hear the cry Is he not to return soon? Should he ever have an opportunity of doing so he will be heartily welcomed.

Meetings have been in progress for two weeks, Brother and Sister Woodward now being with us. Hoping the seed will fall into good ground, bringing forth fruit in due time, I am Yours in the truth.

Dear brothers and sisters:

By the help of God I will try and tell you how much I find in the love feast letters to cheer me on my lonely way. There are so many so full of love that it is a great comfort to take the paper and read. We have no meeting to go to, so THE RESTITUTION is a real welcome visitor, always so full of love, and love is so much, for by love our Savior was sent to redeem poor fallen man, and all he asks is for us to ask in faith believing that he is able to save. Let love be without dissimulation, abhor that which is evil, and cleave to that which is good. Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love. Rejoice in hope, patient in trials. Be not overcome with evil, but overcome evil with good.

Love worketh no evil to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law. And that knowing the time that now it is high time to awake out of sleep, for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. The night is far spent, the day is at hand. Rom. xiii. 10-12.

Let us be watching. The signs are thickening, hearts are failing. Let our love for Jesus grow more bright as we see the time draw near.

Your sister in the blessed hope of our Savior's return.

Editor Restitution:

We meet with many discouragements, but though few in number we are trying to improve our talents to the best of our ability. We send our love and best wishes to the dear ones in Christ at Plymouth. Success to THE RESTITUTION, as it is a tie that binds our hearts in Christian love, and I feel that many of the brethren and sisters make a sad mistake by not reading and supporting our paper. We should keep the fire of love well kindled in our hearts, and I find no better way to create an interest in each other's spiritual welfare, than to read the letters and articles that are filled with thoughts of the blessed Christ life.

Yours waiting Christ's coming.

To the Household of Faith:

What a grand love feast it was to me to have the happy privilege of reading so many encouraging letters from those who are prospective heirs of the kingdom which our dear Lord has promised to them that love him. How glad I would be to meet you all personally, shake your hand and have a long talk concerning the things of God as revealed in his Word. I am poor in this world's goods, but rich in faith. I preach all I can, having two appointments. I have a little farm and support my family by it. I was [illegible] by Bro. T. J. Daniel and am [illegible]ointed with Bro. Muncrief of Bear[illegible] should like to hear from the brethren in Montgomery Co. through THE RESTITUTION. Let us speak often to each other.

JOS. M. H. MAJOR.

Arkansas.

Dear brethren:

As contributions to the love feast are in order, we will cast in our mite. We are looking for the return of our blessed Lord to establish his kingdom on the earth and gather his saints and reward every one as his work shall be. When that time comes he will take to himself his great power and reign and bring all nations in subjection to him. He will rule them with a rod of iron, and break them in pieces as a potter's vessel. The world is filled with violence. All manner of evil seems to be on the increase. The world is getting ripe for the harvest, and soon the angel will thrust in his sickle and gather the vine of the earth and cast it into the great wine press of the wrath of God.

We are praying Thy kingdom come, and when it does come may we all be ready so that we may have an abundant entrance.

A. & S. M. SEITZ.

Dear Restitution:

We are glad to hear from so many of the brothers and sisters of like precious faith, of their prospects of their eternal home when the just Rulers shall reign, and justice shall be executed all over this land that is now in sorrow and disappointment. We hope to be amongst the redeemed number some sweet day.

Yours waiting.

MR. & MRS. R. E. PERRY.

Dear Brother Underwood:

I have just got through reading the love feast letters in RESTITUTION for Jan. 6th, and I enjoyed them so much that I want to have a part in it too. There are quite a number of names that I hope to see before the love feast closes. If ye are Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. If we are heirs of the same inheritance we surely will be glad to hear from our near kin.

Dear brother or sister, if you are just in moderate circumstances, so to speak, don't be satisfied with that, but try hard, by the study of God's Word to become rich in faith. I am sure that my faith does me some good seven days every week, and fifty-two weeks of the year, but I am not satisfied. The more faith I get the more I want, and the more I study God's Word the more my faith increases. I am careful not to say that I believe any thing until I find what I believe to be a good scriptural reason for my faith.

Custom says, tell what you believe but don't tell the reason why you believe it. Peter says, be ready always to give a reason of the hope that is in you. Custom says, prove nothing regarding your religious views. Paul says, prove all things, hold fast that which is good. Custom says, don't contend with any one concerning your faith. Jude says, earnestly contend for the faith that was once delivered to the saints. Custom says, if we go to church do as the preacher tells us to. We are all right without spending spending time to examine and prove ourselves. Paul says, examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Custom says, the soul is immortal and cannot die, one of the oldest customs. Ezekiel says twice in the 18th chapter, the soul that sinneth it shall die. Custom says, call it soul or spirit, just as you like, but our understanding or thinking knows more after it leaves the body than it ever did. The Psalmist in speaking of man says, his breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish. Psa. cxlvi. 4.

Dear brothers and sisters, I am trying to follow none of the customs, old or new, unless I find by searching the Scriptures, as commanded to in John v. 39, that they agree with God's Word.

I close wishing you all a happy new year, the most lasting happiness is to be rich in faith. I hope to meet all the faithful in the kingdom of God.

G. W. CALDER.

Strength in Weakness.

One of the peculiarities of a devoted Christian is that when he is weak then he is strong. In great physical weakness he is often strongest in faith. This, to the worldly mind, is a contradiction, and his faith a mystery. The great apostle to the Gentiles said of himself, "When I am weak, then I am strong." "I glory in infirmities." His bodily presence might be considered weak, and his speech contemptible, yet he was strong in the feeling that the gospel given him to preach was the power of God unto the salvation of men; and, although the king said to him after one of his most noble addresses, "Very little thou persuadest me," and told him that much learning had made him mad, the contempt with which he was treated as related to his inward experience quickened the utmost energies of his soul with stronger faith and far greater power—and how wonderfully that power has wrought for the extension of the church and the encouragement of believers, and is likely to continue in all ages to the end of time. See it as recorded in the history of the church—in the lives of multitudes! How the little things of the world have confounded the wise—and the weak, the mighty—that no flesh should glory in the presence of this power of God.

Out of weakness how many have been strong! How many poor, weak sufferers, by the triumph of their faith, have convicted and brought to bow in humility before the cross of Christ many intellectually strong and proud hearted sinners, whom no argument could reach. Few who, in the weakness and simplicity of simple trust, see the power of the gospel can resist the truth.—Episcopal Recorder.

Obituary.

In the brief space of a few months death has claimed from the family of our dear Brother John D. Boyer, three beloved sons, all of whom had put on the name that saves.

Gilbert W. aged 29, fell asleep Sept. 4, 1903, just when he was approaching manhood's prime.

The next summoned was Philip S. aged 23, on the 21st of the same month; and on Jan. 7, 1904, Robert E. L. was required to fold his hands in sleep in far-away Texas, where accompanied by a brother and sister, he was availing himself of a more genial climate.

During their entire illness the tender care of fond parents, brothers and sisters was lavished upon them. Highly esteemed in their vicinity, and well beloved in the congregation at Emanuel, to which they belonged, they will be sadly missed.

The family have the universal sympathy of relatives and friends. But far better than this is the ray that penetrates this gloom, that carries them in hope to the resurrection morning.

In the Massanutten cemetery, Woodstock, Va. they sleep the blessed sleep. May the Morning soon come.

Table Talk.

BE DILIGENT.

Without this very necessary element in our makeup we can accomplish but little. Diligence means industry. Our heavenly Father knew that we would stand in need of diligence and industry to accomplish anything in this life. The industrious farmer and business man is the one who succeeds in his vocation. The sluggard is admonished to go to the ant to learn wisdom. We must sow with diligence if we would reap and garner up a sufficiency to supply our needs in the winter of want. God gave up this goodly earth that with diligence we might gather the food that will keep us alive. It is a law of our being that if we sow sparingly we will also reap sparingly. If we but look around us we can see that the industrious have plenty while the idle are always in want. Is it not just as true that if we would accomplish anything for the cause of Christ we must also be diligent and work while the day lasts for the night cometh when no man can work. Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption, but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting, and let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap if we faint not. The apostle Peter also says, And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity. For if these things be in you, and abound (that is be in your whole life and actions) they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and can not see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather brethren give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things ye shall never fall. Those who fail to gather strength from the Word of God will in the end be unfruitful in the knowledge of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. They may have gathered all worldly wisdom, yet it will not answer them in the day in which God will judge this world by his Son Jesus Christ. Diligence means more than being active. It means that in our diligence we must be discreet. Cast not your pearl before swine for they will turn and rend you. We should also remember that it is not meet to take of the children's food and cast it to the dogs. There are those around us who will not listen, from such turn thou away. Those who hunger and thirst after the good things of the gospel of the Son of God, feed. Finally brethren and sisters, let us be faithful with the promises our Father has entrusted to our care, so that as faithful servants we will receive the welcome response, Well done. Your brother waiting patiently for the Master's return.

D. C. ROBISON.

ENSAMPLE AND EXAMPLE.

A sample, a pattern or copy. Christians are expected to be examples. Paul when writing to the Thessalonians calls them examples to all them that believe, for they sounded out the Word of the Lord and their faith to Godward was spread abroad, for they had turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God and to wait for his Son from heaven. Christ also suffered for us leaving us an example that we should follow his steps, who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth, who when he was reviled, reviled not again, when he suffered he threatened not. These things command and teach, let no man despise thy youth, but be thou an example of the believers in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity, give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine. We can find no better example than Christ, he was perfect in all things and obedient in all things. As we of the church of God have Christ for our example, so should we be examples for the world and let us strive to be worthy of that high calling of God in Christ Jesus, then let our light so shine before men that they may see our good works and glorify our Father which is in heaven.

Dear Restitution:

As I am seeking after light on God's Word, I would like to ask some dear brother to tell about Elijah's coming and office. Is he to restore all things as spoken of in Matt. xvii. 11.

Obituary.

Millie Benge Frier was born in Fayette County, Ind. July 7th, 1826, died Jan. 9th, 1904, aged 77 years, 6 months and 2 days. She was united in marriage to John Frier in February 1842. To this union were born eleven children, of this number only two, James and George survive her. Her husband died February 17th, 1875. She came to Clinton Co., Ind. in 1848.

Aunt Millie united with the Church of God more than thirty years ago, and lived a life fully devoted to her blessed Master. She was a faithful and devoted wife, a loving mother, and a kind and affectionate friend to all. In adversity she was patient and hopeful, in prosperity grateful and charitable. In the social circle she had a kind word and a pleasant smile for all. To her the darkest cloud of trouble had its silver lining. In all things she looked at the good, the true and the beautiful. Envy, strife and criticism found no place in her bosom. Of her it can truly be said: She fought a good fight, she finished her course, she kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for her a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give her at his appearing and kingdom.

Written by her relative, and brother,

WM. HUFFER.

To the above we feel like adding a few lines. We helped some to minister to her wants during her last few days with us, and of all the patient ones in suffering she was the most patient. We loved her and it pained us to see her suffer so severely.

It can truthfully be said of Aunt Millie, "She sleeps in Jesus." O that we may live as near our Savior as did she, we feel assured that a crown would await us. In bidding her good by in the morning after helping to watch by her bedside during the night she said: "Be good children and meet me in the kingdom."

Brother O. W. Smith preached her funeral sermon to a house full of relatives and friends, after which she was laid to rest in the Plummer graveyard to await the voice that shall call her from her narrow resting place to the joys of the everlasting kingdom.

Oft we have mingled together,
Sometimes in prayer and song
Now when we meet, this one we greet
Never again in our throng.

Your Brother and Sister,
ALEX & AZORAH SCHOOGS.

Oliver C. Denslow was born Jan. 30, 1825, in West Chester Co., N. Y. He settled in Ohio in the early 40's and taught school in Stark Co. in or about the year 1848 he moved to Decatur, Ill. and it was here that he met and in the year of 1850 he was married to Miss Emoline A. Carter. There were born to this union six children, of whom only one is living, Mrs. Ruba A. Slater, residing at Oneida, Kansas The mother died Oct. 25th, 1883.

Early in life he united with the Christian Church, and held the office of Elder of the Church at Decatur. He changed his views in regard to the immortality of the soul, and left the Christian Church and was ordained a minister in the Church of God in the year 1856.

Realizing that he must have a helpmeet to share his joys and sorrows he was married to Mrs. Catharine Mercer in 1894, and moved to Bonner Springs, Kan. one year ago, where he died Jan. 11, 1904, at the age of 78 years, 11 months and 11 days.

He enlisted in the 18th Missouri Volunteers and entered the war in 1861. Having some knowledge of medicine and surgery, he was soon promoted to Assistant Brigade Surgeon, and served in this capacity for one year. During this time he lost his sense of hearing and received an honorable discharge.

He was very patient during his recent sickness and just before he died said: "The Lord's will, not mine, be done," and passed away with thoughts of heavenly things.

The funeral services were conducted by Chas. R. Kincaid, who was a personal friend of the deceased. After the services at the church the remains were taken in charge by the G. A. R. Post, who conducted services at the grave.

CHAS. F. KINCAID.

Notice.

To the Brethren in Iowa:

I have decided to take up the Lord's work in Iowa, for several months at least and am ready to respond to all calls for meetings, funerals, weddings, or any other calls pertaining to the work of a minister of the gospel.

Address me at Fort Dodge, Iowa, L Box 86.

O. J. ALLAND, Pres. Iowa Con.

ANOTHER OFFER.

There is a general waking up among our people everywhere. Our public speakers are all busy, and calls are in excess of their ability to attend them. Many places want preaching at the same time, but must wait their turn. This shows a decided interest, and a desire among our brethren to sound out the Word to the yet unsaved. All seem to realize that the night is far spent, that the time to work is short.

Brothers and Sisters, our work is not well done, and is not ready for acceptance of God, unless we have done all we can—our very utmost. We cannot admit that it is our duty to do anything at all for the advancement of the Master's cause, without conceding it is our duty to do all we can—to make a sacrifice even.

Preachers of other denominations as well as our own, know and say that the best workers in a community are those who take and read their Church paper, and keep informed as to what is being done in the various departments of the work, and are thus interested in pushing along the car of truth.

The Managers of THE RESTITUTION are endeavoring to so conduct the paper that it will be a fit aid to the Evangelist in his work. We are trying to keep it clear from that contention that leads to mischief and strife. This is done by having certain well-defined truths which are taught in God's Word plainly, as a basis of belief, and by publishing articles that accord with these declared principles. Other outside subjects might be "investigated" as long as life and pencil and paper lasts, and no decision ever be reached, but we do not consider this a profitable work to engage in, hence do not ask for contributions on such subjects, and do not want them. Such are usually but the "opinion" of a man, and are often based on a mere inference at best.

This paper aims to teach the truth of the Bible, and the same is declared and believed in by our Church. We therefore believe it is a fit missionary to be sent out to the unsaved and lost of the human family. In order to make it possible for our friends to do more of this missionary work than ever before, we make this offer:

Any one sending us $10.00 may select 13 names of those not now subscribers, to whom we will send the paper for the year 1904. This makes a trifle over one-half regular price if taken in lots of $10.00 worth. You and the office practically go halves in scattering the truth of the gospel to your neighbors and friends. You who have money think of this. For $100 you can preach to an audience of 130 people over 200 sermons the coming year. Can you do better with that amount of money? You have a minister come to your neighborhood perhaps once a month, giving you two or may be three discourses each time—possibly 30 a year. When he is coming you invite your neighbors in to hear him. Suppose those neighbors have had THE RESTITUTION in their homes each week when the preacher was not there, and have read the articles, and are interested to hear more. Does not this increase largely the chances of the preacher being able to speak the very words that will start your friend on the way to the kingdom? Did you ever think of this matter? Will you not take it under consideration? We feel sure if you do you will not hesitate to go half partner with us in this work.

Who will send $10, $20, $50, $100 for this work? The best time to start it is now. Select your names and send at once, so they will get the rest of this year and all of next.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittances should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that none can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Poetry.

His Nearness.

To stretch my hand and touch him,
Though he be far away?
To raise my eyes and see him
Through darkness as through day;
To lift my voice and call him—
This is to pray!

To feel a hand extended
By One who standeth near;
To view the love that shineth
In eyes serene and clear;
To know and be thrilling—
This is to hear.

Teacher. The topic for today's investigation is what are some of

THE SIGNS WHICH INDICATE THE NEAR COMING OF JESUS?

I will ask Lud to name some prominent sign.

Lud. I regard RUSSELLISM as a significant sign.

Q. What do you see in that? Don't Mr. Russell teach more Bible truth than A. C. Adventists do?

A. Yes. A great deal more, and in that lies the danger.

Q. How so?

A. Because those who are weak in the faith, don't perceive the dangerous counterfeit, and are thus led to make shipwreck of faith, thinking him near right, and it is on this account he "deceives" (some) of the very elect, who are weak in the faith.

Q. In what way do the teachings of Mr. Russell fulfill one of the Savior's signs of his glorious, open, manifest coming, when every eye shall see him?

A. Because he teaches the second coming of our Lord has already taken place, and just as the Savior said some would do, he is saying, "Lo here" he is, or "Lo there" he is, raising the dead, etc., "he is in the desert," (rural districts) etc.

Q. Has any one seen him?

A. No.

Q. Why not?

A. The best reason I know of is, because he has not come, but Mr. Russell says that has come, and teaches that he is "Lo here," and "Lo there," "in the desert," and everywhere he wishes to go, but he cannot be seen. He denies Jesus affirmation that "every eye shall see him," at his second advent into the world.

Q. Why?

A. Because, "Lo here" he is in "secret," or invisible presence, indicating and fulfilling the Savior's prediction, "Behold he is in the SECRET CHAMBERS."

Q. Does the phrase "secret chambers," indicate that he is personally located in ONE SPOT, and is thus being hid from view by reason of dwelling in "secret chambers," within a building?

A. No. Because at the same time they report that "Lo here" he is, or "Lo there" he is in personal presence "in the desert," in "the secret chambers," etc., he is not located in some specific chambers, but drifting about "here" and "there."

Q. What then are we to learn by the phrase, "He is in the secret chamber?"

A. Hid from sight, is invisible, is here in secret presence, as taught by Mr. Russell, and other deceivers, who were previously deceived by him.

Teacher. Now, Carrie, how shall we treat Mr. Russell's teaching that our Lord has already come in "secret" presence, that he is "in the secret chambers?"

Carrie. Why simply do as the Lord directed.

Q. What did he direct?

A. "If any man (that includes Mr. Russell) shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ; or Lo, he is there, believe him not." Mark xiii. 21.

Q. Many thousands of people believe Mr. Russell's report that "he is in the secret chambers," do they not?

A. Yes. They certainly do.

Q. What position do such people occupy?

A. They are more loyal to Mr. Russel than to our Lord. They disregard the Lord's direction, "Go not after them, nor follow them." Crowds "go after" Mr. Russell and his subordinate blind guides, and "follow," their teachings, and are thus led to disregard the Lord's injunction, "believe him not," "go not after them."

Q. Did the Lord give a sign by which believers may positively know when the King shall come?

A. He did, he gave a sign that a false prophet, or a false teacher, like Mr. Russell, can never produce or counterfeit; and hence, there is no need of being deceived.

Q. What will that sign consist of?

A. See Luke xvii. 24: "For as the lightning, that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven, shineth unto the other part under heaven, so shall also the Son of Man be in his day." "They shall SEE the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." Matt. xxiv. 30.

Q. That which is SEEN cannot be invisible, can it?

A. Certainly not.

Q. Who "see" this glorious coming?

A. "The tribes (or nations) of the earth."

Q. What will produce this "great glory," bright as "lightning?"

A. He will come in "his glory," "the glory of the Father," and accompanied with the holy angels in glory. His glory when he appeared to Saul, was above the Sun at its noon-day strength, and with this co-mingled glory massed together, the display will be magnificent, awe-inspiring, yes, terrifying to the "tribes" or nations of the earth. This is the sign of the Son of Man in the heavens. "Behold he cometh with clouds, every eye shall see him." Rev. i. 7.

Every eye can witness this display of divine glory, if it shall remain in the heavens for the space of twenty-four hours.

Q. The statement that "every eye shall SEE him," does not harmonize very well with Mr. Russell's declaration that his second coming has already taken place, and has not been seen by anyone does it?

A. No, it does not, and what is more, we should not expect the teachings of false teachers and the Scriptures to harmonize. They will mix in just enough Bible truth to enable them to deceive the weak, who have not become sufficiently established in the faith.

Teacher. How is it George, when our Lord ascended to heaven was there anything said as to the manner of his coming again?

George. Yes. See Acts i. 11: "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

Q. Did they see him ascend?

A. Yes. "As ye have seen him go into heaven."

Q. Then as they have "seen him go into heaven," and if he "shall so come in like manner," they must see him come must they not?

A. Assuredly so.

Q. Mr. Russell says he has come, has any one seen him come?

A. Mr. Russell says no one has.

Q. If he has come, and no one has seen it, then it was not in "like manner," was it?

A. Assuredly not.

Q. Then what evidence have we that he has come?

A. We have nothing better than Mr. Russell's say so, which evidence is utterly worthless.

Q. The Lord predicted that deceivers would arise, saying that he is here and there, etc., before the world is aware of his presence, did he not?

A. He did. "If any man shall say to you, Lo, here is Christ; or lo, he is there; believe him not." Mark xiii. 21.

Q. Why discredit all such rumors?

A. Because our Lord told us positively that we must discredit all human rumors that he has come.

Q. Why discredit all human rumors?

A. Because he has given us a divine sign, which no human being, can produce. See Matt. xxiv. 24-27; Mark xiii. 21-27; Luke xvii. 23, 24.

Q. Then if Mr. Russell is teaching that the Lord is here in secret presence, "in the secret chambers," etc., what is our duty under direction from the Lord?

A. "Believe him not."

Q. But suppose we do believe Mr. Russell?

A. If we do believe Mr. Russell, then it is clear cut evidence that such Russell believer has more faith in him than he has in Christ.

Teacher. Follow no man, but trust the Lord wherever he leads.

Wisdom of Seirach.

CHAPTER 32 (35 APOCRYPHA).

1. The one who is watching to keep law is multiplying offerings.

2. The one who is sacrificing for a salvation-offering is keeping commandments.

3. The one who is repaying a favor is offering a fine-flour offering.

4. And the one who is doing an act of mercy is sacrificing for a praise-offering.

5. An offering satisfactory to the Lord is to stand away from wickedness and an offering of expiation is to stand away from iniquity.

6. Do not appear unto the face of the Lord empty-handed.

7. For all these things are for the sake of a commandment.

8. The offering of a justified man enricheth an altar and the satisfaction of it is in the sight of a Most High.

9. The sacrifice of a justified man is acceptable, and the remembrance of it will not have been ignored.

10. With a good eye glorify the Lord, and do not make small a first-fruits offering of thy hands.

11. With every giving of thine present a cheerful face, and with rejoicing sanctify a tenth (or "tithe").

12. Give unto a Most High according to his giving, and with a good eye according to the finding of thy hand.

13. Because the Lord is a repayor and he will repay thee in a sevenfold way.

14. Do not be a bribe-taker; for it will not be acceptable.

15. And do not heed an unjust sacrifice, because the Lord is judge and there is no face—glory in his estimation.

16. He will not take a face (show partiality) in respect to a beggar, and the supplication of one who has been wronged he will hearken unto.

17. He will not disregard the entreaty of the orphan and the widow, if she pour out talk.

18. No, do not the tears of the widow go down her cheek, and doth the responsive help come in answer upon the one who is bringing them down?

20. A courtier who is serving in a satisfactory way will have been accepted, and his supplication will touch even the clouds.

21. The votive-prayer of a lowly one hath passed through clouds, and he will not be comforted till it draw nigh, and he will not stand away until the Most High shall visit him.

22. And judge justly and execute judgment; and the Lord will not be dilatory nor long-suffering toward them until he shall crush the loins of those who do not show mercy.

23. And he will repay requittal (requirement of right) unto the nations until he shall take away the multitude of the haughty and break the sceptres of the unjust.

24. Until he shall repay mankind according to his practices, and the doings of men according to their inordinate desires.

25. Until he shall judge his laity and rejoice them with his mercy.

26. Timely mercy in a period of one's tribulation is like clouds of rain in a time of drouth.

COMMENT.

What is said in the first part of this chapter in regard to the principal "offering" and sacrifices Levitical is very enlightening and instructive, as these formal rites were even then only types and shadows of the realities we now are expected under the outpouring of the Spirit to spiritually discern. And first the difference between an "offering" and a "sacrifice" is herein distinctly pointed out. Then the distinctive difference between a salvation-offering and a thanks-giving or "favor" offering. Then the summing of them all up in "a satisfaction-offering" or that which satisfieth the Most High which agrees exactly with Christ's teaching and later exposition of "the whole law."

Then observe critically what is said here of "requital" (not "revenge") and mercy and how the Most High becomes "satisfied," and how it can become possible for "justice and mercy to kiss each other."

Again what is said here of "giving" and not appearing before the face of the Lord empty-handed coincides perfectly with the ethical teaching of Paul and the other apostles; and what is said here of "face-taking" or showing partiality makes us think that Peter must have been very familiar with old Sei ach's teaching in this chapter.

Then God's special care of the orphan and the widow reminds us of Christ's scathing criticism of the Scribes and Pharisees who while justifying themselves with their scrupulous formalism were robbing the widows and the orphans of their day as so many formalists are doing today.

The summing up is the same as the apostolic conclusion. Be merciful if you expect to realize mercy. For mercy is better than sacrifice or even whole burnt-offerings.
